Among the most recent retirees is Jane Haller McCafferty who can't understand why she resisted so long. She has already made a trip to Alaska and spent several weeks on Indian reservations in Arizona. Dorothy Warner reports the only problem with retirement is that there is not enough time to do all the things she wants to do. Ruth Hunter Swisshelm's interest is a study club where, for this year's paper on conservation in the 70's, she has been using Rachel Carson's life and writings. Ruth especially mentioned the Philip Sterling and the Paul Brooks biographies of Rachel.

Still working hard are Mary Louise Jones and Martha Stem. We were sorry to hear from Mary Louise that Lucille Evans Lynch's husband died last September. Martha keeps busy with her writing and work as a member of the administrative staff of the Optometric Extension Program Foundation. She also serves as optometric correspondent for Academic Therapy Publications.

Margaret Wooldridge Fifer reports eight kindergartens and nursery schools have toured their old fashioned farm so far this year which keeps them very busy.

I want to tell everyone how much I have enjoyed being your class secretary — it's always great fun to hear from old friends. I hope to see all of you in June at our reunion.

NEW ADDRESS

Betty Brandon, Beach Motel, 2760 Estero Blvd., Fort Myers, Fla. 33931

Last spring, the first prize money for creative writing was awarded from the Beatrice Lewis Memorial Fund to Christina DePasquali Holtz, a Senior in the English Department. The winner was chosen by the department and the final decision was made by the Committee on Academic Standing.

Our sympathy to the family of Mary Stuart, who died in March, 1973, after a long illness. (Reported in Fall, 1973, Recorder.) Also to Lucile Laughlin Logan whose husband, Earl J. Logan, died on January 11, 1974.

Betty Babcock Hull calls occasionally when she comes to Pittsburgh. The last time she was here she reported that her granddaughter is one year old and that Bob retired from Government service at the end of the year. The Hulls are enjoying completely their new leisure.

Eleanor Bartberger Dearborn says she was re-elected Township Assessor in November and now has life tenure! Husband Dick is spending his "retirement" by giving flight lessons over in Bucks County, Pennsylvania, and Richard, Junior, is still in the Navy Reserve. Margaret Jefferson visited the Dearborns last year, and in October Eleanor and Dick were in Iowa for a short visit with Miss Dysart and her brother — both of whom are fairly well.

Martha Bradshaw Stout feels she is becoming deserted, since many of her friends are moving to Florida. She has a local and district office in her churchwomen's group and finds that these activities take a lot of time. Before Christmas Martha visited with Gertrude and Martina Otting in their new home at Hilshorn Beach, Florida. On trips to Washington, D. C., to visit her sister Mary '27 and her aged mother, Martha often stops to see Betty Babcock Hull and Alma Robinson Hamer (whose husband is also retired).

Betty Brandon writes that she has moved to Florida permanently and hopes to move into her new apartment in Estero Woods Village — a retirement settlement for active people, by spring. In the meantime, Betty works as a volunteer at the local library.

Sally Cecil Faist had an interesting art tour to Russia last May with an English group. In Russia, the Intourist Guide, who was excellent, Sally commented, had her doctorate in art. Harold broke his leg in a skiing accident early in December, and, at the time Sally wrote, was wearing a walking cast.

Ramona Crawford Shirey and husband Paul have about as much as they can manage with their apartments and acreage, since Paul's retirement a few years ago. They grow many products which don't last long — with six grandchildren in the neighborhood! (The others are in California and Colorado.)

Clara Falconer Simmermacher says all three daughters were home last summer for a grand reunion, the first one in seven years. "Now Stuart is back 100% after surgery, and square dancing again, while I cheer from the sidelines — with crutches." They love Florida, almost never going back north, and letting "the kids come to us."

Gertrude Ferrero Prather spent Thanksgiving with son Joe and his five children in New Jersey. Trudy's younger son Mike is studying for his Ph.D. in Astro Physics at Yale. Daughter Lynne has returned to college for more post-graduate work.

Ruth Haddock's new title is Administrative Associate to the Vice President of Student Services at Northern Illinois University at DeKalb. Last year she had "an idyllic vacation in the Vale of Kashmir (houseboat and all)." Ruth thinks that somehow we should have a "retirement reunion."

Mildred Harner Foltz is working for the financial officer of the School of Humanities and Sciences at SMU in Dallas. Mildred says the nicest thing happened when the very first story she ever submitted was accepted and published by The Christian, their denominational weekly. Besides, the hymn she wrote for the Hymn Society was published in the Hymnal last year.

Helen Miller had no special news but wished to be remembered to everyone.

Kay James McCann continues her involvement with the Audubon Society and the AAUW. She has so many activities in these fields that she has had very little time for painting, but did manage to take a course in the history of art and an art-for-travelers course in the fall.

Margaret Jefferson spent two weeks on Martha's Vineyard last year, visiting Noushka and her family in Connecticut and the Dearborns in New Jersey on the way home.

Early in January Florence Jones Maddox called to say they had just returned from Nassau. Last summer they had a relaxing time in the Canary Islands and Madeira. General Electric has promoted her daughter Diane to the rank of manager.

Addie Lasner Sachs is busy planning social activities in her building in Palm Beach. Each year she manages a fashion show, an auction sale, and a hobby show. Besides, she supervises pool exercises three times a week, and has 14 to dinner every other Sunday. Last summer Addie returned to Pittsburgh for a reunion with her KDKA buddies.

Peg Marsh Symons is delighted with retirement from teaching and says she doesn't have time for all she wants to do, since the grandchildren (nursery school age to college senior) take up a lot of time.

Elizabeth Marshall is starting her third year on the hospital library cart. She is still working on the catalogue of books in the church library, but hasn't come to the end yet. Liz would really like to inspect the new Mellon Library — "sounds like it is really dreamy!" Last May she flew to San Juan for a Caribbean cruise.

Agnes McKain is relaxed and rested since she retired from teaching last June. Now that the pressure is off, she's enjoying life more and more. She and Eva Bowser '50 were co-hostesses for the annual Salmagundi Christmas party.

Vartanous Parounakian Turner invited several other Chatham graduates to visit during Margaret Jefferson's stay, including Janice Crookham Riemer '72, whose wedding the Turners attended. The decorations were purple and white! Mrs. Riemer is the director of the local museum.

Anne Ritenour Harbison is trying to "keep pace," she says, between visits to her brothers in Pittsburgh and California, and the grandchildren in Maryland. Anne sends her "love to everyone!"

Kay Rockwell Potter reports that all the Potter family are in good health which is most important. During October she and Bill made a sea-air cruise to the South Pacific, visiting Tahiti, Fiji, New Zealand and Australia, where they attended the new, most unusual Sydney Opera House. On the way home they stopped at Pago Pago and Hawaii. Bill was quite impressed — wants to go back to see more.

Lucilla Scribner Jackson now has eight grandchildren, but doesn't see them too much because they are all scattered. Lucilla still goes along with Bill on some of his business trips if they can combine pleasure. In January they were to go to the Dominican Republic and Great Abaco and on business in Guatemala. Last summer Bill was head of the big Boy Scout Jamboree — 44,000 boys! In March the Jacksons are scheduled to make another trip to the South Pacific. She is still a gardener and has a in her small greenhouse.

Doris Thomas will be included in a citation booklet at the Annual Association of Women Deans, Administrators and Counselors Conference in Chicago in April. Each year, retiring members who have spent 25 years in education, 20 of them as dean or counselor, or in a related position in Student Personnel and Guidance, and membership in N.A.W.D.A.C. in very recent years, are honored.

Florence Wiser Turner is so elated to be retired and able to do practically nothing that she is so glad she waited so long. She is planning a trip to Hawaii in March and one to Brazil in April, then it will be time to open the Lake Erie cottage.

Oliver Wycott MacCarthy has a new granddaughter, Sarah Lynne Kirschbaum. After 42 years with Westinghouse, Parker retired last June. But he returned on July 2 as a consultant. The consultant work takes about three days a week, just enough to let him rest up from work at home!

Last fall on Open House Sunday, Helen Parr Nichol '17 and I toured the new Mellon Library. I listened to the mini-concert in the new theater adjoining. This new library heralds Chatham in the 21st century just as the old Berry Hall Library was a vestige of 19th-century Pittsburgh Female College.

As Eleanor Dearborn said, "C'est tout." See you in 1976 at our next reunion. We shall all probably feel like the nation itself — 200 years old!

DEATH

Gene Lewellyn Price, January 5, 1974

We extend our sympathy to family and friends.

Ruth reporting:

Many thanks to Crackers and Dot for t...

Wonderful jobs as secretaries. Betty and I will do our best.

It was a treat to receive answers from sixteen of a possible twenty-seven class members. Next year I hope there will be more. My vacation this year was divided into three separate weeks, one week spent visiting my son Jay and family, one touring Kentucky with friends and the third one added onto Christmas vacation gave me an interesting two week escorted tour to Mexico over the holidays.

Evelyn Aliff Dautlick and her husband had a nostalgic week-end with Sally Allison Allman and her husband last summer. Jay earned his Ph.D. in Biology and Cory is on fellowship at Pitt working toward his doctorate.

To Dorothy Ballantyne Miliken we extend our sympathy on the death of her mother last year. Dot and Ed vacationed in Florida and at their cottage in Florida. The entire family was home for Christmas and Dot said they had children hanging from "sky boxes."

Sally Allison Allman writes she often thinks about our '73 reunion and what a wonderful afternoon it was.

Jean Blair Hodgkin also enjoyed the reunion and when in Hawaii in August.

Helen Chambers Swartz plays a lot of bridge and through the Volunteer Talent Pool helps with Girl Scouts, schools and nursing homes.

Genevieve Davis Crawford who has been ill is enjoying being able to attend Salmagundy again. Her mother died last August for which we extend our sympathy.

A heart attack suffered enroute last August forced Mary Crumay Kehew to miss her youngest daughter's wedding and she also had to cancel plans for an Alpine trip in September. We all hope you're well on way to recovery, Mary.

Marguerite Cunliffe Gape is still enjoying teaching first and second grade children. She quit "moonlighting" at a shoe store and is wisely taking time for herself.

Jessie Doudna Phillips and her husband were indeed proud grandparents when their daughter in Minneapolis had a boy last December. Son David is a major at Penn State's Capitol Campus and John is aushman at University Park.

Dorothy Edsall Fuller missed our 40th reunion because she was at a 20th anniversary of a group of faculty who went to Beloit together. Dorothy and I both retired August 31st and expect to be in Florida this time next year. Dorothy helped her husband with his text-book "Chemistry and Man's Environment" to be published soon.

Virginia Hall McAleese has been traveling with a group of friends from Hilton Head — a theatre trip to London in November and a Caribbean cruise in January. Her three daughters and their families spent Christmas holidays with Ginny.

Marjorie Hopkins is finding retirement delightful, writing and planning to explore new archaeological digs in Southern France. Marj and her mother hope to go abroad in April.

Charlotte Iams says her only newsy event is that she expects to be a great aunt for the first time in May.

Mary Johnston Krudener's son Art was married in September and is living in the Chicago area. Mary and Art, Sr. can't find enough time for all their retirement activities.

Phyllis Lehw MacArthur had a bad year what with major surgery and four hospital visits. She is looking forward to a better year and hopes to spend a few weeks in England this summer. She retired in June but does substitute teaching. Best of luck, Phyllis!

Edith McBane spent three weeks last fall touring Europe with a group of United Presbyterian women from U.S.A. They met with churchwomen from 12 countries for a seminar in Vienna, "Women as Peacemakers."

Our sympathy also to Evelyn Bitner Pearson whose mother died in January. Evie keeps busy as chairman of the Board of Goodwill Industries of Pittsburgh.

Betty reporting:

Lilly Engel Rosenberg finds living in Philadelphia very satisfying because of the many cultural advantages. She is looking forward to a trip with her twin grandsons to Disney World, and to a short cruise in the Bahamas in April.

The end of January, Estous Lee Davidson left for Florida, to be gone a month.

During the Christmas holidays, Helen McCracken Bennett's daughter Sue was married. Sue is Admissions Counselor at William Penn College where her husband, Sam Barnes, is completing his studies. Helen's son Wes has returned from the Far East and is now based with a Weather Reconnaissance Squadron known as the "Hurricane Hunters" in Mississippi.

Louise Metzgar Iams and her husband are still enjoying country living. The month of November they spent in Monterey, Mexico, where Charles took a consulting assignment with International Executive Service Corps.

Ruth Nirella's best news is of her retirement as of June 16. She enjoyed an "All Expensive Tour" to the Far East last fall and plans to go to Africa next October. The closing of the Pittsburgh Playhouse broke her heart, because she had worked so hard from the early 30's for it.

The Canary Islands in April are the destination of Allison Pierce Wood and her husband.

Carolyn Pierce May reports that in October, she had surgery and has been at her sister's (Elisa Lynch '38) and Westmoreland Hospital for therapy ever since. She now wears a brace on one leg, and in time will graduate from walker to cane. Seeing Jean Andres Berger '36 and husband Bill at Vero Beach last winter made her sojourn there most enjoyable. Son Bob, Jr., spent his month with Carolyn en route to Thailand and Germany.

Glad to hear that Ruth Ross is much better and able to lead a normal life. She sends best wishes to everyone.

Helen Rowand Dunkle regrets having missed our reunion. Maryann and Philip have come "back East" from Utah and have settled in Buffalo. Chris and Chuck are still in Alexandria and presented her and Fred with a granddaughter in November. She is glad to have her children now within a day's journey by car.

Our sympathy to Genevieve Shibley Karn who lost her father in August after a long illness.

Sallie Stevenson Foster had a wonderful Christmas with the whole family home for a week together. Nancy and Tom flew from Idaho, bringing pictures of the log house they are building; Will was home from college; and Susie and John Lowry came from Berkeley and were married in a quiet home ceremony on December 29.

Martha Stuart Muhleizler is continuing to enjoy the work and pleasures of her North Carolina farm. She says it is a good life. "Often the hours are long, and we work seven days a week. In winter, the feeding and caring for a herd seem endless. Then spring comes, young calves are scampering about, pastures are green, fields are planted, our yearlings are sent to market, and we feel rewarded." Last summer, her daughter Judith married.

As for me, I am still working, vacationed in New England last summer, and in Virginia at Christmas. I enjoyed hearing from all of you. The suggestion has been made that a monetary gift in memory of Gene Lewellyn Price be made by her classmates. Anyone wishing to remember Gene might want to send a donation in her memory to the Alumnae Association.

NEW ADDRESSES

Katharine Dangerfield Buckmaster (Mrs. Katharine D.) 2A Wynnewood Park Apts., Wynnewood, Pa. 19096

Mary Dolores Steinecke, 1883 Riviera Circle, Sarasota, Fla. 33580

Eleanor reporting:

Life in a small town continues busy and pleasant for Sally Aldridge Schaefer with many hours of volunteer work at the local hospital in Chambersburg, landscape plans for a Revolutionary Jail turned into a Heritage project by her Garden Club, locating paintings of American artists prior to 1914 for the Bicentennial in 1976 (an AAUW project) plus library work. All this and travel keep Sally well occupied.

Kay Dangerfield Buckmaster sold her place "Faraway Farm" near Telford last spring and is now living with her mother in Wynnewood.

Prue Goodale Martin is still working for the A. W. Mellon Educational and Charitable Trust in Pittsburgh but is looking forward to retirement on October 1 of this year when she hopes to do some traveling. She still lives in the family home on Murray Hill Avenue, directly across from the entrance way to the new Library and Theater buildings at Chatham.

Cross-country skiing has caught the fancy of Caroline Hesse Ender and her husband Bill, now that they are able to manage winter vacations. They were in Vermont last winter and at the Trapp Family Lodge in January this year. Son Dave, a junior at Bucknell, spent the interim month skiing in Utah. Their older son, Bill, and his family have moved to Maplewood, New Jersey. Caroline is still a substitute teacher.

"No news of interest — all is well" report Win Jeffries Saxon, Peg Eichleay Storer (who is still a third grade teacher), Louise Leadman Faller and Eleanor Harbison Bream.

Bertha Dunbar Speer keeps busy with church committees, the Transitional Service Board, Shady-side Boys Club and the Twentieth Century Club. Their oldest son, Alexander, is married and lives near Annapolis. Their second son, John, Jr., lives on Grosse Ile in the Detroit River and their youngest son is single and lives in Pittsburgh.

Yuki Naito has had the satisfaction of seeing the completion of a project upon which she worked untiringly these past years since she retired from her office at the International Christian University — a home for retired women pastors, pastors' widows and other Christian workers which was built through the efforts of the National Federation of the Kyodan (United Church of Christ in Japan) Women's Societies. Now she is enjoying some leisure along with private teaching and translation work. She was particularly happy to see Miss Catherine Sayers and Miss Margaret Robb during their trip to Japan and also had a visit from Debby Mountford Burrows and her husband.

Ruth Moorhead Sward alternates between wishing she had more time for travel, and realizing she really does enjoy her work most of the time. Daughter Martha has earned her master's degree in social work at the University of Washington where she had Florence Ray Stier '39 as a professor. Ellen is now a senior at Berkeley, and Susan is still with the Associated Press. One of the joys of the past few years has been corresponding with Eleanor Taylor, who taught Freshman English at Chatham. Miss Taylor lives in Atlanta, teaches and is an HEW administrator.

Dorothy reporting:

Bis Cober O'Donnell writes that she is still teaching third grade in a school near their home. Daughter Cathy and husband Chris live on Long Island. Daughter Patty works for a travel agency in Los Angeles and manages to take some nice trips herself. Judy is a lab technician in a hospital in Albuquerque.

Jane Harmerier Nims has been president of the College Club of Pittsburgh for the past two years, a most enjoyable and rewarding job in which she had the opportunity to meet many Chatham alumnae as well as graduates of other colleges. Since David is semi-retired they are free to travel more, and last year enjoyed trips both to Scandinavia and Bermuda.

After 37 years service with Bell Telephone Marie Martin retired the first of this year, so she writes from Key West where she's spending three months.

Don and Vida Hurst Kerr are now semi-retired and he has taken up the lively art of beekeeping — with sweet results. Son Andy is a freshman at Kalamazoo College in Michigan, and son Dave is taking a year between high school and college to look around, work a bit and visit several colleges.

Jane McQuiston Webb and her husband went to Denver in December for their oldest son's wedding. Jane is still working for the City of Deerfield Beach but is looking forward to an early retirement in about a year.

Gertie Russell Lydic enjoyed a quick trip with her sister to Florida. Clark will get his master's degree in Business Administration in May, and Jim plans to marry in the fall.

Retirement and living in Florida are both very rewarding to Ed and Ginny Schweinsberg Hyde. They were looking forward to a visit from Eleanor Splane Trullinger, a trip to Austria in May, and Pittsburgh in June.

This year's trip for Ken and Mary Seaver Hewitt will be a cruise from Cape Horn up the west coast of South America to Ecuador. From there they will go to the Galapagos Islands for ten days.

After three delightful weeks next door to the Reppuns, Eleanor Splane Trullinger feels she has caught up with a valued friendship. She saw the Hydes last fall as they were en route to Spain. Son Jim will be on his way to Indonesia this year to work on his doctoral study.

Dolores Steinecke and Dot Taylor both send their best wishes but report no news.

A family wedding last May brought Virginia Watkins DeMers and her husband to Pittsburgh. Later in the summer they went to Maine to see daughter Genie performing at the Boothbay Playhouse, where she was an apprentice. Genie is a sophomore at Boston University School of Fine Arts, majoring in Theatre Education.

Having their older son Bill come back from Milwaukee and join Jim's law firm delighted Helen Wilson Houston and her husband. Now both boys are partners, and four of their five grandchildren are in Pittsburgh. Jeanie and her family live in Tampa, and Roberta is teaching at the Home for Crippled Children.

A closeup view of Mt. McKinley and the mid-night sun from a plane over the Brooks Range were highlights of a trip to Alaska for Ted and Dot Wood Clarke last summer. They will celebrate Ted's early retirement this summer by traveling to Finland and the other Scandinavian countries.

Dot Woodward Evans reports no trips since the Caribbean cruise last year. As usual she is busy chauffeuring, shopping, and being generally useful.

Sally reporting:

What activities fill a woman's days when her children are either grown or no longer at home? Some answers were supplied in return for my request for activities. Thank you, and may we hear from more of you next time.

Mary Jane Addy Braley tells us Si was on a show in Pgh. — talking about Dow Corning medical silicones. Mary Jane works as a volunteer for the Saginaw Valley College Women's Auxiliary which operates a consignment shop which contributes thousands of dollars for college scholarships.

Sally Anderson Amtsberg and Herb are enjoying golf and bridge at their retirement home at Hilton Head Island.

Constance Bell Sedgwick is happy to have son and wife living close by at Fort Meyers Beach. Enjoyed a visit from Ray and Mary Trimble Brittain before the Brittain's left on a cruise last February.

Betty Bevan Winkler had a trip to Rome and the Holy Land. When in Pittsburgh she keeps busy with the St. Margaret Hospital Auxiliary and Meals On Wheels. Betty Grace Hammer Maxwell, her sister Jean and family, were with Betty Bevan Winkler on her trip to Israel, Rome and Paris.

Martha Branch Culbertson reports that son Alan was married in June, 1973. She still has one daughter in college, and keeps busy with the church library, Warren General Hospital Auxiliary, Warren County Board of Assistance, and whatever comes up.

Margaret Brewer Dowling says no children now at home — keeps busy as a member of the Harmarville Rehabilitation Center Board.

Mildred Brown McIntyre and Lowe found Florida humidity too much for them so they headed west, and settled five miles from Las Vegas. She writes glowingly of clean air and fabulous views, and invites all going that way to stop to see them. Also reports, "I continue to write on the local level but hope that a recent article will have wider recognition." Let us know the title, so we can recognize it, Mildred.

Our deepest sympathy goes to D. J. Casper Zeisig whose college age daughter lost her life in October in an auto accident. D. J. is Science Department Chairman and 9th grade Physical Science teacher, and is a volunteer co-ordinator of the Third Congressional District of Kansas to save the Tall Grass Prairie Park, Inc. (proposed National Park).

Nancy Diven Seagen says that retirement living in a small home in a small town is very pleasant. She and George will spend a month in Florida this winter.

Mary Elizabeth Eisaman Washington didn't get her reply back in time last year because she was in Florida, taking a sabbatical from teaching. She had been in Europe and felt as if she were playing hockey, but it was the first time she had ever had a winter vacation and she was enjoying it.

The sympathy of the class is extended to Mary Follansbee Buck whose husband died suddenly of a heart attack on July 9th. She is looking forward to having her daughter and family return from Hong-Kong and live within commuting distance.

Lois Haseltine Moses is one of the very fortunate people. She and Cam live in New York City which they love, she is happy being a receptionist at Sloan Kettering Memorial Hospital and has three of her children plus three grandchildren living close enough for easy visiting.

Louise Johnson Purnell's two sons are away at college and she is busy as Church secretary.

Mary Ott Heuman Lore states that she has nothing special to report, but has three sons, a daughter and three grandchildren all close by to keep her busy, plus volunteer activities on the Planned Parenthood Board, I.V.S. Board, Union Aid Board, golf and tennis.

I had the sudden, unexpected pleasure of accompanying my husband to Brussels for a week in September. Decided to stay the second week in London. I had had a week in North Carolina, one week in Tennessee, and three weeks on Cape Cod, so I won't grouse if I have to curtail activities because of gas shortages this summer. I have done volunteer work at Mayview, driven for Meals On Wheels, and am active in the Women's Association in the church.

Issy reporting:

"Career woman and grandmother," says Betty Kidney Moss. She is an assistant trust officer at the Mellon Bank and finds this job interesting but demanding. Four active grandchildren consume a great deal of her time and interest.

Betty Lewis Williams is a teacher in Head Start at an elementary school in Pittsburgh where she has been for nine years. She also serves as a member on the Board of the Pre-school Association. Betty says that about every three months she and Betty Grace Hammer Maxwell, Betty Bevan Winkler and Lillian Taylor Franz meet for lunch or dinner.

Eleanor Marshall Watters reports that she is glad she and her husband took their trip to Iceland, France and England last March and April while she was in semi-retirement because he is back full time as president of Leechburg Mining Company. Columbus Hospital volunteer work and three granddaughters keep Eleanor busy.

Betty McCarthy Boyd reports that she enjoys golf, travel and Hilton Head where they have lived for eight years. She also has five grandchildren. Betty lost her mother and brother within the last three years.

Miki McBride McMaster reports that all is well with her and that she is the incoming president of the Medical Auxiliary of Washington County.

Martha Netting Moorehead is teaching pre-kindergarten at St. Francis Day School, an Episcopal school, and has been there for five years. They have two married children and a third in his junior year at college.

Betty Nycum Ferguson is still a reading specialist at Shady Side Academy Jr. School. She serves as publicity chairman of Delta Kappa Gamma. Husband Al retired in December, 1973. Four grandchildren add zest to their lives.

Jane Phifer Gwyer writes that since retiring from the world of "pay" she has been just as busy with activities within her church and with crafts. Her favorite is volunteer work for the North Branch Ministerium in Suburban General Hospital where she keeps records and visits patients. Her husband will retire in another year and they hope to travel around the country, energy crisis permitting!

Jeann Phillips Horn writes that she retired six years ago to travel with her husband. Her daughter teaches first grade in Kentucky and her son-in-law received his Ph.D. in Microbiology last year. Two grandchildren are enjoyed too.

Mary Margaret Phillips Barto reports a big trip in her family with the arrival of a grandson last June.

Martha Potter Koerner is busy with church, college and library. Youngest son Jim was married in 1973.

Katherine Pyle is a sixth grade teacher in Elizabethtown, Ky has taught for thirty years, but is retiring for her for a while! Other activities include library board, Woman's Association of the Presbyterian Church, Historical Society and traveling where she has a chance.

Dorothy Sargent Garrison writes that because of poor health she had to give up teaching in 1968. She taught at Wilkesburg High for over twelve years. She further says that she seldom goes out and is quite crippled.

Naomi Sayre Bartoe after 23 years at Rohm and Haas Company expects to retire June 30. She is on the Board of the Society of Plastic Engineers and on the board of Bucks County Association of Retired Persons. The Bartoes plan to do some traveling after June when both will be retired.

Jane Seaman Berg states that they had two weddings in their family this fall. Now all are educated and married "Amen." There are two granddaughters who live in Pittsburgh, so are often. Jane serves as a volunteer at their local hospital.

Mary Watson Seed owns and manages "The Briche Rental Properties, Inc." which is 56 units of housing plus eight camps on lakes in Salem, N. H. Mary serves as secretary of the Mental Health Association at Salem, and is active in church work. She traveled to Australia and New Guinea last fall.

Eugenie Miller Snell is office manager for a firm of fashion consultants called Merchandising Motivation, Inc. She has no time for extra activities she puts in a 12 hour day. Owning her first home after 26 years of marriage is a new and exciting experience. Eugenie hopes to manage a little gardening but gathers that flowers don't do too well themselves!

Elsa Stiefelmaier Talbott has been part time bookkeeper twenty years with a manufacturing representative. She names her own days and shares hours. Bridge clubs, ceramics and the shore in summer keep her busy.

Oliver Wilson has two absorbing charities, that of Babies Welfare and Animal Welfare.

Mary Travers Scott reports that her children are all married and that she is enjoying her three granddaughters. Our sympathy to Mary on the death of her husband last May.

Your secretary is pleased this year to report a 2/3 response to the names assigned me. You are getting better! Full response in '75! Last Christmas my husband, Jim was in the hospital recovering from a heart attack but is now back at work. Son Peter graduated in January from college and daughter Judy is living in England. I continue to be involved in pastel and oil painting, serving projects and church activities.

Jessamine Sibley Hunter (Mrs. William S.)

When Helen Archer Fardig returned her card they were getting ready for a week's vacation. The two younger children were going to ski near Montreal with Ollie. Helen, no downhill skier, was going to fly to Duluth for her granddaughter's birthday and perhaps some cross country skiing or snowshoeing. She'll soon be busy with preparations for her third daughter's June wedding.

Elva Bogren Goodwin and Bob were in Pittsburgh from Hong Kong twice during the year, and it was good to see them. Elva is Corresponding Secretary of the Hong Kong American Women's Association, a 700 member group, and writes their monthly News Bulletin. This is a charitable organization, so they are always busy raising money which is much appreciated by the local British Government and the 4 million Chinese. Bob is on the Board of Governors of the local American Chamber of Commerce.

Still working at Psychological Service of Pittsburgh, Mary Cole is also busy with the Women's Political Caucus and several other groups concerned with improving the status of women.

Peggy Cooper Uptegraff and Roy still have three children in college, but daughter Judy and her husband will receive their Doctor of Optometry degrees this year. Kathy is a freshman at Penn State and Roy III a freshman at Lehigh. Peggy is busy as Reunion Chairman for the class.

"I have marked my calendar for our 35th Reunion," writes Kay Cuthbert Hardee, "and will really make an effort to go. I hope we get a good turn out, for it seems to me that the 35th reunion may find us all in some of our most productive and sharing years. In 5 years from now I, for one, am going to be pushing awfully close to Medicare." This winter they went on a combination Medical Society post-graduate course and South American cruise.

The deepest sympathy of the class is extended to Betty Jane Duckwall Laubach and June Feick whose mothers died during the past year.

Mary Gregg Stockton's daughters are both back living in the Pittsburgh area. She's delighted to have them here, especially since it gives her a chance to see her "pride and joy." You guessed it — her first grandchild, Chris, a girl born in April, 1973.

Helen Harris Davis gave up working 60 to 80 hours a week for a hospital when it was no longer rewarding work. She loved the preparations for her younger daughter's wedding. She can enjoy her older daughter, son-in-law and grandson who live nearby. In September she set forth on a 2 to 3 day a week job with a Women's Counseling Unit with Division of Employment. To quote Helen, "This is living!"

Totty Hoyt Faison has been studying Parliamentary Law and hopes to pass the test given by the National Association. Otherwise she's involved in the same routine of meetings, volunteer work at the hospital, some bridge and chauffeuring. Their son will enter college in the fall.

Besides the real estate business, Ivy Huetter McLaughlin's new house in Wisconsin is keeping her busy. They also bought a condominium unit in Manzanillo, Mexico on the ocean where they plan to take their vacations.

Esther Jackson moved to another apartment at the same address last July, and the same month visited with Madge Miller Eulenstein and family in Pittsburgh. In October she took an archeology and architecture tour of Iran and also went to London.

A grand travel year for Jeanne Kalish Samuels and Emerson took them to Switzerland and Italy, as well as to California for the graduation of their son-in-law from Stanford University School of Medicine. Daughter Emily teaches music at Amherst, Massachusetts; daughter Janet will enter law school in the fall and Jeanne still teaches elementary art.

A trip to Africa last summer included a camera safari to the game parks in Tanzania for Jean Keenan Konet and John. She is still teaching school in Willowick, Ohio.

Mary Lou, the youngest daughter of Mary Jane Kerr Leonard and Rowland, was married in San Francisco last August. It was a family reunion of sorts since all but one of their other children were there with their families. They now have 7 grandchildren. These active grandparents made a lengthy trip by bicycle in July from Portland to Manset, Maine — 324 miles round trip!

Genevieve Love Smith writes that New Mexico is blessed with a state university system that is something! She and John are each taking a night school class at the University. They continue to love their new home, surroundings and friends.

Letitia Mahaffey Andree and Jan took an enjoyable Caribbean cruise last August. Jan's younger daughter was married last September, and his older daughter is to be married in June.

Amy McBride Bell reports that they've been very fortunate in having a "happy, healthful and rewarding year."

Mary McCullough Abbott tells it like it is, "Don't know about the rest of you, but a sweet young thing like I am could not be celebrating a 35th Reunion!" Mary and Ward had a good visit with Peggy Christy Graham '40 and Barry recently.

Fully occupied selling real estate and running her home, Lillian McFetridge Wilson reports that they now have a school teacher, a lawyer and two students (one graduate student at Harvard and one undergraduate at the University of Virginia) in the family. To break their busy schedule Lil and Les travel to Portugal, Spain and South America.

Mary Milne Hanson still enjoys her work selling furniture part time. Sculpture and ceramics are among her latest hobbies.

Alma Mocker Bacon and Bill are taking forty high school and college students to Europe for the month of July. The trip is sponsored by the Dayton Council on World Affairs and the Reader's Digest. Daughter Bridget will accompany them.

The deepest sympathy of the class is extended to Betty Jane Oliver Barton and Gene on the death of their 23 year old daughter, Heidi Ann, December 10, 1973. B. J. writes that the rest of the family is ok. Four are married, one in the Air Force, one a sophomore at Penn State, one a high school senior and off to Ohio State next year, one at Culver Military Academy, plus 8-1/2 grandchildren! B. J. owns and operates a combination Hallmark Card-Knitting and Needlework Shop. Husband Gene is still with the steel company.

Beth Pensom Fox's best news is that they are still in one place — Pittsburgh. Charley is a busy eighth grader with basketball, etc. Beth reports that she heard from Alice Williams Shaeffer after 20 years.

Florence Ray Stier has completed her dissertation at Columbia. She's still balancing new and old trends as a teacher at the University of Washington. Husband Don has an interesting job with Social and Health Services.

Betti Rindlaub Lord is teaching, traveling and raising cats. Last summer she attended the second festival of Yoga and Esoteric Sciences in London. Betti and Madge Miller Eulenstein met in New York at Thanksgiving to see plays and shop.

Ruth Ross Duer and Ralph had a brief visit in Pittsburgh at Christmas. Ruth says that she took her life in her hands by coming down the ramp at the Pittsburgh airport waving an Oakland Raiders pennant. The gas crisis has grounded their mobile home by a trout stream on their acre.

Florence Smith Hess writes a letter of appreciation to Chatham for having started her on the road to the happy situation in which she now finds herself. Her job as Psychiatric Social Service Supervisor in a Delaware State Hospital is both rewarding and interesting. Three months each year she teaches University of Delaware students at the hospital. The Hess children to date: Bruce is a Doctor of Medicine with a Residency in Ophthalmology; Peggy has a master's from Duke and is working on a Ph.D.; Mitzi, who was married in September to a medical student, is finishing her master's in College Guidance; the youngest is a freshman at Duke. Bill and Florence are hoping to go to Spain in October.

Betty Speer Schenck and Bill have enlarged their lake house into a place for two people and are now living there year round. Betty has a metal sculpture business, Lakehill Studios, which seems to be growing. She has five people working on the torches using her designs, and according to Betty, "they ship all over the place."

Too busy for a vacation, Helen Starkey Dixon and Bill manage to "squeeze" in good sightseeing weekends. Their daughter spent the summer in Europe.

Mary Lou Weber McClenahan had just returned to Wisconsin from Florida in time to write she wished she were still there. She and Bill are planning this move soon, however. Lou spent most of the year working with a half-way house for women which she helped start.

Mary Bea Weibel McEwen had an opportunity to visit with Dr. and Mrs. Eddy at a meeting in St. Louis. She was fascinated with the campus films showing quite a few changes from our day.

Rose Marie Weller Black is involved in numerous community and school activities. Posie, Harry and daughter Rose Mary enjoyed a Scandinavian trip last spring.

Doris Chatto Kimball has a pen name, "Edgie," which is her by-line in the local Edgewood newspaper. She is also catering teachers' luncheons daily at Edgewood High School. Their daughter Molly is a freshman at Southern Seminary. Rick and Amy are in high school. Husband Bob is retired from IBM and "busier than ever."

Your secretaries are indebted to Peggy Cooper Uptegraff for working as Reunion Chairman for our class. We're sure that it will be a good weekend, and we were glad to have so many messages indicating a hope to attend. We're also sorry that some of you definitely can't come. We want to take this space to thank all of those who responded to our cards requesting news. The enjoyable part of this job has been the renewal of old ties. Hope to see you at the Reunion.

Louise McIntyre Casner (Mrs. Robert E.) 10617 Stone Canyon, Dallas, Texas 75230

Louise reporting:

Jeanne Anna Ayres Widgery writes that her youngest has joined her two sisters at Yale. The oldest is back in graduate School of Architecture. The middle one is spending her junior year in Italy, painting and sculpturing, and Jeanne expects to spend three weeks with her in the spring.

Anne Butler Stewart is ABS reference librarian, Peabody College Library. Son, David and wife, Toshiko; are still in Paris, son, Dick and wife "Ning" in Thailand. John is about to finish at Georgia Tech.

Alice Chattaway Kittle sends a long letter telling of the newest of their three furniture stores in Indianapolis. She keeps busy in public relations and numerous fund raising activities. They had a trip to Luxembourg, London, Amsterdam and Paris. Her picture shows two grandsons — John and Jeff.

Shirley Clipson Clarke says her little town of Chagrin Falls has changed from sleepy village to busy arts and crafts center. They spent some time with son in Atlanta and she would move in a minute if she could.

Dottie Geschwindt Schieber is now settled in her dream house after three and a half years of looking. She is looking forward to a trip to South America with Bob in May or June. He goes every six weeks.

Jean Hammer Schoman's card says that it got to her just in time to report that they were leaving for a tour of the Holy Land with Betty Maxwell '37 and Betty Winkler '37. They are glad Kissinger settled things so they can go.

Beth Howard Smith still loves living in San Diego. Her son, Carl, is in 9th grade and in second year of computer programming at Gulf General Atomic. She is in her third and final year as President of San Diego Association for Gifted Children and is on the Board of Directors for the National Association.

Mary Kinter McEldowney writes that her biggest news is that they now have three grandchildren.

Mary Linn Marks Colbaugh is feeling fine now after a triple by-pass operation on her heart last fall.

Carol Martin says she is managing to cope with the energy crisis and particularly enjoyed reading about the new library at Chatham.

Jean McGowan Marshall's latest news is that her daughter, Helen, has bought a two hundred year old house on the historic square at Marblehead, Massachusetts. That makes both her daughters settled residents of New England.

Weasie McIntyre Casner writes that she and Bob are now grandparents. Their son Ted and wife had a boy born in Washington, D. C., where Ted is a senior at George Washington University. Chris is at Southern Methodist University. Sandy is at University of Texas at Austin. She and Bob enjoy golf and the mild Texas weather.

Yvonne Simoens De Silva Botkay sent a long letter from Rio and a children's book which she had written in Spanish, "An Adventure in Trans-Ama-zonia." An accident gave her a nasty break in her leg which requires three months' recuperation before she can go back to work on the newspaper. Her son, Carlos, is a teacher of musical therapy for retarded children.

As for me, this was a good traveling year for us. We went to the Caribbean on a cruise, to London, to Williamsburg and to Scandinavia. Now we have to stay home for awhile. Everyone who wrote sent her best wishes to all of you and good luck till next year.

Natalie Lambing Paige reporting — that all Paiges are well, a few collect phone calls to prove it! Lee is a junior at U. of Colorado in Boulder and is about to change from a Long Island hair legger to a high Coloradian! Douglas is still teaching near delinquents in Boston and, I think, has thoughts of another job on his mind lately. Peter Otis is an assistant business manager at a form printing firm in Keene, N. H. He and Loie live in Peterborough. No grandchildren. Peter and I had a month's drive through the Scottish Highlands, Wales and England in September. Vegetable gardening looms as a major chore for the rest of this year as it does for so many others, I'm sure.

Allison Meyer caught us up with her news saying she had done some teaching and then was a private secretary to a doctor until he died. Now she is a new homeowner of "an old house and it needs lots of repairs" but she is enjoying doing it over. Good to hear from Allison again after so many years.

Adelaide Mitchell Hughes had an "exciting 1973." She and Jim were in Beirut in October when the Middle East war started; saw Israeli planes bombing Lebanese radar stations and just generally living through more action than they really wanted for three days. Son Jim, a second year resident in internal medicine, has been in Bangladesh for 2 months working with a cholera study team.

Mae Oettinger Schweinsberg who lives in Mercer, Pa. reports they are all well and especially happy their children are moving nearer. Beth and her family are now in Hopewood, Pa. Son John and wife are leaving the "concrete jungle of Ft. Lauderdale" and moving back to the country — near Mercer.

Dorothy Oliver Friday reports her oldest son is a radiologist at Madison General in Wisconsin and has "two very special sons" named Matthew and Rich. Her second son is finishing his doctorate at Pitt in Counseling—also married. The only daughter is married and lives in New Jersey. Youngest son, Peter, will graduate from Wittenburg in March and plans to pursue a career in Marine Biology. Doty says she is too busy to discuss her Gulliver's Travels where she has a staff of eight and which she finds a real challenge, 24 hours a day!

Jane Pierce Eaton says she is still teaching 3rd grade, traveling with Pat summers, and enjoying their three grandchildren, who unfortunately live far away. In April they hope to be in Costa Rica where they are considering building a retirement home. Already?

Mary Bertha Richards reports '73 was a pretty good year for her. Just now she is very busy on the building committee for a new Episcopal church. She says she is also very strenuously resisting invitations to join the local Senior Citizens, A. A. R. P. and the like on the grounds she is too young. I'll buy that.

Eleanor Schaffer Kautz has taken on a new assignment as Director of Staff Development for a staff of 350, which she finds most enjoyable.

Ruth Succop didn't respond this time, but last spring I met her in the Pittsburgh airport, having unknowingly been on the same plane with her from New York. She looked tan and well having just returned from a Caribbean vacation.

Eleanor Tiel Rinne who teaches in Mt. Lebanon High School thinks New Hampshire is her favorite vacation spot after exploring other sections of U.S. Her oldest son has been married 5 years, her daughter is to be married in June and her youngest son is about to graduate from high school in June, too. I remember busy Junes. Lots of luck!

Elinor Weible Stoltz tells us her oldest son is at U. of Colorado at Boulder and her daughter is at Southern Colorado State in Pueblo. The youngest daughter is taking skiing lessons. We hope to meet up with the Stoltz's in Vail this year. Ellie is a bit discouraged with so much snow in the Denver area. We easterners skiers could use some snow.

Julia Wells Jackson and husband were just leaving for a photographic safari in Africa, returning by way of Rio de Janeiro! Can you bring the pictures to our next reunion? No grandchildren yet. Two oldest sons are married — one is a physician and surgical intern; second son Thomas, is a 3rd year dental student at UNC and Roger is a junior in college.

Our sincere sympathy to Jane Shidemantle Cross whose husband Bob died very suddenly the end of January. One daughter is at Chatham, the other is at W. & J.

Only 10 of 24 cards I sent out were returned. I must be losing my grip. How about firing me? And how do you all feel about our college era now becoming so popular, and so romanticized? Bobby socks, loafers, red lipstick, cheek to cheek dancing, etc. I for one didn't expect to be in such a group so soon. But then it does make it easier explaining "what we did then," don't you think?

Marian reporting:

Thoroughly enjoyed seeing everyone at the reunion but I must confess that when I began to compile the class news I did not recall all of you who had been there. As the years rolled back many personal associations came into focus with many of you there and many who had been unable to come — quite frankly, I did not absorb them all.

Jean Archer Rothermel passed along a "hello" to you all; and to say she enjoyed the reunion.

Pat Blue Byers and her husband, who retired in July, had a "fantastic" trip to the west coast and back. They are proud grandparents of a boy, born to their daughter Kris. Paul has a photography studio of his own; and Chuckie is now eleven and trying hard to keep his family young.

Mary Campbell Eckhardt continues with her antiquing while Bob is involved in the helicopter business. Lynne, now married, lives in Colorado; and Robin is working toward his doctorate at Cornell. Mary closes with "Chautauqua in the summers and the islands in the winter."

You are not sufficiently explicit about you "wallowing." Edith Cole — could be that you were having lots of fun or that you were somewhat bored — do hope that you had lots of fun. Edy had prepared herself mentally for the gas shortage and the long lines as well as carpooling.

Lucille Cummins Connor and family are moving to Atlanta in March. Ed has just been made Manager of Sales for U. S. Steel there. They love the city and feel fortunate to be moving to such a beautiful place. Patti is married and living in Houston; Buz is in his junior year at North Carolina College; Cynthia is just back from a term in Heidelberg, Germany, and finishing at Ohio Wesleyan this spring.

Jean DeWoody Bailey and Dick were in the process of planning a trip to Arizona for some sunshine. Jean also wrote that she had "had a fun evening with Pinkie and Dan, Louise and Dave and Marian Rowell in December." Jean sees a lot of our contemporaries at the Mt. Lebanon Alumnae Club when she is able to attend the meetings.

Jane Fitzpatrick McGough's big news is a wedding scheduled for August. Jane Ellen, their oldest daughter, is to be married to her college "sweetheart." (Perhaps it is a dated phrase, Jane, but I still like the sound of it.) Hugh will be graduating from high school and is now college shopping.

Janice Goldblum is back at work after a trip to South America in the month of November. Her trip covered a boat ride on the Amazon, visiting Brasilia, Rio, Buenos Aires, Lima, etc. Marvelous trip!

A letter arrived at the reunion from Claire Horwitz Klein in which she wrote that she would not be with us as she would be out of the country — and that trip covered Paris, Amsterdam and Brussels — which Claire reports was "thrilling." Evan is a freshman at W & J, and took his intercession course at Chatham this past January. Claire took this opportunity to view the campus once again and was much impressed with the facilities of the new library.

Jane Humphreys Agriesti writes that she and her family moved into their new mountain view home in October. Charles is in his last year of pre-med. Marlane is a freshman at Chatham; two working and thinking about what they want to be and the two youngest in the 12th and 8th grades.

The Prices (Miles Janouch) enjoy living in Providence. They feel as though they are back in school since they are participating in all sorts of activities at Brown — courses, swimming, skating, etc.

Elinor Keffer Hoon and husband are enjoying the warm climate in Florida permanently now but they did attend the reunion. In the fall they had a vacation in the Orient.

Very sorry to hear that Marian Lambie Arnheim's father had a coronary in December and has been very ill. Marian wrote that she and Falk celebrated their 30th anniversary in Bermuda in November. David, Dan and Louise are stretching out in all directions.

Mary reporting:

The sympathy of the class is extended to Janet McCormick McDole for the death of her mother.

Dorothy Horne Mollenauer reports that Bob, Jr. and Dave will graduate from college and high school in June. Her daughter, Linda, has a three year old daughter, and Dottie loves being a grandmother!

Nina Maley Ross reports that they are all well. By June with luck, she modestly adds, she expects to finish her Library Science credits and have her M.L.S.

Dorothy Marshall Autore returned to campus in the fall and enjoyed the course, The Cultural History of China, taught by Dr. Wing-Tsit Chan. She recommends that others do this.

Jane (Petie) McCall Downing reports that 1973 was a "traveling year" and lots of fun. She went to Alaska last summer to visit her son, Chip, who is at the University of Alaska in Fairbanks. In December, she flew to Denver to see two daughters. In the fall, she took a real estate management course in New Orleans.

Janet McCormick McDole says "hello" and adds she is still working — sometimes sixty hours a week. Her area, the Northwest, got over the energy crisis, and she hopes the gasoline shortage can be taken care of as easily.

Amy McKay Core in a quick review reports two sons now graduated from Washington and Jefferson. Amy Jane attends the University of Minnesota in Duluth. To keep from freezing solid in the Northwoods (-30 in January), Amy says, one has to stay on the move or go to the Bahamas, as the family did for seventeen days at Christmas. Her seasonal occupations are: cross country skiing in winter; herb gardening in the summer; and designing needlepoint. She adds, it has been a treat to return to Pittsburgh and the campus for the trustee meetings Constance Meyer Waldschmidt writes that they enjoy living at Conneaut Lake — summer and winter. Her husband, Chuck is a manufacturers' representative and works out of home. Before Christmas she was in Milwaukee at son Chad's home sharing the arrival of new granddaughter. Bob is in his first year of law school at Vanderbilt having graduated summa cum laude from Hillsdale in May.

Jeannette Myers Erler missed our thirtieth reunion because she was in Florida. She and Jack are planning to celebrate their thirtieth wedding anniversary by taking a 45-day cruise around South America.

Being on the Chatham campus full-time is a fascinating experience, according to Marjorie Noonan Ladley. "I often wonder how many of us would make it if we were starting college all over today. The students are so interesting (and different!) and the curriculum is terrific." Her oldest graduated as a Distinguished Military Graduate from W & J last May and is now at Fort Lewis, Washington. Barbara is a junior at Chatham and loves it. Bob is sweating out the April 15 deadline on college admission and Jane (14) keeps the home fires burning.

Janet Ross reports she is still busy with the Y.W.C.A. She attended the National Y.W.C.A. Convention in San Diego, and then up to St. Helena to visit her sister, Ruth Ross Duer '39, and the wineries, a golf week last May at Myrtle Beach, and a tour of Ontario with her mother in August suggest little spare time.

Peggy Suppes Yingling writes everyone is well, all working hard, and looking forward to spending some time in Somerset County this summer.

Claranne (Kay) Von Fossen Johnson relates news of her daughter, Julie, whom she expected home after almost a full year in Africa. She was at Gombe in Tanzania working under Jane Goodall for Stanford credit. Kay visited her in Gombe last summer and had a fantastic safari.

Lorraine Wolfe Regan says that her family has dwindled to three — and she was so used to seven! Three girls have finished college; two are married, and one is teaching school. Their fourth is a freshman in college with their "baby", a junior in high school. She adds that everyone was home for the holidays.

As for one of your new reporters, thank you for the interesting news. Last October after attending my first meeting of the Alumnae Council at Chatham, walking down Woodland Road in shoes that got me down some slopes of Mt. Rigi, I rolled my foot over. X-rays showed a broken bone in my foot, and I had crutches and a cast for seven weeks. That shuffled our lives around a bit, not a bad experience, but quite a beginning.

Alice reporting:

We're extremely sorry to report the death of Harriet Fleming Muryn in December. Jane Wood Ziercher received this word (but no details) from Harriet's husband shortly after Christmas.

Pauline Basenko Thomas and family toured Europe last summer. At home she's busy with Shady Side Academy Junior School's 70-member band; daughter Paula is supervisor for instrumental music for the Diocese of Pittsburgh; and Lillie is a freshman at Carnegie-Mellon University.

Dorothy Barrett Braden, now twice a grandmother, enjoys teaching at Brighton Road Community Nursery School. Barbara teaches first grade, and Laird is in his second year at Geneva College.

Carolyn Cosel Lampi celebrated her most recent birthday in Bermuda, and is taking an architecture course at the Cleveland Museum and collecting art for an Educational TV telethon. Son Jib graduated from Harvard.

Miriam Davis Schellhaas and Jack celebrated their 25th wedding anniversary with a trip to Europe. Ginny graduated from college in May and Mary was married in June.

Ruth Ford Woodward and family are moving from the East Coast to Kansas City. Her oldest graduated from Chatham last June. #2 is abroad for a year of study in Paris; her youngest is in 10th grade.

Carla Gregson Dubs says her "usual routine" includes heading the Day Care Center & Family & Children's Services. She and Marne took 6-year old Michael to France for a month last fall. Greg spent a term at the Sorbonne with the Wesleyan Program and graduated from Johns Hopkins in January.

Ruth Jenkins Horsburgh and Ken had a trip to the Orient last fall. Their youngest is a senior at University of Cincinnati; Christopher is married and Kip is contemplating same. "Looking forward to our 30th in 1975," writes Ruth. (NOTE: All members of class of '45 please so mark your calendar for next year and start planning to attend!)

Good to also hear from Louise Flood Egan, Janny Back Jameson, Alice Craig Coyne, Alice Hanna Ference and Audrey Heston Kidder.

Phyllis Ingraham Stout entertained two members of the Chatham Choir as overnight guests when they gave a concert with Rutgers. Phyllis and Ben enjoyed a trip to St. Maartens at Christmas.

Emily Noll Zerbe had a major operation last September but hopes to take her first trip in their new sailboat this spring (at least they won't have to worry about fuel).

Marge reporting:

Dottie Lind Sherrard reports their daughter a freshman at Denison University and son a junior at Shady Side Academy. Dottie is working for the Presbyterian-University Hospital Social Service Board.

Lois Lutz Pierce loves everything in Charlotte except grits. Lois now has a second granddaughter.

Nina McAdams Handloser now has her California real estate broker's license — quite a change from teaching. Nina is also delighted with son John, Jr.'s choice of their daughter-in-law.

Petie McFall Schall notes that although our news is getting distressingly near the beginning of the section, she doesn't feel a day over 25, even with their son a plebe at the U. S. Naval Academy and daughter a sophomore in high school.

Jane Meub Evans is aware of her age, as her youngest will graduate from high school in June. [I shall include no further references to our ages.]

Jane Murray Blair reports that Lynne is in her second year at Hope College and Cindy a freshman at Ashland College. Jane, who should be recovered from moving, is still teaching.

Gertrude Schmeichel Hutson's son, after graduating from the University of Maine, is now a tax collector and city treasurer of Old Town, Maine.

Patty Smith Joyner's No. 1 son is an executive trainee at Kaufmann's. Having managed to see Martha Cox Hartman, Jean Dalzell MacMillan, Janet Harkless Beattie, Eleanor St. Clair Hurtt and Patsy Speers Bradley at different times last summer, Pattie is looking forward to seeing everyone in 1975.

Marion Updegraff Sunnergren says being in Greece in November during — and in the midst of — the student insurrection in Athens was a "terrific experience."

Tillie Wilcox Moncrief reports of her children — one married, one a senior at Kent State and one a sophomore at Ashland College. Tillie has one grandson.

Jane Wood Ziercher loves reading the news about our classmates, and your class secretaries appreciate the responses also.

Your class secretaries still have the travel bug. My mother and I were in Europe last summer. We especially liked Budapest, as it was even more beautiful than imagined.

Ellie reporting:

Marian Arras Wallace gets the prize for squeezing the most on a post card. She hopes 74 will be a good year for all 47'ers.

Patti Balch Lando still loves spending the winters at the Jockey Club in Florida. Her married daughter lives nearby. Among other Florida dwellers are Alice Burns Kasimirsky and Ellen Card Donnell. Ellen has finished her master's in guidance. She would love to have visitors to the Gulf Stream Hotel in Lake Worth, which her husband manages.

Lucy Beale VanNess is busy teaching. She and Joe are taking 2 of their children to Europe this summer.

Henry Brown Michaels loved a vacation in Barbados. Her whole family is involved with music — lessons and church choir. Another happy vacationer was Catherine Dom McCarrell who had a fantastic month in the far East — came home through Hawaii.

Jane Davies Rush and Bob celebrated their 25th anniversary. Bob is President of the school board.

Betty Fleck Hendrickson represented Chatham at the inauguration of J. D. Rockefeller III as President of W. Va. Wesleyan College.

Pat Gersmann Joseph does tutoring and has taken up sewing. Pat and Herb are going to California and on a cruise. Down Texas way Ruth Grasso Vaughn and Guy are working on a huge unfinished house and also restoring an old cabin cruiser.

Isabel Griffiths Borland and David are returning to the Pittsburgh area after 8 years of moving from coast to coast. Their daughter will be married in June.

Margery Himes is looking forward to her retirement from teaching, but Alice Kells gets much satisfaction from teaching biology. She visited Massachusetts, Maine and San Francisco last summer. Also busy with books is Esther Kennedy MacDonald who teaches bookkeeping and junior accounting in business college. They went to Hawaii at Christmas time.

Lee Hutton Sage is still tied down to cows and kids, in that order. They spent 2 fun weekends with R. T. and Evie Mock Hirtle.

Angie King Sedwick published a book of poetry — "Synergy," Windy Row Press, New Hampshire, illustrated by her daughter.

No special news, but "hello" from Jottie Beeson Schrader, Marjorie Bennett Sherts, Kay Ciganovic, Peggy Dodge Poindexter, and Patty Jaycox Shaw.

As for me, Ellie Goldfarb Hirsh, I love living in California. It's fun hearing from you all — sorry not to have room to print more details and those who wrote too late. Thanks for the contributions to our class treasury!

Chub reporting:

As "new" class secretary, I think I know why Gloria relinquished: count 'em — 17 replies to 55 requests.

Mary Alice Kline Morris is still teaching and enjoying it. Two children are at University of Cincinnati: daughter Sally is a freshman, son Steve is a 5th year architectural student. Oldest son, Marty, is touring with the road show of a current Broadway musical, "A Little Night Music."

Dolly Larson Webb and her family had a brief jaunt to Pittsburgh last summer and showed Chatham to their 16 year old English girl who spent the summer with them.

Jane McCormick Lohr is enjoying her full time job in the local library.

Josie McKendrick Tobie reports she and Alan are growing older and grayer together and that Lancaster is a great place to live. Daughter Ellen was graduated from Ohio Wesleyan last June and is now doing graduate work at Hilberry Theatre, Wayne State University. Daughter Betsey is taking her junior year at St. Andrews University in Scotland. Marnie is a high school senior waiting to hear from schools.

"Life is busy but good" for Peggy McSwigan Friday. She's also begun the "college bit" with her oldest a freshman at Pitt.

Read Barbara Mason's new address — doesn't Pent House 1 in Honolulu sound fabulous? Barb is now Divisional Merchandise Manager in charge of 11 buyers for Liberty House Hawaii.

Mary Lou Michel Tiernan's post card of statistics was fun reading. Mike produced and directed a small community play last year. She also participates in Encounter.

Lois Power Hughes has a new husband, new address, and new granddaughter all in one year. Lou's comment — "pretty busy year" — sounds like an understatement. Also a new grandmother is Martha Stewart Dimmick. She found she still knew how to take care of an infant.

Virginia Ramsey Beck has been building a house and "we'll never do that again."

Josie Wagner Caruthers teaches first and second grade in the Bible Baptist School of which her husband is Administrator. Also teaching is Carolyn Wise Walp and her daughter is at West Virginia University.

Gene Wallace Kennedy plans to volunteer some time at the new Chatham library. Gene said, "This campus is lovely but the school still needs our backing."

Mary Lou Wallace Frazee's oldest daughter was accepted by Chatham and her husband was promoted to Vice President of Allegheny General Hospital.

Jackie Neal Jackson and LaVerne Lollar Scott send greetings.

"Chub — Since Jane Fonda's appearance on campus, I have withdrawn all support and requested my name be withdrawn from all mailing lists, etc. . . . Just don't wish to be associated with Chatham," signed Doc McKee

From Chub: The four Harmon's had a beautiful family reunion in Dallas at Christmas time attending my niece's wedding. My Ben Franklin's just slid off and tousled my very gray hair. Till next time. . . .

Jeane reporting:

Marjorie Alexander Brinkworth and her husband have become very involved in platform tennis at their local club. They will have three in college next year but the "empty nest syndrome" has not set in yet because two will still be at home.

Ruth Brodnax Craig's daughter Sue graduated from college last May and was married in August. There are two sons in college and another daughter in 9th grade.

Alison, the oldest of Ruth Clarkson Brown's four children will enter Dickinson College in the fall.

Lu Beery Wenneker and Claudia Bullers Janke say hello and hope to see everyone at reunion. So do I, especially since I only received 5 responses from the 22 cards I mailed. This is our 25th! Let's make it a big reunion.

Jeane reporting:

Jeane Fraser Bailey reports a good year for all of them with son Dave graduated from the University of Wisconsin and now working in Florida; Tom, a junior at the University of Pennsylvania; and Janet waiting for news of her college acceptance for September.

Naomi Garlick Kinard is the architectural and preservation guide for Historic Annapolis Incorporated and last year escorted the Pittsburgh Landmarks group through the city. She also teaches first and second grade at St. Anne's Church School. Roy travels a lot and is with the National Cancer Institute.

Family news from Bobby Hanson Helm reveals that she and Ralph spent 10 days in Europe on Business; that "P.R.", 17, was accepted at the Air Force Academy; Bill, 21, is at Arizona State in Architecture School; Jane, 16, goes to Spain this summer; and that John 11, is in 5th grade. She continues to do hospital volunteer work and enjoys entertaining foreign visitors who come to Manitowoc to buy cranes.

All is well with the Barbara Hoge Dansak family. Jeff is a sophomore at Arizona State and Tracy is busy with 7th grade and tennis. She thinks it would be fun to see everyone at the 25th reunion, as does Louise Heineman Harper who says hello.

Harriet Kerr Daye took a sabbatical leave from teaching this year and is registered as a full-time graduate student at Clarion, getting her master's in Special Ed. She reports having a really great time back at school, discovering all the good in today's teenagers.

Also planning on our reunion is Marjorie Livezey Sims who just moved to Oklahoma to a new house on 2½ acres. John is an instructor at the Academy there. Her oldest, Debbie, graduates from Purdue this year and hopes to find a job teaching French.

For your secretary this year has been a musical bonanza. We purchased an organ and I am also studying guitar at the local community college as well as orchestration through the composers group of Tuesday Musical Club. Tom and the boys are fine. Pete graduates from Duke University in May and Clint and Ken are in high school.

Carol reporting:

Clara Miklos Hoon and her family were brought back to Pittsburgh by Alcoa after 15 years in the New York area. For the first time, Mike is just a housewife busy putting their home in order and looking forward to golf, a vegetable garden and our 25th come spring.

Joan Nusbaum Cone and husband Art went to England last March. Jo has just had a book published by E.P.M. Publication, Inc., called Easy Game Cooking. If anyone is interested, she can order it from her. The first autographed copy was presented to Julie Nixon Eisenhower at the Washington, D. C. Mortar Board Founders Day luncheon. Jo will try hard to be here for our reunion.

Frances O'Neil Kerr has a very quiet house this year with all three children in college. Clark is a senior at Duke, and Laurie and Mark are a sophomore and freshman at Mt. Union in Ohio. Despite this she manages to keep very busy with volunteer activities and hopes to join in June.

Virginia Rix Markle wishes she could get back to Chatham but it's so far from California. Their daughter Bonnie surprised them by graduating a year early from high school last year and is now in college in San Diego. John, 20, is in college too and is also a glider pilot.

Marilyn Marks Zelt, Joan Morledge Michaelian,

Timmy Mountford DeFrance, Pat Pew Simpson and Mary Lou Rider had no news but say "hello" and hope to see us in June.

I'm happy to report our two oldest girls are each having a great year. Christy is thrilled with her sojourn in Italy, learning the language and traveling. We have the feeling we might never have her back in Pittsburgh! Cyndy is a freshman at Kenyon in Ohio. Megan is growing up terribly fast in 7th grade and Margot maintains her casual attitude in 4th. Bud and I continue to cope happily. I'm very sorry not to have heard from more of you gals, but we're hoping to have everyone attend our June reunion.

Katie reporting:

Ann Shane Perkey says her family is growing up too fast. She only has Tim at home, Dave is married and Doug is an engaged college student.

Barbara Shields Sullivan reports that her husband, Bob, is a caseworker for Public Assistance. Mary Ann is ten, very musically inclined, and hopes to attend Chatham's Music Camp this summer.

Mary Lou Tite Ellsworth reports that they celebrated their twentieth wedding anniversary in June by returning to Europe. They took the girls along with them as it really was the last chance that they had to go as a family. Peggy is a senior at Miami University in Learning Disabilities Practice Teaching. Judy is the little organizer at 14 and one of her projects is an ecology group called T.I.E. (teens involved in ecology). Along with interests in a day care center and the College Club, Mary Lou is a Girl Scout Leader again this year. She was blessed with the good fortune of having J. D. Linton Smith as her co-leader. One of the fringe benefits is having Bob and Bud along on overnights.

Virginia Van Scoy Armin says that Jennifer is in the 7th grade, Pan is in the 4th and Bob is in kindergarten. Perry teaches American History and she volunteers for Girl Scouts and League of Women Voters.

Eleanor Wenning Atwell can't believe that it is our 25th — it seems as if it was just a couple of years ago to her that we were all in school. Bob is working hard, but they have had time to sun in Florida where they have a condominium. Bobby graduates from Dartmouth in June and Amy is finishing her second year at Smith. Eleanor took part in a symposium at Wellesley this summer on Ethical Issues of Our Time. She is looking forward to seeing everyone in June.

Joan Swannie Ruch, Candy Walker Hyser and Mary Elizabeth Wiles Knight send greetings to everyone.

Your secretary is still teaching kindergarten and enjoying every minute of it. Lynn plans to be married after she graduates from Clarion next December. Frank and I are looking forward to a trip to Japan and the Far East in April. Fortunately almost everyone who responded this year is planning on coming to our reunion and I am looking forward to seeing all of you.

LOST

Carla Ausenda Dara (Mrs. Dario)

Nancy reporting:

On the first of October, Ethel Anderson Mesloh's husband, Karl, was transferred to Ponce, Puerto Rico. Ethel and their younger children joined him in December. The oldest son, Karl, is studying at Texas A and M. Second son, Fred was married the day before the family left the States. The Meslohs are enjoying the beautiful climate, blue water, and lovely beaches. Stephanie, 15, and Nick, 11, are attending an American school in Ponce. Ethel is trying to recall the Spanish learned some 20 years ago under the tutorage of Dr. Labarthe.

Gwen Bach Lammert has been busy with her many activities: South Hills Alumnae Social Chair-man, Neighborhood Chairman for the Girl Scouts, President of the United Methodist Women, and Chairman of the Pastor-Parish Committee. Steven, 15, Cynthia, 13 and Amy, 11, are all busy with piano, jewelry making and gymnastics.

"Well, I made it through organic chemistry!" exclaims Eleanor Balent Young. Now she must finish an intern training program in Medical Technology at the V. A. Hospital in Miami, probably by July.

With Amy in first grade, Marilyn Black Auchter-lonie has the whole day to herself. Rob is learning to drive and Jim and Rich are working hard at college. The family plans to enlarge the garden and to spray the dwarf fruit trees this year in an attempt to keep up with inflation. Rob wants to raise chickens in the old tool shed.

Roger and Suzi Blair Murray have been traveling quite a bit, from upper Michigan to Florida to Cape Cod. They hope to return to the Cape in May if there is gasoline available. An added incentive for visiting the Boston area is their oldest daughter, Edie, a freshman at Lasell Junior College. Suzi adds that life has been hectic since December when her parents came up from Florida and her father has been quite ill.

From New Hampshire, Barb Clark Samuelson writes that although they have had only a few sub-zero days and little snow, the energy shortage has made it a winter to remember. To squelch Barb's complaints about being cold, Roger gave her a pot-bellied stove for Christmas — plunked it in the dining room. Despite its "quaintness," Barb admits that she has developed a grudging respect for the stove on icy New England winter days.

Ann Crouse Harvey had a year that produced both good and bad news. The bad news — her younger brother died in December of injuries suffered in an automobile accident. We extend our sincere sympathies to Ann and her family. And for the good news — in November, Ann was elected Bridgewater Tax Assessor and has been working hard to learn her new job.

The less said about 1973, the better, writes Dottie Dods-worth Scullen. In May, she had a ruptured disc (that she had been living with for seven years) repaired. A daily swim of a third of a mile has helped regenerate the nerves. She is hoping for good control now so she can complete a series of illustrations to meet a publisher's deadline. In the spring, Dottie will be teaching a two-hour, twice-a-week course in water colors at State College.

Mary Ann Doering Rinaldo sent her note on a pretty card saying "All is well and serene."

Shirley Elliott Johnston's life revolves around her children's activities — or maybe just going around in circles would be more like it. Jill started to senior high school; Jay, to junior high, and Jeffery, to first grade. How's that for a spaced out family!

"So what's new? A year older and bifocals," says Maddie Engelhardt Sayles. But the boys, John, 12 and Greg, 9, keep her young. Both boys play the cello, and John is first cellist in the All-Pittsburgh Elementary School Orchestra. Daughter Penny, 19, is enjoying the Titusville, Pennsylvania, campus of Pitt. Maddie is still "in love" with tutoring reading at the grade-school level.

Bill and Lois Franke Lee had a wonderful vacation in Hawaii last summer. Lois' parents, from Pittsburgh, are visiting California for the winter and have an apartment nearby. Everyone is healthy and happy. Penny continues her nursery education, Jim graduates from high school in June, and Susanne is in 10th grade this year.

Pat Kennedy Early writes that she has been using her PCW year books for "research" into the dress of the 50's for the junior-senior high schools' "nostalgia days." The project provided a lot of laughs for everyone. The family is fine: Jeff is a sophomore at Monmouth College; Pete is a high-school senior, making college decisions; Janet is in junior high; and Christopher is in kindergarten.

Although hepatitis forced her to have a leisurely summer, Mary Ellen Leigh McBride is recovered and active once more in the South Hills Alumnae group. Daughter Ellen, a junior at Mount Holyoke majoring in Russian, spent the month of January in Russia. Robbie, 17, is still riding and showing her horse.

The highlights of '73, according to Margie VanNess Colven, include Tommy, 19, hobbling around Vanderbilt University in a full-leg cast after knee surgery; John, 18, entering North Carolina State. Billy, 14, making Eagle Scout, and Richie, 8, finally mastering cursive writing. "Tom and I (no ages, please)," she said, "celebrated our 20th anniversary in September in Hawaii."

The Mooneys had a fine '73 until November. Jim and I were driving to Cleveland on a dark, rainy night, when a combination of a tow truck on the wrong side of the road, an overpass, and a slow-moving vehicle "detoured" us into the ditch. The car was totalled. Jim was only bruised. I managed to fracture my right eye orbit and my first lumbar vertebrae. The eye has recovered, but the body is still encased in an aluminum "bird cage" brace. I can, unfortunately, do the housework, and fortunately, drive, and by now, bend in most directions.

Ann reporting:

Cissie McLeod Scalise reports "nothing exciting" from Warren, however her daughter Nan is college hunting.

Within the past year, Nanna Moore Pollitt moved to Pittsburgh where she's a librarian at an elementary school. Their son Craig is recovering from a motorcycle accident.

Pat O'Keeffe Beede and her family spent the Christmas holiday in Puerto Rico. Pat Meyer Kovacs vacationed in France and Audrey Sommers Whigham and her family continue to prefer Fort Lauderdale.

Stella Pavloff is the proud owner of a condominium and loves her new way of life. This summer she returned to Pittsburgh and had a get-together with Shirley Kerchner, Rosella Petraglia, Shirley Johnston and Nancy Vesley.

Rosella Petraglia and her mother had two trips to Europe within 8 months! They also spent a week in Washington, D. C. and feel our capital is as beautiful as any capital in Europe.

We were sorry to hear that Adele Pfeifer Ferianc's father died in January following a three month illness. Adele continues to teach nursery school and has taken up golf again after 17 years!

Marlene Shettel Stovicek's job and family keep her very busy. Her married daughter, Jan (Chatham '73), is teaching, one son graduates from Carnegie-Mellon in June and another son will finish high school. Marlene wants to thank all of you who contributed to our 25th reunion gift. Our total is $285.00 but only 25% of the class has contributed. Please note Marlene's new address. She will gladly add your contribution to the total. June of '76 will be here sooner than we all care to admit!

Bert Thompson Thompson moved to a home in the country on 7 acres of land, on the edge of Morristown, New Jersey.

Joyce Wilde Rownd is working as a Pediatric Recreational Therapist at a local hospital and loves her work. Her son, Tom, will graduate from Wittenberg University in June and her daughter, Bobby, 20, will be married in May.

After completing 20 years as a church organist, Laura Miksch Diaz was persuaded to continue but will have weekends free during the summer so they can travel.

In January, I accompanied Don to New Orleans to a pediatric meeting and we had a great visit with Jan Fitzsimmons Carr and Bob. Hadn't seen Jan in 20 years! This school year I've been head of the health volunteers at the high school, deliver "Meals On Wheels" one day a week, and am on the Board, and help with Blood Mobile once a month. We have two going to college in the fall and that makes life interesting too!

Diane reporting:

Ellie Bailey Reese is back in the work force to stay and is delighted with her job in personnel. Elizabeth has been accepted at Chatham for September and feels ready to take on the world. Sarah (15) is cheerleading, teaching riding and generally having a great time. Julie (11) is co-owner (with her sister) of a horse and hopes to be another Cathy Rigby — or Emily Dickinson.

Alice Berry Adams is still busy with car pooling, Girl Scouts and teaching Sunday School, and has enjoyed working with the Mt. Lebanon Area Chatham Alumnae Club.

After 20 years of "retirement," Sally Crum Ferrell has gone back to teaching nursery school 2 days a week, which she says is hard work but lots of fun. Sally also reported that Gretchen Donaldson lost her father in December! We extend our deepest sympathy to Gretchen.

Jeannine English Abel is leading a busy and exciting life. Besides teaching privately, she and Dick are both members of the Antigua Players in Pittsburgh and, when she wrote, she was winding up a production (directing) of "Jacque Brel is Alive and Well and Living in Paris" for a dinner-theater group. A highlight of last year was a trip to England to perform at the Stour Festival of Early Music in Kent; a real thrill to perform in medieval churches, including Canterbury Cathedral. She also did concerts in the U.S. and was preparing for one in Pittsburgh. She still finds time to have a big garden each summer and fill two freezers with home-grown goodies.

Thelma Fiori Lacerte reports being involved in the usual activities that go with raising four active and musical daughters (one plays drums, one clarinet and one flute). The Lacertes had a busy 1973 and are still enjoying their small midwest town. Thelma wishes all a healthy and rewarding year.

Betty Frantz Purdum is currently president of the Southeastern Connecticut Association for the Retarded. Bill has been promoted to Captain, USN, and they expect a change of duty in the fall.

The highlight of the year for Bunnie Fraser Bell and family was a trip to England and Scotland last summer. They are now busy going to Karen's (17) and Katie's (14) track meets and to Rich's (9) hockey games.

Since skiing is the favorite sport of Danny Gray Hall's family, they were all thrilled when oldest daughter, Jenny (14), won the Pennsylvania Junior Slalom Race in her age division. She also ranks 7th in the state for all divisions.

Helen Halpern Berkson is now president of the Metropolitan Washington Alumnae Club and quite involved in alumnae affairs. She attended the workshop at Chatham in October and thoroughly enjoyed seeing the campus again after 20 years. The Berksons took camping trips in their new tent trailer — and then came the gas shortage. Both of Helen's girls are in junior high and Harold is still with the AEC.

From Lynn Hann Baxter: "Two major surgeries in three months isn't exciting news except to me who feared the worst and learned the best — no malignancies." We all share your relief and happiness with the outcome, Lynn.

Peggy Harbison Hendrickson reports that following Don's return from his second tour of Vietnam in March '73, they spent 12 months at the Army Language Institute in Monterey, Calif. They were scheduled to leave this April for Thailand where Don will be an advisor to Thai Army Engineers and Peggy will be a curious resident of Bangkok and tourist of the Far East.

Sally Hoffman Spangler is enjoying the years of raising three teen-agers (Sue, a sophomore at Pitt School of Nursing, Deb, a junior in high school and Jim, a 7th grader who is active in all sports). Big Jim is still with Gulf Oil and involved in all phases of basketball, while Sally keeps busy working with the Rainbow Girls. She and Jim were off to Hawaii in March. Sally asked what happened to our 20th reunion?? Under the old schedule, our 20th fell on our 19th which is probably why only one person showed up. Maybe we'll have better luck with the 25th.

Jean Maize Kmetec is quite busy with 5 children and an active husband, particularly since she is trying to complete a B.S. in Rehabilitation Education. Says Jean: "If we have any more attempts at conserving heat by an increase in personal energy, I've had it!"

Ann Matlack Wieland reports that former '53'er Barbara Piper went to Cleveland to play with Ann in a tennis tournament. They had great fun, losing in a tie-breaker in the finals of the consolation. Ann's son Jeffrey is a sophomore at Stanford. The Wielands were planning a skiing trip to Snowbird, Utah, during the Easter holidays.

No particular news, just greetings, from Margie Beard Kelley, Amy Botsaris Nychis and Joan Fischer Boyd.

I, Diane, am finding life less hectic these days; as the gasoline shortage increases, the childrens' activities and my chauffeuring decrease. Looks like we're heading for a whole new lifestyle — staying at home. It was just great to hear from so many of you this year and a special thanks to all who contributed to the kitty. It has been suggested that the class news consist of more relevant info in the future. Any thoughts, comments? Also, we're still looking for new class secretaries. Somebody please volunteer! Have a good year . . .

Fran reporting:

Janet Marshall Taylor reports her son, Marshall, is a junior at Staunton Military Academy. Her husband is in construction and during the summer months they chase fish in the Chesapeake Bay. Janet has a small kennel of Scottish deerhounds that is doing a winning job in the show ring.

Mary Irene Moffitt informs us she received her Ph.D. in June and is director of Credit Non-Degree Program and Program 65 at Ohio State. She is also waiting for the second daughter from the adoption agency. A job offer in Australia is also being considered.

Alice Snook Kalla has been very active in the Tuesday Music Club playing cello in a trio and a string quartet. Also a cottage has been purchased in New Jersey which she and Dick are remodeling themselves.

Jane Smith Morgan vacationed in Mexico last fall. She and her family also spent several weeks on a golf holiday.

Sue Smith Schweitzer informs us of the death of her mother last November. She also reports they are living in their lake front home the year round now on Lake Ontario. Her daughter, Sandy is 6-1/2 and enjoying first grade.

Marie Timothy Obermann is currently serving as a P.T.A. president and soon will be president of the church women's organization.

Elaine Vincic Berman has been appointed to the Morristown Planning Board and has had a two week trip to Europe.

As for myself, the farm and children keep me constantly busy. Becky and Charlie are raising a lamb and a piglet, named Pork Chops. I wish to thank you all for your interesting news. Keep it coming. Good luck, good health and God be with you and yours.

Zoe reporting:

Jean Craig Byron, Sally Beck Lee, Jill Burnham Bowser, and Winifred Dickinson report no news but extend greetings to the class.

Barb Beacham Volk is enjoying her freedom with all four children in school. As the result of a quilting class she is planning to begin a king-sized quilt. To help her intellectual pursuits she recently joined the A.A.U.W.

The big news from Barb Braun Bajoras is the success of the surgery performed on their youngest child last year. The other four children are all in school.

Marilyn Campbell Bowling and John had a lovely Caribbean cruise for a honeymoon. It included an eventual wedding night stuck in an elevator aboard ship, between floors, with 5 Spaniards. So there they were, 2 Americans, in the dark, trying to communicate with 5 Spaniards and being given instructions by 2 Italians on the outside.

Sugie Carroll Molnar writes that she, Mike and the girls spent a month in Hungary last summer which included a short trip to Greece. They plan to return to Europe as soon as school is out to attend a wedding.

Far from dull is the family life of Ann Coher Winkelman. Anne feels she could give the course "Marriage and The Family." With 4 children, ranging in age from 20 months to 17 years, life has its perplexing moments.

Linda Cunningham Bham says she is about finished with her master's in Special Education — majoring in Learning Disabilities. She plans to teach as a resource teacher. Linda would like you all to come South to the city of the future.

Jean Graham Rhodes claims it took a couple of days to recover after being chaperones on a 6 day trip to Florida — by bus with the Bethel Park High Band. It included 220 kids and 20 adults. The band participated in the De Soto Festival and won a couple of first place trophies.

Pat Gordon Moore and Harry have enterprising children — their 2 daughters (16 and 15) are enjoying being Avon ladies and son, J. R. (10) is an enthusiastic collector of pocket knives and has been included in a publication of one of the leading knife collectors of the country.

Teaching first grade full time and working as a tutor for the Association For Children With Learning Disabilities on Saturdays and in summer school keeps Libby Graham Williams' letter writing a big minus.

Marilyn Hill is enjoying life in the sunny Southwest, working as editorial assistant to a novelist-professor and coping with her tennis backhand.

Janet Hoy Sterling is busy teaching kindergarten, attending the University of Connecticut, working on a master's, and singing in a Gilbert and Sullivan Workshop. Janet reports her oldest child will start college in September.

The result of her eighth child being their fourth girl is what Mary Jo Irwin Kelly refers to as good planning.

Barb Kelley Linkous reports this was their year to have family visit them. Barb has been busy compiling a genealogy of the Kelley and Minter families. In doing this she has found that she is eligible to be a Daughter of the American Revolution.

Nancy McCafferty Watts tells of the marriage of their oldest child Paul, in December, to a "lil Nashville gal." They are a scouting family, active in the church and she is still store manager for Top Value Enterprise, Inc.

The Laalos family had an uneventful but pleasant 1973. Unfortunately, 1974 has been saddened by the unexpected death of my mother on February 6. Thanks for all your replies — it was fun hearing from all of you.

Angie reporting:

In addition to painting, Pat McCormick Goodrich has become art editor of STONE COUNTRY, a poetry and art magazine. She would be happy for any alumnae to submit poems or illustrations for possible publication.

Sally Seiple Tullai and family are planning a ski vacation in Colorado during spring vacation.

Barbara McVicker Martin and Bill took the entire family to Europe last summer only to return and find that Bill had been transferred to Paris. They will be leaving this summer for a three to five year stay. Their eldest, Danielle, will be a freshman at Chatham this September.

Still leading a busy life is Nan Walker DeWard. Tony and Lynn are both in jr. high and Nan is still teaching English and reading.

Jan McGuigan Leavy has received her master's degree and is now teaching at the Allegheny Campus of Community College.

Don and Leslie Mulvihill Brockett spent January in San Juan and cruising on a friend's yacht through the Bahamas. Don has a group of young people touring the U. S. with a dinner theatre show.

The 20th anniversary of B. J. Woods Goodwin and husband brought together Bill and Babs Freas Cole and Dottie Erdley Gatz and husband. The Coles are living in Carlisle, Pa. where Bill is on his way to becoming a one star general. Dottie's husband is a Westinghouse vice-president for 8 western states and has been very involved with BART. B. J. is starting back to school at Chatham very slowly to work for her degree and has just been invited to join the Embroiderers Guild.

A new driver at Nancy Smith Bierwerth's house is a pleasant change. Nancy has been elected to the board of Child Guidance and the Western Pa. District of Health Security Center Acting Council for National Health Insurance.

Carla Norberg Gaut and Chuck were ready to leave for a trip to Europe in September but five days before departure Chuck smashed his elbow and went to the hospital instead. Carla and Claire Koller Runger are both concerned about all the shortages we have been experiencing and the energy crisis in particular. Claire now believes almost anything the environmentalists tell us.

Mary Jo Settino spoke so enthusiastically about her month traveling through Mexico and says hello to all. I have regards but no news from Barbara Wietrzynski Scott, Ruth Oberheim Webb, Joan Monahan McFalls and Mary Kay Moseley Kamath. Regards also from Marita Pigossi Spangler who said her number one son is starting college. Barbara Wagner Fredette reports that son Tad is a freshman at Pitt this year and that she has been working with the Pennsylvania Department of Education using her art in connection with elementary school programs.

Natalie Stern Miller and Craig traveled in Greece and Turkey. Craig has been adding acupuncture to the more conventional medical techniques with very good results.

One postcard I received had an Md. postmark but no signature. Hopefully it came from our only Md. addressee Reggie McDonough O'Rourke who tells us that one son Kevin is a freshman at Marietta and Patrick is in nursery school for 3 year olds.

This year I called many of the girls in the Pittsburgh areas and it was an added pleasure to visit via the telephone. Our family continues to live an 8 month year (due to income tax season.) However, we try to cram loads of living including many trips into the free time we have.

No class news was received from Mary Ann Schmitt Goodrum in time for publication in this issue.

Lynn reporting:

We were saddened to hear from her brother of the death of Blanche Mooney last spring.

Exciting news from Jean McIlwraith McCally shortly after seeing an article about her in a Pittsburgh paper. She is working with handicapped and emotionally disturbed children at Rock Creek Park Horse Centre in Washington, D. C. Jean is using her degree in psychological counseling and her skills as a horsewoman to help these children to greater confidence as they learn to take care of and ride horses. She is now looking for sources of funding so the program can continue.

Jane Pattie Vysotsky reports having to move from their lovely Victorian house to a brand new one to ease the family allergies. Children Alex and Julie are in high school; Emily, 7, is taking piano and Liz, 5, plays the violin. Vic is executive director with Bell Laboratories.

Maggie Poolos Yeotis and her family went south for a vacation last year. With the children in school, Maggie is finding more time to paint. Dean, 13, plays basketball; Stephanie, 11, likes sports and cooking and Georgeann, 6, likes everything, especially art.

It's back to Germany for Sally Schmidt Gregerson. Bill got his master's degree from Penn State last year after being at the Army War College at Carlisle, Pennsylvania. He has been in the Army for 20 years and is commander of the 94th MP Battalion. Sally says the boys are active 14 and 11. She hopes to get to London to see Polly Fleming Wharram this trip.

Rose Senoff Eisenstein reports her husband, Mark, is chief of the Anesthesia Department at Mercer Hospital in Trenton. Their second son, Daniel, will become Bar Mitzvah this summer. The family is planning a trip to Israel. Rose bowls and plays tennis in her spare time.

Tee Speerhas O'Connor is starting a training program for legal assistants at George Washington University. It is a graduate level program to serve para-legal workers. Tee has been on the Howard County Board of the League of Women Voters this past year. She says all six children are involved in something or other.

Jane Stocker Burfoot is continuing with her library courses after taking some time off. She reports the boys are all busy.

Marlene Valentine Daugherty now lives on a golf course in Raleigh where Dick is general manager of an IBM plant and laboratory. They like the warm weather and Marlene enjoys the freedom with all children in school.

A temporary retirement is the message from Carol Vogel Scrivens. I'm sorry to report she has been in the hospital with a serious illness.

Rhoda Weitsman David says husband David was home for two months last summer with a torn ligament in his back. The family vacationed last year on a working dairy farm near Lancaster. Rhoda is still active in Girl Scouts and ORT and looking forward to having all in school.

Sheila Stevens Otto sends her regards and will write when she has some exciting news.

I'm now working full time for the YWCA as program director, still weaving when I have time and have been in Three Rivers and Twin Towers art shows. Karen graduates this year (anyone remember the baby at our graduation?). We're all getting older. Our vacation last year was a month-long trip across the country, tent camping with no previous experience. I've been taking some training in transactional analysis, (the book "I'm OK, You're OK" is derived from this) and am co-teaching a class in it.

Debbie reporting:

"All the news that is fit to print." This must be a pretty obscene lot. Only two people sent news in response to my emotion charged pleas.

Lynn Hughes Mayer sends her greetings to all, but has no special news to report. She is still busy with family, church, and "fish of Northbrook."

Myrna Deakor Prince reports that both children are now at St. Edmunds Academy. Jon in first grade and Alyssa in nursery. The Princes are enjoying a new home and Myrna is playing tennis (at the Chatham courts, I hope). I will meet you there if you can put up with my playing.

Yours truly started playing tennis again last summer, and by the time I got to Chatham in December to play, (because everyone else had taken nets down for the winter) the tread was all gone from my sneakers and I did a lot of fancy footwork on the ice. Until that is, we were surrounded by doubles games, and were politely informed that we were in the middle of a physical education class. My friend asked if I thought we looked as young as the other players. I said, "Certainly, we just creak louder." It is 15 years since I last played tennis at Chatham. How about you? Why not come to the Reunion and we will have a quicky tournament.

This is my last RECORDER entry. I have thoroughly enjoyed hearing from you (and you know who you are), and hope to bestow my mailing list and pencil on someone new in June. See you there.

Susie Quad Croel apologizes sincerely for not soliciting class news for this issue of the RECORDER; there was confusion concerning the duration of her term as class secretary.

Marianne reporting:

Marilyn Eckert Winters is busy with the usual activities and has been visiting with Sue Jessop McGowan and her newly adopted baby Edward, and a surprise visit to Arlene Sinkus Lewis. Marilyn's father passed away in January.

Barbara Easton Marks finally met her long-time pen pal from the Netherlands after 19 years of correspondence. She is also very busy with teaching kindergarten, and taking graduate work in early childhood education. Barbara hopes to attend our reunion this June.

"My life has become just what I'd like it to be" reports Joan Cercone Gilson, now that she has a part time job with their homeowners' association. She also has had a busy year settling into a new house.

In addition to working hard and long hours as the sales director for Program Corporation of America, Harriette Cohen Turndorf and her husband have had a busy year traveling to places like Mexico, the Greek Islands and Aruba. As part of her job she booked Shana Alexander from Newsweek Magazine to speak at Chatham.

Angie Blumberg Levenstein and her husband have been active in the founding of a new private school in Chicago. It is a city school stressing academics and the use of city resources for children in the 3 to 18 year age bracket. In January she and Marc toured Peru and Ecuador, hiking the mountains and studying the wild life on the Galapagos Islands.

My big news is that after a five year absence from creating in the laboratory, I have a faculty position in the biochemistry department of the University of Washington to do part-time cancer research, beginning in March. It's just what I need to divert my attentions from being finance chairman for the League of Women Voters and playing tennis! My reporting job was made extremely easy this year because of the few replies; let's hear from more of you out there next year!

Jess reporting:

Chalk it up to experience, that's all I can say. Having decided to do away with the form, I handwrote some twenty postcards full of "remarks" and got the poorest response ever in return. Only three letters came. Trying to figure out why is too depressing, so I haven't bothered. Back to the mimeographed sheets next year.

Mary Fassett Roberts responded to my topical question about the energy crisis in the fashion that most of us are experiencing. The Roberts are walking, carpooling, shivering, and wearing lots of sweaters. Her family is thriving and M. B. is still on the boards of about eight million worthwhile organizations.

The new baby at Karlana Glemser Warnock's has necessitated keeping the thermostat a trifle higher and also has kept Karlana at home. Her activities have been La Leche League and 3½ year old Laura's cooperative nursery school. Sound familiar? Karlana also managed a visit to Ohio with Jackie Nadolny Rosenberger and while there saw Shirley Lewis Minner too. Like all of us, she hopes to attend the reunion if the gas shortage doesn't make it impossible.

Suby Hocker Ballay says they've been planning a house addition "forever" but this year they will really start. She also keeps busy with a creative dramatics class for 24 children which she teaches as part of an after-school program at the church. Suby saw Ann Putnam Mallinson recently at Jean Thonen Nickel's so she too is getting warmed up for the reunion.

As for me, I think my personal energy crisis began with the arrival of baby Ned on July 3. It was a classic case of only twenty-four hours notice and a house full of out-of-town guests expected for the holiday. We made it, somehow, but I am still amazed that no one ever seems to think adoptive mothers might need help with a new baby. Within a day or two, I'm usually as tired as if I had given birth! From that point we moved on to the national energy crisis. Our house is set at 65 degrees and I wear two or three sweaters, not to mention my vintage 1961 knee socks.

Marge Hanson Honig sent a great letter and want to share parts of it with everyone since we haven't heard from her in a long time. "Barry, the baby and I moved to Jerusalem last spring. Despite the unpleasantness of the recent war we find life here for the most part very enjoyable. Barry is Professor of Biophysical Chemistry at the Hebrew University, and I'm the Director of Basic Research at the National Insurance Institute (the Israeli equivalent of HEW). My study on the U. S. welfare system recently appeared in a volume published by the Joint Economic Committee, U. S. Congress, and a related article will come out shortly in the Journal of Human Resources. We plan to spend our summers in New York, but we won't get there until July so the reunion is out, I'm afraid. Please give my best to everyone."

I do hope everyone has marked their calendar for May 31-June 1. A good turnout for our reunion would be great. I'm going on my diet next week so the Jess you see in June will be thinner than the one you used to know. How's that for throwing down the gauntlet?

Donna reporting:

Although they miss Anchorage, Mary Lou Kaylor Maury and husband Jim are getting adjusted to their new home in Colorado Springs where they've been since last July. The Maurys drove down the Alcazar Highway in their camper. "It was 1,100 miles of dirt and gravel, but there were beautiful campgrounds all through the Yukon Territory," wrote Mary Lou who's enthused about having her own place and furniture after living in government quarters for four years.

Carol Lemke Keil spent part of last year tutoring students in reading as well as working with elementary youngsters in a junior garden club. The Keils moved in early January and, according to Carol, it was a "hair-raising experience." "After eight years in one house, it took days to clear out the debris we once thought was marvelous stuff," she said.

Still working as a secretary with Worthington Company in Fairfield, New Jersey, is Judy Luttrepp. She reports the only drawback is traveling some 20 miles daily each way.

After ten years in an apartment, John and Katie Messina Gamble bought a house and moved December 22 which made the holiday season memorable, said Katie. Since then she's been busy buying new furniture, selecting draperies, etc. and waiting for deliveries.

Barbara Neilan Franciosa is in private practice in internal medicine and hematology in Silver Spring, Maryland. Husband Joseph is a cardiologist.

Marlene Schweig Hartstein reports that last spring she co-organized the Long Island meat boycott and got to speak at the Washington conference which set up the National Consumer Congress. "Last fall, while serving on the Community Council Board, I was able to start a Five Towns Environmental Council," wrote Marlene. Marlene also said that, frustrated by lack of space, she took her plant hobby to school and started a school garden club.

As for yours truly, I've been job hopping. I left the Monessen newspaper, served as press representative for a local summer theatre, then became executive secretary to the president of Westmoreland County Community College. After eight months of secretarialing, I learned of an opening this past January on the Tribune-Review in Greensburg. The printer's ink boiled in my veins and once again journalism called. I'm now assistant women's editor writing social news as well as entertainment features. There's nothing like being on top of the news. Hope we get more news from all of you next time.

Joyce reporting:

Anne Putnam Mallinson and Karen Tiedy Reardon send greetings and, along with almost everyone else, indicate they will try to make the reunion.

While jetting to Phoenix and San Francisco for the weekend Marilou Querns writes that she has been flying for six years now — three with Tran Caribbean and three with American. Many of her trips have been between New York and San Juan and neessitate speaking Spanish.

Mary Sendek Jakabcsin writes the family is fine and that she tried total recall of her college French when they combined business and pleasure with a trip to Quebec where the American Accounting Association met.

Arlene Sinkus Lewis writes that John, Johnny, 6, and Jennifer, 3, are hale and hearty. She is an alumnae representative for applicants in the Boston area and is looking forward to County Criminal Court jury duty.

Carroll "Sam" Spelke Smaltz reports the girls — 12, 10 and 7 — are healthy and pretty. Don is very busy working 12 to 18 hours a day with trials sometimes lasting six to nine weeks. Sam continues with her public relations job. It is "hard and hectic sometimes" and the "pay is lousy," but she "loves it." In the last three months Sam has coordinated three TV shows and is now working on a documentary movie.

Vacations from Florida to Nantucket Island occupied Elizabeth Waite last summer. Also on the vacation trail were Sarah Williams Vasse and family, all the way out West. Sally has enjoyed helping at Mary's open school kindergarten and has become more involved as both the Parish and a Medical Librarian. A "new" career has begun with Sally's teaching four beginning flutists.

I am sorry we did not have as much news as last year. Hopefully, some of us are waiting for the reunion to exchange news. Hope to see you all then.

Nancy Beach reporting:

The energy crisis seems to have taken its toll in the A's thru C's of '63. The response this year was perfectly awful — I have visions of classmates stranded on gas lines somewhere, pleading for the gallons that will get them to the Post Office in time to answer my letters.

Except for Mary Cook Guy — "I hate to be smug," she wrote, "but we've no gas or oil shortages out here in Montana." Mary is teaching courses in library science at The College of Great Falls, and sharing toddler-watching chores with "Laura's liberated father," Don. Both of them are trying to give Laura a non-sexist oriented environment. If any more of you are treading the liberated path with family, I, for one, would like to hear more about it.

Meg Alexander Sprengle is busier than ever now that both Suzy and Betsy are in school full-time. School projects, Planned Parenthood, the library, tutoring, and ballet classes for exercise and fun.

It was great to hear from Jo Blank Glick, who receives her B.A. this June from Capital University in Bexley, Ohio, and will begin work on a master's in Speech Pathology and Therapy. "This degree is only eleven years later than scheduled!" Jo wrote.

I returned from my glorious summer in Italy, alas. Would have stayed forever, but they haven't heard about equal pay for women yet. I'm now writing for Harper's Bazaar, and in the midst of a move to Connecticut. Peace and love to you all.

Gail reporting:

"And thus this poem, though surely not

Among the best of writing . . .

Just tell me what's happening, what's on your mind,

What do you consider really exciting?"

Even with my attempt at poetry substituting for "that same old form," only six of you answered this year. I enjoyed your answers, and thank you, thank you. Next time, how about everyone answering!

Bonnie George Switzer reports the following: She's part-time teaching; an extensive home remodeling job was tiring, but successful; Bob is busy writing a Bio-Chem. manual and the kids are happy at school.

Lucile Davis Wareing's tightly-packed postal card said it — all's well, and Lucile and Guy are off traveling again, this time to Leningrad!

Mickey Kammerman Kurzbard reports "nothing very new," but never fails to answer my yearly letter — bless you!

Sue Hunt Roose listed among her news a new daughter, plans for travels closer to home (Virginia) due to the gas shortage, a recent visit to Chatham (the changes really impressed her), and a short St. Croix trip "just to relax!" Not bad!

Sheila Grobe Rossbach replied that there was little new because the "old was more than keeping her busy." Interestingly, the household's professions (law, psychology, and social work supervision) are causing the Rossbach offspring to retell the "old fairy tales" — using legal and psychotherapeutic terms — why not?

Pam Johnson Fenner seems to have caught the poetry bug, and here is her answer to my inquiry for news:

It's RECORDER news-time again this year

But lo, a change in form I see.

A verse from Gail to spur us on
To tell what's happening to you and me.

A year has passed since we moved West
To San Francisco's shores.
Twelve miles north of Golden Gate Bridge
Is where you'll find us four.

Vast green stretches of rolling hills
Where cattle and game abound.
Clean air, blue sky and flowers galore
Sunshine — most of the year 'round.

Paul is a planner studying 'open space' needs,
An exciting field today.
County and local political work
Is my strong interest I'd say.

Is what I used to be,
But in 13 years I've been 'liberalized'
To a LEFT-wing Republican you see!

"Save our hills" is the local cry
And we've studied and worked out a plan
With bond issues, petitions, assessments, too,
These will save our land.

I read each issue of RECORDER news
And wish I could be near.
Speakers, seminars, productions, too
Such exciting things going on there.

My New England roots still tug me
As I write my family and friends,
But San Francisco has my heart,
Come visit me the end.

Ah . . . and the Verlins . . . we're still around, though the address now reads Nebraska. (I note that we've kept moving West with each change). Mike is assistant professor of Internal Medicine at the University of Nebraska Medical Center. Joel is finally a nursery school student, which entitles our household to 33% more colds per year and 40 more valentines to send each February. I am again teaching religious school music and am enjoying it immensely. We all really like the Midwest, even my avocado plant that finally started to grow when we arrived in June. Omaha is a very large small town, and that's the kind of people and feeling you find here . . . we like that most definitely. Our yearly vacation starts next week, though, so we're returning to our Gulf Coast dream world from last year . . . and we'll talk to you next year! Be well!!!

Fender reporting:

A disappointing response this year to my admittedly late notes but, here goes anyway:

Jane Martin Grawe and husband Roger are in New Haven while Roger finishes his Ph.D. at Yale. Jane, in spite of the added family responsibilities continues to work two days a week analyzing various data from mothers of twins. The results from last year's work were published in October entitled "Separating Identical from Fraternal Twins." Jane poses an interesting question for all of us . . . in the recent Yale Alumni Magazine there was an article on "How does the typical Yale wife appear in the Yale Alumni Magazine?" This article was written by a wife and the results were: tweeds, smiles at reunion, good mother, and, partner to husband's vacations. Jane's interesting thought: how would our husbands look within the lines of the RECORDER? Any response to this one?

Barbara Kessell Bloxson, as in the past ten years, reports a life from Topeka which is enough to make any one exhausted. Daughter Jennifer is in kindergarten now and the two boys are 15 and 20 months old. In addition to this full house and all that goes with it, Barb works two nights a week and all day Saturday at the local Macy's in the fabric department. Barb writes that husband Ray is still with the Topeka City Attorney's office with a new responsibility for "Police Advisor" . . . he too was kept busy this year setting up this new office from scratch.

Sally Mercke Heym writes from Boston also of a very exciting and busy life. Sal is still teaching and at the same time she is working for her master's degree in Education at Boston State. Husband Rick is an architect and Sal, as I can well imagine, is thrilled everytime she passes a new building on Massachusetts Avenue designed by Rick. Sally's spare time is partially occupied with running the Boston

Alumnae Club and she welcomes any of you readers to submit suggestions for developing an active alumnae group. The Heym's took two great vacations this past year to Nantucket in the summer and to sunny St. Thomas over Christmas.

Elaine Mazer Myers wrote (would you believe!) from her new home in Milwaukee. Elaine says she and Howard are there to stay as Howard has established a very busy law practice there and that is where the roots will stay to grow. Elaine, kept busy with their new "dream house" and the redecorating that goes with it also keeps running after the two boys now 5½ and 3½ who are "devils".

Another active wife and mother is Sue Hill Warner kept busy with their six year old girl and four year old boy...not to mention the other projects of decoupage, wooden tree ornaments, crocheting, and sewing and training the new Labrador pup. As always, it was good to hear from Sue. It was equally great to hear from Bonnie LoBue more involved than ever in the field of Radiation Safety. Bonnie said she would be so busy this year that there wouldn't be time to take a vacation in Hawaii as last year. She also completed two courses at the Dale Carnegie Institute in public speaking...brave woman! In her spare time Bonnie has taken-up Chinese brush painting and will have two floral paintings in a local show this spring.

As for the Shaws...it has been another active year for us. In April Lee started a new job as head of the New York Edge Act Bank of the National Bank of Commerce of Seattle...in April I had a two-week business trip to London for our annual Euro-meetings there. Our farm in up-state New York on Owasco Lake actually produced its first crops this year of wheat, corn, oats, and barley (lots of work by Lee and moral support from me). In November I was promoted to Assistant Vice President at Morgan Guaranty still very much involved in the International Money Market scene and that same month I vacationed in Moscow and Leningrad for the long awaited but much thought of trip behind the Iron Curtain. I heard from Lucile Davis Wareing that she and husband Guy were about to head in the same direction and I trust they found it as interesting as I did. March 1st we rendezvous with Susan Bradley Trayser and husband Mac and two other couples in sunny St. Martin's for eleven days of tropical delight.

I do hope that everyone will make a concerted effort to get to reunion this spring...it would be such fun to see each other again after all these years (yikes...hard to believe...11 years)...wonder if we are still recognizable? One more thing, I urge a better response to my notes next year...what doesn't sound very interesting to you is very interesting to your classmates who are interested in reading the RECORDER...without your support there wouldn't be much of a publication to read. Ergo...special thanks to the six of you who did answer. See you all next year and hope 1974 is the greatest ever.

Martha reporting:

Here we are in our second decade as alumnae, and I notice our "year" appears earlier and earlier in the RECORDER. However, everyone I heard from seems to be keeping senility at bay — "we're not getting older, we're getting better..."

No news, says Judy Paulsen Webb, who is reunion chairman for our class, and she reminds us that this is our year to howl. She will soon be in touch with everyone regarding this, and hopes it will be a bigger success than the last one.

Betsy Phelps Tucker writes that it's great being a mother, and also added the news of Zebun Khan Islam's twins born on New Year's Eve. Betsy also earned her master's degree, which is great.

Diane Phillips Leatherberry sent her usual news-filled letter. Before moving to Ohio, Bill was Legislative Assistant to Congressman Louis Stokes. Since July he has been on the faculty at Case Western Reserve University Law School. Diane, in addition to adjusting to her new life style, has been consulting in public sector labor relations and taking courses at the University. The Leatherberrys see Debbie Wolowitz Cowan and Dale occasionally, and also enjoy seeing Lillian Steiner Levine and Steve and their two children.

Sue Popky Harris has left snowy Montreal and now basks in the sunny winters of southern California. Sue finds the people warm, receptive, and a little crazy, "but then, aren't we all? Here they simply hide it less!"

Mary Riley Smith stays busy with their two children, Joshua and Ethan, plus an interior decorating course. I wish she'd come do something — anything — with my house! She reports that Larry left the Foreign Service last year to go to work for Mayor Lindsay. It was an exciting year and a half, and he plans to continue working in the city government.

Sue Rockwell Coen writes of a quiet year for them, filled with family activities. Jim is busy at work, and with work toward his master's. All in all, "a good year."

For us, this past year has been one of adapting to different demands. I could make a list of all the things we didn't do, but it will suffice to say that it's a good thing that we expected the first few years of being in business for ourselves to be rough ones. Bruce works at least 13 hours a day, six days a week. One could say a housewife and mother does the same, but the tensions are different and not so strenuous, and at least with children, one is sure to eat regularly! I'm still doing "the books," which has become a much bigger job. Also doing a lot of reading, and presently taking a course in belly dancing. Whee! We find time for the bowling league, are determined to participate in at least the Sunday sailboat races this summer, and have recently become interested in hang-gliding. It's a full enough life when you add various needlework projects, housework, kids, neighbors, etc.

It's nice to note there was a 100% increase in replies over last year — from three to six. With that sort of impetus it could be twelve by next year!

Jane reporting:

Joan Salay Green writes with pride of husband John's latest achievements. He won the Distinguished Young Scientist of 1974 Award from the Maryland Academy of Science. In addition, he's been made head of the materials department for the Martin Marietta Corporate Research Lab. With son Brian in nursery school, Joan occupies her time with a pottery class, bridge, volleyball, and bowling. Energy crisis permitting, the Greens hope to get to Europe again in the fall.

Dianne Rubin Newman expressed enthusiastic agreement with Anna Crone Nagy's letter in the fall RECORDER. "There is so much potential," says Dianne, "for idea cross-currents and for even effective lobbying on political ideas of interest nationally." She suggests that if all Chatham alumnae took time to write their state legislatures encouraging passage of the Equal Rights Amendment that perhaps it would have moved faster and more effectively. Right on! In an entirely different vein, she closed by asking if anyone saw her on "Jeopardy?"

Betsy Snyder Cottingham continues to serve as the only woman member of a hospital Board of Directors and finds it a stimulating experience to see how business and professional men function in that situation.

From the other side of the world, Caroline Whaley Thibault and family have greeted the beginning of their last year in Sri Lanka with some sadness. She didn't indicate where the Department of State might locate them next.

It's been a series of mini-reunions for Susan Shields Kopp and her family. She and Glenn visited with the families of Judy Paulsen Webb in Pittsburgh and Lois McCune Flowers in San Diego. Sue intends to celebrate the "both kids finally in school situation" by taking some courses at the local college.

I hope that many of you have serious intentions of attending the June reunion. After all, don't you owe it to yourselves to get together with such awfully nice people? Hope to see you then.

LOST

Ellen Wetzal Mialky (Mrs. Edward M.)

Susan reporting:

This year the news was exceptionally sparse. I hope everything was not as dull as it would appear.

Bobbie Bauman Larkin reports that, for the first time, in years, the request for news got to her in time. We had been sending it to her parents instead. Bobbie and her husband, Jack, have been living in central Massachusetts for two years where Jack is the Director of Education at Old Sturbridge Village. They live in half of an old 19th century house in the country where they enjoy "Feeling free from city life." Before Timmy's birth, Bobbie was doing graduate work in anthropology at the University of Massachusetts and hopes to return. The Larkins see Joanne Zweig Friedman '64 and her family often. Leonard Friedman is now Chairman of Modern Languages at Salem State College in Salem, Massachusetts.

Becky Bennett Wallace wrote that she is busy with her two children. Katharine is in kindergarten and busy learning to ski as well as read. Jim's law practice keeps him busy and traveling quite a lot. Becky is enjoying "artsy-craftsy stuff" in her leisure time.

The class extends its deepest sympathy to Bibi Boles Evans on the death of her mother last spring.

Ginny Damato Lee reports that, instead of traveling to parts unknown during the past year, she resigned her teaching position of seven years in Connecticut and assumed a position in sales and marketing with Arvida Corporation, one of the largest land sale and development firms in Florida. She also married Walter Lee, a sales engineer with the Burndy Corporation.

Jane Flaster Biggard is happy to report that her family is fine. Older daughter, Debbie, is enjoying her new sister tremendously. The Biggards also moved from Shadyside to a new home in Squirrel Hill during the past year.

Linda Berg Samuels and family moved to Florida where they are living at Patrick Air Force Base. Sam is studying for M.S. in Contracts Management at Florida Institute of Technology. In the spring, the Samuels will move to Lakeland where Sam will teach ROTC at Florida Southern College. The girls, Lisa and Kim, are growing up fast.

Mary Brown Garland and I had a long telephone conversation trying to catch up on the last five years or so. The Garlands moved to the Washington area from Cincinnati in September. George is now Deputy Director of his program in the Environmental Protection Agency. Mary is considering returning to graduate school in Urban Planning.

Mary brings news that Karen Smith Gugino, Jim and their three sons have forsaken the big city for a farm in northern Pennsylvania where they raise and groom dogs.

Diane Browarsky Levine writes of an exceptionally busy year spent trying to combine doctoral work in English at the University of Maryland with the commitment to home and family. Her husband has been involved in teaching, research, and patient care at Johns Hopkins University. Fortunately, this hectic schedule leaves them busy and content most of the time.

Yours truly, Susan Atherton Kleine, has had a busy year, as usual, surviving my 30th birthday, doing political and League of Women Voters work, and teaching history half-time at the Madeira School. I find part-time work a good 'solution' to the career/motherhood problem. Doug continues to be busy at work, and our two girls, Andrea and Hilary, are doing well. We took a camping trip through Wisconsin and Michigan last August and visited Mary Krein Howarth and David as well as Beverly Miller Blessinger. We are afraid that the energy crisis will cramp our style this year though. I see Nancy Speck and Sallie Hendon fairly often. They are doing well and pursuing interesting careers in Washington. Hope the response is better next year. My thanks to those of you who wrote.

Joan reporting:

As usual, the class members have many and varied interests to keep them busy. While Judith Goslee Diaz reports nothing specific — except a new baby — she did enjoy a visit with Jackie Smyth Gawthrop and Sam when they were in town. Judy and Jackie toured Chatham — "What a change!"

Our sympathy goes to Sara Heslep, whose mother died quite suddenly last year. Sara conducted probate of the estate herself, a constructive experience which showed that an average person can, with some professional advice, untangle the legal web surrounding probate. Lately Sara has become deeply committed to the United Farm Workers efforts to renew their contracts through a strike and boycott of grapes and head lettuce.

From Montreal, Elaine Hillman Moroney reports seeing Karen Kvam last summer for the first time in six years. Beside children-related activities, Elaine and Mike have begun conversational French lessons in order to communicate with the 92% non-English-speaking Quebecers. Elaine is also becoming involved again in music — an informal madrigal singing group and a chamber orchestra. This summer the Moroneys will visit Mike's family in Ireland.

Myra Hull Gillum reports that she is "thrilled to pieces" watching Allison and has enjoyed seeing Martha Repman, who is head of a branch of the Philadelphia Free Library located near Myra Linda Kates Meyer and family have become sailing enthusiasts and, in fact, have taken some boat courses and now have their own 20-foot sloop. Linda has also joined two service organizations and is enjoying two new interests in macrame and indoor plants.

Evelyn Kinast McElhaney reports no particular news but mentions that she is basically pleased with the new direction of the RECORDER, a sentiment echoed by a number of others.

Bridget Kumutat Allen and Richard are still spending much of their time repairing and remodeling their home post-Hurricane Agnes. Bridget has apparently become a general handy person in the process. Richard continues busy as Bucknell's Annual Fund Director; the Allens continue their interest in sports car racing; and Bridget's photography skill is now utilized for the local weekly newspaper and various free lance projects.

Our best wishes are extended to Janie Lanigan on her approaching marriage. Janie has had a well-traveled year, moving from New York City to Washington, D. C. — where she roomed briefly with Marty Wilson and met Russ — to St. Louis, where she will be managing the Designer/Better Coats and Dresses section of a new Stix, Baer and Fuller branch store.

In early summer, Linda Lanius Tomlins and family will be journeying along the Gulf to Florida, then to Washington, D. C. and York, Pennsylvania to visit Linda's family and, hopefully, old friends along the way — all, of course, provided there is enough gasoline. In the fall, Linda would like to begin work parttime or begin graduate studies

I've had a busy year — becoming more involved with the Chicago alumnae club, tackling needlework in its various forms, vacationing in Bermuda in the summer, and revisiting Chatham in the fall — and the campus certainly has changed. And, of course, world events keep things interesting in my international economic research activities at the Harris Bank. Hope to see many of the class at next year's reunion — the tenth (Gulp!)

Mary reporting:

Claudia Miller Russey is busy substitute teaching in her local high school . . . it is easier than a regular teaching job. Son David takes care of her spare time, last year when she and her French class were organizing and preparing a French dinner for 100 he came down with chicken pox! Steve is Assistant Headmaster at Rocky Hill School, and the family is well established in their new home.

For the first time in ages, Janice Patterson has stayed put for a whole year! She says the southern sun has a hypnotic effect. The Merchandising program she went to Miami-Dade Community College to develop has completed its first cycle of courses, and the results were worth the work . . . complete with a big increase in student numbers. As if that weren't enough to keep any one person busy, Janice has a part-time teaching job at Florida International University, and tapes books for the Recording for the Blind Organization as a volunteer!

Two and a half year old Jordan is still helping Virginia Powell Hargrave work on her pottery, both teaching and producing. She has participated in several craft fairs and sales, and gives wheel-throwing demonstrations.

Dorothy Raymond Matsui is back at work as the regional librarian for Milpitas, Calif. following the birth of son Tim. Yas has started grad school in the evenings; he is trying for an MBA, "so we are having to be much more organized than we've ever had to be before." No skiing so far this year — weekends are spent catching up on Tim's developments.

As usual, Marsha Richards Bingle has lots of news. She is finance chairman for the League of Women Voters, Allegheny County Council, and participates in all the League activities . . . particularly working for the passage of a new Home Rule Charter for Allegheny County. John and his study commission are still polishing up a proposed new Home Rule Charter for the City of Pittsburgh. For relaxation, the Bingle's bought a piano last spring and Marsha says she is trying to remember how to play. The Alumnae Executive Board, of which Marsha is a member, has started having "snack-in's" at the individual dorms (sort of dorm breaks) as a way of getting alumnae and students in touch with one another. They have had very good success. Also, Marsha reports seeing Pam Proksa Patt at an LWV meeting and Janet Simpson Prescott now and then.

Patti Papp Breman and family are back in the Pittsburgh area from Massachusetts as the result of a job offer Sid could not refuse. He hopes to sit for the C.P.A. exam soon. Patti keeps busy with Eddie who is almost three.

As for my news, our big achievement is moving into the home we had built this past year. David and I did a lot of the work ourselves, and I know more about insulating than I care to have to! I also went wild with the preserving routine this fall. This part of Michigan abounds in "pick your own" orchards. We did manage a week in Bermuda in September. I have added a second "hat" at the Wayne County Federated Library System — I am now head of the Order Dept. as well as being head of Reference/Interloan. With gasoline the way it is, I don't know how much longer I can continue to drive 80 miles a day. David and I see Beverly Miller Blessinger and Ken quite regularly — we'll always have enough gas for that! Sue Atherton Kleine and her family were here this summer, and Nancy Speck flew in and out one weekend. I am sorry more of you did not send in news . . . can you believe that next year is our tenth anniversary!

Beverly reporting:

Although there were not as many replies this year, letters continued to arrive from all over the country, ranging from Washington, D. C. to the state of Washington. Many of us have moved during the year, over half of those who replied, in fact!

Having thought that only an earthquake could budge her from New England, Sue Soule Cox is still surprised to find herself and family happily settled in Aspen, Colorado. Larry was offered the job of Marketing Director for NASTAR, a national standard racing program with home offices in Aspen. Six-year-old Sam is in first grade and Chris, five, is in a pre-school program. Other than doing some volunteer teachers' aid work at the elementary school, Sue writes that she is involved only in skiing and more skiing.

Jill Squire Popish summed up her thoughts for the year with:

"Roses are red,
Violets are blue
Same activities as last year
Nothing much new."

Or, she writes, "We're alive and well in Newport News."

Ginny Stretton Smith started the year with a big event — the birth of a daughter. In June, Ginny and family moved to Michigan's Upper Peninsula. She is finding the countryside beautiful, relatively undisturbed since much of it is timberland. The winters are long and cold, but the Smiths manage to keep warm by their wood stove.

Another Chathamite who moved since last year is Tina Swansen Cummings. Leaving Charlotte, North Carolina, was not easy after three years, but Tina writes that she and John are basically mid-westerners and happy to be in Indianapolis. John changed jobs, leaving a large hospital supply company for a smaller one where he could be more of his own person. Randy, age six, is loving first grade and Amy, age five, is in pre-school now and eager for kindergarten next year. Tina writes that she worked at the Drug Education Center in Charlotte for a year.

Jane Tobey Eden is yet another one of our recently relocated classmates. Jane writes that she loved the town but wanted more elbow room. Jeff, 4, attends nursery school two mornings a week and Greg, fifteen months, is a joy to watch. She still sees Francie Darr Aley and children as often as Tom's globe trotting permits.

Ingrid Von Dattan Detweiler reports no dramatic happenings. Sean is now two-and-a-half and is curious about the world. Ingrid is busy being a wife and mother, working with the League of Women Voters and attending selectmen's meetings.

Marcia Webb Buxton is still enjoying the Northwest. Tom continues to work for the Boeing Company and Marcia is doing volunteer work for Planned Parenthood. They spend their leisure time sailing aboard their 29 foot trimaran.

After two years in England and one in Charleston, South Carolina, Peggy Whiting is again in the northeast. She misses England but is enjoying her new job in a co-educational day school. Last summer, Peggy traveled up and down the east coast, visiting various historical sights and found it really enjoyable to see the United States for a change instead of Europe. Peggy sees Jackie Gawthrop and her family frequently as well as Debbie Dechert. Peggy writes that if anyone else is in the Croton-on-Hudson area to let her know.

Martha Wilson began a new job after Christmas. While Martha enjoyed working in the art gallery, she writes that the field is notoriously underpaid. Martha is now Library Services Manager, which she claims is fancy for office manager, for the Carrollton Press and the United States Historical Documents Institute. They publish reprint indexes, some of which are the Proceedings of Congress and the Annual Reports of the Smithsonian. She also served as chairman of the annual Georgetown House Tour.

With part-time graduate school in child development and three children including a new baby Jan Simpson Prescott manages to keep quite busy.

Jane Tremble Baumann is completing her senior year at Ramapo College in New Jersey and debating between law school and a master's in political science. Even with two college girls living with them to help with the babysitting she sometimes wonders if it is all worthwhile.

Ken and I, Beverly Miller Blessinger, have had another pleasant year in Imlay City, Michigan. Ken still enjoys his high school English teaching and I like my work as a reading consultant in the Romeo schools. Last summer, we vacationed in Spain for three weeks, an entirely different experience for us.

Cookery reporting:

Georgia Cannellos, a senior policy analyst with the Department of Transportation, spent two months in Australia last fall studying their trucking and railroad industries. On her way there she stopped off in Fiji and Hawaii. Georgia enjoys Washington, which she refers to as "the political entertainment capital of the world," but she leaves occasionally for side trips such as a skiing excursion to Colorado.

LoLita Dawson Pfeiffer is currently waging a battle to reform election laws as a member of the Missouri League of Women Voters. She manages to find time to play viola in the local symphony. Penny Anderson Gladwell has also renewed her acquaintance with the viola and plays with the Huntington (West Virginia) Chamber Orchestra. She is considering going back to school for a degree in music education so that she can pioneer a program for teaching string instruments in her part of Kentucky. Penny has been filling in her spare time by representing Chatham at local high schools, counseling senior high students at church, co-chairing a landscaping project at the county children's home, and entertaining her former roommate Mary Rosenberger Hourigan and family. Dave has been promoted to operations planning coordinator for Ashland Oil.

Zayde Dotts Antrim has been serving as president of the Richmond Chapter of Planned Parenthood. She and a group of volunteers are teaching courses in human sexuality in the Richmond Public Schools. Her chapter has opened a Family Life Education Center and is planning to show films every two months on educational television.

Ellen Dailey Bedell received her Ph.D. in Egyptology from Brandeis last June. She and Tom will be excavating in the northwestern Negev this summer. In September she will begin teaching in the archaeology department of the University of the Negev in Israel while Tom works at the Institute for Desert Studies.

Jo Ann Eustace Walther continues to teach eleventh and twelfth grade English in Cambridge. She and Fred have been renovating their new house. Since receiving his Ph.D., Fred has spent one year with the Air Force and is now a staff scientist at MIT Lincoln Laboratory.

Beverly Blazey Palmer is an assistant professor of clinical psychology at California State College, Dominguez Hills. She also serves as a research psychologist with the Department of Medicine, UCLA. In May, Bev will publish "A Model for a Community-Based Women's Clinic" in the American Journal of Public Health. Dick will finish his residency in psychiatry in July after which he will probably begin his two years of naval service.

Maggi Berman Guzinsky and Bob put their house up for sale in preparation for a move to Cleveland only to have to cancel the sale when Bob received a second promotion to stay in New Jersey. Maggi has been in touch with Carol Swenson Foss, who is now living on Long Island. Maggi requests that anyone who has heard from Lucy Hilmer to contact her.

Lenore Fellner Lessall, apparently offended by the questionnaire she received, wrote back to say she would not answer the irrelevant questions any longer.

I am still doing management consulting with Advanced Systems Associates, Wellesley. Philip was a teaching assistant at Brown this year and has just had his doctoral dissertation proposal accepted.

Elizabeth reporting:

Louise Farmer Haralam reports that she and Alex will return to the states in the fall and plan on settling in Lancaster, Pa., Louise's hometown. Alex will open his own general dental practice.

Janet Forbush Zuvers moved last spring and has been busy as a substitute teacher in Tyrone, Pa. Pam Johnson Gutkind and Connie Gray Vought are still teaching in Pittsburgh and Sumter, South Carolina, respectively. Suzanne Hershey Bress is doing professional calligraphy.

New homes are a big item in some of our plans. Pat Jalowick Demase and Larry purchased a home in Highland Park last spring which had belonged to Dr. Paul Cameron, a visiting doctor at Chatham before his retirement. Judith Graytock Dengler is planning a new home on 1½ acres but they are having problems with the high interest rates and the energy crisis.

Lynn Hillman McCulloch is in Canada studying Educational Technology, Television and Film at Sir George Williams University. She is working on her thesis consisting of a television or film production backed up by a research paper. Gini Gold's new job is Assistant to the Vice President for Public Affairs and Information at the Atomic Industrial Forum. Gini travels a lot as part of her job and as recreation and has been skiing in Italy and Austria and sailing in Greece and the Virgin Islands.

Madelyn Gorchoff Osur is working toward becoming a C.P.A. and is enjoying the business world. JoAnne Greenfield Abraham is secretary for the Matawan Environmental Committee, on the board of B'nai B'rith and substitute teaches at Matawan High.

Lynn Hillman McCulloch feels that the alumnae questionnaire is oriented too much toward the husbands and encourages information about husbands only. I don't think that this is valid because we have many examples to the contrary. Pat Jalowick Demase is combining marriage with her work as Supervisory Instructional Specialist for the Pittsburgh Board of Education. Greta Gunia Hark- ness is working part-time for the Chemung County Planning Board and writing her thesis on Urban and Regional Planning and Judy Gilbert Livingston is a full time student at Johns Hopkins University as well as working for Academic Games Associates. With all of these things going, I do not think that Chatham graduates are taking a back seat to their men.

Carol Pogash reporting:

Click from the Symbionese Liberation Army to women having babies.

I'm a reporter with the San Francisco Examiner, Randolph Hearst's paper, and have written only SLA stories in the last few weeks. This is an odd respite. Cookie Mason is in Bristol, England on a post doctoral research grant in neurophysiology, which explains why I'm substitute secretary.

Debby Little is riding on the crest of the women's movement. "Am now manager of Internal Communications for Polaroid Corp.," which is a lot more than head memo writer. Debby lives in what she imagines is a tree house and keeps herself sane with plants and daily jogs.

Sandy Lefe graduated in June from Harvard Business School. Sandy switched jobs, is now working with Arthur Young and Co., vacationed in Canada and Maine and met a man she's going to marry this spring.

Nora Levy Johnston is her own person again, sort of. "At long last I have pulled myself out of the housewife/mother rut and attend evening classes at the Bath Academy of Art," she wrote. Nora has two kids, Peter, almost 2, and Lucy, almost 4, who attends the only state nursery school in town.

Judy Light is finishing her Ph.D., publishing and training her two Yorkshire terriers.

Dael Kiesler Stichter's husband returned from Vietnam with the last of the cease fire withdrawal people. The two are stationed by the Pacific Ocean at Camp Pendleton. Aside from cajoling two children every day Dael occupies herself with "tennis, bridge, gardening, etc."

Shannon McGuire Sollinger says she's sworn off white bread and sticking with yeast. She's also quit teaching at NYU and is lecturing in humanities at Ladycliff College in Highland Falls. She's moving to Norfolk, Va., this summer.

Joan Lessing spends vacations in Israel and is working toward her MBA at Columbia University with a concentration in finance.

Karen Lake finished her graduate work at Pitt and took a job as coordinator of Educational Studies for the Indiana University School of Medicine in Indianapolis. It is, she says, hectic, but happy.

Kammy McCleery puts us on notice she's not the ole rah-rah girl we once knew. She's extricated herself from a year in Vietnam and three years of a bad marriage and is "a reshaped person." She's got herself a better man and a better job as an insurance claims adjuster in Houston.

I still live in the Berkeley cottage described by Cookie four years ago. The life here is good.

Teg reporting:

This first newspread is from girls who answered last year but did not see their news in print. About a week before the Bulletin deadline Frank and I were invited to make a trip to Ecuador, Peru and the Galapagos Islands. We left in quite a flurry but I got to combine research with pleasure and we had an absolutely fantastic time. Only a few people had replied when we took off and I did a fast write-up on the plane which apparently never made it to Chatham. I want to include this "old" news but it may be a bit out of date. Andrea Morgan Weyer is living in Lexington while her husband, Tom, is at the Harvard Business School. Her two daughters keep her very busy but she complains that "babies grow up too fast."

Jeanne Osterhout Burwick says "suburban life took some adjusting to" but she was out working part-time for an immigration and naturalization office for the National Council of Jewish Women. Another mother at home is Andrea Moss End. She, her two children and her husband Malcolm are enjoying life in Croton-on-Hudson and are still fixing up their old house. Malcolm is a writer and art director at Ogilvy and Mather Advertising, where he handles the Puerto Rico account — advertising for the commonwealth. Nancy Lynch Steele and her husband Larry are also fixing up an old house which they bought in rural Bethel, Delaware — an old shipbuilding community of less than 200 people. They have 75 acres and two St. Bernards. Larry is an attorney working for the state of Delaware and Nancy is still reporting for the News-Journal papers out of Georgetown, Del. Mary Ruddell Lindberg is now co-director of a day-care center and teaching a kindergarten class. She says her two kids, Sarah and Krista, enjoy her job because "they get to go to school every day with Mom."

Susan Plaut writes from Washington D. C. that she is teaching English as a second language in Montgomery County, Md. to children of all nationalities. She spent last summer studying Arabic and plans a big trip to the Middle East for the summer of '74. Liz Shea Haskell is "living, loving and growing in California." She continues counseling at a junior high school, but a recent visit from Frank Lackner convinced her to get working and finish her Ph.D.

Ruth Oliver Hewitt has a daughter who is now a sophomore at Chatham. She describes herself as the "old grad" and is working at Chatham in evaluation services. She also took two of the informal courses given in the evenings at Chatham and found them very stimulating. Barbara Newman Gangemi is living in a San Francisco suburb and spending a lot of time with her new daughter, Alexa Nicole. Her husband Paul, who is now working as an investment counsellor, plans a career change shortly to viticulture — the growing of wine grapes. Barbara plans to get back to work soon helping emotionally disturbed children using Reichian techniques. Joan Reisner Auritt has already gone back to producing television shows for the public television station in Philadelphia after giving birth to twin boys last year. Another girl working for television is Judith Murray Walle. She does free-lancing for the CBC as well as Canadian radio. This past fall of '73, she worked for 14 weeks as a story editor for a show called the "City at Six."

She loves broadcasting and producing. Her son Gregory is two years old "which says all" and her husband is a sales manager for L'Oreal Canada. Melanie Redhead Applebaum spent a month in Europe last summer and is currently rewriting the art curriculum for the Michigan schools to begin in '75. She and her husband Ed have just bought a new home with an acre of land and five bedrooms in Troy, Mich. I have seen Jean Sour Raben here in New York. She retired last October as commercial lending officer for Chemical Bank to await the arrival of her twins — Alison Scofield and Matthew Snyder. They arrived on December 16, 1973. Her husband John works in the public finance department of the First Boston Corp. Mary Rosenberger Hourigan has been working one day a week with retarded pre-schoolers at the St. Peter's Child Development Center in Pittsburgh. This summer she will be moving to Brockton, Mass. where her husband Philip will join a group of pediatricians. Their son Peter is now 2½ and their second son Patrick was born last May.

I guess that's it for "old" and "new" news. The trip to South America was definitely the highlight of last year for the Stokes. Frank will be leaving New York Model Cities Administration in June when the program terminates and we're not sure where we'll be after that. In the meantime, I am at Rockefeller University and my first paper on avian neuroanatomy has been accepted by the Journal of Comparative Neurology and should appear in about six months.

Jo reporting:
As I write this in February, knowing that it will appear in the Spring RECORDER, I find it hard to believe there actually will be a spring this year! Ah, for warm air (no more boots and snowsuits to put on), sunshine (get the kids out of the house!) and flowers (no, no, Carrie, don't pull)! Only another mother of a toddler can imagine how much I look forward to spring!

Chatham, always so beautiful at springtime, now boasts two faculty members who are in our class. Janet Walker has taught French for four years. She also teaches Italian. Janet visited England last summer and studied Italian in Rome. She continues to work on her Ph.D. at Bryn Mawr. Mary Schlitt Kostalos began her first year this fall. She is an assistant professor of biology.

Martha Sebastian Moyer is busy with work, traveling and community involvement. They were in London last June. Martha works for Veterans Hospital, where she is co-ordinator for 25 community care homes that are at points far from the hospital. She is vice-president of her local NOW Chapter and is active in ACLU.

Susan Whitfield's description of the gasoline shortage around Albany sounds critical. Hour-long waits at the pumps for $3 worth have discouraged her from making many ski trips this winter. Susan's new projects in the Governor's Office, after finishing her work on the Delafield Commission, include doing a study on intermediate education units in New York state. The results of this study stirred up quite a controversy and led, eventually, to new legislation. Susan is also reviewing state social services, including Medicaid, is involved in introducing legislation to improve women's rights, and is doing quite a bit of public speaking. And, like always, she is very, very busy and very much in tune with life.

Motherhood came this year to Jeannie Sour Raben — twice! — and to Sandy Stewart Shasby. Jeannie retired from her job at Chemical Bank to await the twins and now finds that they are a full-time job. Sandy's husband is a medical intern at University of Washington. She loves Seattle and being a mother.

Westward ho! was the cry of Barbara Subow Greene this year. Bobbie, Fred and Shelby are really enjoying the coatless weather of northern California — her letter should be reprinted by the San Rafael Chamber of Commerce. Fred works in San Francisco, about 25 minutes south of their home.

A move back to the northeast made Carol Swenson Foss and family quite happy this year. She reports that she found housing very expensive in the northeast compared with North Carolina. Eddie was two in January and full of energy. A visit from Dara Murphy and a phone call from Maggie Berman Guzinsky added to Carol's exciting, though skilless, winter.

Linda VanDoren Garlick wrote at Christmastime. She and John found an old house to restore last June. They planned to keep their apartment while working on the house, but that got to be a very expensive arrangement. They moved into the house without one room being finished and lived out of boxes for months.

I was pleasantly surprised to receive word from Linda Weitchek this year. Linda is living in New Haven where she is a graduate student at Yale in maternal and newborn nursing (Nurse-Midwifery program). She hopes to get her master's in 1975. She graduated in 1973 from Columbia with a B.S. in nursing. Her program sounds fantastic.

Jane Ross Ross received her master's degree in early childhood education from Columbia in 1972. She probably finds it very helpful in raising Davis, now 4, and Emily, almost 2. Jane finds that mothering children at this stage has become less physical but more demanding in other ways — "infinitely more interesting and exciting." In another year Emily will be off to nursery school, and Jane can begin to think about the outside world again.

There have been so many highlights to my year I find difficulty beginning. Carrie was born two days after I mailed last year's newsletter. She is, according to me, her grandmothers, and all our babysitters, truly an angel. Jake, on the other hand, has taught me what "terrible two's" means! A month after Carrie arrived, we moved to Williamsport, where Ed is really involved with law practice. I have been mothering full-time, getting to know my new community part-time, and practicing law in between.

Sue reporting:

Emily Barclay and Suzanne Boucek Berol have both finished the work on their master's degrees. Emily received her M.P.H. from Yale last spring and is now working for the Massachusetts Department of Mental Health. Suzanne finished her library science degree at Simmons College. She and John who will receive his M.B.A. from Harvard in June spent the summer in South America. Mibs Bainum is still working on her Ph.D. in theatre at the University of Wisconsin where she is also a graduate assistant.

Loretta Bonazzo Wildman has moved to Pittsburgh where she is director of a community day care center. She has also helped organize a Common Cause telephone network for the 14th Congressional District in Pittsburgh. Josie Campbell Dellenbaugh is back to work after the birth of her son and says they will be moving to Hopewell, N. J. this spring.

Dale Cohen sends greetings but has no "real" news.

As for the Weeks, things are going well. Debby will be off to nursery school full time next year so I am trying to decide whether to get a job or go back to school. I haven't seen anyone from Chatham in ages although I did run into Helen Pollock Starr while tailgating before the Harvard-Yale game. I do hope some of us '69ers will make it to Pittsburgh this June because it could be great fun if enough show up.

Lois reporting:

While only a handful of people responded to my questionnaire this year, those who did sent news of busy if not hectic lives. Topping the list has to be Bobbi Franklin McKenna who with two children under the age of two started graduate school in September. She's working on her Ph.D. in International Relations and studying Chinese at the Institute for Sino-Soviet Studies at George Washington University. Also still in grad school is Biri Fay who combines work at the Brooklyn Museum with her studies in Egyptology at the NYU Institute of Fine Arts. Her job has taken her to Egypt twice this year to work on the installation of a new museum for the Egyptians in Luxor.

Jodi Drooz Yoffie is now a Deputy Attorney General for the state of Delaware. Her specialties include everything from multi-million dollar highway contracts to the prosecution of rape cases. The Yoffies have moved to a lovely home in the country. Jodi says she was concerned when she heard they had a well, but was greatly relieved to learn she didn't have to go outside to pump water.

Kay Gamage is back from California. Having become an NASD and N. Y. Stock Exchange Registered Representative, she's now doing institutional trading for a small regional firm on the floor of the Boston Stock Exchange. Kay says that although the investment business is currently very depressed, she still loves it and suggests that more women ought to consider entering this business.

Dixie Dixon notes that she's listing her business address for any correspondence as she moves quite often. Having been single for some time she's now living in a big house with six room-mates and finds her life is in a constant state of change. While continuing to work as a paralegal, Dixie is now planning to go to law school. In addition she writes of her involvement with the Women's Liberation Movement working for NOW and a Philadelphia group called Women Organized Against Rape.

I'm still in Newburgh trying to cope with a sixteen month old toddler. I continue to be involved with volunteer work at Planned Parenthood and with various political activities including the current school board elections, the movement to impeach Nixon and an effort to counteract the anti-abortion forces locally and on the legislative level.

Barb reporting:

It would seem that the energy crisis must be affecting the writing arm of Chatham grads. The response this year was terrible, but those who did write were full of good news and good cheer.

Ann Judson Ratcliffe has completed her master's in secondary education, but will be taking more courses because of a special interest in remedial reading. Ann still teaches eighth grade English. Temple has one more year in the Coast Guard, after which they plan to make their home in Philadelphia.

Two other members of our "group" are still continuing their educations. Marij Kaplan will graduate from law school this spring, and plans to take the California bar exam. Marij hopes to practice in the Bay area after she and her friend Michael travel across the U. S. and to Europe (energy crisis permitting). Sarah Bornstein Edeiken visited Marij recently, and Ricky Shore Boyd lives nearby. Marij says that she can finally say that she enjoyed her years at Chatham. Also continuing her education is Isabel Mizrack Gantt, who is working on her master's thesis.

Cornelia Kennedy Atkins is teaching in Louisville, where Larry is studying Community Development. Cornelia writes that she saw quite a bit of Risa Ellovich before Risa left to do field work in Africa. Barbara Miller received her M.A.T. at Brown University in 1971 in the field of French and Education. She has, however, entered the "business world" and is now a Pension Trust Analyst for Sun Life of Canada. Barb enjoys her work, but she doesn't sound sure that she wants to make insurance her life's work.

Maryann Majewski Lencoski writes that her wedding was quite a Chatham reunion. Kate Perkins and Sue Trees Juliano were attendants. Also present were Diane Himes Ambrose, Barbara Miller, Betty Chiaffello Reiner, Jane DeLucia Simms, Ida Gonzalez Holstein, Mary Archick Antimary, and Faye Singer Rosch. Peter is a bank examiner in Hartford and Mimi has a new job with the Hartford Insurance Group in Operations Research.

Joyce Kass Eisenstein and Barry have bought a home, and Barry has been accepted to do his sub-specialty training in Infectious Diseases. Joyce writes that their daughter Julie, eight months old, is growing "quickly and beautifully." Mary Hood Deitch and Harry are still in California, both working on master's degrees in Correctional Counseling.

The Platz family has also bought a new home. I'm still working part-time as the bacteriologist at the local hospital, where Joe is the chief pharmacist. It's hard to believe that our oldest boy, Brian, will be starting school in the fall.

Best wishes to all for a happy and peaceful 1974.

Merle reporting:

In the midst of my "I am still . . ." and "not too much is happening" responses it was nice to read Ann Posner Fox's enthusiastic reply! Ann and Art are living in Iowa City, Iowa, where Art is interning at the University of Iowa Hospitals and Ann is working on her master's in Social Studies Ed. Iowa City has enough appeal for the Foxes that they hope to remain there for the rest of Art's training. The only thing in short supply is jobs. Ann said they are really not too cognizant of the energy shortage. I am! My car is sitting outside with enough gas for me to do the things I must get done by car today. There is no extra and my odd license plate will not allow me to get gas on this even day! Fortunately we live in an area where the car is not essential for essentials. Unfortunately, most of our friends live in "driving only" distance. This includes Eleanor Levinson Peris. We were warned to come to visit the Perises only if we had enough gas for a round trip as northern New Jersey has less gas than the "five boroughs." Fortunately we were able to make the trip and spent a very pleasant weekend with Eleanor, Jeffrey, Marshall and Jonathon. Eleanor and Jeffrey recently returned from California where they visited with Marsha Weiss Bramowitz and Alan.

Helen Pollock Starr has moved again. She is now in Washington as Congressman Peter Rodino's press secretary. The job is very time consuming and leaves little time for anything else. Helen saw Ann Nelson Hooe when Ann was in Washington on business.

Complaints about the weather came from Ellen Newman Edelstein. Ellen and Aaron have been trying to do some skiing but have found the weather to be uncooperative. (After three winters of that problem Richard and I gave up on the East and went to Mont Tremblant, Quebec, for a week in January and have just returned from the Green Mountains of Vermont). The Edelsteins vacationed in Acapulco in November.

Kathy Perrone Van Wassen is still taking courses "just for fun." She is otherwise occupied with Beth and adapting their new home to fit the Van Wassen's way of life.

Alison Oakes and Sue Priest number among the "still's." Allison is still in Chicago as a Consultant for the Development of Youth Services for the Y.W.C.A. of Metropolitan Chicago. She welcomes a visit from anyone who is passing through Chicago. Sue is still working as reference and cataloging librarian at Citizens' Library in Washington, Pennsylvania. To her credit is $1,000 she won on the Who, What, Where Game on N.B.C.

Jean Robinson Andrews has not moved yet but is preparing to do so. Bob has accepted a dental internship with the Army and will be stationed in Fort Belvoir, Virginia, for a year beginning in June. Jean is in the process of applying for teaching jobs. Good luck in your search.

I am sure that everyone will join me in wishing good luck to Ann Rosch Duffield. Ann and Tim are in the midst of a custody fight for Tim's two sons, Timon and Thomas. For the better part of Annie's news. She is working as a technical writer and general communications supervisor at the University of Pennsylvania's Moore School of Electrical Engineering. Tim has another year and a half of school. Annie is in need of Mary Silton's address. Mary — congratulations on your marriage.

My year has been good. One in which we were able to take advantage of Richard's leaving public accounting and its winter overtime madness. It was a new phenomenon for us to be able to take a winter vacation and ski. Next year we hope to teach Scott to ski. In addition to the Perises, we have seen Connie Weiss Sukernik and Peter in New York. We have planned several trips to Pittsburgh in the last few months but we have not gotten there yet. We did get to Wilmington to visit Jody Drooz Yoffie and Alan. That is all from my section this year. Don't forget that we have a reunion in June!

Dottie reporting:

Over the last five years, the mean number of respondees from my section of the class has been about eleven with a standard deviation of about two. This year is no exception. Needless to say, news from my section was a bit sparse this year — in number, not quality. I was even considering inventing some fictional characters to take the place of those who did not respond but at the last moment decided against it to conserve RECORDER space and my time. Hope this perspective will change in the next year.

A couple of classmates commented that my deadline for their news was too soon. They probably are not aware of the "straggler phenomena" that I deal with every year. Stragglers do vary in degree but I feel compelled to attempt to eliminate the possibility of stragglers arriving after the news is already back at Chatham. I do not always succeed. But I do try. This is my rationale for an early deadline.

Now to this year's news. Marsha Weiss Bramowitz and Alan will begin a two year commitment with the Navy in July after Alan completes a cardiology fellowship at UCLA. Marsha is a paralegal assistant in the corporate securities department in an LA law firm and taking relevant courses at UCLA. Last November they had a reunion with Eleanor Levinson Peris and Jeffrey who visited with them enroute to San Francisco.

Laura Weill Brown and Jack are "thrilled with our new business venture." They've opened a liquor, wine, and cheese store in CHATHAM, New Jersey. Laura is still teaching and enjoying it.

Ann Turnock left Colombia in June of '73 and began a Master of Divinity Program at Fuller Theological Seminary in California. She should be "ordainable" in about three years. She saw Cindy Martin on a Christmas visit. We send our sympathy to Ann and her family at the loss of her twenty year old brother, Paul, who died last June.

Mary Silton Moran, Lynn Stewart, Kathy Williams Myerburg, Susan Trees Juliano, and Nancy Weiss Swanson, all send greetings and some news of pleasant domestic preoccupations. Mary Silton Moran has just moved coast to coast from Manhattan Beach, California to New York. Lynn Stewart is quite busy. She has been furnishing a new apartment while pursuing career alternatives for the coming year in teaching at the junior college level and in college administration. She meets Pam Stock Curry '70 for lunch occasionally. Pam is living in Stanford. Kathy is busy with her two year old son, Michael. Sue was a bridesmaid in Mimi Majewski's wedding in October. Sue commented that it's been a wonderful year for her especially since Laura is such a good and delightful baby. Nancy is still with the Cuyahoga County Welfare Department. She and Bill bought a new house last April in the country with a large garden and a barn.

With her M.S. complete in microbiology, Kathy Wright Mueller is switching lifestyles to be a housewife and mother. She's beginning a training program with the Childbirth Education Association in order to be certified for teaching natural childbirth courses. Don's finished his Ph.D. in organic chemistry at the University of Illinois. He has a job with the Rohm and Haas Company where he is currently doing research in their plastics division.

It's been an exciting year for Carolyn Taylor Heysek. In one month last summer she quit working, she and Tom bought a house, and they had Alison. Carolyn is constantly busy but quite pleased with her new activities. Last summer Ann Nelson Hooe, Tina Satz Miracle (and daughter), Helen Pollock Starr and Carolyn had their own little reunion at her new home. Tina was enroute to a new home in South America so they decided to take advantage of the opportunity.

In addition to taking care of a new baby and a two-year old Ricki Shore Boyd is working as a student volunteer in the Public Defenders Office. She will probably return to law school next September. Her aunt, Vida Demas, a former public relations staff member at Chatham, recently had her first novel published, "First Person Singular." Ricki also reported that Sally Jones is involved in a very exciting theatre group in New York called Kuku Ryku.

Bette Wallenhorst Kellam who just moved into a new house near Baltimore is also starting a new job as assistant to the Director of Training — Maryland Hospital Education Institute. She is a member of the board of directors of the American Society for Training and Development.

I'm still working for the Learning Research and Development Center at the University of Pittsburgh as the coordinator of evaluation for the Follow Through Project and writing my dissertation. Hope it will be finished before too long. Bye for now.

LOST

Jeanne Burton Leone (Mrs. Soctt E.)

Nelle reporting:

Paula Ambler Kavchak is working in the nursery school her daughter attends. She says "a dozen three-year-olds sure keep you busy!" Denny Kavchak is an internal auditor with Westinghouse. Paula saw Molly Williams Stephens last Christmas. Molly looks great, and she and Mark are very happy in California.

Betsy Aufderheide Ruckman reports that Jana Semple Whedon, Rosemary Gross Rubin, and Paula Parlante Stevralia were all attendants at her wedding. Betsy is teaching German and Spanish at Carrick High School in Pittsburgh. Her husband, Thomas, is completing studies in metallurgical engineering at Carnegie-Mellon University.

Susan Belkin Glaser is teaching trainable retardates full-time and doing part-time work toward a master's degree in School Psychology at John Carroll University. As for extracurricular activities, Susan is Girl Scout leader for a group of retarded girls and had a part in "Guys and Dolls" last winter with an amateur theatre group.

Mary Conway Vaughan says that her year-old twins keep her and Rick busy. Rick is working for Esso Research and pursuing a master's degree at Stephens Tech.

Liz Cotsworth got her M.A. in International Relations from the University of Virginia in July 1973. She is currently a Management Intern with the Environmental Protection Agency in Washington. She gets to rotate job assignments her first year there. She is looking forward to one assignment to regional office — hoping that it would be San Francisco.

By the time you read this, Peggy Evans will have earned her master's degree in Church Music from the University of Michigan. She added that she has seen Beverly Swisshelm several times in the last year. Beverly is completing a Ph.D. program in chemistry at the University of Kentucky.

Gloria Goodwin Raheja and Raj were married at a Hindu ceremony in India. Gloria is working toward her Ph.D. in South Asian Languages and Civilizations at the University of Chicago. Raj is a stress analysis engineer. He also plans to begin course work for a doctorate. Gloria says they are both swamped with work, but find time to cook Indian food, make wine and do other "brain-relaxing" things. Gloria is looking forward to a return trip to India this summer for an advanced Hindi language program and to preliminary field work for her dissertation.

Rosemary Gross Rubin will graduate from the University of Akron School of Law in June. She is teaching third grade at Temple Israel in Canton. Her husband, Robert, is an attorney.

Carolyn Olbum is self-employed. She teaches ceramics and also works in ceramics on a commission basis.

Ann Harper underwent knee surgery in December, but she is as active as ever. She is employed as a Claims Representative for the Social Security Administration. One night a week she teaches a program in physical fitness and self-defense for women sponsored by NOW. She has been taking courses in drawing and auto mechanics at YWCA. And in February, she was planning a two-day maintenance trip in the Mazatzl Wilderness, Arizona.

Sallie Heidenreich Webster sends greetings to all. She and Andy have moved back to Cincinnati. They have an apartment with a fireplace, lucky dogs! In February she was pounding the pavement in search of a job. Meanwhile, Andy is happy with his work as a manufacturers' representative. They do lots of swimming and what they call junk collecting.

Betsy Hennings is finishing up her studies in History at Penn State, and will have her master's degree before you know it.

I am an investigator with the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, Philadelphia District Office. I can only say that it's quite a job!

Linda reporting:

After two years of being left out of the MAIL ORDER, the M-S's of the class have lots of news to catch up on.

Anyone interested in buying a home in the District area can contact Prue Merton. She's working as a settlement officer for a title insurance company while attending George Washington University. After a year in their Landscape Architectural Assistant program she looks forward to "greening up" the environment. Pat Messer Keating is student teacher in a high school art department and giving pottery lessons. She's working on her master's in art education and her husband Bob, a policeman, is also attending school.

Those traveling near Stratford, England are invited to visit Jane Murray Weston, who hopes to finish writing her Ph.D. thesis in biochemistry at the University of Kent by July. To date she has three papers published and presented one at a meeting of the Society for General Microbiology. Since her August discharge from the Army, Nora Naber has been pursuing her master's in library science at Shippensburg State College. Her fiancé, Windy she met while stationed at Fort Belvoir. Nora recently saw Martha Jean Hughes in D. C. and Ned and I ran into each other at the first Army Tennis Tournament in Aberdeen, Md. where she and her husband Tom represented their respective forts in match play. That's one thing about the service — you do get to travel.

After receiving her master's in Counseling from Pitt, Ricka Nassikas Silvestri was hired by the Shaler District as personal and educational counselor in the junior high. She too is accumulating credits towards her doctoral degree, while her husband John is in his second year of law school at Pitt. Having spent an exciting year as Assistant Director of Education for the Chrysler Museum in Norfolk, Va., Cynthia Nusbbaum Katz resigned to devote her time to completing her master's in art history "in absentia" from the University of Michigan. Norfolk's climate is perfect for Cynthia's golf and riding, and despite the fact that her husband Stuart, an attorney, is finishing up his Navy obligation, they're having a great time enjoying the tidewater area.

Another classmate with ties to Uncle Sam is Sally Pierce Shaw, whose husband Dan is stationed in Germany. They live with a German family on a farm and thoroughly enjoy the warmth of the local people — especially now that they're fluent in the language. Sally's working as an Education Counselor and reports that she's visited no fewer than nine countries during Dan's tour of duty. Maggie Ragni is thoroughly enjoying her work in med school at Pitt — especially now that she's out of the classroom and working on "real, live patients."

New York City is Hope Richardson's home, where she works in the administration of a small mission on Fifth Avenue. Hope is pursuing the study of scientology and looks forward to becoming a minister within a year. The Pentagon has been kind to Betsy Rom Bagstad and her husband Steve, an Army company commander currently stationed in Hawaii. Besides sailing and visiting the outer islands, Betsy is working towards her master's in American studies at the University of Hawaii. In her spare time she does volunteer work for the Red Cross and is a Girl Scout troop leader. Betsy was able to fill me in on Sue Parisi who is at the University of Illinois studying for her Ph.D. in musicology. My letter to Sue will probably be six months in transit as the latest address I had for her was Florence, Italy.

After graduate school and a teaching assistantship at Pitt in biology, Lita Rothenberg writes that she's thoroughly enjoying dental school at B.U. During the first half of her three year course of study Lita is taking all of her courses with the medical school — the latest innovation in dental education. Since graduation, Pat Severance has been an Administrative Assistant in the Trust and Estate Department of the First National Bank of Boston. Pat enjoys figure skating five times a week. With the current gas drought, she writes that she feels fortunate in living within walking distance of her favorite skating rink and near her job.

Having received letters with various appellations I feel constrained to formally announce that I have retained my maiden name although I'm happily married. After two years while Tom did his thing as a dentist for Uncle Sam and I worked as a legal secretary in Williamsburg, Va., we're enjoying life in suburban Philadelphia. I'm into my second semester of law school at Temple and Tom is busy supporting me by working for a local dentist. Many thanks to all who wrote and those that sent in contributions to the class fund.

Barbara reporting:

Greetings fellow alumnae! Although the response to a plea for juicy gossip was less than 50% I have decided that being a class secretary is a guaranteed method for receiving mail for at least two weeks out of the year, which is a very pleasant diversion for a third year med student.

Deborah Smith Schildkraut and Ira are completing their Ph.D.'s in psychology at the University of Miami. Debbie will be doing a field study on birds and then she and Ira hope to move to Boston for post-doctoral fellowships.

Lin Sigg Morgan sends her greetings from Downton, Pa., where she is a second-grade teacher. Both she and her husband Mike, who is a high school chemistry teacher, attend grad school part time.

J. Della Synder Kapur and husband Anil are back in the U.S.A. after exchanging Hindu wedding vows in Bombay and honeymooning in London. They met in Washington, D.C. while Della worked for the Federal Reserve Board and Anil for the World Bank.

Now Della is job hunting and he is working for Ford Motor Co.

It seems that Molly Williams Stephens and Mark have established permanent residence in sunny California. Molly is still working for a physician but hopes to return to kindergarten teaching. Mark is finishing his M.S. in electrical engineering at U.C.-Berkeley.

Suzanne Stuart who spent her senior year at the Annenberg School of Communications, University of Pennsylvania, has returned to Pittsburgh after studying in the graduate school there also. She has worked for a printing firm in graphics, had started her own "very small" advertising and public relations firm and has worked as an assistant editor for a professional journal. She now hopes to complete her M.A. and subsequently do foreign journalistic work. She sees Cindi Linhart Williams regularly on the bus and Cheryl Olkes Stoller '70 and husband Paul are frequent visitors.

Bev Swisshelm is still studying chemistry at the University of Kentucky and congratulations are in order for she has just passed the written qualifying exams and is now studying for the orals. Bev writes that she is "still footloose and fancy free."

Connie Thompson Claris is working full time as a counselor with the North Carolina Employment Security Commission while attending University of North Carolina part time in guidance and counseling. Two sons are in college while another son is at Phillips Andover Academy and daughter Cathy is a high school junior.

Nancy Vaughan is teaching first grade this year as well as going to school part time herself. In her spare time she enjoyed working on the local mayoralty campaign. A recent high light was a trip to Martinique with Deb Hagstrom.

Lisa Wanderman is alive and well in Manhattan and claims she has broken all records by living in the same apartment for over 2½ years. She is taking courses toward a Ph.D. and is also doing free lance copywriting and public relations, while at the same time looking actively for a job in the museum field. In her spare time she is considering writing two books: one called "A Single Girl's Guide to the Meaningful Relationship" and the other, "1001 Creative Ways to Convince a Prospective Employer that a Master's Degree is More Important than Typing 40 Words Per Minute." Lisa, Mary and Betsy Hennings and Ellen McGrath held a mini-Chatham reunion for two months at a summer camp where they were all counselors. As Lisa wrote, the poor kids did not know what hit them.

Nancy Wasserman Williams, husband Jon and 10 month old daughter live on a 27 acre farm in Logan, Ohio together with their goats and chickens. Nancy and Jon attended very intensive pottery courses at U.C.-Santa Cruz with their guru master. Now they are production potters and have just finished a pottery show at a local art gallery. Nancy says hello to all long-lost Chatham friends.

Judy Weisenfeld Weinberg and Lee are back in Pittsburgh. Judy is a third grade teacher in a Free Learning classroom and is completing a master's degree while Lee is a first year law student at Pitt.

After teaching for two years, Gail Whitman Rudenstein decided to go back to school herself and is currently enrolled in Pitt's English department where she is also a teaching assistant. Her husband is wading through his medical internship.

Alice Wolf thoroughly enjoys both Vet School and California. Eventually she is thinking about going into Radiology or Orthopedic Surgery, but for the present she is getting much exposure to all specialties and all animals.

Peggy Yockey Morycz is back in Pittsburgh from Chicago and really digs being a new mother. She and husband Rick completed the La Maze classes and Peggy gave birth to Bill by natural childbirth. By the time the RECORDER is published Peggy will be combining motherhood with working as a social worker for the Child Development-Day Care Program of the United Health Services Agency.

As for the reporter herself, I have had a really experience-filled 1973. I worked for the U.S. Public Health Service on the Navajo Reservation in Arizona which was an extremely cultural, educational and socially enlightening experience. During the weekends I did much camping and hiking throughout Arizona. In the fall I went to study renal diseases at the Emory University School of Medicine in Atlanta. Presently I am a student surgeon, spending an average 15 hour day at the hospital six days a week. I am really enjoying it except when I fall asleep holding retractors for five hours because of sheer exhaustion. Maggie Ragni and Ellie Mandell, who is a fellow surgeon, send their hellos to everyone. Well, that is the end of the 1974 news reel. Best of everything to everyone in 1974 and I hope to hear from all of you next year.

No class news was received from Christine Walker in time for publication in this issue.

Jan reporting:

Thanks for your replies! I sure was nice finding news instead of bills in my mailbox. There was a great reunion at my wedding. I wish I would have had more time to appreciate seeing all those people. Doug and I had a marvelous honeymoon in Hawaii. I am now teaching Language Arts to fourth, fifth, and sixth graders. I love the kids but they can drive you crazy, sometimes! I am really busy but loving it.

A lot of us just cannot seem to stay away from school. Debbie Bickel is a graduate student at the University of Pittsburgh in Fine Arts. Carol Bowie is in the Ph.D. program in Chemistry at Purdue University. In May, Carol is going to Europe with her mother for six weeks. When she returns she will be going to summer school and teaching freshman chemistry. Jan Deitcher is working for an M.S. in Chemistry at Indiana University of Pennsylvania and is a graduate assistant. During the summer, Jan worked as the business manager of a girls' camp in eastern Pennsylvania. In February, while in Pittsburgh she saw Barb Wilhelm Fruhwald, Pat Patterson Wersculz '72, and Amy Ingraham. Shanen Bloom Werber is also back at school studying Human Genetics at Rutgers University. Her husband works in education at the Jewish Agency. After a summer of camp programming, Camp Moshava was the scene of Shanen and Akiva's outdoor wedding. Lenore Chapman is not only working on her certification requirements and M.Ed. but is also working as a teacher's aide in a junior high Special Education class. Lenore spent the summer working in a department store and then vacationing at Cape Cod. She also was back at Chatham for the dedication of the new theatre and reports it is beautiful!

Nadyne Anderson is very busy as I am sure anyone is who tried her hand at teaching this year. Nadyne is teaching third grade in a city school. Evenings, she directs a city-operated inner-city recreation center. Ruth Abbott Clark is teaching first graders at the Warren Killam Elementary School in Reading, Massachusetts. Ruth and Dan's wedding provided reunion time for Kay Sandberg, Gail Adams, Janie Ailes, and Katie O'Keefe Salyers.

After leaving Chatham and a year of marriage, Barbara Hatfield Kostreva went back to school at the State University of New York at Albany. She is majoring in philosophy and will graduate in May, 1974. Another returnee to college was Deborah Cunningham who received her degree in philosophy from Earlham College in December, 1973. She welcomes news from Chatham people.

Gail Adams is in Philadelphia at Elwyn Institute. She is a teacher and language therapist in a pre-school language acquisition program. Gail says to watch for her soon-to-be-released series on the methods necessary for inspiring your non-verbal plants.

Leslie Bender Saller worked for awhile as a life insurance agent but is now looking for another job. Leslie and Charlie had a wonderful summer "discovering America" and camping throughout the country. Janie Ailes is working for Traveler's Insurance in Hartford. Janie spent five weeks last summer camping throughout the West with Susan Bamford '71. Jain Bush is in "the swinging singles spot of the country, our nation's capital." Jain is in the travel business waiting until her 75% reduction on air travel comes. She is thinking of destinations such as Morocco, Indonesia, or Nepal. Jain sees a lot of Sudsy Sedmak, Lucia Melito, and Liz Naumoff.

In July Peggy Carlson Walker vacationed with their children. Then in August, Peggy and her husband flew to Costa Rica to join an expedition on volcano study.

Diane Di Frango Guardiani reports she is looking for a job in biology.

Unfortunately, a few cards came with no name so . . . that's all!

Sue reporting:

Ten responses out of thirty inquiries? Pretty good showing for Doboy through Higgins! Anyway, many thanks to all those who answered me. Here goes. Annette Epstein was married in Pittsburgh to E. Tabor. They're both in Florida now, enjoying the sunshine, with Annette teaching kindergarten and Bill working as a computer programmer. Other marriages in our beloved smog-city included Norma Franklin Baker, who along with husband Bill is effecting a takeover of Pittsburgh television. Norma is now Assistant to the Director at WOED-TV where Bill is finishing his M.F.A. in Television and Film at Carnegie-Mellon University. Who knows? Maybe one day you'll turn on your set and see . . . "Ms. Norma Neighborhood"!!

Grad students galore. Nancy Hicks is in an M.Ed. Special Education program at George Washington University. Nancy is currently working with emotionally disturbed children and says that she cannot honestly call her job "enjoyable" — but that it is definitely challenging. She, Liz Naumoff and Cathy Young share a house in Washington, D. C. Their mailbox reads: "Little Rea." Pat Hickey reports that she is wallowing in financial statements and regression analyses at Northwestern Grad School of Management. She's happy though and working hard. Quite unlike Chatham, there are nine men for every woman! Not bad, Pat. Still more people are attending grad schools in Pittsburgh. Linda Gill is currently a second semester graduate assistant in the History Department at Duquesne University. Dorothy Farrell is well and happy at University of Pennsylvania Medical School. Dottie says she has little time to surface under the weight of all those medical journals but is glad to be out in the "real" world. Know what she means! Also attending University of Pittsburgh is Kaye Gentner. She is in a Special Ed. M.Ed. program for the Physically Handicapped and at the same time, teaching at the CMU Children's School. She had the good fortune to see the blushing soon-to-be bride at the Atlanta Airport recently — Oh Kaye!

Moving north, Judith Ann Gale has, what sounds like, a fascinating job as Assistant Coordinator of the Office of Children in Massachusetts. This is a branch of a statewide referral service for children that, along with providing information on children's legal rights, acts as the child advocate for those who are denied services to which they are legally entitled. Eleanor Gard Weiss and husband, Steve, are busy in Wisconsin. With Eleanor doing free lance art and Steve working, they still find time for such projects as: making an animated movie and writing and illustrating a child's book about insects!

Back to Georgia. Marty Ethridge Bullock is living the life of Reilly after a belated honeymoon in the Virgin Islands. She and Bernie have found a small house, with Bernie in pilot training and Marty looking for a job. Sure! In Atlanta, Nicky Reinhardt is sweating out her second semester at Emory University Law School. She's doing well though and enjoying it.

Yours truly is working with the Cerebral Palsy Center here in Atlanta with retarded and physically handicapped children. I will (sigh!) return to school this summer in an M.Ed. program at Georgia State. Evans is a busy banker so I spend my spare time cultivating a southern drawl. Y'all take care, y'hear. P.S. Buck sends his love to everyone!

Donna reporting:

In my group of 1973-ers the working gal seems to outnumber those of us in graduate school.

Nancy Hirsch is working for an advertising agency in Pittsburgh and devotes her spare time to the theatre. She is presently involved in the Pittsburgh Poor Players production of "Indians." Sue is the Program Coordinator of the Easter Seal Society in Butler which keeps her busy and happy. Judy Jefferson has been working at a TV station in Peoria, Illinois where she is living on a farm — something she has always wanted to do. Michèle Jehle finds herself pursuing a career at McGraw-Hill Publications in New York. She says her social life great and her job keeps her busy. Janet Lynch Kurtz is the assistant editor of curriculum at the Board of Education in Pittsburgh and plans on entering Pitt grad school this fall. Sandy Kuritzky is the front desk manager at the Marriott Motel in Pittsburgh and plans to enter their corporate training program. She mentioned seeing Dyne Anderson in Washington, D. C. Cathy Macdonald sends her greetings and the word that she is working at the Median School in Pittsburgh.

In addition to attending Pitt's Graduate School of Public and International Affairs, Sue Lorenzi is planning a June wedding. In her spare time she is working at the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

I have been relocated to the University of Rochester where I am doing grad work in inorganic chemistry. With course work, teaching responsibilities and research, the life of an underpaid, overworked graduate student is a lot of fun.

Deedee reporting:

It hardly seems possible that we've been away from Chatham now for nine months. There are some of us though who are still climbing the educational ladder. Sue Nelson is studying at the University of Hawaii. Norinne Ruehl is enrolled full time in a master's program in Educational Psychology at Temple University. She is also working as a graduate assistant in the Office of Student Activities and is doing some counseling and research work in the Career Services Office. Although Becky Russo is not in school presently, she is considering graduate school in Business Administration.

There are also some who are involved with education as teachers. Sally Morgan Reis is teaching 1st grade English at Shaler in Pittsburgh. She has found this difficult but rewarding. After some hassle Therrell Nelson landed a 1st grade teaching position in McKeesport. She's also taking graduate courses through the Glasser Program at her school and at Pitt. Jane Quick isn't in teaching yet, but she may be soon. She's presently working on an M.Ed. in Elementary Education with a specialist degree in teaching at the University of Florida.

Now — on to other news. Liz Naumoff decided to go straight to the big times — Capitol Hill, Washington, D. C. She's working for Congressman James G. Martin who represents her district in North Carolina.

Katie O'Keefe Salyers reports that she's still working for the Lutheran Service Society as a "catch-all" (mostly social work with some secretarial duties). She's thinking about graduate school but she's not too sure where she and Bob will be living. They may be residents of Montana soon.

Phyllis Patrick is hard at work in Mellon Bank. She'll be finished training in April and will then be most likely placed in a branch building. She has hopes of entering an M.B.A. program in the near future.

Becky Popovich is busy working at WVIZ-TV (the PBS affiliate in Cleveland) in programming and production with some writing and bit parts on the side.

Laurie Nelson had an exciting 5 weeks this summer back-packing in the Colorado Rockies. She's going at it again this summer. Anyone interested in joining her? She's presently teaching Headstart in Kanawha County.

As for Susan O'Neil — she has to say: "Finding the field of insurance management not to my liking, I am now a free lance copywriter for western New England advertising firms and a production assistant and announcer/narrator for channel 57 television in Springfield, Mass."

As for me I'm teaching 3rd grade in Indiana, Pa. and loving it. I have to agree with Sally in that there's a lot of work, but it's worth it.

Until next year... best wishes to EVERYONE!!!!

Ellen reporting:

It seems that we are all growing in varied ways and are continuing to develop our potential. I was happy to hear that everyone is doing so well!

Sudsy Sedmak has been in Washington, D. C., since graduation where she attends Catholic University Law School and works in a bar on weekends. She loves the social life in D. C. and sends her love to everyone. Cathy Young is also enjoying life in the capital where she works in the costume shop at the Arena Stage.

Barb Seras has been working odd jobs since graduation and when her present job ends in March she plans to travel.

Married life seems to be agreeing with Jean Wiant Ganster who claims she has overcome the traditional sex-role stereotypes in marriage.

Several classmates have found the business world to be rewarding. Harvette Tipton is working at Westinghouse Electric Corporation in Pittsburgh as a Programmer/Systems Analyst, and is enrolled in the M.B.A. Program at the University of Pittsburgh. Cyn Woodward is enjoying life immensely while working for General Motors' new recreation vehicle line. Betsy Schwab is doing research for scripts for a film company in York. She misses Chatham very much and cannot wait until our reunion.

The teachers seems to have interesting and varied positions. Donna Schulz is teaching with the Head Start program in New Castle. Besides teaching vocal music at Schenley High School, Linda Yacker Marder gives piano lessons in her spare time. Sue Soodek writes that Vermont is a "visual orgy." She teaches "Canadian Affairs" to high school students in Bennington, and urges all of us to try cross-country skiing. On the other side of the world Kay Sandberg is teaching English in Tokyo, and is loving it!

As for me, I am a Park Ranger with the National Park Service at Independence Historical Park in Philadelphia, and am taking a course at Temple University in museum techniques. I saw a few Chatham people at Mary Higgins Enright's wedding in October. Sue Lorenzi and I were bridesmaids. Also present were Ann Opdyke, Jo Presnell '74, Donna Langer, Diane Hayford, Joann Brandt Grisetti and Susan Anderson Wasser '72. I hope all of you have a happily eventful year and thank you for your responses. It is always great to get mail!

CHATHAM College is to be congratulated as one of 49 schools to receive a prestigious Ford Foundation Venture Fund grant. The local women's college will receive $100,000 over the next two years to support innovative undergraduate programs. Dr. Edward D. Eddy is president.

The Ford Foundation noted such current innovative Chatham programs as tutorials, internships, individualized study, and study programs for women beyond normal college age. The foundation particularly cited the college's New Directions for Women program with its combination of preprofessional career programs and the liberal arts.

Only 12 colleges in the Northeast received Venture Fund grants, including three others in Pennsylvania — Swarthmore College and the University of Pennsylvania in the Philadelphia area and College Misericordia near Wilkes-Barre. Only four women's colleges attained the list of 49, the others being Misericordia, Wellesley in Massachusetts and Alverno in Milwaukee.

The grant is convincing evidence that Chatham's 1971 decision to stay a women's college in an era in which many men's and women's colleges went coed has paid off. Founded as Pennsylvania Female College in 1869 (changed to Pennsylvania College for Women in 1890 and to Chatham in 1955), the school made that determination after a two-year study by a committee of faculty, students, alumnae, trustees and administrators. At the time its officials insisted this decision did not mean Chatham would ride along as just another girls' school, and the grant just announced shows that Ford Foundation officials agree they have gone much beyond that.

WOODLAND ROAD
PITTSBURGH, PENNSYLVANIA 15232

Open Letter to Alumnae

Dear Friends,

Chatham has done it again! Done what it has done so well and so consistently over its 105 years — demonstrated leadership in the academic community.

The College has moved into the mid-1970's with a dynamic program in the liberal arts, a unique program of internships and field placements, and with new courses and areas of study designed to prepare women for the many career opportunities opening to them in a changing world.

Chatham is receiving national recognition and generous support for its leadership and the outstanding quality of its innovative programs. You can be prouder than ever of your alma mater.

I wish each of you could come along on a "Live-in" with our high school senior guests to sense the excitement and enthusiasm of the members of the Chatham community. After such a visit, I know you would want your young friends to seriously consider Chatham in their post high school plans. You might even want to enroll again!

Our goal in the Admissions Office is to make the Chatham experience available to students with real potential. We believe each alumna knows qualified young women who are in the midst of deciding what they want to accomplish in college, or who are in the process of evaluating colleges. Put us in touch with them. We'll tell them about the Chatham of today and we'll send them a Live-in invitation.

Write to us today. And visit Chatham soon. We'd love to show you around the campus and introduce you to students, faculty members and administrators. I think you would go away feeling a new sense of pride in your college.

Sincerely,

Peggy Donaldson
Director of Admissions

The Continuing Perils of the Daughters of Eve.

by Dr. Arthur G. Smith

During the past decade we have entered a new era for women — an era in which they have greater opportunity than ever before to realize their full potential as human beings. Birth control methods which are almost foolproof, enable them to limit family size or have no children, if they so choose. Modern conveniences have diminished the burdens of housework. The civil rights laws have been extended to ban discrimination on the basis of sex in job opportunities and in other areas, and although an end to such discrimination is not fully implemented by any means, we are moving in that direction.

Under these circumstances one should be able to say that women now have the same freedom of choice that men do — the freedom to choose from among many options the ways in which they will spend their lives and develop their creative potential as human beings. But I submit that they do not have that freedom to the extent that they should.

We are what we are because of powerful, pervasive social conditioning. The fact that much of it is subtle, covert, beneath our conscious notice, makes its impact all the more powerful. We learn our roles as males and females in a myriad of ways when we are very young, not so much by being taught specifically what little boys and little girls are supposed to do or to be, but by the pervasive examples with which we are surrounded — in the home, in the school, on television, in the neighborhood, in all of our experiences. We learn what is acceptable and approved and considered normal for those of our sex from the behavior of others. These observations, especially when continually reinforced, have an enormous impact on our lives — and that impact has often been particularly detrimental to women.

The presumed inferiority of woman's potential and accomplishments is a pervasive proposition in our society — shared by women as well as men. Philip Goldberg, a psychologist, has provided us with dramatic evidence of this proposition. He asked a group of female college students to rate a number of professional articles for value, competence, persuasiveness, writing style, etc. Half of the women were told that particular articles were written by men; the other half were told that the identical articles were written by women. He found that identical articles were rated significantly lower when they were attributed to female authors. This was true not only for articles from male-dominated fields, but for subjects such as dietetics and elementary-school education as well. (Sandra L. & Daryl J. Bem, "We're All Nonconscious Sexists," in Psychology Today, (November 1970) pp. 22-24.

Perceptive young women learn early in life that to demonstrate superior intelligence or problem-solving ability is not likely to win the affection of a man, and since they also know that finding that special man is of paramount importance in their lives, they stifle their abilities — and the assumption of their natural inferiority is further reinforced.

The charmingly simple plot of the standard eighteenth century novel is the tale of a girl, naive and not too bright, who narrowly avoids one pitfall after another until her successful avoidance of disaster, usually in the form of preserving her chastity, is eventually rewarded by marriage to a respectable gentleman, with all of the protection and shelter which this implies. The reader can almost hear her sigh of relief as she effects her escape from the world and withdraws to the protective haven of her lord and master's house.

Young women today are still breathing that sigh of relief upon escaping from the challenges and trials of the outside world. Graduate schools have noted the high incidence of marriages and pregnancies at certain critical points in a woman's graduate training, enabling her to opt out of the struggle. And why shouldn't she, for her previous experience has not included encouragement to face challenges, to overcome obstacles and to toughen herself mentally for the struggle that human achievement inevitably entails. She has learned that her destiny is to become a wife and mother. All other aspiration on her part is peripheral in nature. She has been permitted to play at the business of education for, after all, a well-educated husband will want a knowledgeable companion in his leisure hours, and anyway, everybody knows that college is the happy hunting ground for eligible mates.

Sandra and Daryl Bem, a husband and wife team of Stanford psychologists, make these observations about this phenomenon:

Why does this process (of becoming a full-time homemaker) violate the values of individuality and self-fulfillment? Not because some people may regard the role of homemaker as inferior to other roles. That is not the point. The point is that our society is managing to consign a large segment of its population to the role of homemaker solely on the basis of sex, just as inexorably as it has in the past consigned the individual with a black skin to the role of janitor or domestic. It is not the quality of the role itself that is at issue here, but the fact that in spite of their unique identities, the majority of America's women end up in the same role.

... When a baby boy is born, it is difficult to predict what he will be doing 25 years later. We cannot say whether he will be an artist or a doctor or a college professor because he will be permitted to develop and to fulfill his own unique potential ... But if the newborn child is a girl, we can usually predict with confidence how she will be spending her time 25 years later. Her individuality doesn't have to be considered; it is irrelevant. (Ibid., pp. 24-26, 26-115.)

Men and women should be reared to maximize their potential, regardless of sex. When we act as though only half of this proposition is true, we practice a monumental waste of human resource and we do a grave injustice to half of the human race.

Some very perceptive observations on this subject were made in an article that was written by Vivian Gornick and published in The Village Voice several years ago.* In it she describes her experiences and that of other gifted women of her acquaintance. She is not so concerned with examples of overt discrimination as she is with a more subtle and damaging phenomenon. She writes:

Recently, I had lunch with a man I had known at school. He and his wife and I had all been friends at college; they had courted while we were in school and immediately upon graduation, they got married. They were both talented art students, and it was assumed both would work in commercial art. But shortly after their marriage, she became pregnant, and never did go to work. Within five years they had two children. At first I visited them often; their home was lovely, full of their mutual talent for atmosphere; the wife sparkled, the children flourished, he rose in the field of commercial art; I envied them both their self-containment, and she especially her apparently contented, settled state. But as I had remained single and life took me off in various other directions, we soon began to drift apart, and when I again met the husband we had not seen each other in many years. We spoke animatedly of what we had both been doing for quite a while. Then I asked about his wife. His face rearranged itself suddenly, but I couldn't quite tell how at first. He said she was fine, but didn't sound right.

"What's wrong?" I asked. "Is she doing something you don't want her to do? Or the other way around?"

"No, no," he said hastily. "I want her to do whatever she wants to do. Anything. Anything that will make her happy. And get her off my back," he ended bluntly. I asked what he meant and he told me of his wife's restlessness of the last few years, of how sick she was of being a housewife, how useless she felt, and how she longed to go back to work.

"Well?" I asked, "did you object?"

"Of course not!" he replied vigorously. "Why the hell would I do that? She's a very talented woman, her children are half grown, she's got every right in the world to go to work."

"So?" I said.

"It's her," he said bewilderedly. "She doesn't seem able to just go out and get a job."

"What do you mean?" I asked. But beneath the surface of my own puzzled response I more than half knew what was coming.

"Well, she's scared, I think. She's more talented than half the people who walk into my office asking for work, but do what I will, she won't get a portfolio together and make the rounds. Also, she cries a lot lately. For no reason, if you know what I mean. And then, she can't seem to get up in the morning in time to get a babysitter and get out of the house. This is a woman who was always up at 7 a.m. to feed everybody, get things going; busy, capable, doing 10 things at once." He shook his head as though in a true quandary. "Oh well," he ended up, "I guess it doesn't really matter any more."

"Why not?" I asked.

His eyes came up and he looked levelly at me. "She's just become pregnant again."

Ms. Gornick reflects upon this state of neurotic anxiety which she had in common with her friend, and which she observed in most of the women she knew. From whence did it come? She recalls her own experience of growing up and the scars which it left. She and her brother had the same educational opportunities and yet, they had received a very different perception of themselves and their expectations from life. He learned "the need to develop a kind of inner necessity ... what I learned, ultimately, was that it was the prime vocation of my life to prepare myself for the love of a good man and the responsibilities of homemaking and motherhood." This was not explicitly taught, but it was implicit, "in a continuous day-to-day exposure to an attitude, shared by all, about women, about what kind of creatures they were and what kind of lives they were meant to live."

She concludes that this debilitating anxiety and lack of ability to achieve, which she shared with so many other women, is cultural, not biological, in origin. "It was because we had never been taught to take ourselves seriously ..."

The rallying cry of the black civil rights movement has always been: "Give us back our manhood!" What exactly does that mean? Where is black manhood? How has it been taken from blacks? And how can it be retrieved? The answer lies in one word: responsibility; therefore, they have been deprived of serious work; therefore, they have been deprived of self-respect; therefore, they have been deprived of manhood. Women have been deprived of exactly the same thing and in every real sense have thus been deprived of womanhood. We have never been prepared to assume responsibility; we have never been prepared to make demands upon ourselves; we have never been taught to expect the development of what is best in ourselves because no one has ever expected anything of us — or for us. Because no one has ever had any intention of turning over any serious work to us. Both we and the blacks lost the ballgame before we ever got up to play. In order to live you've got to have nerve; and we were stripped of our nerve before we began. Black is ugly and female is inferior. These are the primary lessons of our experience . . .

The point which she so eloquently makes is this: Women in our society collectively have suffered serious ego damage because of the low expectations which others have had for them and which they, in turn, have had for themselves. Psychological tests have demonstrated that what we believe about ourselves is considerably influenced by what others expect of us. If they expect little, and transmit that message to us, then we will have little to offer. In the realm of achievement little has been expected of women, and they have responded accordingly.

Recognizing that this has been the experience of most women and that their self-image has suffered accordingly, what is to be done to undo the resultant ego damage and to give young women a greater sense of self-respect? What can a college for women do to deal with this pervasive problem? We hear plenty of talk these days about the need to provide a supportive environment for women, but what does this mean?

As an educational institution we share a collective commitment to the proposition that it is never too late to learn more about ourselves and the world in which we live. Education is a lifetime undertaking. Thus, the assumption that the damage to a young woman's self-image is irreversibly done by the time she comes to Chatham should be countered with the argument that a belief which has been learned can be challenged by seeking to convince the learner that it is an incorrect assumption.

First, she needs to be made aware of the fact that most women in our society suffer from damaged self-images. This state of mind should be examined to understand what historically rooted causes have led to attitudes and assumptions detrimental to a woman's view of herself and of other women. We encourage the individual student to relate this general information to her own particular case. It is helpful to realize that the doubts and ambivalence which she feels toward herself is an experience common to most women. Realizing the existence of this problem is an important first step to dealing with the psychological barriers which it creates.

If, as Vivian Gornick suggests, the root of the problem lies in a lack of responsibility, serious work and resultant self-respect, then we can focus upon these deficiencies. Ours is an achievement-oriented society. Self confidence comes through accomplishing something that the individual and society recognize as worth doing. Social recognition takes the form of prestige and more tangible rewards.

One of our principal tasks is to teach women to take themselves seriously as persons possessing the potential to function fully and productively in our society. Chatham has traditionally sought to develop in its students the ability to think clearly and to articulate their ideas, but this is not sufficient if they arrive and leave with the assumption that their primary identity will be as someone else's wife or mother, secretary or assistant. We must inculcate in them a desire to seek their own identity and to maintain an independent sense of self in whatever subsequent relationships they may undertake.

We must also put before them the prospect that many careers are now open to them which were formerly assumed to be "for males only." There are dramatic changes taking place in the world of work which are breaking down traditional sex barriers. Women are being sought in unprecedented numbers for positions which carry authority and responsibility for decision making. We have reached the point where the limits are, not on the opportunities, but on the vision and determination of women to seize these opportunities and make the most of them.

Career planning has become a serious concern at the college. This is not merely job placement, but an effort to work with students from early in their college experience to encourage them to think in terms of serious long-range planning for a career. Young men have traditionally taken this prospect for granted. Young women need to be encouraged to do the same.

Chatham is attempting to contribute further toward this end through providing internships and work-study opportunities which give much-needed experience in actually doing a job; through using the city as an experiential laboratory in a variety of other ways; through introducing programs which provide basic grounding in important career areas; and through providing a demanding educational experience which develops the inner toughness necessary for successful achievement.

This does not necessarily mean that women now have held out to them the prospect of proving themselves more male than the men in a man's world. Our society has been molded and tailored by males who have some rather serious psychological problems of their own. The need to demonstrate or "prove" one's manhood has taken many undesirable forms, including violent assaults, cutthroat competition and warfare. A number of our social ills might be traced to this destructive drive. We strive to conquer nature as though "she" were yet another rival to be humbled by our superior virility. It is to be hoped that women will now have to contribute to some of these less desirable expressions of self-assertiveness which our society has fostered. Women, free from the presumed need to prove their manhood, may add a more humanizing dimension to the decision-making process.

Can we seriously undertake to influence or alter our students' perceptions of themselves? Certainly this is more difficult than changing their ideas about the world around them, but it is not impossible to achieve. There have been a sufficient number of examples of dramatic changes in some students during the past few years to provide encouragement for the belief that there is hope for changing the damaged self-image which Vivian Gornick so poignantly describes.

The challenge is there and we are making a serious effort to respond to it. The decision to remain a college for women, which was made several years ago, is now bearing fruit in an attempt to provide a truly liberating educational experience for the women who come to Chatham.

Washington Interview

by Shirley McNerney

One day last May, Helen Pollock Starr '69, Representative Peter W. Rodino Jr.'s (D-NJ) press secretary, was standing all alone in the great hearing room of the House Judiciary Committee.

The place looked a mess — cables everywhere, the carpeting torn up, panels removed from the walls.

No decision had been made yet on whether the impeachment hearings, which were to begin in a few days, would be televised but Starr wanted to make sure all the equipment was in place, just in case.

She could see that the television crews, then on a lunch break, were coming right along. "For the first time," she says of that moment, "I felt the great sadness that all this had to happen."

"Rodino (Chairman of the House Judiciary Committee) had been saying since October 23rd, when the resolutions were referred to the committee, 'the awesomeness of this responsibility,' and 'the sadness,' and I knew what he meant, but I never felt, I mean it never really struck me like a bolt of lightning, and that day it did. I really felt the sadness of it."

"But I didn't feel the history of it, I didn't emotionally feel it, until the last Friday night, when it was all over, and I thought, my God, I really was a part of something historical."

It is said that on that last night, when it was all over, Rodino went into a little office near the hearing room and silently wept.

"Yeah, it's true," says Starr, who now sometimes calls him "the Chairman" out of respect. "I didn't see him, but he said it was true."

Helen Starr, 27, went to work for Rodino October 20, 1973, the day of the so-called Saturday Night Massacre.

"I was hired because he thought he would have a tough primary campaign. He had never had a press person in his 25 years here and he thought it was about time. I knew the media in the northern New Jersey area from working in New York (for the Environmental Protection Agency). That was why I was hired, to help get through the election. Well, obviously, the primary was something we could barely pay much attention to."

The primary was in June. "At the time I realized I was the only one who was really concerned about it because it had to be a press operation exclusively. He could not go out and shake hands and do the usual coffees and teas and that kind of thing. So for a period of about two weeks I was pounding out press release after press release, you know, one a day, and doing phone calls and trying to get people to do stories, and that was it."

According to Starr, Francis O'Brien, Rodino's Administrative Assistant, did the "bulk of the press work on impeachment" because "he was one of the few people involved directly." He was the "informed source" or the "source close to the Chairman" quoted (anonymously) most frequently in the newspapers.

Starr was the "informed source" for procedural matters and on the subject of "Peter Rodino as a human being."

Sample, "Peter Rodino as a human being" (in reply to reporter's question: Does he have a sense of humor?): "He's got just a beautiful way in dealing with people. He's not so funny really — a lot of people have a very distinguishable sense of humor and he doesn't. He has times when he's amusing but it's mostly when he's telling stories about things that have happened or things he has done. He doesn't tell jokes. Apparently in the old days, in the early days here, he was a lot funnier, he did imitations of people, and a lot of singing of Italian songs."

During the impeachment inquiry, Starr's days began about 8:30 or 9:00 a.m. and lasted until late at night. The worst was the night before the first vote when she stayed until 1:30 a.m.

"I've lost all my friends I had when I came down here," she moans. "They would say 'let's have dinner' and I'd say 'OK' and I'd have to call up five minutes ahead of time and say 'No, I can't, I have to work'."

"There's a sociology that develops in an office like this where you have to work hard, and have to work long hours. There are a few people who feel as though they just have to stay, or want to stay, and they keep staying late into the night even though maybe they're not doing anything. It's sort of a supportive thing, you know."

"If you feel you can watch history being made, then you stick around. If you know you're on the outside, and there's no value, then you tend not to stay."

"The last night we were all exhausted. I think we felt like we should go out and at least be glad, you know, have a drink because the thing's over with, but none of us even wanted to bother. We just sort of felt, we're exhausted, the work's done, we can be proud that the job was done right and let's go home now. There were a lot of mixed feelings, it was very interesting, nobody felt like celebrating."

The only time Starr cried, she says, was the morning former President Nixon resigned. "I couldn't read the paper because I kept starting to cry, this was at breakfast."

"I think I had just heard so much about the whole thing, and had been so much a part of it, and I thought, it's all over, today it will be over, you know, the major goal will have been accomplished."

Starr got her job through an ad in the Wall Street Journal — a small ad which read: Congressional Aide (the headline), someone needed to do research and writing, light typing required.

At first she thought it might be a lobbyist. When O'Brien answered her inquiry, he spoke to her of another job — that of press secretary — and as she talked to him on the telephone, she motioned to a friend to hand her the Congressional Directory, so she could find out who in the world Peter Rodino was.

She made two trips to Washington (at her own expense) before O'Brien offered her the job ("We'll take a chance," he said) and over $15,000 a year starting salary.

Why does she think she got it? "I was young enough and had only enough experience to make me able to do the job."

First Year Report on the Career Planning Office

by Jody Johns

In May 1973 a Special Study Committee on the Education of Women submitted its report to the faculty. Appended to that report was a proposal for the establishment of a career counseling program. As a result of the committee's recommendations, the decision was made to create the Career Planning Office. In September 1973, I and my assistant, Martel Montgomery, were hired to staff the office; the suite in Braun Hall that had housed the Admissions Office was allocated to Career Planning and Alumnae; the Pittsburgh-Chatham Program and the placement and career counseling functions were assigned to the new office; and development of a career planning program was begun.

Chatham's career planning program is an innovative and comprehensive program. It is based on the premise that the career handicap of women liberal arts graduates is not in any inadequacy in their academic background, but rather in their ignorance of the work world and their lack of skills for making their way in that world. The Career Planning Office exists to help students overcome these deficiencies. It is not a traditional placement office that attempts to match applicants with jobs. That approach may work for technicians and specialists but it has never been effective with generalists who can competently handle any number of very different kinds of work but are not specifically trained for any one occupation. The Career Planning Office is not just a career counseling service, although it does include that function. Responsive rather than initiating, career counseling may help those students who seek it, but at the present time there are too many students who do not know that they need it. Career planning is a full-scale educational program, extending its activities to high school students and Chatham alumnae as well as to all classes of undergraduates. Its mission is to complement and enrich the liberal arts curriculum with opportunities for students and faculty to learn about the world of work.

We designed the career planning program with a number of objectives in mind. We want to inspire Chatham students to take themselves seriously, to expect to make an important contribution wherever their paths lead. We feel that it is important to facilitate the self-discovery process necessary for good decision making about one's future. We want to provide opportunities for students to learn about the range of occupational options available to them and to stimulate them to explore nontraditional fields. We want Chatham graduates to be able to present themselves, in person and through phone calls, letters, and resumes, as competent professional women. We want them to learn effective job-hunting techniques that they can use not only to get the first job, but to change jobs or to return to the workforce after time out to raise children.

To achieve these objectives we developed a full calendar of events and offered a variety of services. Under the auspices of the Pittsburgh-Chatham Program, field placements for academic credit had already become a feature of the curriculum. We worked with faculty and on-the-job supervisors to structure and formalize these experiences so that they are more explicitly related to the students' academic programs and career interests. We developed more placements, or internships, in nontraditional areas than there have been in the past: international marketing, corporate communications, videocassette training, hospital administration, cancer research, dance therapy, stock brokerage. We conducted workshops in life work planning and how to get a good job. In these group sessions students discovered for themselves the kind of work and lifestyle they would most like to have and learned how to achieve their goals. We presented a series of films about the changing role of women to make young women more aware of the differences in women's lives and to help them discard the stereotype images that have been impressed upon all of us. Since girls typically grow up seeing women only in the traditional roles of mother, teacher, nurse, and secretary, it is sometimes hard for them to imagine themselves as bank managers, television producers, industrial sales representatives, or lawyers. Every other week we held Conversations with Women, an opportunity for students to meet informally with women in a variety of occupations. We had as guests a veterinarian, a psychiatrist, a personnel specialist, a corporate manager, an engineer who told us that chemistry majors are hired as engineers, a television reporter, a research biochemist, and many others. Occasionally we had "rap" sessions with special interest groups such as music majors which included faculty members and provided a forum where much information was shared. We also met with students at night in their dorms. The meetings that drew the largest attendance, though, were those which featured a young alumna talking about starting her career. Understandably, students are most interested in the immediate future and the first job.

Twenty-one recruiters visited the campus during 1973-74, 14 representing employers and seven from professional schools (law and business). We arranged all the interviews, helped students write resumes, coached them for interviewing, and persuaded English majors that there really were positions other than secretarial for which they could qualify. We also invited faculty members to have lunch with recruiters so that they could learn about the opportunities for their students.

Other activities of the Office included surveying students to learn their career interests, establishing a Career Planning Resource Center in the library, and counseling individuals about internships and career planning. During the summer we collected data on the careers of alumnae. We'll use this information to help us identify resources among the alumnae: people to whom we or students can refer for guidance about specific occupations. We also plan to make the alumnae career profiles written by Ellie Moore, our student assistant, available to students and prospective students to show them the variety of work Chatham alumnae are involved in and to give them ideas about possibilities for themselves.

In our first year of operation Marty Montgomery and I saw over two-thirds of the senior class and nearly one-half of the entire student body. We worked personally in various ways with 42 faculty members; and we supported Admissions, Public Relations, and Alumnae by participating in events or activities organized by these offices.

The most exciting happenings in our office during the spring and summer were the announcements of offer letters and positions accepted by seniors and new graduates. By July we knew of 18 students who had accepted responsible professional jobs, some with salaries over $900 a month. In this group are the first woman steel salesperson at Jones and Laughlin; a technical writer, a contract engineer, an assistant purchasing agent for atomic submarine parts, and a recruiting coordinator at Westinghouse; an analyst at PPG; a management trainee at Mellon Bank; and a production assistant at CBS-TV.

The Career Planning Office is an increasingly popular drop-in place where students, faculty, and staff browse through career materials, read the bulletin board, and talk about work. Much was accomplished this past year, but much remains to be done. 1974 graduates whom we had not seen all year and who have not yet found work were calling and coming in for help throughout the summer. That's what adequate career planning can prevent. Young women should be conscious of the fact that they will work during some part of their lives, most of them for twenty years or more, too long a time not to be taken seriously and prepared for. From the time they enter Chatham, if not before, they should be learning about the opportunities, imagining various alternatives, trying out some occupations through internships, and laying the groundwork for a successful job-finding campaign when that time comes. The Career Planning Office is here to help them do just that.

After a very satisfying year getting the program underway, Marty and I decided to move on. A capable new director, Margaret Gavola, joined the staff in August, developed Fall internships, and has a full schedule of recruiters and other activities going forward this year. Two students are interning in career planning, so we feel confident that this much needed work will continue at Chatham and expand to other institutions.

A personal view of the inscrutable

by Marcia Ebenstein Kublanow '58

"Irashaimase" which means "you are welcome here," is an expression I heard everywhere in Japan. It's not just an empty expression. As a foreigner living in Japan I always felt as though I was very welcome.

With due apologies to the many authorities on things Japanese, I would prefer to give a very personal view of my days spent in that constantly fascinating country. The only observations I'll be using are my own; the only statistics, a sampling of one.

My friends and I, while laughing about some incident, would frequently say, "Another chapter for the book . . ." For those of us who loved being in Japan, each day brought new adventures and clearer insight. To me even the most mundane of activities was exciting.

We lived in a fairly typical Japanese neighborhood in the heart of Tokyo. Our house was an average-size Western style, moderate in size by our standards, large to the average Japanese. The area included all variety of houses — from modest Japanese style to much larger Westernized versions, apartment buildings, and dozens of small shops and businesses that provided us with everything from fresh fruits and vegetables to fish, tea, flowers, and the latest Panasonic radio. The local ofuro (public bath) was down the street, just across from our tatami (straw floor mats) maker.

Since zoning laws are somewhat vague, this interesting hodge-podge, multiplied by thousands of similar areas, is Tokyo. Streets are narrow; houses have virtually no land, but any small corner becomes a garden. Walls are used as dividers and provide a feeling of privacy between two houses that may be but a few feet apart.

In an island country as crowded as Japan there are many subtle ways privacy and solitude are achieved. The courtesy of the Japanese is the characteristic first noticed by Westerners. If we recognize this, like the ever-present walls, as a means of putting distance between people, but graciously, the social customs no longer seem like empty amenities.

One of the first questions I'm usually asked is "Did you speak the language?". Sam and I learned what I call taxicab Japanese — enough to function comfortably in day-to-day transactions, but not enough for conversation. We always found people to be extremely patient and helpful; somehow, we were able to overcome the language barrier. We traveled extensively through the country, frequently off-the-beaten-path, and while we had occasional problems, someone always came to our rescue.

The Japanese people are taught to read and write English from third grade through high school, but few master English conversation and almost all are quite uncomfortable communicating in anything but Japanese.

Written Japanese consists of ideograms which were borrowed from China. To graduate from grammar school a student must know 881 characters. He's then considered literate! A high school graduate must know 1850. To read college textbooks a knowledge of 3000 characters is necessary. In addition there are two other sets of phonetic characters used for grammatical endings and for the purpose of introducing foreign words into the language. Each contains 46 letters. All in all, a lot to learn. Between the two of us, Sam and I knew about 10.

Japanese food to most Westerners is sukiyaki, raw fish and rice. Raw fish (sashimi) is a favorite hors d'oeuvre of one course of a meal and while it never became my favorite dish, some varieties are quite good. Actually, as you might imagine, there is an infinite variety of Japanese dishes. Each is prepared to be aesthetically pleasing as well as tasty.

One of my family's favorites was soba, a noodle dish in a soup with a few slices of vegetables, meat or fish. Each neighborhood has soba shops which feature home or office delivery. At meal times it's a common sight to see a delivery man leave the shop balancing a stack of trays laden with soba bowls on one shoulder while maneuvering a bike through Tokyo traffic. We marveled at this sight many times and never saw the slip of a noodle!

Moderately priced Japanese restaurants display extremely realistic wax models of foods they serve, plus the prices, in a window case outside near their entrances — a real boon to hungry foreigners with limited knowledge of the language. When communication failed, we pointed!

The ofuro (public bath) is a necessary part of daily life. It not only serves the need for cleanliness, but is also a place to relax and discuss the latest news with the neighbors. The bath opens about 3:00 in the afternoon and the first people waiting to enter are mothers and young children. It remains open until midnight. Since World War II men and women use separate but equal sides, although it is common to have male attendants on the women's side and vice versa! The local ofuro is an all tile room with sets of spigots along the walls and a king-size "bathtub" at one end. The routine one follows is in accordance with rules that are strict and unchangeable. You undress outside in a dressing room and leave all your clothes in a basket. You enter the bath with nothing but your soap, washrag, and insing bucket! You must wash and rinse thoroughly, and only when you are clean do you submerge into the soaking tub.

My first experience at an ofuro was not at my local one. I became friendly with two young American girls who were teaching English to Japanese businessmen. This gave them the money to study karate and live in modest Japanese style. They convinced me their neighbors were now so accustomed to seeing them daily that another foreign lady would hardly be noticed. So off we went with our wash-rags. I followed the girls' instructions in the necessary rituals and was doing nicely, I thought, until I put my toe into the tub. When you've gone to the ofuro from infancy, the water is hot, but when you're 30-ish and stepping in for the first time, the water is scalding. Astonishment registered on my face; my expletive in English gave all the Japanese ladies a good laugh and something else to talk about as they relaxed together.

Although all countries observe the changing seasons as a holdover from agrarian eras, Japan seems to cling to her traditions with more fervor than others. Most festivals are linked to the seasons, i.e. rice planting and harvesting, the blooming of cherry blossoms or hollyhocks, and so many others, each celebrated as it has always been. The four seasons have for centuries been subject matter for art and literature. Proper appreciation of ikebana (flower arranging) for example, depends on a knowledge of how plants grow during the four seasons.

One of my favorite times in Tokyo was the New Year holiday. It's one of the major festivals throughout the country (many festivals have only local significance) and begins several days before December 31st, when houses are thoroughly cleaned and special foods are prepared. It's the holiday that brings families together; many city workers return to homes in the country. A deep feeling for tradition pervades the days before and after the 1st. Industry closes down until the 4th as do most shops and businesses. A calmness settles over Tokyo; there is very little traffic; the air is clean; people walk leisurely in the streets and visit with friends.

The black business suit is discarded in favor of the traditional navy kimono; the western-style dress gives way to magnificent silk kimono and obi; and children tuck their blue jeans away and proudly appear as miniature versions of their parents.

Everyone goes to a shrine to pray for a good New Year. The parade of people begins at midnight on the 31st, when a temple gong is sounded 108 times to ring out the sins of man. A steady procession continues through the night and into the next day. We joined the throng of almost a million people at Meiji Shrine, the most popular Shinto shrine for this occasion. In an orderly, dignified fashion these people approach the Shrine, repeat a simple prayer and purchase symbolic good luck objects to carry back to their homes.

I believe that the love of nature in Japan is more profound than anywhere else in the world. Or perhaps it is the ability to express this feeling in every detail of life that makes it seem so. Ikebana means literally the bringing to life of plants. Its basis is to recreate an arrangement of plants and flowers that suggests their own natural setting. Of course, the variations are endless and range from faithful detailing to free form. Flower arranging, to the Japanese, is a special way of life with a traditional background of spiritual and philosophical meaning. The use of three basic lines emphasizes heaven (shin), earth (tai) and man (soe). There are several different schools of ikebana. Some adhere more strictly to formal tradition; others have become more modern in their approach. I learned the Sogetsu style, a

It was always fun to see the large ikebana exhibitions each school held periodically during the year. The variety of materials used and the unusual containers were fascinating. My whole understanding of ikebana changed the moment I walked into my first show. Some of the "arrangements" are huge and use as their basic lines tree trunks rather than branches. But the underlying principles of ikebana are still there — somewhere — although hidden to this western eye!

The supreme examples of reverence for nature lie in the Japanese gardens. Two outstanding gardens are part of Imperial Villas in the city of Kyoto. Katsura and Shugaku-in both combine buildings and gardens — the buildings being tea houses and simple country homes which the Imperial families used for moon viewing, tea ceremony, music and recreation. Katsura is relatively small but designed so as to give a feeling of deep perspective through use of cut stones and flagstone paths. From no one point can you see the entire garden, so new discoveries are made with each turn of the path. You are subtly drawn on.

Shugaku-in is comprised of three different villas, each with its own garden and each connected to the other by means of a footpath. It covers acres of land and combines not only magnificent gardens with all the necessary elements but also a spectacular view of surrounding mountains. It is hard to remember that all this natural beauty was planned and executed by man. Words do not describe adequately; neither do pictures. You must stroll slowly, pause and linger to see and feel the harmony.

I had learned that rock and moss gardens should be seen in the rain. Only in Japan would a charitable organization consider it lucky that on the day of the annual tour of private gardens it rained. The rocks revealed colors we never would have seen on a sunny day, and mosses are softer, greener and more lush when wet. At one of the gardens the owner had erected a tent, placed chairs and tables under it for our comfort, and provided baskets of fruit for refreshment — a very hospitable gesture considering that hundreds of people take advantage of the tour.

The Japanese have a word which, when used, is immediately understood. The word is "shibui" and it means "beauty" but only in an esoteric Japanese sense. Very often things that are "shibui" are too subtle in their simplicity for the Western eye to fully appreciate. A tea master finds seven points of beauty in a tea ceremony bowl which would be a very plain object to us. A hanging scroll with a single bamboo branch, suggestion of another and two perching sparrows in the rain is shibui. So are the wonderful thick thatched roofs, a bonsai (miniaturized) maple which is on exhibit after losing all its leaves, sliding shoji panels made from rice paper . . . obviously the list is endless and the feeling very special.

To enjoy live theater in a country where you don't understand the language indicates that it is intriguing enough visually to hold your interest. Kabuki, which is probably the most well known (thanks in part to Michener's "Sayonara") is colorful, certainly the liveliest and most elaborate.

Noh drama and Kyogen comedies are ancient plays still being performed as they were hundreds of years ago. The actors (all male as in Kabuki casts) perform virtually no action. Dialogue is delivered in a musical mimicry. There is an "orchestra" consisting of one flute and three drummers which provide a rhythm that moves the play along. A chorus of male chanters also performs. It's very subtle, very slow moving and very long — four to five hours for the regular performances. However, twice a year one of the leading Noh theatres presents an abbreviated version of two plays. There is an accompanying program in English, so we could follow the plot. This is a perfect way to enjoy a form of theatre that would be very tedious for a foreigner. (Aside: Even the Japanese admit to having difficulty understanding the language of Noh because it's archaic!)

To me the most fascinating theatre experience is Bunraku, the Japanese puppet theatre. The troupe from Osaka — considered the finest in Japan — has appeared in the U.S. The puppets are about 2/3 the size of a person. On stage each puppet is controlled by three men, — a leg man, a one arm man, and the principal operator who controls the head and the other arm. The movements of the puppets are so realistic that the three operators soon fade out of focus and you are concentrating only on those puppet characters — and almost forget they are dolls. An elderly Japanese lady sitting next to me so identified with one of the characters that she wept when the woman's husband was stabbed. A chanter who sits off to one side of the stage animatedly reads all the dialogue; he changes voice and inflection for each new role. He is accompanied by a samisen player. I saw the puppets cry, laugh, smoke, engage in hand-to-hand combat, commit adultery and murder — a whole range of acting experiences. It's phenomenal! I was fortunate to see Bunraku from behind-the-scene. The operators have a consummate skill and dedication that comes from years of study and a love for their profession. It takes years to work up from leg-man to principal operator!

A word in passing about the audiences. Just as Noh lasts for hours, so do Bunraku and Kabuki. While the foreigners may come for a while, the Japanese stay for the entire performance. Obentos (box lunches in wonderful varieties) snacks and drinks are sold in the lobby of the theatres, and eating while watching the performance is not only acceptable, it is necessary!

Traveling through Japan is a pleasure. The train system is excellent and we planned frequent trips with relative ease. Sapporo, on the northernmost island of Hokkaido and home of the '72 Winter Olympics, holds an annual Snow Festival. Huge displays, all hand-carved, of ice are featured. Since snow in Tokyo is a rarity, we all enjoyed tramping through the drifts.

We spent a long vacation touring the southern island of Kyushu by car and then proceeded up the Inland Sea on a steamer boat. It was sakura (cherry blossom) season and we saw the peak of the season all around the island. The views were breathtaking — and then we came to the gruesome reality of Hiroshima and Nagasaki. Peace Park in Hiroshima is aptly named. The well-designed memorials don't immediately bring to mind the tragedy they represent. But then we turned around and saw the mangled foundation of a building which pointedly remains standing. And we went into the museum that houses the photographs, burned clothing, and descriptions. We walked wordlessly through, letting our children absorb what they could — and when we walked out into the sunlight my son, nine years old at the time, said "It's hard to smile after you see that." So we talked to them about the war, and I couldn't help but wonder what the Japanese tell their children when they visit Pearl Harbor.

Kurashiki is a lovely small town fast becoming a tourist spot now that the famous Bullet Train extended its run to a major city within ½ hour from it. Kurashiki is distinctive for many reasons. Long ago it was a shipping port for rice grown in the area. The granaries used for storage have been preserved and restored and now house museums, shops and people. What attracted me to the town was Dr. Kichinosuke Tonomura, founder of a gem of a museum which contains one of the best collections of "mingei" (folk crafts). Dr. Tonomura conducted (in eloquent English) a three day seminar on the subject. Having had the privilege of meeting this man was one of my loveliest experiences.

The essence of Japanese folkcraft is that anonymous craftsmen use natural materials in a traditional manner to produce everyday articles that have an intrinsic beauty. "Making something cheap should be a thing of pride, not scorn," said Dr. Tonomura, almost tearfully, as he showed us his personal collection of bamboo baskets, hand woven cloth, pottery and lacquer ware.

There is a growing interest in "mingei" now. The unpretentiousness of folk pottery, the simplicity of wood objects, the delightful variety of toys that have a special charm for all ages — these are the things I learned to appreciate as much as valuable antiques after meeting Dr. Tonomura.

The sounds of a foreign country are as fascinating as the sights. There are distinctive ones in Japan: the local fireman, who nightly during the winter months, walks around the neighborhood and rhythmically hits two wooden blocks together to create a sound that reminds people to put out their cooking fires before falling asleep; the call of the "yaki-imo" man who comes with the first cold day and sells his hot sweet potatoes from a pushcart; the cooling effect of a wind chime in a nearby tree which gently rings as a summer breeze rocks the clapper; a vendor laden with bowls of goldfish announces that no home should be without a fish bowl in the summer; wooden geta (sandals) clacking up and down our street as the men go to and from the ofuro late at night. It was nice to have the time to stop and listen to Japan.

One of the obvious advantages of spending almost three years in a country is the luxury of time to absorb through all our senses another culture. We were able to see beyond our preconceived ideas and accepted cliches. We learned that behind the Western business suit and the mini-skirt there is a heart and soul that fortunately remains Japanese, even though the lure of Western trappings is irresistible.

The word for foreigner in Japanese is "gaijin," which, when literally translated, means "person standing outside." And so it is. One overriding feeling I left with was the inherent difference between East and West — the difference between a Judeo-Christian society and an attitude of life based on relationship first to nature.

So when visitors would blithely say Tokyo is just like New York I knew they hadn't walked down a narrow side street and looked behind a wall. They had seen only the Western facade — tall buildings, blue jeans and McDonald's. They will find comfort in the similarities between the Japanese and us without appreciating the beautiful differences that will always exist.

Alumna Ann E. Lange '70 was one of the 16 women interns selected to participate in a 16-college Women's Administrative Internship Program for the 1974-75 academic year, funded by the Carnegie Corporation. This program is designed to provide colleges and universities with a supply of qualified young women for positions in all phases of academic administration. Ann earned her M.A. at Boston College and was most recently instructor and chairperson of the Department of Philosophy at Queens College in Charlotte, North Carolina. She will serve her 10-month internship at Elmira College. Coming to Chatham under this program is Deborah W. Whittlesey, a 1970 graduate of Mills College where she also earned her M.A. She had been teaching English at Seven Hills School in Lynchburg, Virginia.

Dr. Elizabeth Lee Vincent, best remembered by Chathamites as Professor of Human Development and Behavior from 1953 through 1959, died April 9, 1974. She had been dean of the College of Home Economics at Cornell University for twenty years before coming to Chatham. While teaching here she collaborated with Dr. Phyllis Martin on the writing of two books, Human Biological Development and Human Psychological Development.

Entering this September as members of the class of 1978 were seven alumnae daughters. They are Julie Frazee, daughter of Mary Louise Wallace Frazee '47; Leslie Henderson, Marilyn Morgan Henderson '52; Cynthia Larson, Louise Baehr Larson '47; Dani Martin, Barbara McVicker Martin '55; Suzanne McCreary, Shirley Neal McCreary '50; Margaret Monteverde, the late Catherine Stauffer Monteverde '49; and Elizabeth Reese, Eleanor Bailey Reese '53. Transfer student Lynne Everett Curtis is the daughter of Virginia Crouch Everett '42.

CAST I (Chatham Alumnae Summer Theatre) finished a successful first season and is busily preparing for its second. As reported in the Spring issue of the Recorder a nucleus of alumnae inspired by Georgena Terry '72, and consisting of Laurie Berman '73, Vicki Falco '71, Nancy Hirsch '73, Edith de Lisio '74, Donna Beiswenger Riggs '67, Kathryn Roberts '72, and Sherry Handsman Steiner '70 came up with the original idea. A season of nine weeks, three weeks for each production, with performances on Friday, Saturday and Sunday nights was decided upon. "The Sign in Sidney Brustein's Window," opened the season; followed by three one-act plays: "Animal," "Sweet Eros" and "Calm Down Mother;" and closed with the most successful, "Private Lives." Open auditions last May brought out about 70 hopeful actors and actresses and provided most of the casting. Gaps were filled with recruited alumnae. Emme Day Erdosy '69, Betsy Jackson '70, Ruth Garland Lesko '56 and Cookie Ungar '70 appeared in acting roles while Cathy Young '73 handled costuming and Connie Jacobson '72 designed the logo. In order to make CAST I a self-sustaining, established summer theatre in Pittsburgh alumnae support is needed in many ways — from actors and technical assistants to costume sewers, prop collectors and envelope stuffers as well as ideas and financial contributions. Anyone who is interested can contact Dr. Jerome S. Wenneker, c/o CAST I, Chatham College.

Again this fall Chatham offered four eight-week informal non-credit evening courses which were open to the public. Dr. Erika King, Assistant Professor of Political Science and Chairperson of the Political Science Department at Chatham, taught "Public Opinion and Propaganda." "Chinese Tradition and its Modern Transformation: Contrast of Values" was taught by Dr. Wing-tsit Chan, Chatham's internationally known scholar in the field of Asian philosophy. Two courses in psychology were repeated by Dr. Frank Lackner, Professor of Psychology at Chatham: "Understanding People — Psychological Principles of Human Behavior" and "Understanding Abnormal Behavior." A total of 118 persons enrolled in these classes this fall.

In June, 1974, the 100,000th volume was added to the collection of The Jennie King Mellon Library. Half the World, the History and Culture of China and Japan, is edited by Arnold Toynbee and includes articles and texts by thirteen distinguished authors representing Far Eastern scholarship at its widest and deepest. Author of Chapter 4, The Path to Wisdom — Chinese Philosophy and Religion, is Dr. Wing-tsit Chan, Chatham's Gillespie Professor of Philosophy. In an informal ceremony Dr. Chan presented the work to President Eddy on the steps of the new library.

The Alumnae Office finds it hard to believe that Chatham alumnae are so silent about their opinions on all subjects, especially those related to the College. What happened to the letters and comments requested for the "Feedback" page of the Recorder? Right now we would be very interested in suggestions or comments on class reunion activities.

He was looking for someone who could not only write and do press releases and knew what the needs of the press are, but someone who was personable — that was one thing he did mention to me when he was interviewing me."

Rodino's office, though large by Capitol Hill standards, is small compared to the offices men of his stature occupy in other professions. There are three rooms; his office (all blue, with a comfortable blue sofa), a cubby-hole for O'Brien and a large room for everybody else.

Starr — small, personable, confident — moves easily among the three rooms. "I happen to love the press," she declares.

"The relations with the press were, until the closed hearings when there was a lot of frustration among the members of the press, very, very, cordial. They considered this a place where they could come in for a cup of coffee, sit down, use our phone, chat, I mean it was really a nice, friendly atmosphere. Then they got frustrated and they were more critical, but at no time did relations become really bad."

Starr is thinking now about reporting herself. Had she been able to take journalism courses at Chatham, she says, she might have gone into it directly.

"I had an aunt who was a reporter at the Pittsburgh Press. Her name was also Helen, and she had a by-line I would have had if I had not gotten married. Then she was killed in a car accident when she was about my age. I never knew her because I wasn't even born but I've always had this thing about wanting to do what she could have done."

"This experience definitely gave me a lot more confidence because I can compare myself to the reporters that have been here. There have been some superb ones and some not so good ones and I can see that I could do it. It's just a matter now of deciding if that's the direction I want to take."

Alice Laidlaw Hicks (Mrs. C. Speers), 204 North Buchanan Blvd., Durham, NC 27701

Mildred Nicholls Kohman enjoyed a summer holiday in Alaska. She admits that she did not bag any bears but was thrilled to see how the fur-bearing animals are coming back. Mildred's granddaughter was married in June.

Dorothy Errett writes: "I am still enjoying, and very grateful for, a good comfortable abode at Friends' Home, Kennett Square. Dorothy's nephew Russell, on his return from six years of service in Vietnam, was married in October.

In February, Helen Steele Truxal visited Dorothy Markell in Florida, and in June traveled to Saddle-heck, New Jersey to attend the wedding of her grandson, David Noyes. She is happy to have her grandson, Robert Dougherty, living with her.

Our sympathy goes out to Alice Laidlaw Hicks whose husband passed away in October. Alice says "I have sold our home and am living in the King's Daughters Home, a residence for elderly ladies, with which I have been affiliated for many years. It is right across the street from the Women's Campus of Duke University, so I see many library friends, — both human and books."

Gertrude Frame Patterson describes her year as quiet, beautiful and peaceful. Apparently she has accepted, and is being one hundred percent cooperative, in the energy crisis. In her words "light is important. We have added night lights and little red lights that flash on beside the television set and the refrigerator when the voltage is dangerously low. The air-conditioner just goes off with only the air circulating."

Rose Geary, Melba Martin Ingersol, Mary Stratton and Grace Woodrow, together with Dorothy, Gertrude and the Acting Class Secretary extend cordial greetings to all.

We are sorry to learn of the deaths of Dorothy Bergman in January 1973 and of Mollie Davidson Nass. To their families we extend our sympathy. Also to Rachel Alexander Christie whose husband Robert died last August.

Ruth Kauffman Morrison and Ruth Long send greetings to all the class.

Florence Younkens Fowler writes "This has been a quiet year — not much traveling except a few weeks in Florida. It is always so good to get home again. Love and best wishes to you and the other girls."

I had a trip to Traverse City, Michigan to visit my daughter, then visited in Hart and Cleveland. I mailed all the cards and a note to Kamala in July. I don't know whether the Postal Service did not deliver them or what happened. It was very discouraging not to hear from those who usually write but I am grateful to those who did reply to my cards.

NEW ADDRESSES

Margaret C. Hare (Mrs. Kenneth Hurst-Brown), 224 Rolfe Road, Williamsburg, VA 23185

Your secretary had hoped to receive 100% sponse for the Recorder. Even though we fell sh it was indeed gratifying to hear from the following Virginia Wilcox Gilbert says "Our only big is that we will be celebrating our 50th wedding anniversary in September. We expect to have entire wedding party present and our two daughters are planning a party for about 100 guests. We are fortunate to have a wonderful family, six grandchildren and many friends." Congratulations Virginia, and best wishes.

Although handicapped with a lame back and knees, Mary Luella Stevenson is active as secretary for the local historical society.

Helen Horix Fairbanks claims to be slowing u "I travel very little and go to the office a few days each week and enjoy many friends and my three grandchildren who want to know why I can't run. Thanks to Helen we learned that Julia Aspinwall Dunlap visited in Pittsburgh enroute from Cape Cod — looks much the same as she did many years ago. has just as much pep and plays golf a lot; that Katharine McFarland lives in three places — Florida in the winter, Chautauqua in the summer and Pittsburgh in the spring and fall; and that Ethel Per remains in a nice nursing home — The Crestwood Whippany, New Jersey 17981.

Thanks to a cardiac infarction last winter, Glenn Fournier Todd says,

"I diet now and take it easy,

It's hard, 'cause I feel bright and breezy."

The fuel shortage didn't bother Betty Davidson. "I have handy transportation and when the temperature fell I just put on more clothes." We extend to Betty our sympathy in the sudden death of her sister Mollie, class of 1918. They didn't see each other often as she lived in East Orange but they talked by phone each week.

Rita Criste spent six weeks last spring as "artist residence" for the Columbus, Georgia Cultural Arts Program. "My objective was to demonstrate the importance of drama in education. This summer was at Cornell University and experimented with nursery school children in the drama. Since my previous experience had been with 6 to 66-year-olds a new dimension was added to my work. After a trip to California I plan to tour the Far East in October.

Bill Crane Peebles writes, "I have been mighty lucky having the time of my life in these retirement years. We've stayed close to home and it has been wonderful to have the time to read and to do just what you want. Our one weakness is duplicating bridge."

After having always traveled north Helen Benne Nelson must now change direction since their son has moved to New Mexico. They plan to spend Christmas there.

Your secretary was saddened by the death of her only brother last February. We must, I suppose, take comfort in the fact that those close to us have been spared so long. As Betty said, "Time is catching up. My sister and I enjoyed a tour of New England in July. Love to you all and do come to the reunion next June.

Margaret M. Barr
614 Chestnut Street
Springdale, PA 15111

Helen Allison Dunbar says she just keeps going along. Jane Taylor, Harriet Templeton Kraus and Betty Sprowls Spragg '21 had lunch together and much reminiscence took place.

Betty Dean Boots writes that she had a stroke May 22nd, and is in the Wightman Manor during the week.

Dorothy Burleigh Courtney and Jim spent April traveling in Tunisia, Yugoslavia and Malta. T summer sees the usual visits of children and grandchildren.

Leah Davis Mead has been ill and was in Mercy Hospital. She and her husband have given a great amount of time to their two foster daughters. In a few months the girls will be old enough to change homes and then the Davises will be alone.

Margaret Gray Harlor and Anne Kiskaddon send greetings to all those of 1922. Mickey had family illness keeps her busy.

Helen Gross Alderman writes that for persons in retirement, who have nothing to do they are the luckiest people. Hot Springs, being a resort town, they have had more visitors than in the 40 years they lived in Illinois. They live on a beautiful lake and she said, "You-all come now."

Harriet Hill Kraus said this has been an important year in her life. Bill and she celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary in May. All three generations are present, 15 in all, for a three-day reunion and it was a wonderful and happy time. They enjoy living out of the city and being in the same town with their daughter and family. Visits to St. Louis and Washington, D.C. give them the pleasure of being with the children.

Anne Jay had a trip to Longwood Garden to enjoy the spring flowers and then on to Williamsburg. A summer vacation was spent in upper New York State. She is well but has not heard from classmates.

Ruth Keck Schell and her husband also celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary in May. All children and their families, thirty in all, were home to celebrate. "What a great family reunion," Ruth said. Greetings to the girls of 1922.

Florence Newmaker Knapp said they spent the Christmas holidays in the Washington, D.C. area with their two sets of children, then to Ft. Myers Beach for the winter. Short trips during the summer included one to see their oldest grandson, John, graduate with high honors from Wesleyan and to Virginia for the wedding of their granddaughter — Lucy Knapp. Newny sends love to all the '22 friends.

Jane Taylor made a trip to California to visit her niece. Her time is spent working about home or playing bridge. She sees Helen Dunbar at times and talks with her quite often.

Carolyn Titzell had a busy year. She and a friend went to Hawaii where they joined other friends for a wonderful time. Lake Worth, Florida is her usual winter residence. The plans for a week with Anne Griggs in May were ruined by her falling in her apartment and breaking a rib.

Betty Wilson Lorenz says they still enjoy Florida life as much as ever but have given up traveling. Sends regards to all from 1922.

Ella Wilson Clark made a northern trip this summer and on to Washington, D.C. Now that she is home she will be busy on the Scholarship Board, Family Services, League of Women Voters, etc. She said she is committed and involved and glad to be alive.

The year 1974 has not been a happy one for your secretary. My aunt, with whom I have spent the past five years, died in February. In April, I went to visit cousin in Sun City, Arizona and had a lovely time. The morning before I was to leave I got word that my sister had died within a few hours of an automobile accident. I have spent a lot of my time in Falmouth, Massachusetts and very little in New Castle. Many thanks for your replies and we miss not hearing from some of the always faithful.

Helen E. Ryman
Pittsburgh, PA 15228

Many of you have probably heard by now that our 50th Anniversary was just great and we are sorry that some had to miss it. Ten attended: Leaneore Allen, Grace Davis Mechling, Marion Griggs, Louise Hamilton Haase, Florence Jay, Carolyn Lohr Steele, Hedwig Pregler, Helen Ryman, Stella Wagenfehr Shane, and Emma Miller Davis. Two stalwarts, Barbara Coit Templeton and Martha Glandon Luthringer, were concerned with ill husbands as were

The Committee, Stella, Grace and your secretary contacted everyone and most responded. All the above and others are delighted with the innovation this year of giving each person who makes the 50th year a gold engraved plaque on a walnut base 3-3/4 x 5-3/4. Let the college know if yours has not arrived. All who attended also received a special ceramic favor, a miniature iron holding wildflowers. Grace presented Dr. Eddy with our gift of $1,000.00, which, with his blessing, we held until August to receive the interest we deserved. (Covers our expenses).

Of the ten above, though all are retired, all are busy with community affairs after a health lapse here and there. Dr. Hedwig Pregler is still instructing young teachers at Duquesne and Dr. Marion Griggs tried to retire from the Department of Defense in Washington DC but they insist she keep on two days at least, but she is all set to take a night course in Ikebana and another in calligraphy. Louise Haase brought her husband and daughter, a red haired beauty with her husband and children, three lively boys.

From letters sent in and phone contacts, Ruth Baxter Hill was going West to see her son; Martha Crowley sent a capsule report of her distinguished career and also a check to cover photos that might be taken; Billie Hibbs Williams is still plagued by heart problems. Olive Keck Comfort, tho fine, hates to travel now since living in New England; Marian Kimmel Darsie sent a charming outdoor photo not looking her age. She loves California and has been teaching and traveling. Helen Leggett Corbett is happy at the Arlington, busy with her church and her daughter's artistic activities. Virginia Lilley Christ was moving back to Pennsylvania, at this time as she shuttles back between Hawley, Pa., and her Florida home.

Gertrude Mixer Henry was a victim of a mistake in change of address, missing directives and though she keeps in touch with daughter in Ohio, now in Tavares, Florida, she is as heavily involved with the Red Cross as up North. Her regards to all. Anna Mary Orr was too ill to attend. Alberta Sexauer Ressler, still happy with her Ohio retirement spot, got us over the hump on our class fund with a timely gift. Marian Stewart Smith, usually an attendee, had to be at a confirmation of a granddaughter in New York. Marian Taylor Clark is traveling so much with retired husband, had to bow out. Esther Miller Kagan drank a toast to us in New York but she has been back with her daughter to visit our new college. Finds it terrific. Write me, if anyone has been missed, for we missed you.

NEW ADDRESSES

Bertha Gates Goodrich (Mrs. Forrest A.), 14300 Detroit Ave., Westerly Apts., Lakewood, OH 44107
Alice Greves, 112 Oak Street, Lantana, FL 33462

Mary Ailes Sechler reporting:

Praise to the class of 1926 for 32% Alumnae Fund giving, and one Special Gift contributor!! This is a very good record, according to the last Recorder, and we want to thank each and every one of you!!!

Gertrude Bradshaw is still spending much time with her aunt in Washington, D.C., and I am honored to be asked to send in the class news in our Secretary's absence. Gertrude had planned three trips, all of which had to be cancelled, but which we hope she can take in 1975.

Abigail Cresswell enjoyed Christmas week, 1973, in Williamsburg, Virginia; the month of March, '74, in Florida; and attended the Kentucky Derby in May, (its 100th anniversary) so she is gratefully and thankfully enjoying good health.

I talked to Marian Johnson Kipp and she and Orval are still doing a lot of traveling, usually taking along a different grandchild!

Ruth Justice Rowley has a great-granddaughter! Ruth and Millard have taken many interesting trips. To Hawaii, Florida, and to central New York to see his 98 year old mother. But Ruth is having a second cataract operation in September, and that will bring a short period of inactivity she does not look forward to. At her husband's 50th class reunion at Syracuse in June they had much fun, and don't know why they think all contemporaries are doddering. They keep saying "THOSE old people"!

Lib Koehn Butler is completely retired now, and she and her husband have spent the past two winters in Southern Pines, North Carolina. They have a granddaughter entering Indiana University this fall, a fact she finds difficult to realize, and a sentiment which I certainly can echo!

Marie Pannier Townhill wrote from far away Jakarta, Indonesia. Marie's husband is there on a consulting job for I.E.S.C. until November, and Marie enjoys the hotel pool, the smiling, pleasant people, and expects to do volunteer work with the American Women's Association. It showed real interest in the college and the class to write from so far away!

Dorothy Schmidt Clark has some interesting trips with her husband to tell about. They include North Carolina, Denver and Colorado Springs, and the Delta Queen trip from Cincinnati to New Orleans.

Helen Simons Polhemus and her husband have been living in New Hampshire, in a 200 year old farmhouse, surrounded by lake and mountains. They find it a new and delightful experience to be much alone with each other, after an active life in the ministry and teaching professions. Helen's 95 year old mother is still living, but handicapped by several small strokes.

Carrie Timothy Mountford informs us that her daughter and her husband celebrated their silver wedding anniversary in September, '74. Carolyn, class of '49, was our class baby. Carrie also enclosed a letter from a former roommate and classmate, Helen Weller Allen, who transferred to Penn State her second year, and who is now writing asking for news of old friends and telling of her interesting life! Carrie forgot any more news!

Alice Greves wrote briefly that she has not been well because of arthritis, has moved to Florida and would very much like to see or hear from old friends.

We were sorry to learn that Irene Stephens Masters' husband died last July. She is alone in a big home in Oakmont but is adjusting — as we all must learn to do, sooner or later.

Eleanor Fulton McCracken has no special news except for seeing Helen Bromley briefly last spring when she came to New Jersey for a family wedding. Eleanor enjoys her retirement very much. A letter came from Estelle Silverman Small who was in Miami to attend a wedding. She is very excited about a new great-grandson. Another last minute letter came from Mabel Breitweiser Hann who always has so much news of all her activities. She had just returned from seeing her granddaughter, Lynn, a student at Chatham, off for her junior year at the University of Fribourg, Switzerland. Mabel does about six volunteer jobs and the same number of hobbies. She is looking forward to our 50th reunion in '76 and hopes everyone is planning to attend.

The sympathy of the class goes out to the family of Alberta Price Craig who died November 10, 1973 in Elmira, New York, according to a letter from her daughter, Catherine. And I lost two brothers in a little more than a month this summer. We were a close family of six and these brothers were the first to go. I have been doing the usual things: volunteer work, College Club doings and visiting my four children.

Fran Frost Brumbaugh has another granddaughter, born July 5, 1974. Fran took a western trip last October and this year went on a tour of Eastern Canada and the Maritime Provinces.

Kay Caldwell Mayer's nephew who lived with her was married in May, but lives near by. She planned to be traveling and visiting for two months this fall.

Betty Coxy Wallis writes they had a good year and the family is fine. They have a granddaughter at Mercer College in Macon, Georgia and I hope to see them on their next trip south.

Peg Cousley and a friend spent a month sight seeing in Florida in April. They had dinner with Ruth Mary Wilkinson in Sarasota and spent a night with Fran Brumbaugh at Clearwater.

Dot Floyd Warren retired in June after 17 years in the Avonworth School District where her son is now teaching. Dot spent four weeks the summer of 1973 auditing a comparative education course at the University of Copenhagen and at the University of London. This past summer she had a trip to Nova Scotia.

Frances Fulton McClymond's husband John retired three years ago and they have enjoyed visiting the grandchildren — 13, 11 and 5.

Mardy Jones Ruthart and Bob went to the British Isles in August, touring for 3 weeks, then to Wales to visit relatives for another 3 weeks. One night was spent at a Welsh Castle where they enjoyed a medieval banquet.

I had a nice phone call from Clare Lawler in August. She had been to Florida to take care of a sister who had a broken hip. Last fall she went with another sister on a three week cruise to the Greek Isles.

Our deepest sympathy goes to Nora Lewis Harlan on the death of her husband this past July.

Alice Mahood Torrens went to her 50th high school reunion in October, 1973. Her mother was 98 years old that same month and Alice had open house in the nursing home.

Betty Malcolm Clemens wrote that after a bus trip to the coast last year they were doing no traveling this year, just interesting things at home and enjoying their family and grandchildren.

Pat McCurdy Bushnell had an exciting year and a busy one. Last summer she attended a workshop at the Buffalo Craftsman Seminar and learned to spin. She was already weaving and had an antique spinning wheel repaired and she is now doing the whole bit, from sheep to finished garment. She belongs to three weavers and spinners guilds, plus the Buffalo Craftsmen, which includes all handicrafts. Her specialty is spinning dogs' hair, — collie, Pomeranian, Siberian husky, and poodle, if it is long enough. She would like to know if any of our classmates have similar interests, i.e. spinning, weaving, or long haired dogs. She is living in a remodeled 140 year old school house and "with two looms, two spinning wheels, wool spun and unspun. I may have to remodel the remodeling."

Mildred Parrill Gilmore and Charley had a nice trip to Eastern Europe in April and May — Budapest, Warsaw, Leningrad, and Moscow. They went to the Flower Market in Amsterdam at tulip time.

Betty Piel asked to be relieved of her job as Chairman of the Language Department at Lebanon Valley College and is teaching full time, planning to retire or semi-retire in May.

Peg Port Arens has had a busy two years — spending Christmas and New Years last year in California; then Hawaii and Las Vegas. Some time in Florida, North Carolina, and Ohio. In May she went to Washington, D.C. to a D.A.R. convention and stayed with Mary Crawford who is enjoying retirement with trips to the shore and visiting relatives in Ohio and Pennsylvania. I am sorry I missed some phone calls from you, Peg, from the airport. Please try again. If any of you have more than an hour layover at the airport in Atlanta let me know ahead of time and I will come out to see you. Otherwise give me a phone call.

Betty Porter Steinmiller is well again after another sojourn in the hospital last February. She and Del are grandparents again.

After twenty-seven years Gina Ray Randall sold her home and will be moving at Christmas time. Two of her young people are living and working in New Hampshire, — George at the Cardigan Mountain School in Canaan and Mary and her husband in Plymouth. Trudy is teaching in Riverdale, NJ.

Madeline Teets Bathrick has had a good year enjoying living in her mobile home and gardening.

In May Ruth Mary Wilkinson and Honor flew to Pittsburgh for Ruth's 50th high school reunion at the Carlton House. I was glad to be home when she called from the airport.

So glad to hear from Ruth Work Miller who had been ill all winter and spring, in the hospital and at home. This is the first year they have not been able to go to the lake in Canada for the summer, but was hoping to get there in late August.

I had a surprise phone call from Clara Osgood. We had not heard from her since 1957. She is Personnel Director for a store for 28 years and is now retired. Thank you for calling, Clara. Please mail me your answer my cards.

I do enjoy the letters you send and because of the space I cannot give as much detail of your news as you would like to, but please keep on writing. Thanks for the checks, too. If you send each year more into our fund by 1978.

Winnie because of plans for a trip to Europe being moved up, had just enough time to check on her girls, and Eleanor being great on tracking down graduates while staying in Pittsburgh, enjoying three granddaughters, Dottie offered to take on coordinating and write the report, showing she is top of her "golden years." With our 45th reunion next year, at this time in life many of the girls losing loved ones, also are getting in longed-for travel. It is a kind of flowering that all must be ready to accept. Just read on.

Catherine Backhofen, retired since 1970, has been off to Scotland but is now volunteering with the Little Sisters of the Poor.

Madeline Barnhart Mandy lost her husband, mother and father within the last two years and, enjoying Virginia Beach with her daughter and five grandchildren, is thinking seriously of Florida.

Pauline Bickhart Garratt moved from Ohio to retire, husband Frank, got caught in the move, strike but is now settled in Upper St. Clair. Stop anytime at the new address.

Marie Bowser Robbins has married recently and spent the winter in Florida.

Two retired travelers, Annamae Beatty Dreibe was in Spain, January and February and in Majorca; Miriam Bulger had an extensive Caribbean cruise, and fell in love with Caracas, hoping to be back at Thanksgiving.

Dorothy Collins Pierce, far ahead of women's work, has done such a sterling job with the Women's Symphony Association that she is now Chairman of the Advisory Board and of special gifts. Since her husband retired two years ago from his presidency job, they visit grandsons, golf, garden and travel.

Louise Dickinson, retired now three years, is a member of RSVP (Retired Service Volunteer Program) and goes one day a week to Mayview St. Hospital. She spends six hours there helping to select clothes, manicures their nails and many other services. Recommends this for anyone with time on her hands.

Helen Emsminger Hughes' big moment this year was their son's graduation from Monmouth College and feeling cheered to know they weren't the only parents there. Dorothy Fisher Maury is kept busy with two married sons, a single son and daughter and five lovely grandchildren.

Marian Haines Schap just returned from a "sailing boat" to Yugoslavia, 12 passengers thru the Lawrence Seaway plus the Mediterranean. Marian hopes to see us at the 45th reunion.

Lucille Jackson Strauss and husband got away from State College to travel for five weeks in Jamaica, across to Central America, Yucatan, Guatemala, Honduras and California. Had nice visit with Dorothy Edsell Fuller '33 who turned up for an American Chemical Society meeting at Penn State.

Sara Johnson Bailey writes nostalgically of the memories of PCW and expounds on her women's lib views. Sara has been a widow 17 years, has a daughter 27 and a son 35 and 3 grandchildren. Retired last year after 29 years of teaching (non-competitive) and is still learning something new and different. She suggests we all read "Mother of the Graduate" — biography of a Smith college mother trying to understand how our generation was indeed responsible for "liberation".

Mary King Guckert had an unusual "death in the family" in the early summer. Their longtime housekeeper who had been with Mary's husband since he was one year old passed away in a nursing home.

Ethel Lehmann Grabe, still working full time at Children's Hospital (Neurological Department), plans to retire next June and is breaking in her replacement. They plan to celebrate their retirement with a trip to Japan.

Amelia Lockard Moul, with so many activities it is impossible to report them, is coming to the 45th. She lives in Carmichael, California, and having a whale of a time.

Adelaide Hyndman McLaughlin has one more year of teaching French and English so is using summer months to get caught up with home and duties set aside during the winter.

Two live wires have met changes in fortune. Peg Loeffler Loftus lost her husband a few months ago, after a very serious illness. But she keeps busy with the Opera Workshop where she is a faithful and long-time worker. Veronica Netopil Morrone, retired now, used to go to Florida but now is off for Vienna where she has a sister and many nieces and nephews, unless stopped by her health which is not 100%.

Nancy McIlwain Sweet says that the tours of the 23 room Colonial Collection in Chazy, N.Y., where her husband is curator have increased during the summer. Her two daughters gave a surprise reception for her 40th wedding anniversary, "the biggest and the most pleasant in our years of togetherness". With six grandchildren, they are good at baby-sitting.

Marcella Murray is still working and enjoying life and says she may not be able to make the reunion in 1975. She is living it up in Los Angeles these days.

Elizabeth Palen Cullen has five grandchildren, retired now, but does volunteer work one day a week at the Penn Hills Library. Every winter she spends a month at Delray Beach in Florida.

Mary Mears DeWeese's husband is now retired from U.S. Steel and "we are living a nice quiet life."

Louise Peterson Jameson spends one half year in Pittsburgh and the other half in Clearwater, where they have a condominium. Louise retired four years ago and her husband two years later and so they have been traveling this year thru the West.

Dorothy Thompson Seif has arrived back from Scandinavia, after visiting North Cape first. Is not retiring until she gets the answer to inflation.

Elise Searing Loxterman had a wonderful freighter trip to Japan. Went with two other couples and was gone about five weeks.

Mary Louise Towar Potter lost her husband in November, 1972 which we failed to pass on. Then she lost her mother a year later. She says she is gradually adjusting.

Louise Vallowe Spinelli, retired from many years teaching, divides her time between her daughter and grandchildren in North Carolina and volunteering at the Homestead Hospital. Louise's sister, Martha, secretary for 18 years to the Catholic Archbishop of Johannesburg, South Africa, returned for a visit recently.

We learned of Anne Saxman Underwood's passing at Sea Island from a wonderful obituary sent in by her husband. Winnie has placed a book in the Library in her memory. Memorial donations are being made to the Latrobe Area Hospital, where she was born, and was an active community person.

Lois Watt Cooper back from Hawaii, stopped off in San Francisco and brought back her grandson for visit. Last year Lois was editor of the National Organization of Law Wives.

Mary Woodworth Nelan, on her trip to Rome, attended a banquet for Cardinal Wright and an audience with the Pope. Since her husband has retired they were off to Saigon, Hong Kong and Tokyo. She is a deacon in her church and has two years coming up as Women's Association President.

Viola Chadwick Rosso had an operation for detached retina in February and her vision is returning well while the other eye is able to take over the daily needs. She can drive now and do her home duties. Being near Philadelphia (Darby) many Chathamites look her up which she loves. She plans to come to the 45th and hopes for a good crowd.

Thanks to all of you who sent in your contributions to our Fund, now $163.06. You know the bank charges when we fall below a certain amount. Gifts are always welcome, just a dollar will do the trick most times.

Marion Stone Howard (Mrs. Wayne J.), Star 70, Box 259A, Cashiers, NC 28717

Lil reporting:

I have retired from teaching and have moved to the Bower Hill Apartments in Mt. Lebanon.

Beatrice Andrews Dimsdale and her husband enjoyed a lengthy trip through the Southwest. Also traveling around this summer was Alice Bair Albright who visited Ligonier, Chautauqua and the shore.

Louise Blank Lecky and her husband are enjoying retirement in Florida. The beach is only ten minutes away and they have many places to go fishing. They are also taking advantage of Port Charlotte University, taking courses in Spanish conversation and music.

Betsy Dearborn Souren keeps busy with Meals on Wheels, phone-answering for "Fish," working with "Churchwomen United," and four grandchildren who live nearby. Their daughter, who has two more years at C.M.U., was married last Christmas.

Elizabeth Ewing Cogbill and Mac plan to go to New Orleans and Houston for some meetings after a delightful summer at Van Buren Point.

Ruth Fugh McMurtry has retired from teaching English to high school seniors. Their daughter was married in June and their son in August, which provided a very busy summer.

Ruth Grafman Weiner and her husband recently sold their home and moved to an apartment. They are enjoying their three grandchildren.

Charlotte Graham Dight and her husband took some time away from Chautauqua for a trip across Canada to Vancouver then on to Alaska. They are enjoying retirement and their two grandchildren.

Josephine Herrold Sponheimer writes that they are living the present to the hilt, anticipating a thrilling future and looking backward with joy.

Jane Norman Widdowson reports two more grandchildren, making a grand total of three. Jane spends her vacations admiring her progeny.

Peggy reporting:

Thanks to all of you who responded to our appeal for money. Our treasury is now solvent. We placed two books in the College Library in memory of Kathryn Lee Sisco and Carolyn Bickell Morris. I sold the family home this summer and moved into a town house in the same area where I can still enjoy my grandsons. Church work, two reading groups, some arts and crafts and serving as president of a garden club keep me busy.

Lillian Lafbury Wills is living in St. Petersburg, happily surrounded by her family. She is involved in community and church activities.

Rita Lefton Pincus teaches a teen-age mothers' program in the Scranton Public School District. She is a volunteer for Inter-Faith, United Jewish Appeal, Temple Sisterhood and Israel Bonds and had just returned from six weeks in Israel.

Ruth Miller Page reports that she is enjoying the blessings of good health and winters in Clearwater, Florida.

Sally Miller Brash sailed on the S.S. France this summer to London for the theatre and to Edinburgh for the Arts Festival. She is assistant professor at Harcum Jr. College and Director of the Children's Theatre in Philadelphia. A new delight for Sally are her twin granddaughters born in February.

Besides working in her local public library Margaret Price Guyton is very interested in hand crafts, especially wood carving.

After last year's trip to Vienna and the Greek Islands Betty Rankin Foster is planning to visit Portugal this year. She is very busy with church and club work and her six grandchildren.

Dorothy Russell is still Director of Social Service at Columbia Hospital and finds time for church work and the church choir and school.

No special news from Sara Stevenson except that she is teaching English and Latin at the senior high school in Indiana, PA.

Marion Stone Howard and her husband have moved to the Great Smokies. Their son Bud was being married in October.

Vi Swenson Leeper is doing volunteer work at the thrift shop operated by her church and often works with Ginny Hall McAleese '33. They continue to enjoy their Sea Island home.

Mary Frances Tarr Peat reports that she has dropped many of her activities because of her husband's prolonged illness. She still belongs to the D.A.R., the Daughters of 1812 and the Johnstown Art League, but no traveling except to cities where her husband has been a patient. Hope your news is better next year, Tancy.

Mary Wooldridge Beyer started a new job last January as administrative clerk in the Facilities Office of the General Electric Research and Development Center. She and her husband visited their daughter and family in the Yukon Territory where they are teaching in an experimental residential high school sponsored by the Anglican Diocese of the Yukon.

Our sincere congratulations to Alice MacKenzie Swaim for receiving the American Heritage award in May. Their congressman came to the apartment to present it as she has not been well. Professionally Alice is writing, reviewing, contest judging, and helping beginning poets.

Helen Walker Empfield (Mrs. James), 6443 N. Seeley Ave., Chicago, IL 60645

We extend our sympathy to Edna Geiselhart Thorp's husband and family. Edna passed away in her sleep from an apparent heart attack last January.

Our thanks to Anne McCullough Frey and Ellen Yeager Husak who worked on our 40th reunion so successfully we had the largest attendance at the Reunion Luncheon. We were sorry Helen Bixler Watts and Jean Ludebuehl Fisher, who had planned to be there were unable to come. Our thanks also to Margaret Goldberg Maxwell and Mary Jane Young who served so faithfully as class secretaries for the past five years.

Ruth reporting:

Fran Alter Mitchell was happy to meet with classmates at our 40th reunion in June. She and Jane Mitchell Carpenter arrived just in time for lunch and, unfortunately, had to leave early.

Berenice Beamer Williamson enjoyed the reunion get-together in June. On a sad note, however, one of her twin grandsons from Kittanning sustained a fractured skull while playing with some friends. He is progressing quite well but still unable to attend school. We send best wishes for a complete recovery.

Margaret Donaldson retired in July after 37 years in the insurance world. She is finding many aspects of housekeeping delightful although she enjoyed her job and working with people very much. She felt gratified that the class of '34 had the largest representation of all classes holding reunions that day.

"There just aren't enough weekends to renew old friendships with London friends who have returned to the United States permanently" says Hazel Elwood McClure. She and her semi-retired husband John are finding reorientation to their life in Greensburg necessary after living in London for five years. "Contact us if you come through Greensburg."

"Summer chores kept us busy since our June reunion" says Margaret Goldberg Maxwell. Peggy and Bob recently returned from a lovely vacation trip to the Maritime Provinces in Canada. Peggy has presently enrolled in a course in reupholstering offered by the Agriculture Extension Service where she hopes to "professionally" recover two chairs.

Although Synnové Haugom is an extremely busy person she was present at our reunion and comments on the fact that everybody has aged well. She was unable to take a vacation due to her involvement in the Steuben Glass Exhibit. She was elected Maine Representative of the American Association of Museums covering the period 1973-1976 and is also a member of Citizens for Maine Historic Preservation which is a lobby group.

Mary Hostler Green is sorry she missed the reunion but her profession as Doctor of Medicine keeps her very busy and becomes increasingly demanding and less rewarding as she sees it.

Josephine Johnson Rennick and husband George toured Spain, Portugal, and Morocco in the summer. She reports that the arrival of a new granddaughter rounds out the number of grandchildren to two girls and two boys.

Eleanor Kenworthy Clements was surprised by a telephone call from Rose Hollingsworth Stambaugh who was visiting her son in Dallas this summer. Rose extended greetings from Nookie Ewing Stuart and Luise Link Ely both of Florida. She also regrets her inability to have attended our reunion. She sends regards to all classmates and a special greeting to Nookie, Linky ("B.Z."), and Rose.

It was a pleasure to read all of your nice notes and letters. Many thanks to all who sent news and greetings. I, too, enjoyed the June reunion and catching up on interim years. Time does fly, no? I agree with Synnové that all have aged well. A few that attended the reunion failed to write but perhaps next year! To Margaret White many thanks for her great cooperation in this endeavor.

Margaret reporting:

Madeline Lee Sale enjoyed two vacations this year — in Bermuda and the Carolinas.

Luise Link Ely and her husband bought a "doll of a chalet" on Beech Mountain in North Carolina. They expect to use "The Snuggery" from June thru September and would like a "yell" from anyone down that way then. Their address there is AA 25 Pine Ridge Road, Banner Elk, NC 28604.

Fran Lorimer Hepburn and her husband enjoy being free to travel since his early retirement four years ago. Daughter Jane and her family live in near-by Galion, Ohio, close enough to see the two grandchildren often.

Mary Louise Martin retired the end of July. She and her sister have bought a home in Asheville, North Carolina, near their brother who lives in Weaverville. They expect to move the first of November.

Allice McCarthy Bowman reports she moved twice in two months and her eldest son is married, finally.

It was good to see Bernice Montgomery well enough to attend the Reunion lunch. She retired early due to ill health and is back in Kittanning. (Thanks for your comment, Bernice, that you think Ruth Husak Merz, Mary Lou Martin and I have changed the least since graduation.)

Dot Schenck Van der Voort's husband Bob was elected to the Pennsylvania Superior Court last November and enjoys being one of seven judges, state-wide, to sit on appellate court and review cases. Dot travels with him when court sessions are in Harrisburg and Philadelphia. We were glad to have her daughter Betsy sit with the Class of '34 at our reunion lunch.

Avanelle Schlosser Grafton retired June 14 from her job as counselor at Kittanning Senior High School. Since then, she vacationed in Newfoundland and Minnesota.

We extend our sympathy to Marion Starkey Hamlet, whose son Jeff died on July 6, 1974 at the age of 21. Marion is still looking after her mother and aunt and is thinking of retiring from teaching.

Helen Walker Empfield had all her family home in June and had a family dinner for 23.

Ellen Yeager Husak writes her big news is that her husband Alois has recuperated from the heart attack he suffered just before our class reunion. He is now back at work, but living at a little slower pace.

Mary Jane Young vacationed in August touring many cities of Colonial America. Since retiring, she does temporary work for Legal Secretaries and on Fridays does volunteer work at the Smithsonian.

Congratulations to Harriet Tyler Martin who received her master's degree from Fairfield University (Conn.). Harriet (who left college to get married) and Paul celebrated their forty-third anniversary this summer. Harriet was one of the first women to go back to college and finish after her family started growing up. Now she has her master's degree and plans to teach another year, though Paul is retired. They enjoyed a trip to Costa Rica in April.

Betty Coshey Linhart was on a Scandinavian tour the end of May, so missed the reunion. She reports four children and five grandchildren, good health and good friends.

We heard from Anne McCullough Frey, Ruth Miller Allen and Jean Worthington McAfee who had no special news.

Thanks to all of you who sent contributions. The class treasury is in much better shape.

Sally reporting:

I am sure we all sympathize deeply with Harriet Bannatyne Moelmann in the sudden death of her husband John on August 8th at their summer home in Lake Geneva, Wisconsin. Their three children are a great comfort, as she does her best to carry on.

Helen Brown Buchanan reported that she and Jim are really enjoying their semi-retirement, making use of a truck camper belonging to son Jim.

September of last year they toured the country stopping to see son Bill in Colorado and daughter Nancy in New Mexico. Christmas, New Year's, Helen's birthday were spent in Germany with Jim, who now resides in San Antonio, Texas, destination of another trip. Helen advocates camping as a great way to travel.

Mary Virginia Brown Bowden and Bill are hard at work at New York Life and A. T. & T., respectively. Last spring Mary Virginia was promoted to Assistant Vice President. They had a great vacation in July in Europe visiting old haunts and seeing friends. While in London they shared their home with some of the Greeks who had fled Cyprus, including Makarios and King Constantine.

Joan Dodds Shrader took a few moments during preparation for an Ocean City vacation, the first since the children were out of school when the whole family would be together, to mention that the biggest job right now is Chairman of the Group Advisory Committee for the new Harmarville Rehabilitation Center.

Frances Ferguson O'Callaghan reported that she finally made it to the grandparent status when her son Bob and his wife had a little darling on June 1. Fran is now living in the beautiful Blue Ridge Mountains and invites guests who may be interested in a quiet mountain retreat with trout fishing and gem hunting.

The big news from Ruth Frost was that after years of teaching she has retired. Still active in church work she does not know how much she misses teaching, but hopes that friends who have retired are correct in saying that she will enjoy her freedom.

Jane Griffith Potter reported that the big news in their family was the marriage of daughter Susan Mark Bayless in St. Louis on May 25th. They will be living there where Mark is a candidate for a doctorate in economics at Washington University.

Nancy Henderson O'Dell noted that the Pennsylvania 1976 celebration will also be our 40th reunion year and felt that we must have a reunion of the class of 1936.

Elizabeth Kirkpatrick Hotchkiss wrote that her husband Lew retired this year, Libby still manages a country clothes shop in Woodbury, daughter L. married and lives in Saint Thomas where she teaches in the elementary school, daughter Sally lives in Denver where she works as secretary for a doctor and daughter Eleanor graduated last year from Mount Holyoke and has spent one year in Cambridge, England, where she will finish her work this coming year. Libby hopes to be able to attend her graduation.

Charlotte Ley Glover wished to extend greetings to everyone, although she had no news to report since the last Recorder.

Bob and I with son Bill, who had just graduated from Waynesburg College, enjoyed a two-week vacation in Florida, in June. Bob is now Chairman of the Religion & Philosophy Department at the College, still work for Welfare, and Bob, Jr., is a technical editor at Boeing in Philadelphia.

Katrina reporting:

Sana Mouromseff writes from Reading, Pennsylvania where she is still working in a bank. She had a trip to Reno, Nevada to visit friends last summer and enjoyed seeing that part of the West.

Jane Unger Raaflaub attended reunion this year seeing old friends from '34 and '39, and hearing from others who had been in school before and during those "good old P.C.W. days." Jane was impressed by the marvelous changes on the Chatham campus.

Ruth Simpson Woolford reports becoming grandmother for the fifth time! Judy has three and Nancy has two boys. Son Sam is in his second year at Purdue with a teaching fellowship. Ruth is still working and enjoying it.

Betty Saffer is enjoying her new apartment and a trip to Greece in May. This summer she was again on a cruise up the east coast from New York on a Russian ship called "Pushkin." Liz says the main attraction is the contrast between the Soviet idea of entertainment and ours. She recommended Agnes Ralston reports that last year's class reunion brought Ruth Rosen Hartz and Agnes together after a number of years going their separate ways.

They found that they both played tennis and now have a regular game schedule. Agnes sends best wishes to all.

A nice letter from Carol Pfordt Davis — She is fine and enjoying having daughter Bunny nearby. Carol's other daughter, recently widowed, lives in Wayne, Pennsylvania and crosses paths with Ruth Simpson Woolford who lives nearby.

Doris Pierce is still enjoying life in Ft. Lauderdale. I chatted with her in March from Palm Beach and had a chance to catch up with Doris's activities and travels. My youngest son Peter was graduated from University of Connecticut and is taking a year off in Colorado before law school.

All seven (out of the twenty-nine on my list!) who replied send greetings to all!

Mildred reporting:

Kay Arnold Dague, in addition to being secretary to the Chairman of the Science Division at Siena College, is trying her hand at college again this year. This time it's business — a course in accounting.

Both Mary Baldwin and Lois Kramer Boyd wrote of the great "P.C.W." reunion they enjoyed at Hilton Head, S.C. in June with Sally Anderson Amtsberg, Julie Weller Gump, Betty Slocum Haldeman, Doris Chatto Kimball, Lois Hazeltime Moses, Nancy Diven Seagren and Betty McCarthy Boyd. Mary loves her retired state and Lois reports that she and Bob are enjoying early retirement and planning to move to the area of Beauford, S.C. eventually.

In the last four months Marjorie Chubb Randall and John have welcomed two new daughters-in-law to the family. One from Colombia and one from Chile. Marj is wishing she had studied harder during those two years of Spanish classes at Chatham.

Elizabeth Coates Elliott and her sister had a Canadian vacation this summer which included a bus trip through the spectacular Canadian Rockies.

Mary Deemer Nagel is engrossed in her work as president of the Pittsburgh Presbyterial but also found time for two "glorious" weeks in Spain with her husband.

Helen Finkel Eger had a beautiful holiday in Nova Scotia with daughter Terry and her husband. Her son Jan, following in his mother's footsteps, is teaching English in Japan.

Florence Gibbs Momeyer refutes the widely-held opinion that life in Hawaii is all fun and leisure by continuing her work as state-wide director of the Association for Retarded Children.

Helen Griffith Wright and George are reveling in the joys of being grandparents! Son David and his wife are parents of a baby boy.

After the wedding of her eldest daughter on May 4th, Hespie Godlove Gillette gave herself a treat by returning to Pittsburgh to celebrate her birthday and attending the annual Reunion Day at Chatham.

Dorothy Hauk Bryen and husband Jimmy are looking forward to his retirement this fall and are in the process of building a new home at Hilton Head, S.C.

The class extends its sympathy to Gay Hays Arensberg on the death of her mother in August.

Helen Johnson Montgomery, with the blessings of the schoolboard, will be taking two weeks away from her teaching late in September so she and Ward can visit their daughter, Susan, in England.

The summer has meant major surgery for Dorothy Kirkland Bauml but she expects to resume her work at Penn State this fall.

Ruth Kleitz Buel and Bob are enjoying their Airstream trailer this year. They used it for trips to Myrtle Beach, S.C. and to Florida as well as weekly week-end jaunts. Ruth also enjoys a monthly Chatham luncheon with Edith Thompson, Letitia Andre, Lorine White and Mary Leroy.

Lee and I are having a busy year. Daughter Claire was graduated from the University of Connecticut on May 12th and married to Lee Darling on May 19th. On June 27th we moved back to our hometown of Johnstown, Pa. In November we'll be going to California for Thanksgiving with our daughter Shirley and her husband. My thanks to all of you for responding to my cards. It's fun to get reacquainted with you again!

Beatrice Lynch Conn married Dr. William Conn from Greensburg, Pennsylvania, and is enjoying his three children and six grandchildren. They spent two months in Sarasota and five weeks in the Orient which they loved.

Eleanor Meador Croyle wrote that her husband died last November but she plans to remain in Texas. All three of her children are married and not too far away. She spent a weekend with Ginny Mencken Morrison in Lancaster this summer.

Sarah Reese Warrick reports "All is well and hello to all '38ers". She was sorry to have missed the 35th reunion but hopes to make it to the 40th in 1978.

Janet Riddle Brinker vacationed in Ogunquit, Maine. She has changed jobs and is now Librarian at Liverpool High School (near Syracuse), New York. So with a 125 year old house, two Boxer dogs and a husband, she manages to keep active.

Phyllis Schaeffer Geffel writes of most delightful memories of PCW. Her daughter teaches school in an Eskimo village north of the Arctic. Her youngest is a torpedoman on a submarine out of Hawaii. The older boy is working in Seattle and her husband is in Arkansas. She is an administrative assistant for an engineering firm.

Mary Margaret Schmitt had just returned from attending the 21st Annual Pennsylvania Health Conference in Pittsburgh. The past year has proved to be a very busy year for her. Florence Shields Kevan writes that her son, Jimmy is now married and lives only ten minutes away from them. Virginia Leaman Cummings had planned to visit them this summer but was unable to make it.

Elizabeth Slocum Haldeman writes that "we have always kept our ties — business and community — in the same area of Pittsburgh" which makes them feel fortunate in the associations of other Chatham alumnae who have stayed in that vicinity. Her three children are finished with school, two of them living near by; the third, with her husband and two babies are now in Cheyenne, Wyoming. She feels that Chatham has been a school able to adapt to current needs and should remain an influence in the world.

Helen Thomas Nevin spent a relaxing summer gardening and doing volunteer work with Meals on Wheels. "Best to all". Edith Thompson has nothing new and unusual to report. She attended the Pittsburgh Symphony Pop Concerts and talked with Helen Finkel Eger.

I had a busy spring and summer — our daughter, Barb, graduated from Purdue in May, was married in June, and then moved to Los Angeles in July. After all this activity, Ralph and I went to Hawaii on a grand vacation. Suddenly it is too quiet.

Jean Watson Williams (Mrs. John S.), 150 Erica Road, Mill Valley, CA 94941

Jean Aungst Talbot has had two sad and difficult years with moving both sets of parents to nursing homes. Then after Thanksgiving 1973 her husband Howard died. Jean, the Class offers you our sincere sympathy. At the moment Jean is doing a bit of traveling and what with visiting her family, church work and helping friends build a house, she keeps busy.

Paul and Elinor Bissell Offill have brought her parents to live with them on the Cape with the concurrent adjustments to be made.

The status quo for the senior Pattons with Jean (Burry) still substitute teaching and Sam with Research Corporation. However, Laura, a Syracuse U. graduate, will attend Montessori International School in Washington, D.C.; Leslie is nursing in Fairfax, Va.; Rick finished his master's and goes to Johns Hopkins now to work on his Ph.D.

Helen Cheng Cheang came to U.S. in the summer of 1973 but her daughter Mary Wenke became ill so much of their time was spent caring for her. She is a senior at N.Y.U. in Albany. Their youngest daughter, Alice Wonchuen is a junior at Yale and John is still in high school. From this country Helen (also husband and son) went to England to visit their oldest child, Elizabeth and to meet the first grandchild. Then on to Vienna to visit her own sister, Betty, and travel and sight-see in France and Germany for five weeks. Barry and Peggy Christy Graham also maintain the status quo and their children move about. Anne and her family live in Michigan; Keith and her husband are teaching in an embassy-sponsored school in Djakarta, Indonesia; Sarah, says Peggy happily, has brought their youngest grandchild to within ten miles of them; Barrie, Jr. and his wife live in Ohio.

Nancyann Cockerille Gleichert says they are moving to Ann Arbor, Mich. where Jim will be with Parke-Davis. Gregg and his wife gave them a granddaughter in December and daughter Ann is teaching at U. of Oregon.

We are sorry to hear that Betty Crawford Colbert lost her father in December. She says she has been clearing out the family homestead — going back to 1898 — of all of its treasures.

Two Christmases ago the Nelsons (Fay Cumber) spent in Greece with their daughter Elaine and her husband. Fay says with relief that the young folks are stationed in Kansas now.

Peg Dunseath Wilson still finds her work at the Henry C. Frick Educational Commission stimulating. She adds that she went to a Pirate game with Rachel Kirk Bobo and enjoyed a gabfest and a victory.

Eleanor Gangloff Morris reports her son is a senior in high school, her father is hale and hearty at 88 and still loves being an active physician.

Jean Geiselhart Seifert says that their daughter, Nancy, will enter college this fall to study speech pathology and audiology. We are sad to hear that her sister Edna died last January.

The Skillmans, Audrey and Paul, left Pittsburgh upon Paul's retirement and took up temporary residence with Priscilla until they decide what to do next. At the time of writing they were visiting kinfolk and relaxing in Maine. Audrey says, "I won a nice prize and award for a painting I submitted to an International Art Contest in Scotland, First Prize." She says she hasn't received the money as yet but has spent it several times.

Caddie Lou Kinzer Trapp and Charlie don't travel too far for too long now since her parents are in a nursing home near them. They did spend March in Arizona and California and think that life is treating them well.

"What a busy year!" says Pat Krause Kosco. One out of college, 3 going this fall and one a sophomore in high school. They've done a lot of work on their house and she had major surgery in January. She considers both the above as remodeling.

Helen Lohr Wright's husband, Jack, has been ill since last October. On the bright side, however, their son and his family have moved to Greensburg — "Free phones 'n' all."

Ada Lee Mangum Clark says, "Had a wonderful summer. Took a seven week trip West, saw all the sights, visited my sister in Colorado, even hiked in the mountains — at my age!" Hey now, Ada Lee — that's our age too — it's not so old — or is it?

Ruth Mengel Roosa says that her second grandson is just as darling as the first one and a new arrival.

At a Presbytery meeting Ruth Fite Kerr and Meo Ostergard Lutz had a surprise reunion. Meo reports that Helen Archer Fardig '39 also lives in Camillus. Meanwhile she keeps busy with church, working with her literary students and playing golf. They love the country and their way of life.

"PS — Patterson Says" is the name of the financial investor's letter that Tom and Nancy Wilson Patterson are working very hard to put out weekly. She says it takes time and patience but that it's growing. Of the children — Betsy is married and in California; Dr. Tommy is in Tennessee and Laurie is in college.

Kay Rutter Hingeley tells us that their son has finished his first year of Law School at University of Virginia and that she and Jim spent a relaxing vacation in Ocean City, Md.

"Have sold home and moving to an apartment," says Mary Lou Shoemaker Hockensmith. She says also that she still goes to the plant for a few hours each day and is studying Key Punch. Frank has a job on probation in the hotel-motel management field.

Alaska makes the 50th state that Frances Shoup Brant and Robert will visit. They will go up the Inside Passage by boat, travel around, then they hope to rent a car and drive down the Pacific Coast.

Cay Thompson Mitchell seems to think that she and Loyal do the same thing year by year. She plays the organ in church and chairs a Butler County Garden Market. She has also renewed an interest in music composition. Two of their sons are at home and going to Community College. Three sons are married and they have two granddaughters. Her niece, Terry Thompson, is a freshman at Chatham.

The return to Mill Valley is the fourth move in three years for Jean Watson Williams. "We suspect John has become sort of expert on his phase of the Rapid Transit business." Therefore, he will commute to Washington, D.C. and South America. Daughter Anne is trying to get into veterinary school, Sue is at Simon Frazier, B.C., Martha at U. of Berkeley and David at Unemployment!" Too old to be a lady of leisure, appalled at teaching third grade again, she thinks she will write a book about Washington since all such books seem to sell well.

Dean and Mary Wolff Gamble had a "true" vacation in Hawaii this summer and she is now back at work at University of Maryland.

Eleanor Hackett went to San Clemente this summer to visit. She remains active in the Gaelic Arts Society of Pittsburgh and the healing ministry.

Nursing remains interesting and challenging to Possey Martin and, she feels, always changing. Her leisure is spent in a small house with a large patio not far from San Francisco. They've bought a lot in Paradise Pines in northern California — perhaps for a retirement spot.

We offer our sympathy to Nelle Richards Offutt on the death of her husband. Nelle says their children are scattered all over the country — 2 in California, 2 in Pennsylvania, 1 in Florida and the youngest is a sophomore at Purdue.

Being a Gray Lady, a member of the Stroudsburg Women's Club and a Garden Club are Virginia Stahl Walker's activities aside from her crafts work.

Rachel Kirk Bobo and Nancy Over Bowdler both send greetings.

From your secretaries: Jean says that she has her first grandchild. She is currently President of the Auxiliary of Ward Home for Children and is enjoying it. And she likes going to the Chatham Alumnae Group in Mt. Lebanon. I know you all join me in thanking her for sending out the cards as she thanks you who helped replenish our class fund. Many of you have said that you looked forward to the Recorder news and I must say it's been pleasant for us to hear from all of you. We will figure something out for our thirty-fifth and you'll be hearing from us and Chatham about that later. And I, Marianne, sign off with my love.

Florence Succop Klotz (Mrs. John W.), 5 Seminary Terrace No., St. Louis, MO 63105

Janet reporting:

We all extend sympathy to the family of Jean Faris Watt, whose death was reported in the last Recorder.

Lost — Can anyone give us an address for Dorothy Andrews Phillips? She never hears from us because we never hear from her. Help!

Mocky Anderson reports that she got from coast to coast in her sabbatical year. In Sarasota, Florida she had a chance to contact Betsy Colbaugh Mahaffey and Betty Anne Baker Patterson and tell them that they are neighbors. Betty Anne writes that she has a third granddaughter and that she saw Jane Campbell Fair in Florida last winter.

Ethel Herrod Blackburn is working fulltime for the Grosse Pointe Board of Education while her husband is enjoying retirement. Can he cook, Ethel? Her daughter, Nancy (class of '72) has just returned after two years in Germany and her son was married on Nantucket.

A trip to her son's wedding in Amsterdam was a high point this year for Jean Burchinal Purvis. In between keeping track of her children's far flung activities, Jean keeps busy with the School Board, community activities and a bit of golf and tennis.

Jane Chantler, also reporting from Butler, not only works in the travel business; she lives it! This year she hit Seattle, Portland, Spokane, Norfolk, Williamsburg, Boston and Daytona. When do you work Jane?

Sunny Croft Armstrong is working part time now that the children are grown. Tom and Sunny are still horse fanciers and love showing them as well as riding them.

GINNY CROUCH EVERETT writes that they are back in Milwaukee and that her oldest daughter and her husband are living in Pittsburgh where Lynne is finishing her last two years at Chatham after a seven year break.

Ruth Demmler Benner is still teaching nursery school after enjoying her summer and Nancy Scott Ralston says 'Hi' — she's still at the lake enjoying hers!

When the news came in that Anne Driver Toumey is busy preparing for the International Convention for the American Rock Garden Society in the spring of 1975, I decided that things are too fast out there in Wexford. We haven't yet done spring cleaning for the spring of 1973!

Betty Gahagen Lindsay's family is growing nicely. She has only two left at home but most of them are near enough to have lots of chances for the Lindsays to be with their ten grandchildren. Ten!!!

Washington is an exciting place this year and Margaret Hibbs Keller's office is in the same building as the Special Prosecutor's. She sees all the Watergate group going by. Her husband has retired and is now so busy he has no time for golf.

Phyllis Keister Semple reports that her daughter Carol won the British Amateur Golf Tournament in Wales in June and Cherry became the third generation to graduate from Chatham. Did you all Phyllis and family in the Rotogravure?

Mary Elizabeth Rope LaHue and Roy are a couple of old salts now and have just acquired another boat. She is painting and teaching English. Mexican Americans now that the last two are in college.

As for me, Janet, I keep busy. We still have at home, one in Penn State, and two married. I have two granddaughters whom we adore. I ran tax collector in Forest Hills and won and I am in charge of catering for my Women's Club which means I put on a wedding about once a month. I have two completely divergent activities but I enjoy them both.

Alice reporting:

Joan Myers Rankin has been keeping young people working as Director of Christian Education at United Presbyterian Church in Hickory, Pennsylvania. She has been busy all summer camping with young people and teaching. Jay has finished medical technology course, Jamie continues music major at Wheaton College, and Paul is a junior in high school.

Helen Shellkopf Cline was just about to leave California when we heard from her. She planned to spend a week with her daughter Karen and her husband Denny and another week visiting friends relaxing. Son Tom is in his junior year at Denison University. She and Harold played some golf some summer between the raindrops.

Jane McClung Sincell loves St. Louis and now has a job with a private school very similar to the one she had in Winnetka. Her daughter and son-in-law live close by; her son and daughter-in-law live in Chicago. She was saddened to hear of the death of Jean Faris Watt (as we all were), and wondered if anyone ever hears from Ginny Speer Baldwin.

Betty Steffler Baker now has two grandchildren. Her daughter Cathy and husband Bruce have returned to Coshocton, where Bruce is working as a computer analyst. Richard, Jr., is still in Columbus as managing editor of Ohio Schools Magazine. Dorothy is ever busy in calendars; and, in the off-season, yearbooks.

Claire Stewart Burkhart writes that she and her husband are already talking about retirement plans and she is still remembering PCW things as if they were only yesterday. Sometimes it all seems long and far away. She took some friends to see Cassius performance of Private Lives at Chatham this summer.

Florence Succop Klotz's move on July 4 from Fort Wayne to St. Louis and the resulting adjustments overshadow any other activities that have gone on in her family this year. John is Dean of Academic Affairs at Concordia Seminary, and they are very happy with their home, their neighbors, and their work in the church.

Sally Thomas Elling and her husband Ron are just planning retirement — they've taken the first step. We send our sympathy to Sally over the death of her mother in March. Patty was married in November, and Ronnie graduated from college in December. Sally is now catching her breath, doing nothing and loving it.

Dorothy Vale Robert's husband Cecil has another patent at Anchor Hocking in Lancaster, Ohio. Patty enrolled in graduate school at OSU, Heather is a sophomore at Chatham, and Dorothy is teaching second grade.

Marjorie Wood Yearick is sighing with relief that their five are finally all through college and on their own. She shudders to think one year today covers several times what her whole education covered. Daughter Peggy is in Finland visiting her relatives.

As for this reporter — Aside from working Meals On Wheels at our church, I mostly do housewifely things. We still have a lot of education ahead of us. In October Bob, Jr., will go to Oxford for graduate work, Connie is a junior at Chatham and Jon is a freshman at Westminster.

Deaths

We extend deepest sympathy to the families of:
Barbara Caldwell Blackburn who died June 19,
1974, Betty Johnescu Steenberg who died
October 10, 1973

Ruth reporting:

Jean Bacon Smith writes from Aspen that she and her family are in a new house and continue to enjoy Aspen's terrific climate. Eric (12) enters seventh grade and is a whiz at skiing. Ingrid (9) goes into fourth grade and has qualified for the state finals in swimming. The family took in Expo 74 and visited Yellowstone. Knut works for the Post Office.

Norma Bailey McLean's son enters Carnegie Mellon this fall and daughter Nancy (eleventh grade) is taking ballet lessons at Chatham.

Gladys Bistline Belz says her daughter is a student at Radford College and her son is entering V.P.I. They seem to prefer Virginia to their native Maryland. Gladys continues to be a piano teacher part of the time and a housewife and gardener the rest of the time. She and Paul have an empty nest this fall.

Joan Bowdler Turnbull finds the Russian language fascinating and sometime in the future she and Richard hope to visit Russia and all its mysteries.
Until then travels will be closer to home.

Peg Craig Murray attended our class's thirtieth reunion and wishes more had been there. She visited Texas for the wedding of Agnes Conner Davis' son.

Jeanne DeHaven Uhl loves living in Morgantown, West Virginia and is working on her Master in Clinical Nutrition at West Virginia University. She and John, who is with Rockwell International, are “up to their ears” in landscaping and decorating their new home. Twins Kevin and Wayne, age fourteen, are at home and the rest of Jeanne's family come and go. Jeanne would like to hear from any alumnae living in West Virginia.

Evelyn Fulton writes from Denver where she is the Stewardship Consultant for the Synod of the Rocky Mountains of the Presbyterian Church. Her job is to interpret the mission of the church, to help local congregations set up stewardship campaigns, and to set up a communication system with the Synod. She hopes Chatham alumnae will visit her when in Denver.

Jane Humphreys Agriesti is a full-time RN at the Johnson City Mental Health Center and works with group therapy. Her six children range in careers from approaching medical school to approaching ninth grade. What spare time Jane has is spent decorating their new home which they moved into in October, 1973.

LuAnn Isham Staley writes that her eldest is at Columbia working on his Master of Business Administration. Second son is studying at the Sorbonne. Two daughters, one in high school, the other at Iowa University, are full of plans. LuAnn and Al had a busy trip to Europe in May and are looking forward to a cruise. When not traveling LuAnn is busy in real estate.

Patty Leonard Bodle is enjoying her new home which she describes as a casual, rustic, smallish abode near a big, swimmable pond and just far enough from High Point to be country. Daughter Trish is a senior art major at St. Andrews College and Bob Jr. ceased copy writing temporarily to back pack in Colorado this summer. Bob and she continue their love of tennis and Patty is ever at some art project.

Ruth Lynch McFarland has a busy family. Son Fred graduated from the seminary and took part in the weddings of his two brothers who married sisters. The two brothers graduate from medical school and college this year. Sister Lois, who was a bridesmaid at both weddings, graduates from high school. The weddings were seventeen hours apart and required careful planning. Ruth writes that Bob inspects nuclear reactors in the construction stage in the Southeast and she travels with him on short trips. Together they are advisors for a young mar-rieds' Sunday school class which “keeps them young”.

Ruth Laird Grant regrets that her debut as a class correspondent isn't a smashing success. She sent out thirty-three cards and eleven were returned. Also made a plea for cash donations to the class treasury which showed the magnificent sum of $19.13. Ah, well. Nowhere to go but up. The Grants are fine.
They have their health, which “is just about everything.”

Ann reporting:

Mickey McCullough Lohmeyer and Paul had a great vacation for a month, most of which was spent in Scandinavia. The trip was built around some business for Paul, with a week in Prague. Mickey is still working as an administrator for the Merce Cunningham Dance Company in Greenwich Village, and “loving it much”.

Betty Monroe Musselman says she's still busy even with their children in college. Peggy is in her sixth year at the University of Virginia, and son Paul is in his third year at Wittenberg University. Last year they spent some time in Mexico, and the spring in Puerto Rico.

Mary Lou Reiber Peter had a trying year with a severe illness, but made a splendid recovery in time to go with Emile to Europe, with their boys, for five weeks. They met Eta and brother Paul in London, and then visited them in Geneva, where they live.
They looked up old family homesteads in Germany.

Helen Smith submits: “My tooth X-rays have been a showpiece during dental talk-shop sessions, my dentist tells me. I'm Queen of Root Canals, and some of my molar crowns are supported by an extraordinary number of posts — a source of pride to my dentist, and occasional economic crunch to me. Our conversations are, by necessity, characterized by long and frequent pauses, and consequently each sentence is thought out, honed to essentials, and pregnant with material for further pondering. At our last session, he told me he had been asked to speak at his 25th high school reunion, and wondered what commonality there might be now in such an assorted group. After an irrigation and expectation, I said, “Tragedy”. Thence, our interchange went like this:
“But recovery, too.” “And change.” “Adjustment.”
“Lots of adjustment.” “Some resignation.”
“Humor.” “Humor is a balm.” “B-a-l-m or B-o-m-b?” “After 25 years, either.” “After 50, both.”

Marion Springer Edmunds sends condolences as an ex-secretary who was also distressed by so few replies. Son David will be returning for his sophomore year at Dickinson, and Lindsay is going back to Penn State. She received her M.A. in June. Marion is still working at the Pittsburgh Energy Research Center.

Nancy Stauffer Grantham has had a busy year.
They added three rooms and a bath to accommodate her parents and Joe's father, who are now semi-invalids. She keeps everyone comfortable and content while holding down a full-time job. Daughter Dana now has her own apartment with two cats whom she supports by working as a court reporter. Their son expects to enter law school next month. “I keep waiting for that restful easy time when we can quit trying so hard, but haven't reached it yet.”

Ann reporting: We had a rather drab year. My mother got her fourth heart pacemaker, and runs at high gear (she's only 81); My father is 83, and comes over to do our tree and bush pruning! Ann's still in California, very busy with seminary and a church job; Christine holds down two jobs and manages her own household; Jim is going into the field of hospital administration; Laura just entered Indiana State as a home economics major (when you have a kid who can make sports coats and souffles, already

I wonder who's teaching whom). Julie complains, “All you ever say about me is ‘she's fine’”. True.
But, she is now a liberated woman; got her driver's license and is debating between the fields of nursing and journalism. When I planned this family of six, I was quite prepared to give birth, but there are several things I did not anticipate: (1) teaching them all to drive, (2) the fact that they would have friends, (3) houseguests to the point that I had ended up on the couch, Nick has his usual peccadilloes; he went to Oregon, then walked 14 miles into the Wind River range to climb a glacier in Wyoming, was missing for eight hours in Lake Erie in a storm, and is planning to walk the Appalachian Trail soon, I hold the fort.

I was sorry there were so few at the class reunion;
we had a lot of reminiscences. And it was our last chance to see Barb Blackburn, she was as beautiful as ever.

Lucy reporting:

Susan Campbell McConnell has just returned from a six-week exchange pastorate in Bournemouth, England. Her oldest son is a Presbyterian minister like his father and second son is studying to be one. The other two boys are still in school.

Harriet Hoffman reports that she will be teaching 6th grade instead of 5th when she gets her blood pressure from going up and down. She also reports that she is the Regent of the Bushy Run Chapter of the Daughters of the American Colonists.

Helen Hunter White reports that she is a computer operator handling Broadway theaters, concerts, sporting events, etc. She has now put her last daughter in college and went to Cape Cod for vacation. Miriam Egger Hosack reports that her son, Kenneth, graduated from Tufts, magna cum laude.
She spent some weekends with Peggy Riffle Kirby and her husband and vacationed in northern Quebec, camping and fishing.

Talk about being busy — Betty Beck Wiedenman has had surgery last fall, has a daughter getting married, other daughter and son graduated from college, and husband Bob was incredibly lucky in walking away from being hit by a train and having the car demolished.

Jane Field Taylor is still enjoying Naples but is looking forward to coming home in 1975.

Nancy Means Hudson says she has had a very quiet year with only one child at home, spent most of her weekends at the lake and played lots of golf this summer. Margaret McKee Barnes has moved back to Pittsburgh and is doing volunteer work in the local library and YWCA (where Janet Ross '43 is in charge). The family has also moved into their new summer home on Martha's Vineyard.

Agnes Filippelli Walsh and Eva Caloyer Nassikas report that all children are now in college. Eva has a daughter married and another at Chatham.

Lucy Sprigg Dorsey can't say no and is now the State Registrar of the Florida State Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution as well as State Treasurer of the Colonial Dames of the XVII

Century, Florida Society. I did not hear from a lot of you — I hope that you have some news to report next year.

Doris reporting:

Midge Kovacs Rubenstein just returned from an enjoyable London vacation. She visited Millie Corman Feinberg this summer in New York and plays bridge with Ruth Zucker Bachman.

Two of Linnea Lundstedt Evans' children are married and Rich graduated with high honors from Michigan State University this spring and is doing graduate work at the University of Connecticut.

Evie Matthews Reece, acting as the Reece travel agent, planned a delightful three weeks bumming around four Hawaiian Islands on their cruiser last November. Younger son, Dale, has just become engaged.

Marge Mistrik Sweeney had a relaxing month at Ocean City this summer. Her "baby" will be a first grader and the older starts high school. With all the activities of the offspring Marge has applied for membership in the chauffeurs' union.

Helen Louise Myers Duerring and Burt celebrated their 25th anniversary with a Caribbean cruise last spring. Another cruise is planned with her mother in October.

Flo Ostien Chew and four children (10-17) drove to Florida and the West Coast this spring, plus several trips to Pittsburgh to visit Flo's brother and sister.

Sally Parker Herrup had an unexpected visit with Ruth Teplitz Goodman and her family. Mark is a junior in high school. David is a sophomore at the University of Chicago. Paul graduated from the University of Chicago in June and has been working on an oil tanker on the Great Lakes.

Helen Parkinson Gambridge's family vacationed at Ocean City this summer. Don started his sophomore year at Duquesne. David is teaching English at Canon-McMillan High School, where he is assistant basketball coach, and is doing graduate work at Duquesne.

Jean Purvis Bowman reports a peaceful year and asks for a plug of free advertising for her son-in-law's new restaurant, "The Firehouse," in downtown Cleveland. Jean's daughter is in school in Kentucky while the younger son-in-law is in Alaska in the Army. Jean invites any '46er to fill her empty beds if traveling anywhere near Syracuse.

Mariellen Roche DuVal and daughter, Dale, had three weeks in England and Scotland this July with their Senior Girl Scout Troop. Son Tom graduated from the University of Michigan with honors in May. In July, Gene officially launched his new business — Synthetics Lubricants, Inc. Good luck, Gene!

Betsy Ross Pervorse has been teaching at Sawyer Business College for nine years. Donna is married and has a little boy, Chris. Dan is starting his first year of college and John and Ginger are in high school.

Doris Rowand Schroth and Chuck are working at the Tenth Presbyterian Church in Philadelphia. Chuck is Business Manager and Doris is Co-ordinator of International Students. They visited one daughter in Elkhorn, Wisconsin, one in Boston, and a son in Springfield, Massachusetts.

Grace Savage Freeble's son is now on his residency in Cardiology in Jacksonville. Beth graduated in June from the Medical College of Georgia — School of Allied Health Sciences and is planning a December wedding. Good to hear that Chuck has been in pretty good health this year. Grace still helps in his office.

Emily Sawders Laisy has been busy fund raising for the Baltimore Museum of Art, working on the Zoo Board and the Victorian Society Board. She is also taking accounting courses at Hopkins and about to embark on raising poodles since the children are practically raised.

Jane Sinewe Moffatt is still teaching 7th and 8th grades. She had a very relaxing vacation at Stone Harbor and then a hectic one to Italy. June wrote that she needed another rest but school is starting.

Betty Sossong Gretzler is active in AAUW and Fayette Toastmistress. Daughter Betty Ann is in California; son Walter is attending Texas Tech and son Bob is attending Penn State Fayette Campus.

Ruth Teplitz Goodman "retired" from the Hecht

Company in May when the advertising offices were moved to Washington. She has been taking jewelry courses for the past two years, including some at Maryland Institute. She works in sterling.

Carol Thorne King has three empty bedrooms calling for class of '46 visitors. Raffy is at Princeton (having sung all over Europe with the Glee Club). Louise was a camp counselor and is now a freshman at Bucknell. Thorne is a sophomore at Bucknell. Andy (14) is home. Jan Bovard Poole and Charles visited them this summer.

Joan Titus Dunlop and Dick traveled to England and Scotland this fall and last spring. They visited Dunlop, now in the Nation Trust, that was the ancestral home. Joan had a few of her pix in Dick's Outdoor Recreation Guide which came out for Rand McNally this May. Daughter Nancy was married in June to an archaeologist and lives in Quebec City where her husband is in charge of a "dig" in the Place Royale.

Ginny Uber Haug has 5 grandchildren now. Daughter Cheryl's husband is starting a three-year residency in pediatrics. Pam graduated magna cum laude and Phi Beta Kappa, spent 3 months in Peru and is now a graduate student in physical therapy. Son Leigh was married.

GINNA VAN KIRK HILBORN hopes to get to Pittsburgh for a reunion some day. Daughter Ellen is in graduate school. Ginna reports that Ellis and she are "the same — except older."

JINNY VOGT McDERMOTT is feeling better after two poor years with several operations. Glad you are feeling better, Jinny. Oldest son Jack was married last August. Anne and Ken are still students and Jinny is working "half-time."

"All's well," writes Barbara Work Coleman.

Marty Yorkin Berman is back to work after a great vacation in Massachusetts. Diane finished law school in June and is an Assistant District Attorney. Linda goes into her third year at med school. Marty keeps up with her piano and is active on the State Mental Health Association Committee.

Peg Riffle Kirby enjoys New Jersey and is going to teach again ("see how Jersey kids compare with Ohio kids"). Sons are still back in Akron.

This secretary, Doris Sisler White, saw Margery Himes this summer while in Kittanning. Daughter Diana graduated from Roanoke College and is now a Bank Manager Trainee for First Virginia Bank.

Suzy reporting:

Since there always seems to be "good news and bad news," I'll report the latter first. Both Hilda Fish Bricker and Mary Aiken Brown have had an unhappy year. The same day, last September, that Hilda's father had a heart attack, her mother died. In February of this year, he, too, passed away. Along with working on the estate settlement, there were preparations for the weddings of two of her children.

Her husband, Rick, has been ill and just got out of the hospital. (What a year!) "Aik's" #2 son who killed last September when his car collided with a horse on the open range in Arizona, while returning for his second year at college. She is grateful for three sons and a daughter she and Knox still have. Recently she helped organize "Creative Associates Pittsburgh" — a group dedicated to helping people discover their worthship. She also enjoys working for "Contact," an organization providing a 24-hour teleministry. The class extends sincerest sympathy for all this tragedy in your lives. Knowing you boys as we do, we're sure you "will cope."

One who has coped is Jean Hadfield Smith. This year's Recorder reported the death of her husband. This year she wants everybody to know that life is moving along smoothly for her and her four children. Candie is beginning her sophomore year at Goucher College. Debbie received her master's from Pitt and is working as a program director for United Cerebral Palsy in Pittsburgh. Jean is staying at home to look after her two sons — Fred, a ninth grader and Ted, a third grader. Her days are so full, there are usually not enough hours for everything that needs to be done.

The first returned card, this time, came from Honey Holland Rank out in Texas. She's writing a book — "1890 China Painting," and driving a 1960 Ford willed to her by the teacher who taught her this art. She has gone commercial and sold some of her work. During the summer, she fought burglars, and bills. She's winning!

"Books Afloat and Ashore," a book about reading on naval and merchant ships in the days of sail, published by Shoestring Press this June, was authored by Amy Gage Skallerup's husband Harry. Amy is about to begin work full time for the Department of Legislative Reference and can now get the boxes of file cards out of her kitchen. Their son Tom, having finished a year at Susquehanna University, transferred to the School of Agriculture at the University of Maryland. A daughter Susan will be a high school senior and Janet a ninth grader.

There are some movers in "Group 48." Charlotte "Donnie" Exley Eck and family have been transferred back to the Baltimore area from Huntingdon, W. Va. Donnie has a son Hank in ninth grade and a daughter Mary Liz in kindergarten. Mary Lapsley has a new job title — Training Services Specialist — in the program development department of the United Airlines Training Center, and has a new address in the Chicago area. She, too, enjoyed last year's reunion. Audrey Bigelow Baur is looking for a house in the Philadelphia area after residing in Morristown, N.J. One son, John (9), and his gerbils will move with her and Fred. Their other two sons are in college, one senior at Tulsa University and the other a sophomore at Kent State.

Several from the class went to thirtieth high school class reunions this year. There were mixed emotions. Mary Jane Humbert Upshaw thought classmates all looked better thirty years later than they did in the yearbook pictures. She reports that she and Jack are both in good health, just "poorer" with children in college. They have a daughter at Hollins College in Roanoke, Va. and a son at the University of Virginia. Another son, Chip (11) got the swimming "bug" and even gave up football for swim year round. Dorothy "Lefty" Doolittle Collins enjoyed her reunion. She usually goes every five years. She and Rip are going to Jamaica in October. I, too, attended a class reunion and really had a good time, but advise anyone "not to wait thirty years to renew acquaintances." I wouldn't have recognized half the people if they hadn't worn name tags. What a shock!

Mary Ann Houck Brown saw Betty L'Houck Franks at the Farmer's Market. They hadn't seen each other for twenty years, so had a pleasant chat among the fresh vegetables.

Susy Harton Conklin thinks she's "doing the same thing everybody else is doing." Son Skip transferred to Westminster this year. Nancy graduated from high school and is taking a year off from studies to decide what she wants to do. Husband Chuck is commuting to Shippingport every day from Pittsburgh.

Just back from a vacation in Portugal, Spain, and Morocco are Shirley Lawrence Grasso and husband. She returned to work four years ago and is now a senior claim appraiser for the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. Their son Bill is a high school senior, plays soccer year round, and Andrea is in eighth grade, plays piano, and enjoys Scouts and art work. Shirley is Cadette leader for a Girl Scout troop of forty-five.

Jerry Kimball Wells still works for 4-H. She attended the State Fair at Louisville this year. Her daughter Linda got her master's and son Bob begins Ohio State Law School. Rick is now a college junior and Mike a sophomore.

Marie Cohn Chiles and husband had a trip to Hawaii. Now they are planning a "New England Fall Foliage" pilgrimage. She is still involved with all her favorite projects in Houston, especially the symphony. She feels, however, that her life is calm compared to those of us with families.

Frank Henry Fitch is still struggling with computer scheduling as director of guidance at Avon High School. Their four children are all out of high school. The oldest is a recreation supervisor in Elyria, Ohio. Mary will begin teaching Spanish this year in Windham, Ohio. Dick is working for a hospital supply manufacturer and farming about one hundred fifty acres. Their youngest is beginning an engineering course at Ohio Northern University.

Thank you, Randy Ullom Doig, for answering my inquiry about Dottie Berg Groomes' address. I was sorry to learn that you could not supply it. Can anyone furnish this information? The Alumnae office lists her as lost.

For the past 16 years, I've been teaching home-bound students — children with non-contagious disabilities confined to their homes for a month or more. Every year I usually get three or four such students to teach at the elementary level. To avoid cleaning house all the time, I knitted nine afghans or friends and relatives. Since school began this September I'm back to the commuter teaching again.

Being a class secretary is very rewarding when so many of you take time from your busy schedules to reply. Many thanks. Replies benefit all of us, because many mentioned on their cards that they were looking forward to our news in the Recorder.

Betsy reporting:

I was happy to hear from Lefty Doolittle Collins last September even though she knew it was too late for the Recorder. They had a nice vacation in Acapulco in the spring, and she was looking forward to seeing Amy Gage Skallerup last fall while accompanying Rip on a trip to Annapolis.

Carol Lenz Houck's eldest son, Don Jr., was married last December. Cynthia and Mike have a house in Jacksonville, N. Carolina, where he is a helicopter pilot at Camp LeJeune. Missy is a 17-year old high school senior. Carol and Don were about to depart for a camping trip to Maine and Nova Scotia.

Betty L'Hote Franks' oldest son is attending Wesley College in Dover, Delaware, where he has a one-year Naval Academy Foundation Scholarship, with the intention of making the Academy next year. She and George chaperoned the 250-member Mt. Lebanon Band to Winchester, Virginia, for the Apple Blossom Festival.

Little did Nancy McDonald Sutherland realize twenty years ago that all those babies she had would one day be in college at the same time! They have two sons at Duke University and two daughters at Vanderbilt University (must be a class record!). She's glad they still have three at home.

The biggest event in Ceil McKay Geddis' year was a two-week trip in February to Germany, where daughter Chris is attending the University in Marburg. Gail is a sophomore at William and Mary, while Sue and Amy still keep the home fires burning. Ceil's involved in Garden Club, Friends of the Library, as well as Chatham Alumnae.

Nornie McMillen Morris' house will be quiet this year with eldest son Richard starting his teaching career in Saratoga Springs, New York; Ron a sophomore at Castleton State, Vermont; and Jeff to finish his M.S. in Marine Biology in January. Nornie toured the Chatham campus this summer for the first time in 16 years and found it beautiful! She sent greetings to all.

Henrietta Meyer Garrett wrote that her 9th and 11th grade son and daughter are enthusiastic about their flutes and band. She'll be busy with fund raising, since their marching band will perform in April at Disneyworld.

Grace Migliore Frances works four days a week as a school social worker. She kindly answered my inquiry as to whether we live near one another, which it seems we do.

After three years of teaching German, Bobbie Mueller Baylor has returned to her first love and is teaching high school Chemistry, as well as a course in "English as a second language" at Community College. She also received her M.Ed. in Secondary Education in August. Daughter, Wendy, is a freshman at Indiana University of Pennsylvania and son, Mark, student teaching in Music Education at Brookville, Pennsylvania.

There was no special news from Jane Picard Pursell, who finds she is "just holding her own" this year and looking forward to everyone's news.

Marge Reckard hopes her car troubles are a thing of the past with the purchase of her new red car. Her last one was stolen four times!

Congratulations to Robby Robinson Hastings on becoming a grandmother! Their son, Ed, father of the baby girl, is still attending the University of Wyoming. Robby continues to enjoy editing two visitors' magazines. They spent an evening in June with Randy Ullom Doig, who surprised them by including Jessie Gilbert Chew and Tom.

Randy Ullom Doig's daughter, Sally, is a sophomore in college this year, and Bob a tennis-playing high school sophomore.

Donnie Vail Rea will vacation again this fall in Florida and had a company-filled summer. Their youngest daughter, Joanne, graduated from college and remained in Kentucky to teach Physical Education and Library Science.

We extend sympathy to Joy Wilson Douglas and Bruce on the loss of both their mothers within one month of each other last fall. Joy and Bruce are anticipating a trip to England and Scotland in October and had a skiing vacation with daughter Liz last winter. Son Rob graduated from the University of Maryland in June, and Dick married in August.

Katie Wooldard Meinken reports she is alive, well, and living in the country outside Philadelphia where she works in the Center City. She has recently purchased a condominium which will answer her needs as a single working woman. Finds her work challenging, exciting and loves it!

Ruth Zucker Bachman finds her new career after two years as a Pediatric Nurse Practitioner very exciting. She was recently appointed to the pediatric faculty of the University of Pittsburgh School of Medicine — a real coup for a nurse. Daughter Ann is a junior at Penn State and son David a successful auto mechanic.

To account for the Kuhn family — son, Paul, is a freshman at the State University of New York at Cobleskill studying Agriculture and Nursery Management; David has been in Japan for over a year with the United States Navy; and 7th grader, Janet, to keep the house lively, I'm finishing my fourth year as Secretary of the Stewardship Commission at Church and am also a Deacon and have enjoyed golf with the Ladies' Nine-Hole League this season.

This will be my last recording of class news, as I am resigning from my term as Secretary after two years. Your news has been just wonderful to receive, and it's fun to picture each one of you as the cards arrive. I do thank you for your cooperation.

(Ed. — Will a member of the class of 1948 please volunteer to take Betsy's place as class secretary by sending her name to the Alumnae Office?)

Sally Altmayer Buske wrote that she loves her job as Occupational Specialist at Hallandale High School. Her daughter, Barbara, was married Aug. 31 giving mother a very busy summer! Barbara and her husband are seniors at the University of Florida. They have only their 16 year old son Buz still at home.

Dolores Baney Conley wanted us to especially notice the change of address. They didn't move — the post office gave them a house number after all these years and the post office is now NORTH Huntingdon — not just Huntingdon and not Irwin as it was in the past! Do reports that her husband Duane had open heart surgery consisting of quadruple coronary by-pass. We are all in sympathy with you, Do, and hope and pray that he will be well soon.

Bibs Bassett McMahon reports that Chatham looked great and she was so proud of our old school the weekend her daughter came to take part in the "Prospective Students" week-end. She and Cookie Raspaldo Hulme toured the dorms and library and felt like students again. Daughter Betsy is a freshman at Georgetown University, but with three more daughters in high school she'll try again. Bibs had lunch with Ruth Ryan McLaughlin and Betty Schweider DeBono at Betty's. Ruth's daughter, Ruthellen 17, is at Southampton College with the McMahon's daughter, Kathy, 19. In April Bibs and Jim were hired to help sail at 70 ft. motor-sailer from St. Thomas to New York, 1600 miles of open ocean, with a three-day shore leave in Bermuda halfway. It was the best 2 week paid vacation ever!!

Barbara Black Bloomstrom reports that son John graduated from Ohio State Aug. 30 and President Ford made the commencement address — exciting! John goes on to Business School at Ohio State fall quarter. Karen is a junior at Wittenberg and a cheerleader. Just one left at home — Beth in 10th grade. Barb fills her volunteer hours at the Garden Center of Greater Cincinnati and would like to compare notes with other civic-gardeners.

Mary Bovard Schwartz says that after four years they are still enjoying Florida. Varick is busy with Pratt and Whitney Aircraft engine work and Bo misses teaching math. This year the economics have affected the private schools and there went "Bo's" teaching career! She is still loving the organ work she does at the church. Son Ron begins his sophomore year at the University of Florida.

Lee Corey Hanson's letter expressed my feelings exactly. "I'm saddened to think that after 25 years our classmates have not been able to donate $10 apiece for our class gift. Surely we are not all paupers or married to misers! Surely we all have had ample opportunity to filch enough pennies from our grocery allowances over the years to provide this small sum. Heaven knows, we all find money for cigarettes, magazines, liquor, candy, movies or whatever "vice" we crave. Too bad that giving to our college is not considered a "vice"! That was a direct quote from Lee and I feel that it was very well said. Over the years I have asked, Nay, pleaded, for you to send your donations to me. Thus far only 76 of you have sent anything — even as much as a dollar! There are 135 in our class and this year only $29.00 was added to the Fund. I will accept contributions anytime up to and including the day of our Reunion. But, why wait until then — send them to me now if you are one of the 59 who have not contributed anything as yet. Enough of that — let's move to Lee's news. The Hansons have finally finished the inner decoration of the wing they added to their house and have entertained a string of guests from the East — one being Shirley Ferguson Hall's daughter, Shirley and husband Michael Sullivan.

Jacky Davies Templeton had a hectic "school beginning" week packing off son Bill to Findlay College and daughter Karen to Kenyon. Jeff is a senior at high school and the empty nest syndrome threatens to overwhelm Jacky — if she had a spare moment! Last year the Templeton family took themselves for a family sabbatical in Europe. They spent the month of August on the continent, then crossed to England, where they stayed until December. Best of all the three kids were eager to go with the "old folks" and all could afford a semester from school.

Ruth Fabry sent me a card from Paris this summer. She said she was in London, Dublin and Copenhagen this trip!

Marty Hamilton Strotz had some good news and some bad. First, she definitely plans to be at the Reunion — it's the same time that her daughter Lauren will be graduating from Chatham. Lauren has done very well at Chatham and has loved it — Phi Beta Kappa and president of Mortar Board! #1 son, Chip (23) is working for Koppers; #2 son, Bob (19) is second semester sophomore at Colgate pushing to graduate in 3 years to plunge into law school. Marty keeps battling that empty nest syndrome by teaching oil painting and crafts to suburbia. Marty has been in touch with Ann Craig Lee, who's actually stayed in Pittsburgh all these years; Marilyn Snaman Ludwig who's recently returned there from Houston, Texas and Jinx Neal McCreary, whose daughter is a freshman at Chatham all the way from Mesa, Arizona. Now, her bad news. Husband Don had two coronaries a month apart. He is now looking forward to going back to work. We hope that your husband will be all well very soon.

Merny Hamilton Hess spent a good portion of the summer college-chasing with Lisa (16) — the rest at Bethany Beach, Del. Susu (15) and Jake (12) agree that no one should attend a girls' school as they've been in one "forever."

Nancy Hughes Evans reports that she and John are very much involved with a promotion of a school levy to be resubmitted to their voters in November. They are active also in a new resource center at their church — purchasing equipment, evaluating the many years of accumulated materials, cataloging and preparing for circulation in what they hope will be a good support system for the variety of activities going on in their church. Son Bob is a high school senior and so the college chase is upon them. Daughter Linda has returned to high school as a 10th grade student, determined to keep well and active this year.

Barbara Illig Rahenkamp sent me a card last year too late for publication. They had taken daughter Karen back to Agnes Scott College near Atlanta.

Gail McConnor Mumma reports they are regretfully leaving Europe after almost five years. Harry is going to the Corps of Engineers, Missouri River Division in Omaha, Nebraska for what will probably be his last Army assignment. They stayed in Germany long enough to allow their oldest daughter, Sue, to graduate from the Heidelberg Castle. She'll enter Indiana University of PA this year. All three of the younger children are having one last Scout fling in Europe.

Jinx Neal McCreary talked with Marty Hamilton Strotz about their two Chatham daughters and both hope to make the reunion next year. Jinx is working on a B.F.A. degree at Arizona State in Interior Design and is doing her professional practice (like practice teaching) in a design studio this semester. She is also doing Phoenix Art Museum docent work, finding it both time consuming and rewarding.

Barbara Nevius Beringer wrote too late for publication last year. She writes that she is kept busy with three boys and all their activities. Rick 11th grade, Rob 8th, and Jeff in 5th — all active in sports and school bands. Husband keeps busy with Little League and flying when he can get it in.

Dottie MacPhee Hunter says she can't believe our 25th is coming up! I agree. Cathy is in 10th grade and taking honors courses and Beth is in the 7th grade. Burke dislocated his shoulder and is wondering how long it will be before he will be able to do major surgery again. Dottie is active in the South Miami Hospital Auxiliary and at church.

Lois Mars Mignogna and I have spent some time together this past summer. Rachel is back at Indiana as a sophomore this year and son John is living in San Francisco. Both Dom and Lois have had medical problems this past year but, are on the mend.

Marcia Miller Weiss has been re-married for some time now and her communications have been fouled up since I was sending things to both Marcia Meyers and Marcia Weiss.

Andy Morgan Cascorbi reports that Helmut was "giving" a paper in Munich in May and they went. She now has both girls in school — at last! Kathy in 1st and Alice in 4th. Talked with Cookie Raspaldo Hulme, Phoebe Thorne Birmingham, and Barbara Billette Whitlinger.

Louise Richards Lane reports that she spent two weeks in Colorado this summer — part of the time visiting son Rick, who started at the Air Force Academy July 1. She and her daughter had a pleasant morning visiting Chatham this summer. Maryl is a senior and is considering Chatham's pre-law area major as a possibility. Louise is still teaching kindergarten full time.

Lennie Rothschild Klein keeps busy acting, playing tennis, and doing hospital volunteer work. Son Gary is a junior at Gettysburg College and Ron is a junior in high school, very busy with swimming and tennis competitions.

Marylou Tedesco Naser is still with the Penn Hills School District. She says she is still getting over sending her oldest off to college at Penn State.

Janet Watson Lloyd was another letter I received too late for publication last year. Her oldest son Scott is at Pitt in the Studio Arts Department. Daughter Beth plays in a country-western band and nine year old Ross just keeps his parents young! Midge Beetle Winnicki sent me a card from California where she and Pete had been visiting.

Patricia Marlin, Ann Craig Lee, Louise Anderson Spence, and Barbara Billette Whitlinger all sent a "Hi" to all along with their contributions this year and a hope, as did most everyone else, that, Lord willing, we will all see each other at the reunion next June.

And now, the news from the Cowles clan. Ivan has been in the Navy for a year now and really likes it. He just recently returned from a seven months cruise of the South China Sea. Stephanie went to Horseback Riding Camp this summer and now wants us to buy a horse! We did buy a camp lot at Moraine Camplands Resort and have spent almost every weekend up there. I'm still the "Ding-Dong, Avon calling, Lady," and still active in church and Scouts. I no longer have a troop but am on the training end of the program now.

I want to thank all of you who responded to my request for news and if you didn't send anything to our Special 25th Anniversary Fund as I said before — do it now. We are several hundred dollars from our goal and if those who haven't sent anything would send even half what we requested we would make our goal!

Judie reporting:

Received a newsy letter from Pat Baris Davidson Lynn, her oldest, is in her second year at Washington University and is talking about medicine as a career. Jane is sixteen and a junior in high school and Barb is nine. After a trip to the Soviet Union, Pat has been lecturing about getting Jews out of Russia and trying to absorb those Russians who are here. She also spends two days a week working in a doctor's office.
Betty Cornell Hirsch had "empty nest" syndrome after packing their eldest, Mary Beth, off to Muskingum College. She has Nancy (10th grade) and Joe (4th grade) to fill in the gap. She is still active in the Christian Education department of her church and also doing some part time nurse-type work. Vacations are spent at their Bahamian refuge, which makes their hectic life worthwhile. She sends her regards to all.

The Linowes family has had a good year. Jeff is an old hand at Syracuse University (sophomore), Ronni is a junior in high school, Gary in ninth grade and Steve is in sixth. Harry and I ventured to Russia (how wonderful to come home) in May and San Francisco in July. In August my mother remarried and we had a nice family wedding here. This October, Harry has meetings in London, so we are hoping to drive around the countryside. Besides three active kids at home, I do my tours of the Kennedy Center and am co-chairman of the Woman's Division of the United Jewish Appeal, which keeps me busy and out of trouble.

Being a Class Secretary is a very discouraging job. I spend precious time sending out self-addressed postcards to twenty-one of you, and just to answer! Please help — my record gets worse each year. WRITE NEWS!!!

Barbara A. reporting:

Joanne Finkelhor Blum's news was received just after last year's deadline. She reports a new career for her husband, Art. He is General Director of the San Francisco Ballet. So they and their two girls are now residents of the West Coast.

Doris Fritsch's summer sounds super. She had another trip to Hawaii, but this time, instead of island hopping, she spent eight days on Maui and more in Honolulu. She says it is all very beautiful and worth the long trip to get there. Now she is back to the "oh, so active" kindergarten set for another school year.

Nancy Galey Wigton has exciting news — a new career for her! She is a salesperson for New York Life Insurance Company and loves the work. Please take note, all classmates! All three of her children are living in Italy at present although daughter, Barbara, should return in January to attend the University of Rhode Island.

When Artie Gianopoulos Helgason wrote, his family was preparing to move to Princeton, New Jersey for a year's sabbatical at the Institute for Advanced Studies. Husband Sig will be at the School of Mathematics.

I, Barbara A., had a little reunion last spring with Lois Miltner Rothrock, Edie Pennoyer Vassamill, Molly Oehlschlager Schardt, Elsa Morris Cameron and Shirley Elliot Johnston. What a great gab fest that was! I have also seen and chatted with Sally White Autenreith and Sandy Potts Pool during the year. We also did a lot of catching up. I can report that all is well and everyone looks very young. However, I am reminded that our twenty-fifth is just around the corner and we must all keep it in mind.

Let's get some more responses next year. It makes the job of writing cards easier if I know I'll get answers.

Isa reporting:

My late cards brought light response this year. The notes that did arrive were most welcome and reading your mail is the real joy of this job.

Tomí Jones Miller is still teaching first grade in the school where her daughter Jennifer is in seventh grade and daughter Susan is in eleventh grade. Susan competed in an art competition sponsored by the American Crafts Council and as the result her wall hanging is now on display in the Junior Museum studio of the New York Metropolitan Museum of Art.

Martha McLaughlin Ellers found time this year to plant a large vegetable garden and it has been a great success. Her daughter Elizabeth is a high school sophomore and Andy is in his last year of junior high.

Nancy McFarland Pollock, husband Russell and children John, a high school junior, and Jim, four years old, are enjoying living in an old restored Western Reserve home. Sally Turle Rippel and her fourteen year old daughter visited Nancy this past summer.

Ann Hafer Berry sends her best to all from Conneaut Lake. Her son C.D. is working in Meadville with plans to go to graduate school. Scott is a freshman at Austin College, Texas, and John is a high school freshman.

Virginia reporting:

Edie Pennoyer Vassamillet reports that daughter, Laura, is a freshman at Smith. Edie is again enjoying her job as a kindergarten teacher in Plum Boro (a local community). The school is sponsored by the Association of American University Women.

Remodeling has consumed much of Pat Nauman and Armer's time this past year. She says it was worth every bit of work but "will not move again." The fruit of such labors was a 2 week trip to England. Daughter Suzy is looking at colleges, the boys are 12 and 15, and her little one is in pre-nursery.

We Sweets have had another fine golfing year. Jeff, a senior at S.M.U., will be #2 man on the college team this year. Becky (15) had earned a spot on the state High School Girls tourney at Penn State. Jan (19) is a freshman at T.C.U. and pursues more racing sports like motorcycle racing and scuba diving. Leslie (almost 4) has just entered nursery school and is undermining the educational system already.

Barbara B. reporting:

Marilyn Wolfert Zimmerman and daughter Jean visited Atlanta in May while deciding on Emory University School of Nursing, a five year degree program, for Jean. We had a good visit talking over old times. Marilyn and Dick returned with Jean in September and I hope will be coming often to our sunny south in the next four years. Marilyn is now working part time as Field Coordinator for the University of Michigan Research Center. Dick has relocated his business in Sheboygan so they have had busy year.

Sarah Jane Smyser Naylor's children are very active, with two in the school band, one varsity wrestler and Susan, graduated from high school and opening for a career as a surgical O.R. technician. Annie had a working vacation helping her Dad build bridges destroyed by the hurricane of 2 years ago. Her husband Geoffrey does volunteer work at the hospital 20 hours/month.

Jody Shelley Davis moved from Levittown to Bensenville, New Jersey where Bob has his own insurance agency, back in his home town after 20 years as a chemical engineer. The agency will be quite a challenge. The children have adapted well, making new friends and enjoying school.

We dabbled in politics this year as John was running for the Civil Court Judgeship of our county. Unfortunately he lost (he stays a Judge with the city) but we made new friends and found out a lot about "politicking." The children are in 4th grade (Mindy) playing the organ, singing in the church choir and being a girl scout and in 6th grade (Will), busy with trombone lessons and football.

Chris Metro Kachulis and her husband Tom attended an Insurance Convention in Atlanta in September, staying with Tom's cousin and his family, a medical school classmate of mine. We all met for breakfast at Brennan's and along with reminiscing began looking forward to our twenty-fifth Chatham reunion. Let's all plan to be there and start thinking of a class donation to Chatham. Remember June 1977 - #25!

NEW ADDRESSES

Patricia Egry Curreri (Mrs. William P.), 8401 S.E. 82nd Street, Mercer Island, WA 98042

Gretchen Elchlepp Smith (Mrs. Albert E.), Rural Route, Divide, CO 80814

Ruth Garland Lesko (Mrs. George E.), RD #4, Blackburn Rd., Sewickley, PA 15143

Betty Knox Jesse and family are finishing their third and final year in England. Steve (15) and Scott (10) have acquired British accents and outstanding records at the boys' school they attend. After traveling to most of Europe, the Jesses are now indulging in a cruise to Spain, Portugal and Africa.

Shirley Zierer Byers and husband Bill have been kept busy this summer with their new family Douglas (7) and Christopher (5), but Shirley also found time to start a weekly radio program of Latin American music broadcast over a local FM station, on which she does the commentary in both English and Spanish. She is teaching beginning conversational Spanish at the college level this fall, as well as doing needlepoint and weaving on her own loom.

Liz Miller Tutchings writes that she has built a studio and an enormous kiln and is having a perfectly splendid time.

Janet Schmults Lee, whose life is always busy, has just gone through an extra exciting period. In May '73 they tore down their old church and built a new one on the same site, which was formally dedicated on May 5, 1974. This is the Lees' eighth year serving the congregation at Gladden U.P. Church.

Joanne Sterling is busily involved in building a patio and landscaping her back yard. She is still working as Assistant Director for the Department of Psychiatry and the Mental Health Center at the University.

Nancy Meyer Kane is teaching physical education on a volunteer basis at their Catholic school this fall. She enjoyed it tremendously last year and decided to try it again.

Barb Delaney Brown anticipates being very busy as precinct committee woman for her party this fall.

Meg Floyd Kaufman visited with Marilyn Miles Oliphant earlier this year, and had a fine time catching up on current experiences as well as remembering college days.

Pat Egry Curreri's big news is her move from Dallas to Seattle. Bill has joined the Department of Surgery at the University of Washington Medical School. His main project will be the establishment of a new Center for the treatment of burns to serve the Northwest. The family is looking forward to hiking, backpacking, boating, and skiing.

Marilyn Smallwood Searle writes they are now on the 10th year of building their house. Nancy, 18, entered college this fall; Beverly, 16, is leaning toward pre-med; youngest daughter, Barbie, is 12. The Searles are still horse addicts and active in U. S. Pony Clubs and Shows. Marilyn and Ed went to Europe for four weeks on a business/pleasure trip, but are home now and would love to see or hear from anyone.

Mary Jo McKee Groppe's youngest, Deborah, was 2 on Nov. 1. Mary Jo is either President or Vice President (possibly both) of their local P.T.A.

Lois Katz Blaufeld continues to be busy with home, family, and her business, The Diet Workshop. She participated in a Career Seminar at Chatham in October.

Dana Rose Sleppy allows that she is not lost, but is still in the same place. She and the children went to Europe and England last summer to visit her brother-in-law and family. Dana has been teaching children with learning disabilities, and plans to go back to school this fall to work on becoming accredited as a school psychologist.

Judy Pitasky Markstein and husband were in Washington, D.C., last May hosting an international meeting. While there, she visited Tee Speerhas O'Connor.

Christie Walter Rinehart has gotten quite involved in exploring the scientific and spiritual aspects of consciousness through lectures, conferences, and on-going intensive groups — including some most fascinating work led by Dr. Jean Houston of the Foundation for Mind Research.

Peggy Pattison Moore, Patty White Payne, and Joanne Cochran Ellery all send greetings. Joanne just got "out of diapers" for the first time in fifteen years.

Jacy Kurtz Meyers has spent a busy year as Chairman of the Executive Committee, Pittsburgh Region, Women's American ORT. She also serves on the boards of the Hebrew Institute and the U.J.F. Women's Division. Karl's been busy as a volunteer fireman and working with the financing for a home for retarded children. Children Beth and Alan continue their avid interest in gymnastics, and Andy is interested in ceramics and film making.

Barb Komlyn Meder spent four weeks on assignment in Palm Beach this summer as part of a writing team to produce a new elementary art curriculum for the state of Florida. At the same time, Zoltan was assigned to teach graduate courses in the summer session at University of Florida in Gainesville, so they did a good bit of commuting. They splurged on a Bahamas cruise at the end of the summer. Daughter Mary (17) was involved in the local Junior College summer drama workshop, and Teri (15) is making progress in belly dancing. Linda Dupnak Wise and family visited last fall.

Our sympathy to Gretchen Elchlepp Smith, whose husband died last year, and to Sonya Klein Vernau, who recently lost her mother.

The Lewis family is going to remain in Newport News for another three years as both Bill and I got new jobs this past year. We took a Caribbean cruise last November and liked it so well we went back to Barbados this fall. Many thanks to all who sent news — even though there isn't room to print it all, I enjoy reading it. For those who have any ideas for the 1976 reunion, please let me know. I've gotten only one suggestion in the correspondence received so far. Seems odd to be thinking of our 20th reunion. I don't feel forty — do you?

Loirie reporting:

The class is definitely not allowing much grass to grow underfoot these days. Many are contemplating a move, have moved, or are busy settling in. Lois Ingham Peeler writes that husband Yorke is now senior minister at the Second Congregational Church, North Beverly, Ma. Barbara Goodstein Selbst notes the end of early childhood has arrived with son David entering kindergarten. Good's family is contemplating a move in the near future. After returning to the States a year ago, Marcia Ebenstein Kublanow has been enjoying New York City for its endless variety of things to do. Husband Sam is in domestic IBM now.

Barbara Berg Morrison has just completed a two year term as President of the Harrisburg Section-National Council of Jewish Women, moved to another house, has been helping husband "buy and sell" at their Racquet Club's pro shop and loves being Alumnae Representative. Carole Koko Ward has the house in Crown Point, Indiana up for sale. Plans for moving the family are yet undecided.

Patricia Gregory Barrett "dashed off" a letter while preparing for a trip to New Orleans with husband Jerry. Jerry is chairman of the Psychology Department at Akron University. Pat is enrolled in Akron U's Art Dept. Pottery Course. Their "new home" shared with Chazi, II, Jera, 8, and Gregory, 3, is fifty years old and Spanish style, featuring an oriental rug in the kitchen and plenty of Pat's pottery. She also sells some of her pottery.

Barbara Asche, a "woman of property" now with her condominium brought me her news in person to Oak Park, IL. We had a delightful visit commiserating about the responsibilities and woes of home ownership. Barbie continues in her administrative nurse educator role at Allegheny Community College and Ph.D. classes at Pitt.

Teenage progeny abound in the class, delighting and occasionally being a cause of wonderment to their parents. Carole Ashman Briggs doesn't have enough teenagers to fill her home so she imported another from Japan to spend the year through International Fellowship (similar to American Field Service). A note of nostalgia: her dad, Chatham's business manager during our schooldays, retired in December from Beaver College in Philadelphia. Barbara Bath O'Callaghan sometimes feels she's living in the middle of a rock concert with all the stereos going. She and Jack added on a family room doing all the work themselves and taking 6 months. Marcia Katz Kresh and family spent their summer in their Chautauqua, N.Y. lakeside condominium sailing, golfing and swimming. In addition to the "busy-ness" of the new baby, Jeanie Dym Shapera keeps busy with husband Warren, daughter Abby in the eighth grade at Ellis, decorating their home and finding time for tennis. Carol Cowley Ross teaches third grade while keeping up with Robert 15, Susan 14 and Mary 12.

Others who send regards to the class have been on some interesting vacations as well as continuing in their various occupations. Peggy Burgett Newman reports spending a few days vacationing in Nassau. Libby Anthon Petrolis says Stacy's in high school, Jamie's in 6th grade while she's still in Nursery School. This is her second year teaching, that is. Mary Ann Knuth Braithwaite writes of a trip with sister Nancy Knuth Thoman and her family to Disney World, St. Augustine and Miami. Mary Ann and Annabelle Irwin Few share some hard work on the Community Advisory Council in North Hills. Jennine Johnson Jackson went back to work as a substitute teacher for the trainable mentally retarded in her school system and is getting a special education certificate. At first she felt she had a 15 minute attention span, but has gone on to complete 6 hours of work and expects to finish after the fall quarter. Her teenager and two younger kids are "adjusting to their new mother nicely."

Your reporter has relocated as promised in the last class news. Husband Bill is now a section chief, directing Ambulatory and Primary Care for the Department of Medicine, University of Illinois Medical Center at Chicago. We are recycling a 45 year old house in Oak Park, on the brink of teenage-manship and enjoying watch the "caboose," Judy, discover the joys of kindergarten. I managed to practice some nursing in my capacity as volunteer camp nurse for handicapped adults. This was my second tour as camp nurse for this most rewarding experience. Chicago is right on the way to everywhere. I hope to hear from many of you. Have a good year.

Nancy reporting:

Joan Herman Coleman has been doing quite a bit of substitute work — including six weeks in a kindergarten class which she loved. Her children are 14, 12 and 9 now. She had a "mini-reunion" with Judy Beidof Friedman '59 at La Guardia Airport before her return to Pittsburgh.

Marty Lasky Sanders vacationed this year at Monticello, Washington and Williamsburg. She is actively working as a volunteer at both the state and federal penitentiaries. She and her partner wrote and illustrated a booklet on working with prisoners and managed to sell thousands.

Anna Liadis Zervos reports that this will be the first year that her three children will be in school all day — Angelo is going into eighth, Maria into fifth and Limperis into first grade. They went to New England this summer and spent a couple of days with her cousin Maria Liadis Faskiano '61 and her family.

Rosemary Leet Stark reports that Ray has accepted a new position as consultant in Employee Relations with GE Headquarters which is moving to Connecticut from New York City. She is reluctant to leave due to the great time she was having running a program for dropouts in Dover, New Jersey.

Betty Lou McCoy Yermack is beginning full time law school at Rutgers this September. Her family had a good year with lots of traveling and camping. Lee Ekstrom Paige sends her regards and reports that she has two good teenagers who still keep her very busy. Also sending greetings to everyone is Elaine Rockwood Cummings who reports that she was legislative chairman for the Greece Area Branch A.A.U.W., 2nd Vice President of P.T.A. and a member of the Christian Education Committee of her church. She is still working as a substitute teacher —78 days this year and enjoys every moment.

Barbara Sanford has been involved with implementing the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act in a five-state region as the Assistant Coordinator. She has been involved in writing and reviewing rules and regulations and giving training and technical assistance. She enjoyed a vacation this summer on a Caribbean cruise. She escapes every weekend to a mobile home that she has added to her lake property in order to keep her sanity.

Claudette Smith Cooper writes that Ross has switched jobs and is with Joy Manufacturing as Office Manager. Claudette is teaching Practical Nursing students at Macomb County Community College and works for Ford Motor, both on a part time basis.

Marilyn Steinman Cook reports that her new husband is an environmental staff engineer with Alcoa and they have moved into a new home on Beechwood Blvd. Mickey is still running the medical library at St. Margaret Memorial Hospital.

Sandra Whitmyre Young is still involved as Head Teacher at the Jeannette Head Start Center. She has been attending Seton Hill College to upgrade her teaching skills and has just completed an 18 credit program. This term she is also teaching a half day session at the Jeannette Presbyterian Church kindergarten. During the past summer she worked with the ESEA Title I program. She also keeps busy as the mother of three teenagers and manages to keep her sanity most of the time. I have had a busy year with continuing the implementation of the new A.B. Nursing Program at Westmoreland County Community College. This summer I vacationed in Virginia and plan to go to Bermuda in October. During the summer I took some golf lessons but found it difficult to find the necessary time to practice and attended the first show presented at the Chatham Summer Theatre by Cast I. Both professionally and socially it has been a busy but satisfying year.

My apologies to Sue Smith Anderson whose postcard was returned because of not being accepted by international mail. Later, I inadvertently forgot to send her a letter to get her news.

Audrey Rosen Sandson

Dibbie reporting:

One of the pleasures of being a Class Secretary comes with keeping in touch with so many classmates and sifting through and collating the tidbits which dribble in as the summer comes to a close. By this year, the fun has left an otherwise pleasant task Sandy DeBroff Roth's reply to my note brought the tragic news of the deaths of her brother, Bob and sister-in-law, Glenda Rich DeBroff in a plane crash in January.

Following her graduation from Chatham, Glen went on to get her Master's in Library Science at the University of Pittsburgh. Though she finished there with straight A's, her heart belonged to Chatham and she served her college as a member of the Nominating Committee, and as Chairman of the Alumnae Fund. She loved her work as a legal librarian and was a devoted mother to Stacy, 13, and Brian, 11. The children are now living with Sandy and Ron in Youngstown.

The Class of 1960 — and all who knew Glenda — extend heartfelt sympathy to her family and friends and especially to Sandy who lost, as she put it, "her best friends; her brother and sister."

A scholarship is presently being set up in Glen's memory and anyone who wishes to may contribute to the De Broff Memorial Fund, care of the College.

While Morissa Bernstein Lundy and Todd are waiting for their new house to be ready in December they will be busy this fall traveling to Boston, Seattle and then to Florida.

Lucy Gray Gilligan writes that they bought a lovely old Victorian Colonial in the Boston area and enjoy all the benefits of being only two minutes from a lake. Ray is New England Area Manager for Koppers. Lucy says that having been one of the few who attended last year's reunion, she hopes to see more of us at the next!

Nancy Cohen Stein is getting used to having a toddler around again. Mack is seven and Amy now 18 months. All the Steins visited in Pennsylvania in June and shared three weeks of our rain, something Californians "aren't used to!"

Bobbi Friedman London's card was written just as she and Ralph were getting ready to spend three weeks in Europe with time in Sweden, Denmark, and Switzerland.

Another traveler was Laddie (Alice) Lochner Kruiten. She writes: "We just came back from a 5-week visit to Luxembourg, Holland, and Iceland. Actually saw a geyser! The girls had a grand time. Irene, 15, is still in Holland visiting with her uncles. We hope she learns to speak Dutch. Jack is finally the Assistant General Manager of the Royal Netherlands Steamship Company."

Betty Goodridge Westgard enjoyed a week's visit with Irene Wilbar Appleyard '59 and husband and three children who were en route to a Suzuki Method music school in Wisconsin. Betty is preparing for her second season with the Terre Haute Symphony playing second flute and remarked that after playing by herself for a quarter of a century (!), it's a pleasure to play with 60 or so other people all at once! She sees Joan Munroe Mahoney occasionally on the Indiana State campus.

Barb Eckel Goettler is still active with her volunteer work with slow learners plus her local P.T.O. and also has been involved with helping to organize a group in recruiting for Chatham. She enjoyed brief visits with Barb and Tom Hollander and Phyllis and Bob Mullen '59. Barb's two oldest are in junior high and her youngest is in fifth grade.

Ann Curry Haux and family vacationed on Martha's Vineyard again this summer and writes that they are addicts now (of the Vineyard, that is). Suzanne (12) is doing well at riding; Janie (9) is a gymnast; Heather (7), a pianist; and Holly (6) is in first grade. (Sigh!) The Haux's latest venture was the backing of a rock group for six months with Ann as publicist, costume designer and maker, amplifier hauler and part-time booking agent. George is still with Honeywell.

A quickie from Pat Evans Burns says she is continuing graduate work at the University of Pittsburgh and also doing part-time work for the Institute of Higher Education, a department of the School of Education at Pitt. An even quicker 'quickie' from Sorel Berman says hello to everyone.

Tela Cohen Zasloff, with a houseful of very small girls from 5% down, writes that Joe went to Laos, Thailand, Cambodia and Vietnam for seven weeks this summer to do work on a section of a book on Indochina.

Margaret Cooke Skidmore enjoyed the life of a vagabond (her words) this summer with trips to Maine, Expo '74 and Seattle. She writes that Louis' firm is exploring a job in Iran in which Ned Ardalan (Laleh Bakhtiar's husband) is involved. She writes that since Laleh and Ned introduced her to Louis, it is fun to have their paths cross once again.

And... speaking of Laleh Bakhtiar Ardalan, I have a long, newsy letter from her which, because she is so far away and because of its content, I am going to include in its entirety. I trust I transpose her handwriting correctly.

She writes...

"Nadar and I live in Tehran (Iran). We came back ten years ago, as you know. We have three children. Mani, twelve years old going into the 7th grade; Iran, ten years old going into 5th grade; and Karem, six years old going into 1st grade. They are all three bilingual, speaking fluent Persian and English.

The girls, Mani and Iran, were both very interested in Girl Scouts and due to a lack of leaders, I became one. I teach thirty girls once a week and once a year we go camping for four days in the mountains.

I was at Chatham in January. Nadar and I have written a book called The Sense of Unity; the Sufi Tradition in Persian Architecture. It was published in December by the University of Chicago Press. I presented a copy to Chatham. I was supposed to give a lecture called "The Feminine Principle in Spiritual Reintegration" but our trip was delayed so that by the time I got to Pittsburgh it was semester break. At any rate, the lecture will be published in a new journal for women printed by the University of Chicago.

Our book has received many excellent reviews and it has won many awards for graphics. We had an audience with the Queen, Farah, of Iran when we presented her with a copy. She is most anxious that it be translated into Persian which we are busy overseeing at the present. By the way, I used my maiden name, Bakhtiar, when writing. It is part of the tradition here that a woman never loses her own name. All official business — passport, bank account, et cetera, is conducted in one's maiden name.

Nadar has opened his own office as of 1½ years ago. He is designing a new university for 5000 students for the city of Hamadan, a new town for 200,000 people on the Persian Gulf; and an environmental park in Tehran.

Since I have help at home, I have gone to work for him, being in charge of the graphics and publications section.

I am also continuing my studies in Islamic Philosophy at the Royal Institute of Philosophy in Tehran. I am presently translating 12th century mystical recitals and hope to have them finished soon. Thames and Hudson will publish them in England and the Penguin Metaphysical Series in the States.

Well, I guess this brings you up to the present. Iran is growing in such leaps and bounds that one at times becomes breathless. But it is a good place to be in many other ways as well. The cultural traditions and patterns are still operative for 90% of the population. The challenge is that they will be able to remain in essence as Iran moves toward the 21st Century."

Laleh's letter leaves this writer somewhat breathless as well! But how good to get such a full report of an obviously exciting, rewarding and extremely busy life!

To conclude, I report that to escape the mad frenzy of suburban living, I have moved 'down on the farm.' Sandy and I bought a farm in the middle of nowhere in June, with acres of peace and quiet and weeds. Our address is Eighty Four, Pa. and yes, Betty Westgard, it is the home of 84 Lumber and very little else. I wrote a children's play, "The Unicorn Missed The Boat," which I also acted in in productions at the Three Rivers Art Festival, Kaufmann's Art Fair, and other local productions in the South Hills district of Pittsburgh. It is very un-metaphysical and also unpublished but duly copyrighted and on file in the Library of Congress.

Thank you, one and all, for your response to my cards! Please remember our postal fund is very low indeed and that the Alumnae Office always welcomes your news, your comments, and your contributions!

Arleen reporting:

After five years of reporting, this year's response has been by far the best ever. Chatham graduates of 1960 are indeed busy and deeply involved in graduate programs and a wide variety of interesting jobs. Anyone who is considering a return to the business or professional world might use our class for ideas.

Judy Levine Weintraub reports that she just finished a one year Legal Assistant Course at George Washington University and will be job hunting in the fall. She states, "I intend to set the lawyers in Washington back on the right track and to get them back to running the country the right way." Also pursuing additional study is Dottie Schall Schweiger, who took eleven hours at a local community college. One course of particular interest to her and to all women libbers was "Images of Women in Literature." Our sympathy is extended to Dottie and her family in the death of her mother on December 12, 1973.

New jobs are news from Anne Linhart Hearn, Mary Peck Galloway, and Marilyn Mercur. Anne, who was divorced several months ago, is now Director of Development, Department of Psychiatry, University of Pennsylvania. She also serves on the Board of Directors of CHOICE, a group which counsels women with unwanted pregnancies. Mary taught sewing at the Spinning Wheel in Toledo until she had major kidney surgery in June. I'm happy to report that she is recovering well. Our best wishes to you, Mary, for a speedy and complete recovery. Marilyn left the Western Opera Theater, the touring and educational subsidiary of the San Francisco Opera, where she had been doing fund raising and administration. She is now working with the Patient Visitors Program at Mount Zion Hospital.

Back in Pittsburgh this summer to visit family and friends after a camper trip through the Southwest, Jane Patterson visited the Chatham campus and was reported as a "Prowler." Our respectable M.D. must have appeared like a California Hippie, according to Jane, who is practicing obstetrics and gynecology with Kaiser Hospital in Hollywood. Jane also volunteers at the Free Clinic.

Although Faith Magdovitz Willis continues to teach sociology and psychology at Brunswick College, she still manages to keep busy with a variety of other activities. Faith is deeply involved with the American Association of University Women, and as a national officer, she writes and speaks nationally. A $5000 grant from AAUW to study women's options for life styles was received by Faith. She was also selected to represent the AAUW next June in Bogota, Colombia, at the United Nations International Women's Year Conference. Another honor Faith received was being appointed by Georgia Governor Carter to serve on his Commission on the Status of Women.

Teaching "Materials for Children" at Pitt kept Amy Markus Kellman busy this summer. Amy still writes a column for Teacher Magazine. She also does some substitute library work in the Churchill Area School District libraries and works with the Pittsburgh Dance Council.

Winifred McDowell writes that she continues to derive great pleasure from her teaching of biology and physical science at the Garrison Forest School in Maryland. She also does some volunteer work with Planned Parenthood's Pregnancy Testing and Counseling Center. Her summer was highlighted by a safari in Kenya and northern Tanzania.

A promotion to Assistant Professor at Indiana University School of Medicine was reported by Joan Munroe Mahoney. Joan looks forward this fall to teaching biochemistry to first year medical students and chemistry to nurses. Then in the spring, she will be teaching graduate courses.

Still active in jobs reported last year are Bette Nadel Balk and Marjorie Marcus Krinzman. Bette continues to lecture for Weight Watchers and has three classes now. Marjorie works as an ophthalmic assistant for her ophthalmologist husband and serves as a member of the Board of Governors of the University Private School in Fort Lauderdale. Marjorie visited Boston and toured Mexico with her family this past year.

From Nancy Levendorf Recht comes word that she was another visitor to Pittsburgh this year and was able to see Barbara Stone Hollander and Lucy Gray Gilligan while there. Nancy keeps busy as a substitute teacher whose specialty is Junior High Spanish. In addition to teaching, Nancy finds time to be active in the AAUW and serves as a Human Relations Commission Observer.

Kay McLaughlin Elder, who just purchased Mary-Anne Koenig Pomputius' lovely home in Latrobe, taught a Graduate Equivalency Diploma (GED) class at Community College of Allegheny County this past spring. Kay finished her term as secretary of the League of Women Voters, Allegheny County Council. Kay also enjoyed seeing Nancy Bowytz a few times this past summer.

As Mary-Anne Koenig Pomputius said, "The Indians were getting restless." After surveying from Maine to Texas they have now settled in Vincennes, Indiana on the Wabash where Bill's new challenge is Good Samaritan Hospital. MAK reports completing a very rewarding year as chairman of the Alumnae Fund campaign. While still in Latrobe she rekindled an old love of hunting and shooting and is now a crack shot with a .357 magnum.

At least one of our classmates has earned her private pilot's license. Bernice McGrew Fitzgerald devoted much of this past year toward achievement of this goal, and now enjoys flying rather than driving on long trips.

Joining those of us involved in tennis are Bob and Barbara Kurtz Brody who attended tennis camp this past summer. While her children are away at camp, Barbara hopes to see Sandy DeBroff Roth. Barbara recently joined a provisional League of Women Voters and is getting involved in local politics.

Another classmate active in the League of Women Voters is Joanne Kretz Weiss who was International Relations Chairperson this past year. In addition, Joanne was also elected to the local Home Rule Study Commission in Ross Township, and enjoyed being a member of the League's Speakers Bureau, giving talks on the International Trade Legislation pending in Congress. The birth of Joanne's third child was the occasion for a get together with Penny Cherpes, Pat Evans Burns, and Arlene Campbell Timmons.

Greetings are sent from Emma Jones Emmick, who with the addition of twins has been kept very busy with five young children, and from Carole Koepke Brown.

Thanks to all of you who responded this year with your exciting news and to those who responded to my plea for money for our class treasury.

Claire reporting:

Yseult Snepvangers Frelicher brings us up to date on her activities. She has gone from publishing to teaching to composing music. Having sold background music for an educational filmstrip, she has teamed up with a professional writer to compose "pop" songs. Mort is a lawyer, specializing in trusts and estates.

Also reporting after a few years is Nina Rhoades McCullough. With four children ranging from second grade to high school, Nina still finds time for starting a parent-teacher organization at the high school after having been successful in doing the same at the junior high last year. She also teaches Red Cross swimming to beginners and hopes to be an instructor. The McCulloughs enjoy Hendersonville and some have even picked up a drawl.

Last year Marcia Rubinoff Rosenthal reported on the fun of having her own greenhouse. This year she writes that it has turned into a very busy "greens and things" business. This plus her busy household keeps her active and involved in family and community life.

Still doing substitute teaching, especially in the Head Start program is Jill Putnam Huston. She was also lucky enough to win an award for a charcoal portrait.

Lanie Souza Matthews is still teaching and loving it. She was selected as the Outstanding Teacher of the Year. We extend to her and her family our sympathy for the death of her father.

Greetings from Jane Sanford and from Anne Smith Wright, who is busy with her new son; and, of course, from the Schweriner house. For us, it has been a full, busy year. Our wonderful summers at the shore seem to renew us for all our fall and winter activities. Don't forget our reunion in the spring!

Faith reporting:

Terri Abrams Zions sent a wonderful letter from Belgium. Stan has a two year appointment as professor in management attached to a small institute in Brussels. It has an international faculty and a European-Scandinavian student body. They have done a great deal of traveling on the continent and were about to leave for a month in a villa on the Belgian coast. David and Michael attend the International School of Brussels while Rebecca and Andrew have completed one year in a French-Belgian school. Terri is having a fantastic experience and recommends it highly.

Wendy Barton Christner is still managing a sheet metal company. Her boys were all in camp at the same time this summer so she had a real rest for ten days. Wendy and Chris were planning an eight-day trip to England in late August.

Philadelphia has reclaimed Karen Batt Cohen Harold and their dogs. They live on the third floor of a "castle." Karen is starting a new job as an Inta Social Worker for the Health and Welfare Council.

Carol Baumann Knox says hi and is in the mid of a move.

Susan Berg Veit is busy with her children, Julie 2½ and Jeffrey 5½. Her activities include adding deck to the house, a vegetable garden and courses at Hayward State. Sue is active in Legal Aid and Legal Aid Chairman for Lawyers' Wives of the East Bay. While visiting with Jeanette Mikkelsen Lamar her new home she saw Elaine Kessler Ruben. A Sue has also visited with Renee Georgian Boulis and Barbara Bunker Faughnan. Our sympathy to Sue for the sudden death of her father in May.

Margie Brown White is busy with two jobs mother to a great baby and pathologist in a group of thirteen pathologists who run a large lab and work five hospitals in Northern Virginia. And the family has moved into a new home.

Carol Jo Bullen has joined the Sweet Adelines (barbershop singing). Her deacon's work keeps her busy at the church. She is teaching third grade and has worked on various district committees. A sign of age — one of her first grade class in Armonk, New York is a freshman at Chatham this fall (Peter Rubenstein).

Dottie Christman Lilja has spent a relaxing summer growing peas, beans, corn, etc. and doing some canning and freezing. Brad and Emily are both in school so Dottie is getting involved in school chairing a citizens' committee evaluating citizen participation in the Minneapolis public school system.

After almost six years in Pittsburgh, Sally Clarke Veil and family moved to the Philadelphia area. It was a very disorganized move in the midst of the movers' strike and she had 2 hours notice before the packers arrived. Fred is a lawyer with Pennwalt Corporation. They're enjoying the new house, area and people. It's been busy and fun spring and summer, getting a chance to see old friends, among them Faith Buchner Zarro and her family.

Nancy Dax Biamonte and family are commuting this summer between Fire Island beach and Vermont where they are building a ski house. She writes "The civilizing process of the children — Nicole, Justin and Jordan — should be completed soon, at which time we have hopes of working in public television."

Helen Hirsch Bostock is enjoying young sons Vance. Jennie will be entering third grade this fall. Howard travels to England for Exxon every so often and Helen spent a week vacationing in England last fall during one of his trips.

And I, Faith Buchner Zarro, am enjoying our three little boys, all their crayons, playdough, etc. Michael, our latest addition, is a joy and Joseph and Jimmy enjoy him. We spent a restful week with n parents on their "farm" and had a really nice Labor Day weekend with Helen Hirsch Bostock and her family at the "farm." We also had a nice visit with Sally Clarke Veil and her family and I frequently see Karen Batt Cohen and Ethel Woelfel Fiderer. I find my few spare moments with work for Joseph's co-nursery school and our small but productive garden.

Mildred reporting:

The new address for Dottie Marr Villers is a mailing address only as she and her husband are spending the next few years cruising around in their 40' sailboat. They have spent six months in Mexico and in a few months, will "start heading south again." Costa Rica, Panama, through the Canal and will then spend some time in the Caribbean before moving on.

Karen Leyonmark Geary will be commuting 12 miles each day as a first year student at Washington and Lee Law School this year. Karen says that during the summer she was able to obtain some photography commissions, principally related to travel promotion and advertising.

A note from Jo Mitchell Soltman reports that their life has been "beautifully full of hectic doings." She is teaching at Temple, on the Speakers Bureau for Pittsburgh Council for International Visitors and has a part-time job as a consultant and instructor at the First Lady Health Spa.

Nancy McQuillan Bolanis and Peter had a nice visit with Lila Latham McGrouther while they were in San Francisco last fall. They also enjoyed a winter trip to Nassau. Nancy is busy at home with George, 4, and Michael, 2½.

Sincere sympathy to Katie Kerrigan Miller whose brother Ted died in December.

Thank you all for your response to my request for news during the past few years.

Zoe reporting:

With an active year ahead of us, one who is obviously on the go is Judy Schenk Eley. She is settling into her new home which came complete with a mature vegetable garden. So, canning, combined with unpacking, a new baby, a new school system, John's new job with Prince George's County as a budget analyst, fills her time more than adequately.

Ellen Schreiber McBride — She is doing photo research for filmstrips about women for visual aid kits that will accompany high school level books. The family vacationed in Nova Scotia and Maine, leaving only a few lobsters uneaten!

For a vacation that brings in view over a hundred icebergs and salmon jumping up waterfalls, Kathie Otto McDowell recommends Newfoundland as an unusually beautiful place. Son, Chip, is in an exciting open class second grade, Drew in kindergarten, and two year old Meghan is into everything! Kathie is still singing, helping out at school, and mothering a lot. So is Gretchen Wright Gantzer who says she's not quite as liberated as she'd like to think. Jack was in Japan and the Far East in the spring. Gretchen is an elementary school tutor, a CCD teacher, a Girl Scout Leader, assistant Den mother, an organic gardener, and a frustrated ballerina. That's all.

Barb Rogers Agosin is working part-time teaching English as a second language in New York City, indexing a magazine for Simmons-Boardman publishers and is working with a group of friends organizing a day-care center in Manhattan.

This will be Carol Sprinchorn Colter's second year working as an elementary school librarian. The hope of remaining in one place for several years has added to the enjoyment of their own home through gardening and becoming more active in the Audubon Society and community theater efforts. Penny Ulman Schwarz has been busy in other quarters — literally — a mountain cabin in West Virginia. They have been renovating it and persuading a huge nest of honeybees that the cabin is off-limits.

A "Hi" from Heather Muir Meacham who has Laurie in kindergarten and 2½ year old Tommie who would like, to be. With both children in school, Nancy Stein Elman is not inactive. She is teaching Counselor Education at Pitt and is on the Board of Shady Lane School. She also visited with Marty Haase Carson in June at the time of the Class Reunion.

I, Zoe Warwick Sherman, have another year before both children are in school, so am slowly becoming active in Syracuse area endeavors. After all, we only moved here a year ago and I do not want to be forced by inactivity to open some of those mover's boxes so neatly stacked for the future! The Association for Children With Learning Disabilities for which I am secretary, has on its Board an alumna, Olga Mamula Kaish '49, who is an elementary school counselor and a tremendous help to us all. Here's to all our busy days and unopened boxes of the year ahead.

Karen reporting:

After several rewarding years in Germany, Suzanne Clewell has come home. "Susie Cool" is returning to the Montgomery County Schools as a remedial reading teacher. She checked out William Pitt, the Earl of Chatham, and the town of Chatham during her last trip through the British Isles.

Kitty Barley Paiste sent a letter telling of her involvement in motherhood, gardening and being a kindergarten aide. The thought of her homemade applesauce and ice cream makes me drool!

Noting "what a small world this is" is Joan Bailey who recently applied for an administrative post in New York City. Who should reply to her application but Susan Haskell Clokey! Joan also took a trip to Jamaica this spring.

Our reunion reporter is Phyllis Fox Catz who replied that the new Chatham facilities are fine but wished that more of us had attended. Phyllis is active in starting consciousness raising women's groups and suggests that Chatham mail needs new labels with first names of women.

An interesting letter came from Carol Dougherty Heierman from South Africa. She reports that her husband is still playing "world traveler" for Pfizer, Inc. When last year's Recorder came out they were awaiting some word on how the U. S. would rescue them from Cairo — with the jets constantly buzzing overhead. Carol says she has been fortunate to have coordinated several broadcasts with John's schedule — a recital for South African Broadcasting and a TV appearance in Salisbury, Rhodesia.

My year has been fun and full of travel. Russ and I, Karen Blomquist Struckman, are now "liberated" from diapers so found traveling this year delightful. On a jaunt to Aspen, we met Susie Soule Cox '65 for a poolside reunion and introduced our daughters, Laura and Sara to her boys, Sam and Chris. We also spent much time and energy fixing up our cabin, complete with one-holer! This spring I had an exciting experience serving as a precinct caucus chairperson.

A real "soap-box" answer came from Nancy Beal which I think deserves full attention and some sort of reply in a more spacious part of the Recorder. She said that "I would like to express my objection and distaste for the alumnae magazine news of the classes. It is, in my opinion, yet another vehicle for the stereotyped, male-oriented picture of women. I have looked at the entries over the years. They are filled with just what you ask for — engagements, marriages, births... 'This was a hectic summer taking care of the twins, supporting Joe, making the beds, why, I hardly had time to think!'

I find this reading repugnant. It is husband, house, kiddies oriented as if these were the high ideals of an education at Chatham College. What about the story of gay women, or professional women, or divorced women who found out she no longer loved her husband or got sick of being exploited or subservient to hubbie or women who want to live with a man unmarried. Of course, you say there is a place for them in our columns, too. It seems to me that women, married or single, who are creative and involved with self-actualization would not want their names to appear under such a trivial article as yours.

Every year is teeth-pulling to get replies and the same mommies tell about the 'new additions.' It doesn't interest me. Until Chatham can indicate a stronger caring for and leadership in the dignity of women as people apart from her 'engagement, marriage, birth or new address,' I am not interested in supporting the college in any way."

So says Nancy Beal, what do YOU say? Have you reread Frost's "The Road Not Taken"?

Mary reporting:

A thank you to those responding and to Millie Grossman Zacher for her several years as secretary. With Jules finished law school and studying for bar exams, Millie prepares for school herself, continuing as a teacher in inner city Philadelphia and beginning work towards her M.D. or Ph.D. Personally my hopes for her are with med school as she's been working long and hard for it, and it would be a coup for us thirty and over as well. One would like to think that with the move to lower sex barriers, age barriers will not prove equally as cumbersome.

Also combining school and work is Sue Haskell Clokey. She managed time off last October for a trip to Europe and a lagniappe visit with Peter and Valerie Valentine Mabbott. Back in New York City, Sue starts a new job as social worker at the Veterans Administration Hospital. Klaus and Janet Kessling Boese were reported on their way to England, but unfortunately I've no new address for them by deadline time. From Pittsburgh, Justine Ladish Carbonell sends best wishes to all.

Judi Krasner Barbarosh wrote almost literally on the move, being resident of two days at a new house in California. She and George both graduated in May (her with MSW, he with PhD) and made the move west where George now works for the Federal Youth Center in Pleasanton, and Judi job hunts. For fun, both appeared locally in "Fiddler on the Roof." Also finally permanent in California, Marty Fay Africa continues part-time counseling at Berkeley, full time raising of Mathew, revamping of old house; while Bruce commutes to Langley-Porter Neuropsychiatric Institute in San Francisco where he's completing his residency. Active in the women's movement, Marty helped establish a scholarship program at the University of California for vocational counseling. (Right on!)

This touchstone of working with young people runs through a number of letters either in professional or volunteer capacities. On the other side of the family, Margaret Fulwider Jernstedt starts work again with a continuing education program and serves on the City Advisory Committee to Dartmouth's Mental Health Center. Chris's now Associate Professor of Psychology at Dartmouth with tenure, to the family's delight as they enjoy New Hampshire and its out-of-doors activities (though visits from Ruth Anne Maier Bengtson, Jo Ann Rymer Lightcap, and Barb Stein are not frequent enough). In Connecticut, Julie Givner Reppenhagen chairs the co-op nursery school where Jason'll attend this fall. At the other end of the age spectrum, Julie's a new Chatham alumnae representative (following our reunion — she was one of nine 1964 stalwarts attending). In between, there's her own Kristin (almost seven), a high school church group and a senior Girl Scout troop which she and Charlie advise.

Lucille Hillman Cesarone's work continues with children of all ages as director of W.A.I.F., a voluntary organization (also the Children's Division of Travelers Aid International Social Service of America) that facilitates intercountry adoptions. Their heaviest caseload is understandably in Korea and Vietnam and there lies perhaps one of the most unique and rewarding experiences. In February on returning from Seoul, Korea, for "thirty-three incredible hours, I was instant mother to five beautiful children ranging from age thirteen months to nine years." These children she then delivered to their new American families. "It's almost impossible to describe the joy of this first meeting. It's a memory I'll always treasure and just think I get paid to boot." While home with Bill, who heads respiratory therapy departments at two New York City hospitals, Lucille visits periodically with Grace Wilson Sundelin and Harriet Bass Little.

Perhaps more frustrating but nonetheless vital work as an offshoot of Vietnam, are Sue Johnson's continuing activities as secretary of the Jersey Shore's P.O.W. Action Committee concerned with the thirteen hundred still M.I.A. and unaccounted for American servicemen. Professionally, Sue is part of the U.S. history team-teaching program at Red Bank Regional High School, and chairs the Teachers' Educational and Professional Standards Committee for the Teachers' Association. Nancy Greco Moran looks at teaching from the other side of the desk now as Steven enters school this fall, though Lauren, age two, will see to it she stays busy during the day. Along Sesame Street vein, Nancy's involved in a local committee to promote area educational television.

Beth Fellows Klemm writes of New Hampshire summertime with a lot of outdoors activities in her all-male household and a catch-up visit with Lanny and Sue Ward Ray, whom they haven't seen in eleven years. Back home in Massachusetts, Skip is a market and product planning manager with CompuGraphic Corporation (producing computerized photo-typesetting machines) and, with Ted and Scott both in school this year, Beth can thoroughly enjoy program planning for the Danvers Garden Club. Sometimes too she sees "Pogo" Mary Case Shearer and her four boys. (Are there any girl children in Danvers?) Summertime in the Philippines, in contrast, is wet. Writes Judy Germaux Page, "... kept waiting for a nice sunny day ... the prediction is a continuation of the monsoons ... Thus I'll write in a fog." She and family are now settled at the Philippine Baptist Theological Seminary in Baguio City in a mountain-top house: "... a really majestic view especially after living in a walled-in compound in Manila." Bob teaches, serves as Registrar and just completed writing a programmed Hebrew course in Tagalog. Judy tends an at-home nursery school for her two girls and neighbors, handles ordering books for the seminary library and waits for the sun to shine.

Vacationing on an island in the North Sea with Dietrich, her two boys, 5 and 3, and Brigit, 1½, Karin Gemassmer Ehle sends her best to all. Dietrich will be visiting China on business this fall.

We too in New Orleans were waiting for the sun for a while, as hurricane Carmen danced capriciously off the Coast. Gwen Gurnack and I seem to be running along parallel paths, as I recently took a sidestep from issues and the League of Women Voters to be volunteer press secretary for a local Democratic candidate for U. S. Congress. She has left real estate and is Legislative Aide — Business Administrative Assistant to a New Jersey assemblyman (who's also mayor of his municipality) and handles the public relations for a committee to elect Democrats this fall — a full schedule, garnished with singing with a local choral group.

It was fun hearing from all of you — let's do it again next year!

Ruth Anne reporting:

As I was "otherwise occupied" producing the sole male heir to the Bengtson lineage, I inquired about reactions to the reunion and the new look of Chatham's campus. Marcia Mann Butler's response solved the mystery as to why there were no other "bites" on my "bait": Only eight members of our class attended. She didn't enumerate other than to say that her former roommate, Angela Patrizio Smith, was another of the eight.

Marcia has been a researcher on the magazine staff of the National Geographic Society, affording her "vicarious travel experiences" both educational and exciting. This summer, she and husband Bruce went to the Pyrenees for some research for the Geographic and then to Germany for a vacation and to visit old friends. While there, they enjoyed apfelwein with Sheila Grobe Rossbach and husband Andy. Marcia is also delighted that Suzanne Clewell has returned to Washington.

Barrie Miller Gregory is teaching Spanish, studying Italian, and has spent the past three Easter vacations conducting tours to Spain for students and adults. She says it's a lot of work, but fun too!

Alice Ropes Turnbull, her husband and three-year-old daughter spent a week in Madrid last March. The experience "raised questions about the universality of urban problems, the preservation of history in the megalopolis and the validity of the group trip. But the paintings, state rooms, chandeliers, tapestries ... made it well worthwhile." (Sounds like research for the Geographic, Marcia!) The Turnbulls are enjoying a two-year transfer to England from Australia, where Alice's husband is a banker. Nancy Pierson Tolley reports having heard from Alice, and they both commented on the economic situation, that they are still able to find enough food to eat, but the "pounds and pence do evaporate," to quote Alice. Nancy was more specific: "During the first quarter of '74, the government estimated the standard of living fell by 2 - 24% (i.e. 8 - 10% per annum) ... they did raise income taxes ... and our property tax demand is up 60% since last year. Mortgage interest rates in England can go up and down according to the money market, ours has increased from 8¼% when we bought our house in October '71 to 11¼% today ... John's factory, like all the others, was on a three-day work week, but he went to work the usual five days and did paper work in the cold, dark office for two days out of five." (And we think we've got troubles!) No secret why Nancy didn't make it to the reunion as she'd hoped! The Tolleys do plan to be stateside for some extensive travelling in '75.

Back home in the USA after 2½ years in Brazil, are Tracy Quarry Gill and family. They were "in transit" with their two-year-old in hotels and airplanes since March 14 and were anxiously awaiting their move into their new house in mid-September, after their annual New York-Hawaii-Canada vacation.

Nancy Pierson Tolley reported renting a bungalow at Poole (on the English Channel coast near Southampton) for a "self catering holiday." "Experience showed that domestic chores still have to be done (with a two-year-old and no washer or dryer) so it was more of a change of scenery than a vacation!"

Also among the seasoned travellers are Susan Offitt Killgallon, her husband and boys Billy (age 4) and Paul and David (twins, age 2). They took off in a GM camper for a 6000 mile adventure through Canada to Vancouver Island. August found Sue making jam and pickles and harvesting the vegetable garden. (With two-year-old twins!) She reports being sorry to have missed the reunion, but being excited and proud about the Ford Foundation award.

Nancy McBride French hosts a two-day-a-week, one hour radio talk show on WUSJ, Lockport, New York. "Keeping lined up and prepared for my myriad of guests and subjects, getting advertisements and writing them, learning timing ... is continually stimulating to me." She's also on the Board of Directors of Attica-Bridge Inc. (bridging the gap back to the big wide world for incarcerated people, on a one-to-one basis) and a coordinator of Buffalo International Cultural Concert. Apart from that (H) she's "got a booming garden, an unkept house and my husband's still jogging!"

Pat Prycl Klahr, husband David, children Ann (age 4) and Joshua (age 2) and a live-in housekeeper have moved into an old, three-floor, twelve room house in Highland Park. Pat became Director of Admissions at Carnegie-Mellon's Graduate School of Industrial Administration last year, having had prior training! She says that was more foolhardy than she realized, but now she knows what she's doing! David has finished his book on cognitive development and is ready to begin another one. The housekeeper releases them from household duties in order to spend time with the children.

Karin Rumstedt graduated from Berkeley and has been accepted at Boalt Hall to study law at the University of California (Berkeley). She's not sure how she'll manage working full time at the post office, going through law school and being mother to her son, Paul, who enters junior high this year, but says she knows it can be done! More power to you, Karin!

Marty Richards Cummings was elected Chairman of the Day School Board where daughter Allison attends pre-school.

Bonnie Podolsky Theiner and her husband are founding Board members of the Community Day School, an independent Jewish day school in Squirrel Hill. They've spent the past year working toward its establishment and development, with Bonnie serving as Chairman of the Judaic Curriculum Committee, School Counselor, Publicity Director and Officer of the Board. In addition, she and her husband are still teaching part-time at the School of Advanced Jewish Studies while he is on the faculty at the School of Dental Medicine at Pitt and she's taking post-master's courses in Continuing Education (also at Pitt).

Candy Parrish Bauer reports it's been a busy year with the new baby (now an inquisitive toddler). Their older son, Brian, is now eight. Candy has been doing volunteer work at the Canton Art Institute and for the Canton Symphony while tending to the building of a new house!

Number five was the charm for our most regular contributor to the Births column, Suanne Pollock Singer! "We finally have a little girl and are so pleased. Being the mother of five has me on the run."

I (Ruth Anne Maier Bengtson) really enjoyed hearing from everyone this year, including some I hadn't heard from in the past. Everyone's news is so interesting, I feel like a blob by comparison. I'm totally breastfeeding three-month-old Matthew and trying to give 28 month-old Sallie some sort of decent quality of attention, since the quantity can't be what it was before competition set in! I suppose we'll survive! It sounds as though all the rest of you have, and gloriously, too!

Janet reporting:

I saw more people at the 10th reunion than I received notes from this time.

Linda Wason Bardonner is now teaching art history and design bilingually in the Calgary City Schools while working for her Ph.D. To compensate for all this work she is taking a mid-winter break to Kenya and East Africa on safari.

Also going for her Ph.D. (in sociology) is Tob Schwaber while teaching two courses at Penn. She took a raft trip down the Colorado River this summer.

Natalie Selkovits Lustig and Linda Weinberger Rosenzweig who took much more mundane vacations both said hello.

Susan Uptegraff Endersbe is remodeling her home. Jo Ann Rymer Lightcap sold her remodeler home and is now starting from scratch with another old house. Jo Ann's daughter is in first grade and her son in nursery school so she will have some new found freedom.

Mary Shaker has taken a new job as assistant librarian in the children's section of the Cleveland

Public Library. And Judith Wentworth Mullan has an interesting job working with a state diagnostic team for children with problems while volunteering her time working with a women's center and the Rape Crisis Center.

At our reunion I decided we certainly look as good or better than we did ten years ago. "With experience comes beauty." Josh is in kindergarten, complete with car pool. (I'm the only mother without a station wagon.) Robby is an 18-month old devil but I'm enjoying him for in a few years I'll be working and my life of "leisure" will be behind me.

Susan reporting:

Anita Cadwallader Horowitz has been through two unsuccessful congressional campaigns: one special election and one primary. Stacey goes to kindergarten this year and Ian stays home. Marty is in business — marketing and manufacturing. Suzanne Callas Francis left the housewife ranks to become Administrative Director for a nursery school-day care center; a job to which Amanda can go, too. Leslie Kaplan Itskowitz is busy with Amy 5 and Marc 2 plus assorted classes including a psychology course taught by Frank Lackner at Chatham. She is also an active member of Hadassah. Susan Coleman Heckman's husband, Jim is now a Major in the Army, and they are enjoying their new surroundings. Barbara Crick Klingsporn is vice president of a co-op nursery school which her twins, Greg and Geoff attend. Barb, a member of the Bahá'í Faith, accepted the chairmanship of a race relations workshop conducted by the Morristown Clergy Council. Louise DeCarl Malugen is still in practice but is specializing in bankruptcy law and insolvency counseling. She was made a trustee in bankruptcy by the Bankruptcy Court, U. S. District Court, So. District of California and was named as the San Diego member of the California State Bar Committee on Debtor-Creditor Relations. Louise is also president of a non-profit legal clinic which handles sex discrimination cases. The clinic has been very successful in areas of credit, housing and job discrimination. Amazingly enough, Louise still has time for sailing and visits with Rachel Stein Gragg.

After "8½ glorious months on unemployment," Nancy Dechter started a new job as secretary (complete with computer terminal) to a scientist with Information Sciences Institute — a "think tank" division of the University of Southern California. Nancy was also accepted for training in her yoga organization's highest yoga technique and was initiated as a KRIYA YOGI. Nancy is also taking classes in Tarot, astrology, and occult law at the Philosophical Research Society.

Greetings from Jerilyn Donahoe Lazor and from the Brenners who prepare for their December move to Fort Sam Houston in San Antonio for six months and then to parts unknown.

Kathe reporting:

This year I sent the usual 26 self-addressed and stamped postcards and got the usual ten replies. Our ties are tenuous, but we do have a bond in common through Chatham. It's nice to have our paths cross once a year in the Recorder, scattered as we are. Those of you who read but don't write should write next year!

Carole Early Cupps has returned to her home town of Kalamazoo where Sam has gone into real estate with Carole's father's company. Drew is in nursery school this fall and Drew and Dianne have swim and gym at the Y.

Baby Kurt has changed Judi Fellows Duchek's life a little. She has taken a leave of absence from manager of technical staff in the Boston office of Computer Services Corp. to enjoy "apple pie and motherhood."

Irene Fraser Rothenberg began a new job this fall on the faculty at Barat, a women's college near Chicago.

Jarene Francis Lee is treasurer of the American Association of Volunteer Services Coordinators, a 700-member professional group. She reports visits with Andra Sandson Condon, Bonnie Marks Bragg "whose son Eric is beautiful and very good," and Naomi Waterston. The Lees had great vacations last year in Antigua and Mexico.

Marty Friday Roberts is trying to finish her Ph.D. thesis by December and teaching part-time at a local college. Bronwyn, 3½, is in nursery school this fall, and Tom is still working on house renovations.

I am at a loss to condense six delightful pages from Isabel Hausner. She spent the year "like a stewardess" flying between Boston, Albany and Washington, and taught a semester course at Harvard's Graduate School of Design in "politics of housing." This year she will be in Cambridge to complete a master's degree in Public Administration at the J. F. Kennedy School of Government. As we observe our thirtieth birthdays, Isabel wishes "that we continue to grow, and have a chance to contribute to society a bit of that part of ourselves which makes us unique."

Also in Boston, Hannah Gilman reports the big news is that she is painting her apartment! She is still at University of Mass./Boston, in a new fortress-like structure jutting out into Boston Harbor. The school desegregation order will affect her work with the local schools this year.

Bobbie Hewitt Orloff and Jon welcomed Aleksandr's brother Piotr on New Year's Day and were thrilled with the shared experience of Lamaze training. Bobbie wrote that Nixon was still her main concern, and she hopes Ford will restore equilibrium to our lives.

Judy Howard Reilly was just about to move into a new, bigger house when she wrote. Mike and Judy went on the Chatham-sponsored trip to Hawaii and missed not seeing any '66 classmates.

In August the Hills moved a half mile from rented house to our own home. This is the tenth address in eight years, so we hope to stay a while. We are delighted with house, neighborhood and friends in Wilmington. Charlie, 3½, has started nursery school — the signal for John, 1, to give up his morning nap. We are painfully recovering from the shock of my mother's death on September 1. Otherwise, our lives are full and I am glad to be busy with gardening and redecorating, American Association of University Women and church work. My warmest thanks to those who wrote.

Judy reporting:

Kristin Jellison Casteel writes that her big news is her move back to Salem where they have a yard for their baby. They will be looking for a house shortly. Kristin would like to know where Barb Brenman Newman is.

Ruthe Klein Kaplan and family took two trips to Florida to visit family. Daughter Ellen is starting nursery school, while Bob is president of the local NRHS (he is interested in old steam engines).

Sandy Kretz Callahan writes from tiny Fernwood, Miss. where she is working as a planner for the aging program of the Southwest Mississippi Development District, while husband Dick is flying big name rock groups on a small charter airline. They don't think Mississippi is really their kind of place, but they are enjoying frequent trips to New Orleans for R & R.

Vivian Lazur Brantley and Bill are delighted with their move to Brown Deer, a suburb of Milwaukee. Bill is teaching dental materials at the School of Dentistry at Marquette.

Carol Beth Levin Hill and family enjoyed a fantastic trip to Europe. Carol has begun her master's in early childhood and is really enjoying it.

Bonnie Mark Bragg sends her greetings, saying everything is FINE and son Eric is getting more delightful every day. Marjorie Morrison Hofer spent the summer swimming with Stacy and she's all wrinkly. Stacy isn't quite two.

Celia Paul South is working as director of community services at a new center for emotionally disturbed children on Ward's Island in New York. She works a great deal with the parents of the children most of whom live in Harlem and East Harlem. Last winter she and Walter skied in Austria, finding it "absolutely beautiful." They look forward to going back again this year.

Renny Mazo Cohen moved back to Gainesville after her recent divorce. She is in graduate school in counselor education at the University of Florida. She also writes, "More important than that I have received the knowledge of Guru Maharaj Ji."

The Pikes are finding rural northeastern Arizona

a real adventure. The culture is male chauvinist where the men are seeking a heart of the gold West that never existed and the women are left home with their kids. I am working part time at the local county guidance clinic doing individual and family therapy, and enjoying it very much. Our daughter Athena is learning to talk and is developing into a fine young being.

Betsy reporting:

Cathy St. Clair writes that she's still enjoying her job with Coca-Cola and plans to move farther into the Belmont Hills area, but there is no new address as yet. When writing Cathy, please address her as Miss or Ms. as she and her husband have had their marriage annulled. Cathy spends most of her time in California, but once a year she visits her parents in Washington D. C. and her brother in New Jersey. If you're in that area, you might want to say "hello!".

Carol Sheldon Hylton reports that she and Bob have had a full summer of swimming, walking and bike-riding. She has a new position as staff development person at North Lake where she has been teaching the past three years. She will be working half time, in the afternoons, with adults, children, volunteers, and with curriculum development as well. Bob practices gestalt therapy and Carol helps counsel couples and lead weekend groups. The Hyltons had a visit from Becky Blasingame Rosenfeld and her husband Rob, who is in the Army. Lory King is also in the Washington area, teaching at the Waldorf school.

Sherrie Smith has gone back to teaching art in Franklin, New Hampshire, in three separate schools, all of which are different. During weekends and vacations our outdoor lover continues to be a ski instructor at Loon Mountain. All Chatham skiers are invited Sherrie's way. Sally Mercke Heymn '63 and her husband Rick visited Sherrie in New Hampshire.

As for myself, I planted my first garden — 100' x 15' so this fall I'm freezing all sorts of vegetables to help beat inflation this winter. I've been taking voice lessons (it's never too late!) and have been accompanying several groups and individuals on the piano. As for titles, I think I prefer "Farmerette Brown." People do a lot of visiting around here, so why don't you come out and see just how friendly we are?

Barbara reporting:

Carlie White writes that she has a new job as a research assistant in the Department of Allergy and Immunology at Children's Hospital — Pittsburgh. Her only regret is waiting to be there long enough to have vacation time and return to Europe. Last summer was spent on a Scandinavian cruise which she enjoyed.

Patty Williamson Baker writes to say that she has cut back on her work to part-time and is busier than ever. She is catching up and feeling a tremendous sense of personal renewal. Anyone passing through her area is invited to call.

Jean Wiest Chamberlin is back in Pittsburgh after four years in New York City and it looks good to them. She's returned to work as a doctor's receptionist. Joan Stahlbrodt Lewis is also returning to work this fall after her maternity leave. She will be teaching sixth grade math. She's become an astrology nut and has taken adult courses in it and reads all she can find on the subject.

Sage Tower Mumma has a new job as managing editor of a newly organized and town subsidized newspaper. The children will be in kindergarten and nursery school and Sage is looking forward to the additional time. Sage and Mike came west this spring and managed to see much of the California coast. We spent a pleasant evening getting caught up on many years.

I'm still working at the U.C. Medical Center as a Pediatric Social Worker. Most leisure time is spent in the mountains near Lake Tahoe. Summer was great but skiing is still best and not far off. Greetings to all and I hope it's a good year.

LOST

Pamela Davis Eldredge (Mrs. Charles)

Jackie reporting:

I am reminded by your letters of Tolstoy's character, Bezukhov, who discovered after great suffering and long searching that the true meaning of life and true happiness are to be found simply living, in pedestrian daily experience, and not in a grand designs or philosophical schemes. The letters received were full of precious details about our classmates' daily lives, more particulars than could ever be included in this short space. It is indicative of their fondness for Chatham friends that so many from so far away, would share their lives and their happiness so freely.

Betty Adams Guerin writes of her new life in Taiwan. "The house is a welcome change after the apartment in New York. We have a beautiful view of the mountains and there are lots of trees. I fell in love with this part of the world and could finally understand why Pat was so anxious to get back. She praises the diversity and the climate of Kuala Lumpur and offers this contrast with Singapore. "Unlike Singapore, Kuala Lumpur is rich in culture. Lee Kuan Yew has succeeded in making Singapore very clean, Western-type city, but it is devoid of 'soul.' Somehow a little dirt in the street and a river sewer add a bit of character to an Asian city."

From Cathy Beard Davidson, an enchanting letter of life on the South Dakota plains reports a new house under construction, Ben and Felix almost ready for grade school and much interest in Watergate. ("I was intrigued by it, the cast of characters and their motivations. It made me wish I was back at school so I could do studying with teachers I never had.")

Of the college, Cathy writes, "I am lonely sometimes for the days and nights I spent at Chatham. It was a turbulent time for me but I sucked a lot out of the interrupted years I had there. I long to come back and walk through the campus and see the new buildings. I am especially in love with the sculpture that Jerry Caplan did (in front of the new library) . . . I want to touch it. And be foolish again and roll down Woodland Hill, check my mailbox for letters and stay up late." And finally, of herself: "Well I am 28 now and feeling younger each year, impatient for middle age when I will know more and my family will be less dependent on me. I love my life here more than anything. Nothing can give me as much satisfaction as the immense sky and rolling plains."

A kind and gentle letter, which extended far beyond the folding card on which the note began, came from Vera Berkowitz Greenberg. As often happens, she and Lesley have produced two little ones of greatly different temperaments: Martin "already shows a great love to learn anything, so goes off eagerly to school each day . . . At times I must remind myself that he is only 4-1/2," while with Ronna, 2, "more psychology" is necessary.

Vera writes of Karen Curto: "I saw Karen this summer. She continues to do work in Physiological Psychology and is presently brushing up on Math and Chemistry so that she can get into a doctoral program." Karen has also been representing Chatham as an Alumnae Speaker in Maryland, Vera writes.

Susan Brewer Dempster called to report that the wholesale importing business is "madness," and going very well indeed. She makes numerous buying trips to South and Central America, using the Spanish she learned while teaching school in San Antonio. She is planning a trip to Panama, Ecuador and Costa Rica this fall. Susan, who was born, reared and educated in Pittsburgh, is delighted with her nomadic life. Of their house, she says, "It's not a home, it's a headquarters."

"The state of my life and mind is typically day to day living right now since things are so busy," writes Susie Birkhead d'Ambrosi from Virginia. Susie is working as the Coordinator of Program Evaluation on a project for handicapped preschoolers. The curriculum she is developing for teaching play will be part of her master's thesis in educational research from Pitt. The d'Ambrosi family may be moving back to Pittsburgh, depending on where Denny finds a job. He is just out of the service.

From Maine, a memo from the Department of Health and Welfare/To: Jackie/ From: Sabe/ Subject: Ocean breezes, clean air, solitude/ "Finding it almost impossible to find a teaching job and feeling bound by traditional casework, I decided to see what else might be happening in my field. There was Maine (cleaner, closer to home) in the forefront (the journals said) of "social work techniques," writes Sabra Burdick. She has become a "resource developer," one who determines needed social services and then negotiates contracts between the state and the community agency which will provide the service. There is also swimming in the ocean, camping, cross-country skiing, and trips to Boston, where Sabe visited Nancy Blaisdell and Jolie Blauvelt. Debby Little, Ann Quenin, Pat Pagiara and Tiger Hochhauser are also fondly mentioned. Finally, Sabe writes, "Who knows how long I'll be here, but while I am, my home is open to all who want to vacation/visit."

Camping in faithful VW bus "Buffalo" and skiing are also chief concerns of Kathy Chalmers Kondylas. She writes of her beloved Alaska: "The winters are harsh, but it is the winters which protect Alaska from the assaults of mankind." The vast emptiness and beauty of the land console Kathy and Andrew for the lack of entertainment, cultural and shopping facilities available down here in the "lower 48." Kathy is working for British Petroleum, "mainly with drilling and camp supplies for the North

"Scribbling quick," while her students attend music class, Becky Conrad Hahn announces she finished her master's thesis in elementary education last winter. Hooray! She devoted most of her letter to old friends from Chatham and the life we all shared there. On a visit from Diane Savage last winter: "She looks terrific — has 2 dogs — and a guy. . . . Diane and I just couldn't believe it when we finally did get together . . . it seemed as if we'd just left each other the week before." Larry and Becky are planning to spend a weekend with Jennifer Jessop Fitzsimmons and Wesley later this fall.

Gail Davis Reiner is now attending Fordham University Law School, where she is on the Law Review. She writes of her decision: "I decided to become a lawyer after getting an M.A. in sociology (University of Florida) . . . Until Alysia was 2, I felt I had to spend my time being a full-time mother, but when I was ready for a part-time job as a sociologist, I couldn't find anything I wanted to do. I had taught college as a graduate student and although I found it enjoyable, I knew that a college professor was not what I wanted to be. I would have liked a research position but they went to persons finishing their Ph.D. or associated with universities." Charles, his Ph.D. in clinical psychology complete, is a professor with attending status at Montifiore Hospital Department of Social Medicine and also has started a private practice. Gail writes of her personal feelings, "Although returning to school with a child, has placed a great strain on our marriage, I think that because I'm happier and more fulfilled, we've been more loving and happier together." Kathy Carlson Schuchat expressed a similar sentiment in her letter last year.

Mary Ann Denning is still in Houston, working as a legal assistant in the trial section of a medium-size firm and going to law school. She hopes to graduate this coming spring.

As for Kevin and me, the best news is that K. has a new job, which he really loves, working for Pittsburgh's Department of Parks and Recreation, under Louise Royster Brown '67. He expedites the planning and construction of new park facilities and the repair of existing ones. We also have acquired two thoroughbred riding horses which give us much pleasure.

The great adventure of our summer was going up to Connecticut for Linsie Whitlock Silvestro's wedding. We spent a week "helping out," which meant a great deal of conversation with the entire Whitlock cast of characters, swimming in the cove, sailing, eating delicious food and occasionally doing a little work to prepare for the wedding. We were both thoroughly enraptured by Tony, who is so beloved by his neighbors and customers that whenever we were at the Silvestro's new house, there was almost always someone there wishing Tony and Linsie well, bringing food, offering favors, etc. I know Lins is going to be very, very happy in her new life.

Thanks to everyone for the nice letters. I really enjoyed them and K. insisted on reading all the correspondence from people he knew, even those who were passing acquaintances. That our pleasure is not unique is revealed in this comment from Sabe. "It's been a long time it seems since I even attempted to meet a Recorder deadline. However, I know how much it means to me to read about the various doings of the class of '68 so I must assume someone might also care about my particular life." Several others mentioned a similar feeling, of wanting to keep in touch, even though there was no really momentous news. The Chatham adventure binds us all much more closely than we perhaps realize or admit.

Goldie reporting:

Mary Lou McGuire Bartlett reports that her daughter was the first child born in the new year in her area and the whole family received lots of publicity and gifts from the local shops. In addition to caring for Katherine, Mary Lou helped to design a course on "Environmental Law for Laymen" and co-chaired a conference on Westchester's park facilities.

Another classmate who's had a chance to innovate is Gail Fishberg. She had an offer to work for the Trenton Alternative Middle School. The parents in the school district were dissatisfied with the existing structure and wanted to try something different. Gail intends to work as an advisor on the project.

Hoping to find something a little different, Sue Esterman Borish would like a guidance position in her school district but finds it difficult to come by. Instead, she'll be a combination seventh and eighth grade teaching team this year.

Karen Frick is working as a legislative research assistant and librarian for a Washington, DC law firm. Her fiancé is a lawyer and will be working in Washington also. Their wedding is planned for October 10.

Backpacking took up part of the summer for two of our classmates. Pat Elio Cash and Dennis traveled through Glacier National Park. They are planning a trip East for the Christmas holidays. Sam Hock Conly and husband Marc traveled in Europe with their belongings on their backs. They returned to the states for the birth of their son, Zachary James. Sam is now looking into the possibility of obtaining a Master of Theology degree so that she can support her family while Marc works on his watercolors.

Mary Holland received her B.S. degree in the Naturalist Curriculum from the University of Michigan's School of Natural Resources. She's now the Educational Assistant in charge of programs at the Museum of Hudson Highlands.

Several classmates report that their kids are keeping them more than busy! Whether Valerie was ready or not, Shelly Israel Mark's daughter went off to nursery school this year. Shelly said she was more than ready. Cathy Horowitz Saltzman and family love Texas. Since husband Marc travels a lot, Cathy enjoys keeping busy with daughter Emily. Who keeps who busy?

Jill Dworkin Eisner enjoys being Jamie's mother but is also occupied by substitute teaching and tutoring in math. Judy Herbst Goozh enjoys keeping up with her kids and her husband's educational career. Steve is now in Howard University's School of Orthodontics.

As for me, Goldie Jaffe Katz, the key work at our house has been additions! We decided to add a family room and bedroom to our home which has been a noisy undertaking. Right in the middle of that project, Amy's brother, Richard Mark, was added to the family. At this point, I don't know which addition is noisier! Joel and I continue to enjoy Pittsburgh and love to watch the city and Chatham's campus grow.

Georgia reporting:

This has certainly been an incredible year. We have a new administration in Washington; yet, life goes on for the rest of us as before. The night of Nixon's resignation, I called Alexis McMillan in Washington. She is office manager for Senator Percy (R.-Ill.), and at the time it was rumored that perhaps Percy might be President Ford's choice for Vice-President. It turned out otherwise, as we know, but the opportunity of speaking with a friend, who, but for fate, might be scurrying about the White House, was irresistible. Alexis thought she might get to Europe for a vacation later this year, "When things quiet down here." Good luck, Alex!

Ann Joseph is in Europe at this writing, having just returned from a late summer vacation in Maine. Ann has been promoted at the E.P.A. in Philadelphia, where she is an attorney.

Pam Poch Foote and Cris Joyce Miller and their families spent their July 4th vacation sailing and reminiscing. Pam changed jobs last December, and is now Personnel Supervisor at Estee Lauder, Inc. She writes that she saw several Chathamites (class of 1969) at a party Mary Silton Maran gave this summer.

Leslie Miller Eggers also has a new job. She is a freelance systems analyst and programmer, and writes that working for yourself "is good — but the Boss is tough!"

Deborah Rosch Blanchard writes that Nancy Banchiere Fisher and husband are relocating from Pittsburgh to Maryland — the Blanchards and Fishers will even be in the same apartment complex! Debbie is teaching English to foreigners part-time while working on her Ph.D. (University of Maryland) in Ancient Semitic Studies. Her husband Dick is a senior resident in Internal Medicine now.

Marcia Mount Martin and her new husband Bill (a CPA at Peat, Marwick and Mitchell in Trenton), are now settled in their new dwelling. Marcia continues as a training supervisor at Central Montgomery Mental Health Clinic (PA), and plans to start work on a Ph.D. in Social Welfare Policy at Bryn Mawr College this fall.

Chilton Richardson Knudsen and Michael have moved to Illinois, where they have acquired a house. His job is doing research on speech systems and voice storage at Bell Laboratories. Chilton works part-time for Planned Parenthood and is beginning an M.B.A. in Health and Welfare Administration in January, 1975.

Barbara Morgan Spiegelman and Stan are managing their two sons, Marcus (3½) and Jason (16 months), and working. Barb completed her Master's in Library Science and is working part-time as a technical writer, while husband Stan is still at Westinghouse (Nuclear Center). They see Marcia Binstock Swartz and her husband quite often.

As for myself, I am still working on my dissertation, and hereby wish to give thanks to Emily Hill Buka '67 who is helping me gather some of my data. This summer I joined the National American Studies Faculty (NASF), and am now awaiting further word as to my duties. My "spare time," what there was of it, was spent cultivating a garden on my balcony, and functioning as a telephone answering service for Jim during the contract negotiations with the Community College of Allegheny County this summer. Jim is now a tenured Associate Professor of History and Political Science, and was elected President of the American Federation of Teachers Local at that school.

As usual, I was glad to hear from all of you who replied, and also disappointed that I didn't hear from everybody. Let's hope this coming year will be happy, healthy, and prosperous for everyone.

Zelda reporting:

There have been big changes and small changes in the lives of the alumnae with whom I'm in contact. Kelley MacIsaacs Ouellette, besides being married and a mother, plans on packing up the farm for a while and driving to Connecticut, to visit Betsy Bosson Hanelius, Cheryl Tow Fine, and Linda Taft Solomon. She writes that the farm didn't do well during the drought this summer, but that it was still a serene place to be.

Sara Llewellyn Southwold and her husband Martin are in Sri Lanka (Ceylon) for 15 months doing anthropological research. They are studying how Buddhism relates to everyday life in the villages — particularly in relation to economic development. Her address there is only a temporary one, and she asks that mail be sent to her Manchester, England address for forwarding.

Elinor Marks has transferred to the Hollywood VD Clinic where she is the first woman assistant supervisor. She loves the weather and even has a banana tree growing right outside her door.

Everyone else who wrote also seems to be moving. Bobbi Livingston Reitzes visited Barbara Stern Heffer in Massachusetts before returning to her hometown to live. Alice Kessler is enjoying teaching the first and second grade combination that she tried out last year. Kathleen Kratt Neeley and her husband Jim have moved back to Pittsburgh in order for him to study for his Master's in Business Administration. She is working for Westinghouse Electric and feels that after living in small towns, Pittsburgh seems awfully big and dirty. Jenifer Johnson Rettig and her husband are also planning to move, but into an old summer cabin that they have completely rebuilt. Paul and I have also taken the plunge and bought a house. He just passed his qualifying exams and I'm entering my second year of teaching Psychology to the Freshmen. If anything, it's more fun than last year.

Pati reporting:

As I read through my mail, I realized that each of our old friends is certainly "doing her own thing." The cards and letters indicate that we are very involved in change — changing jobs, addresses, and life styles.

Gail Young Browne has received her Ph.D. in Psychology and she and husband Dick are moving East. Gail has been awarded a post-doctoral fellowship to work for 2 years in Washington, D.C. and Dick has accepted a position in clinical neuropsychology at the V.A. Hospital in Richmond, Virginia. Mandy Timney finished her M.A.T. in Biology at Simmons College in January and is excited (and somewhat apprehensive!) about her new job teaching Life, Earth, and Physical Sciences to 7th and 8th graders. Good Luck, Mandy! Jodie Tilghman Tamplin says that her new job is very interesting but it's hard to keep up with the retired citizens — she's now Assistant to the Director of Friends House, a retirement home in Maryland. Jodie and her husband, an attorney for the Department of Agriculture, are now living in Columbia, Maryland. Linsie Whitlock Silvester reports that she is teaching in Bridgeport, Connecticut and getting her certification in Secondary Education as well as a Master's in Guidance. Her new husband, Tony, is a pharmacist in North Branford, Connecticut.

And, while some of us report "finally receiving" degrees, Sue Schmerer has returned to school. Sue is now in Law School at the University of Oregon. Candy Saly Curry is taking classes at Bowling Green University and working toward her degree. Candy had a busy year moving, going to school, and visiting back home. Ellie Scheirer is in school, too, at the University of North Florida. She's been appointed Assistant to the Dean of the College of Education which she'll be doing along with teaching and advising — a busy lady but she loves her job.

Fern Weiner Canter moved to Florida, has her license in real estate and is working part-time in residential property, while Sherman is in commercial real estate. Fern's sons, Hal, 6, and Eric, 4 are thriving on the Florida sunshine. And back up North, Merry White Zeigler is now Assistant Librarian and Apprentice Bookbinder-Conservator at the Hunt Botanical Library at Carnegie-Mellon University (that's Carnegie Tech for those of you who have left Pittsburgh!). Mary Templeton is working in New York at the Bradford Trust Company in the Wall Street area and traveling "as much as possible," lately to San Francisco and Quebec. The many changes in Ellie Wait's life this year include a new job as an Assistant Engineering Manager at A. T. & T. in New York, and a new M.A. in American Civilization at New York University. Ellie's most recent "projects" are starting work on her doctorate and trying to adopt a Korean or Vietnamese orphan.

Leslie Tarr Laurie spent a lot of time traveling this year, too. She's still working in a family health program in western Massachusetts while husband Bruce has been doing research in Philadelphia. So Leslie says that in spite of the "energy crisis" she's been doing a lot of commuting. Helen Sparks Trollman has moved to Oshkosh, Wisconsin and is now a Systems Engineer for I.B.M. She and John are living on Lake Winnebago where they enjoy sailing, but since the winters are so long and cold there, they have taken up cross-country skiing. Susan Thomas Rickwood is living in England, doing craft work and odd jobs. Susan has found life there to be quite different.

Greetings came also from Connie Swjantek Simons in Ohio and Barbara Stern Heffer in New York. This year Barbara and John vacationed in Vermont and New Hampshire with Bobbi Livingston Reitzes and her family. David Tunis Philips sends hello from New York, too, where she is busy with Richard, Marc, and new son, Jason.

As busy as everyone has been, I was pleased to receive so much news. Jay and I have been in our house for a year now and it has taken up most of our time! But I did find time to finish my teaching certification and we spent some time visiting family and friends this summer. Hope that everyone enjoys the coming year.

Jane Reporting:

News for the Recorder apparently becomes scarce at this point of post-Chatham life: the jobs have been found, the degrees have been earned, and the apartments have been decorated in early mortgage sale. All of this year's news arrived bearing the sentiment that nothing was really new at all!

Trinka Bickie and Mary Archick Antimary, for example, both claim that nothing ever happens to them. Trinka is continuing as Art Director for the opera Guild News, and Mary is at home with four-year-old Michael in her husband-redecorated house.

Another "still doing the same thing" comes from Susan Craycraft Willard and John, both of whom are teaching in Connecticut. Their summer travels must have been quite hectic: she writes that getting back to school was restful in comparison.

Bonnie Brown Mooney also claims to lead an eventful life, although she was recently promoted to Customer Support Specialist at Xerox. She wants everyone's fingers crossed for a heavy snowfall this year—in Vermont, of course.

Chris Biel Kuhl is staying put in her job as an assistant buyer at Sears. Of course, she did acquire a new husband, but since she claims he's the "boy next door," maybe he doesn't count as news. Trish Chatham was Chris' bridesmaid at her September wedding.

And up in Massachusetts, Ginger Allen Taylor and Chris are staying on at St. Mark's School, where Trish is teaching history. Ginger recently left her job in sales and marketing for Holiday Inns in the Boston area, and she writes of keeping in touch with Anne Bookman, Sherry Handsman, and Susan Horn.

Gloria Baker McCoy and Walter are now in Housh. Walter received his Ph.D. from Pitt last December and is now Dean of the School of Public Affairs at Texas Southern University. Before their move, Gloria worked as a counselor in West Milford for two years after earning her M.Ed. in 1972 in Guidance and Counseling from Duquesne.

I have also moved, but only a few miles south in Manhattan, where I am now living in the Village two blocks from Melanie Duncan. As of October, I will once again be unemployed, and with luck, the job market being what it is, I will have a new job by the time the Recorder is published. The Alumnae Office assures me that there is a reunion coming up in the spring for our fifth-year celebration. I hope to see as many of our classmates there as can possibly make it.

Evie reporting:

Our class alums are involved in a diversity of interesting pursuits.

Mary Ann Dievendorf Bickerstaff is working for a brokerage firm where she is learning computer stock valuations. She thoroughly enjoys her 2½ year old son and is pursuing her music, also. She sings with a professional chorale which recorded for a Canadian company.

Joan DiNorcia Davenport and Bob traveled to London this summer. Joanie presently is teaching for the Pittsburgh Public Schools and working on a doctorate at Pitt in Curriculum and Supervision.

Melissa Dodge Lloyd is the proud mother of a girl, and reports it was "Lamaze childbirth all the way."

Pam Gast traveled to Puerto Rico last spring and Rocky Mountain Park this summer. She returns to teaching first grade in Somerville, Massachusetts.

Katrine Geha Kirn and husband Steve are on the move again. They will both be working for River Region community mental health services in Louisville, Kentucky where Katrine will serve as a senior psychologist. Katrine was interviewed by CBS and appeared on TV to discuss her work with victims of the spring tornado in Kentucky.

Debbie Grey Loving has a new job with the Best of Ireland, a direct mail marketing firm which sells Irish goods. She is also director of a volunteer group doing problem pregnancy counseling.

Caryn Hall Anstine is temporarily living in San Jose, California, where Larry is on a temporary assignment for G. E. They have enjoyed sightseeing in San Francisco, Lake Tahoe and the Monterey Peninsula.

Ran Conkey Trafton works as a counselor and medical aide with Planned Parenthood. She is involved in a music group which will perform at the Renaissance Pleasure Fair.

After spending the summer writing social studies curriculum for my school district, I return to teaching and to serving as the staff development teacher in my building. I have also begun course work toward a doctorate in Early and Middle Childhood Education. Harvey was promoted to Associate Professor and we bought a house near Ohio Wesleyan in Delaware, Ohio.

We had a wonderful Chatham reunion at Jane Marcus' wedding to Lew Mermelstein. The wedding was beautiful and a fantastic time was had by Cathy O'Daniel, Pam Gast, Bonnie Smith, Ellen Gonchar, Pam Bradley O'Connell, Cindy Plotkin Mervis, Joan DiNorcia Davenport, Cheri Kohn Schwartz and Gail Whitman Rudenstein, '71.

This has been quite a good year for weddings. In June, Jane Marcus and I attended Cindy Plotkin's wedding to Michael Mervis. It was held amidst the lovely and nostalgic halls of Benedum Hall.

A good year to all and if you're ever in Ohio, we love visitors.

Jane reporting:

Those proverbial "best laid schemes of mice and women" have surely characterized my life and I couldn't be more pleased. No, I never made it back to Israel, but my news will have to wait.

Normandie Lee Childs and Geoff are back from France but looking forward to another, longer trip. They're in Maine where Geoff teaches at a private school. Normandie taught at Lyndon State Teachers College this summer and will either teach or be back in school herself in the fall.

Another teacher is Molly Miesse Patterson. She's received her master's from Duquesne and is still teaching in the Pittsburgh Public Schools. Her husband David is in his last year of law school at Duquesne.

Gayle Parker, just wants it known that she has resumed the use of her given name and is now living in Scranton.

Corky McCutcheon Jobin and her son Lindsey have left Georgia to return closer to family up north. Corky is job hunting with hopes of returning to school. After a busy and critical year, things appear to be going well for Corky. We all wish her continued good luck.

It's hard to believe that those classmates who not so long ago were sweating out Law Boards are now full-fledged lawyers. Rubie Magee has been working in the New York County District Attorney's office as an Assistant District Attorney for almost a year now. She's living in what must be a pretty chic brownstone on the Westside and has vacationed in New England and most recently in Greece, precisely during the outbreak of the war over Cyprus. There's another Assistant D.A. from our class. Phoebe Morse is working for the District Attorney for the whole state of Vermont. Phoebe says she's working on women's rights legislation. Also, she's moved into an old school house out in the country just forty minutes away from Sugarbush and Stowe. Think snow, Phoebe!

I had a short note from Dena Loncoske Boxler. She's still at Pitt with her Ph.D. only a year away.

Dede Newport has a new job. Since November, 1973 she has been Special Services Consultant at the Illinois Valley Library System in Peoria. She handles off-site and very special programs that the libraries are involved in. Dede is singing in the Peoria Philharmonic Choral and is involved with the League of Women Voters and NOW. She welcomes any travelers to the "real Middle America" to visit.

Cheryl Olkes is back in graduate school, now at the University of Texas, heading for a doctorate in Communications. Cheryl wishes to share with us her observations on the state of women's education. Once upon a time a women's college was nearly the only place a female student could get financial aid according to need and merit. Today, upon receiving her very competitive fellowship at U.T. she was greeted with "Women in grad schools get all the breaks." We've come a long way, baby—or have we?

I must say I owe Cheryl Olkes a debt of gratitude. When she married a few years ago and decided to retain her given name, I was mildly shocked. The years, however, and my rapidly rising consciousness have brought me to where she was then. On September 1st I was married to Lewis Mermelstein but remain Jane Marcus. My husband is from—you'll never believe this—Squirrel Hill! He returned from serving three years with the Peace Corps in Ethiopia only a year ago and is now an electrical engineer with G.E. here in Philadelphia. I'm the senior English teacher at an experimental "school within a school" but would love to get into college administration. Our wedding was terrific with Chathamites in full force.

Pat reporting:

My sincere apologies to those of you who waited patiently last year for my solicitation of your news, and to those of you who looked for the news in the last Fall issue of the Recorder. The mailing materials were sent to another Patricia A. Williams here in Madison; I realized the mistake too late to make the Recorder deadline.

A "spirit of adventure" best characterizes the activities of some members of our class. Jane Yankovic Bandler, Dick, and their three daughters are off to Australia in January: Jane to teach Spanish at the University of New South Wales, Dick to teach Anatomy at the University of Sydney. Her note indicated that she was working against a November 1 completion date for her dissertation. She and Dick extend an invitation to any Chathamites who manage to travel to that part of the world. Completely fascinating have been the travels of Margaret Walsh since our last report. She lived in Chicago until March of 1974, working as Mid-West Campus Coordinator for the Evelyn Wood Organization. Leaving Chicago, she has traveled 20,000 miles so far "on a journey which is still not complete," throughout much of the South, Southwest, West and Northwest. One of her many stops included some work running rubber rafts down the rapids of the Colorado River: "One day I am a tourist, the next day I am taking tourists down the river!" Karen Gamble has also made what she considers a big move, from being a State of Wisconsin employee to being a full-time graduate student in Communication Arts at the University of North Carolina in Chapel Hill. At last report she was really looking forward to the prospect of non-twenty below zero winters.

Nedra Sheatz Brody writes of her wedding to David, which took place in the Mellon library. Upon completion of graduate school in Social Work, she has been promoted to Clinical Director of the Mental Retardation Unit at Western Psychiatric. The job includes family and child therapy, and teaching medical students. David is in fashion retailing with Kaufmann's. Having received a Master of Library Science degree from the University of Pittsburgh, Margaret Simon Kenney is now employed by the library at West Virginia University. Connie Wiencek-Kobalka is an "Urban Generalist" with a master's degree from Case Western Reserve University. Her job involves planning and research, meeting with community groups, and supervising VISTA volunteers and students at the West Side Community House in Cleveland. She and her husband Wait, a law student, have been workers in two local political campaigns.

Featured at Beck's Patio Theatre, Ilene Sirocca is continuing her career as an entertainer. Diana Urban Eichler and Tom have moved to a "new town," Reston, Virginia; it combines architectural excitement with a wooded atmosphere. Tom is in association with another dentist in Vienna, Virginia. The Eichlers enjoyed a vacation in Europe this summer. Diana provides Lori Gray's address; Lori hopes that she will hear from many Chathamites.

On a 600-acre working farm near Ticonderoga, New York, Ann Wakeley is administrator of the Highland Community School, a residential treatment school for emotionally disturbed teenagers. While admitting that Ticonderoga is not the most exciting place on earth, Ann is happy about seeing Betsy Belcher MacMillan and John, who recently moved there. Connie Wilkinson keeps busy with the Academy of American Poets, a non-profit organization which does readings at the Guggenheim and other places, and working with the Kuku Ryku Theatre Laboratory in New York City. She would like to "wave" special greetings to Rhonda Nichols, Risa Ellovich, Marge Cox and Jennifer Lewis, all of whom she has "lost."

I continue to live in Madison, this year hoping somehow to convince my research to transform itself into a completed dissertation. And for my next trick... Sandy Lettrich wandered out this way in July, and Pam Hird is an expected October wanderer. Hope many of you will wander out to Pittsburgh this spring for our Fifth Reunion. Have a good year.

Cheri reporting:

Sue Dann Rothenberg writes that her husband is very busy in his dental practice, that Craig is a very active two year old, that they are house-hunting, and that she hopes to see Sarah Ladd Hoover shortly. Pam Hird sends regards to all.

It is worth being a class secretary just to hear from Betsy Jackson, and to hear about the thousands of Chathamites she runs into during the year. Betsy spent the summer working for CAST I with Sherry Handsman Steiner, Cookie Ungar, Vicki Falco '71, Georgina Terry '72, Cathy Young '73, Nancy Hirsh '73, Laurie Berman '73, Edie DeLisio '74, and Donna Beiswinger Riggs '67. She also saw Sally Jones '69, Susan Cosgrove Jones '68, Sheila Willard, Alice Cihat and Marian MacDonald who transferred out of our class and is teaching at Curry College. Betsy also writes that Susan Rice Miller and Robert are back from Germany, will be in D.C. for a year and then are leaving for Moscow. Betsy says that Sally Marks Siciliano is finishing her Ph.D. in Education while Tom's in law school at Penn, and that the new career counselor at Chatham, Margaret Gavola, is terrific. Other travels included winter in Cambridge, fall in Vermont, and a trip to see brother Woody's one-man art exhibit. Betsy says maybe she'll have more exciting news next year. I can't wait.

Pris Jameson Richardson is currently working in the field of domestic engineering for a growing consumer group. Her areas of responsibility include purchasing, budget and finance control, and project planning and administration. She is also involved in maintenance and personnel training. Pris hopes to see everyone at the '75 reunion. The sincere sympathy of the class goes out to Pris on the death of her 18-month old son, William.

Both a new address and new job for Naida Karoly Finane this year! She teaches senior high literature at Jameson Hall H.S., a private school in San Raphael. Jim is now an administrative analyst for the Marin Co. Both Linda Jordan and Mary Kay Connell visited Naida, and the Finanes often see Linda Canan Horn and Ron of Berkeley. Naida says the Bay area is super after two winters in Wisconsin!

Peggy Kerestes Chain and Michael moved to the Albany area where Michael is with the Americana Inn now that he has received his master's degree from Cornell. Peggy is reading and refinishing furniture and would love company if anyone is in the area.

Janet Kugler James is still teaching English at Seton Hill College and at Pitt in Greensburg. Jan and Gene visited with Vicki Aldridge Ross and Charlie. Naida Karoly Finane, and Priscilla Jameson Richardson and Ray. They are busy remodeling their home, but found time for a trip to North Carolina over the summer.

Even I have interesting news this year. Joel is now a second year resident at Eye and Ear Hospital. We moved to the South Hills and are always fixing up our house. Hollee, Matt and Zeebie constantly keep me running. And Janie Marcus is now a cousin to me (almost) since her marriage. Hope all is fine with you and yours. Have a healthy year!

Susan reporting:

Lots of exciting news from everyone except me, so I'll plunge right in!

Three classmates have reported the joys of motherhood this year. Esi Palar Martowardojo, whose name I can by now almost type without looking, but whose address is impossible, is our typical mother and loves every minute of it. Aside from reporting that her husband has changed jobs in the last year and that, even in Indonesia, the unfolding of Watergate was watched with mounting horror, she comments that anyone who is planning to have a child should do so by natural childbirth. Jonnie Pearson McElroy reports a year of big changes, with husband Jim's new job with a Cleveland law firm, a new house, and a new daughter. In addition to meeting Joni Potter Arnold and husband Fred in New York for dinner, Jonnie comments that she's spent the year "adjusting" and would love to hear from anyone. And Rica Scheidecker Packard reports that she's working in New Haven while Andrew goes to Yale Medical School, but, aside from stating the birth of her son, makes no further comment.

I got a jolt when I sent Susie Patton a questionnaire to an address only 5 minutes away from my apartment, but she wrote back that she commutes between New York and Hudson Falls, where she is Company Manager of the Lake George Opera Festival. As of this writing, her wedding is three days away and we wish her and Thomas all the best.

Cynthia Plotkin Mervis writes that she spent three weeks vacationing after her wedding at Benedum Hall and then six weeks going stir-crazy as a housewife before she landed her new job as an occupational therapist at the Jewish Home and Hospital for the Aged in Pittsburgh. She hopes to be able to incorporate into this new job the art therapy she studied in Boston.

Andi Pratt reports that she's finished her master's degree in occupational therapy and has a job at the New York State Psychiatric Institute working on a clinical research ward. She finds it hard to believe that we've been out for four years, and comments that she's learned at least as much in these four years as she did in those at Chatham. I couldn't agree more!

Susan Rice Miller and Robert are back from Germany, and are in Washington boning up on their Russian. They have a new two-year assignment in Moscow to commence next summer. (Can't wait to send her a questionnaire there!) Robert will be Assistant Cultural Affairs officer, and Susan is trying to line up a job. She was in Pittsburgh last July, saw Betsy Jackson and Cookie Ungar in a Chatham summer theater production of Noel Coward's "Private Lives."

Clare Ruthenburg Silet reports that she and Loring have bought an old farmhouse and furnished the first floor in Lilliputian-proportions for a Montessori-inspired preschool which she's starting this fall.

Jackie Savani Mitchell is working on her Ph.D. in English at the University of Pennsylvania and is now fiddling around with dissertation topics on Jacobean drama. Husband Rick is with the U. S. Environmental Protection Agency, Region III.

Julia Pollock reports that she is the assistant director at the Oglebay Mansion, a museum in Wheeling. She spent some time in Europe this summer travelling with a group which performs Appalachian folk music.

Pat Peckinpaugh reports that Colorado is still great as ever. Her dance company is much in demand, performing at many local theaters and schools in Denver and throughout small towns in Colorado. She has begun to teach movement classes this fall at the University of Colorado, Denver campus, and hopes to make it back East for Christmas. She says Hi! to all.

Marilyn Scarantino Jones is teaching at Hiram College again this year, and has taken on an additional duty as the Cleveland area Alumnae Representative for Chatham, an action which lawyer-husband Bruce has advised her might constitute conflict of interest.

Well, I guess the ball's back in my court. I've spent a lot of time lately railing against inflation, publishing salaries being what they are, but you see how much good my invectives have done. I promise I'll never again use this space to promote one of my books, but THE SCREWING OF THE AVERAGE MAN, by David Haggood, (published by Doubleday, natch!) is particularly timely. Once again, it's the average guy who's going to feel the pinch the most. Oh, well — didn't mean to turn this column into a political forum, but do run right in and buy my book. You'll love it.

By the way, contrary to all those rumors you've heard, I have had some fun lately. I went to Bermuda this summer, then to Baltimore to attend Barbara Jacob's wedding (she and husband Walter Vinson are now living in Chicago), and then returned to the land of my birth (Fort Worth Texas — y'all didn't know I was from Fort Worth, did ya? I attend the wedding of a childhood friend. All I say is, enough of this career stuff — me next! Until next year...

Julie reporting:

Bruce and Barbara Allen Hill announce the birth of boy-girl twins, Nicola and Ryder, and Barbara recommends natural childbirth and breast feeding to all. Bruce is still with the government, so they plan to be in Virginia another couple years. Joanne Altwater Fiedler also announces the birth of a daughter, Kristen Lore, who joins 8 year old Eric in the family. Joanne worked with the Suicide Prevention Research Project in Pittsburgh but is a mommie full time now.

The class extends sympathy to Jeanne Cohen Caspi in the loss of her mother last fall. She and her husband have bought a house in New Milford, N.J. and Jeanne is enjoying her job with a computer maintenance firm.

Kevin Cartwright Cornell is working for the city of Chicago in urban environmental problems, while Ted is a 3rd year law student. They plan to stay in Chicago after Ted's graduation, and Kevin is already active in the Alumnae Club in Chicago.

Janet Bartini Blair just finished editing the Albuquerque News for a year and a half and is taking a rest before working again. They celebrated her husband Kent's architectural registration last spring, and currently Janet is learning plumbing and the mechanics of a lawn mower as a result.

Bonnie Bloch is doing casework for the Allegheny County Department of Public Assistance and taking courses at Pitt towards her master's in social work. I commend Bonnie for her efforts. After having worked for the welfare recipients during my year in VISTA, I know what it takes to face that job every morning.

Diane Buck Schrader is the assistant manager at a luggage shop while Rick is finishing computer school.

Ann Bonte Hackett is teaching 3rd grade while Jamie does carpentry and is taking courses toward her master's. She spent her summer teaching children of migrant workers. There was a "special" to Cooche: "We're waiting at the 'Misson'."

As for my news, I finished my year in VISTA, and am back in Pittsburgh working at the medical school again, taking some courses, and have become a wife among other things. Life is good. What else can I say?

Sally reporting:

Greetings again — does anybody else feel like she's getting old?!! Maybe I am working too hard...

Lots of us are working... Kathie Ferraro is most pleased to convey that she "finally escaped from Kaufmann's." Now she is at Fisher Scientific writing ads which appear in scientific journals. After hopping about the country a bit this summer, Kath starts her master's in English at CMU this fall.

Laurie Comstock is woking in Family Planning (no comment!) in New Hampshire. I saw Laurie this summer — she's doing well and enjoys her work. She's not the same old Laurie — but still great!

Resa Evans continues working at the Union National Bank in Pittsburgh, but her biggest news is her engagement. Wayne is a civil engineer with Dravo Corporation and she knew him in high school.

Sue Galloway is very happy with her new job as Assistant Children's Librarian at Greenville (SC) County Library. Her work often takes her out of the library to nearby hospitals and neighborhood centers to tell stories. In addition to tutoring illiterate adults in reading and writing basics, Sue will take a sign language course to enable her to tell stories to deaf children. (wish I had all her energy...)

Katie Freed Fliegler and husband Dave were crew leaders this summer for a Youth Conservation Corps program in their local state forest and park lands near Media. During the remainder of the year, Katie and Dave continue to teach science.

After their third trip to Bombay, India this summer, Zal and Mindy Genstein Sanjana toured Gujarat; Mindy then visited a friend in Thailand. This fall Mindy returns to teaching 8th grade English at Arsenal Middle School.

Susan Hill finished graduate school at Pitt and now has certification as a school librarian and her Master's in Library Science. As for working, Susan will be teaching 8th grade English at Kittanning Junior High School.

Cooche (Laurel Coutrakon) says she has been sticking pretty close to Springfield since graduation — except for a short visit to Greece and Turkey and a little time spent with Betsy Day in Providence. Cooche loves her job working for her congressman this election year and keeps even more busy working on her MBA at night.

Having completed her master's in Public Administration, Carol Goldfarb worked as a management analyst in the field of energy for six months. Now she's having a fantastic time in D.C. as a research associate for the National Association of Counties. She specializes in finance, revenue, taxation and revenue sharing. She says she's seen lots of Chatham people in D.C. and sends her best to others.

Working on her Master's in Special Education at Duquesne is Jane Dillon. Jane is also the Center Coordinator of St. Peter's Child Development Center (a pre-school for mentally retarded children in Sewickley).

Barb Grossman is in law school at St. Louis University. Last year Barb clerked at legal aid in Buffalo. Also in law school is Janice Hartman Anderson. Jan is in her third year and is managing editor of Pitt's Law Review. Husband John is still clerking in Orphan's Court.

Mary Eddy Turner — married this summer — sends news from the West Coast. Mary's working on a master's in Clinical Psychology. The wedding must have been gorgeous as Mary tells me it was on a hilltop overlooking the Pacific Ocean.

Shari Goldstein Leibowitz has started working on her master's after teaching first grade this past year. She and Bruce are looking forward to his departure from the service to become a "civilian" dentist.

Billie Goldstein Narayanan and Kesh are enjoying their New England lake-side home. Billie has kept busy with volunteer work 'til being accepted in the MBA program at Clark University. Kesh plans to finish his thesis in May 1975.

Janis Glick Barthelemy is volunteering at two Ottawa hospitals while Jean is finishing up his contract. In May they will be leaving Canada for Switzerland or France. In the meantime, Janis begins German classes at the University and reports her French is still improving. Janis also has great fun with her very own Brownie Troop!!!!

Charlotte Desmond Vaidya reports that she is happy — her great event of the past year was a trip to India visiting Nish's "multitude of relatives."

Linda Elkins became my enemy when the writing paper she sent her news on was from Jamaica. However, I softened a little since she has returned from her trip there and to Florida. After living in a jungle area of Jamaica, it must be quite a different experience looking for a job in the city — but that's what keeps Linda busy now.

Two additions this time are Nancy Blackburn Smithyman and Sarah Kelly. Nancy and Lee are finally back from Germany and living in Kansas. There, Lee is going to law school and Nancy is looking for work. I saw both this summer at Sydney Pool Scarborough's along with Judy Rea, the former Beth Wilcher, Janice Hartman Anderson, and Mary Stackpole. Mary had a small reunion-party this summer to which came many old Chatham grads — Sharon Ray, Laurie Comstock, Ellie Schechter Maney, and Anne Pantelich as well as some of the aforementioned. Sarah Kelly sent her class news to Peirce and then messaged it all up by leaving California and returning to the East Coast. Right now she is looking for work in Boston despite valiant efforts on my part to bring her to Pittsburgh!!

Before I stop I must mention the beautiful, beautiful wedding of Kit Hanson McDonough 74%? this past year. Attending were such notables as Vicki Falco '71, Michelle Jehle '73 and numerous classmates of Kit's including Shelly Listman, Wendy Holloway, Renee George, Margy Nordheim, and Joann Abrams (forgive me if I forgot anyone). Kit's making great efforts to finish her tutorial by coming to visit me as soon as Al leaves for training camp for his new job.

And so we come to Sally Miesse who is publicly relating her life away at the Central Blood Bank of Pittsburgh. It's a wonderful job (can anyone imagine me addressing large groups of people?) and I expect to see all Chatham alumnae (Pittsburgh variety) downtown donating. If you'd like to donate or start a plan where you work, just give me a call. That's it — thanks to all who sent in their news...

Ann reporting:

Again, graduate school seems to be the dominant pre-occupation of H-O, and this only proves to me that a liberal arts education prepares one for more and more study. My summer was spent pretending I was preparing courses, but I really watched soap operas. Other than that, I am now an experienced teacher at Concord Academy.

An interesting career switch is being accomplished by Becky Hartman, who is finishing up her master's in microbiology and will begin attending Boston University's School of Broadcast Journalism. (Becky expected me to be confused about this, but I do remember her expressing an interest in journalism about the time we were desperately trying to find something to DO!) Marian Marconyak is also finishing up a master's, and the title of her thesis is (I can't resist) "Validation of a Simple Interval Run Test as a Measure of Physical Fitness in Young Adult Females." Marian's degree at Pitt was in exercise psychology, and she will begin work in Stanford's physical therapy program this fall. Still at Manhattan School of Music is Pip Merrick, who is working weekends at "Your Father's Moustache" and is taking chemistry this summer. Hope you like banjo music, Pip.

Barb Metzger Rial graduated with a Master's in Education in Elementary Counseling, and Bridgeport, Connecticut is the scene of her new home and job hunt. Freddy Jo Grafman has moved to Philadelphia; this summer she took comprehensive exams and Lew took the Pennsylvania Bar exam. After that, they deserve a vacation! Tina McGrath is in her second year of Columbia University's MFA writing program in the poetry division. I hope that some of her poems could appear in the Recorder again.

Jake (at least I hope that the unsigned card was hers) was accepted to Cranbrook Academy of Art for an MFA in Printmaking. What do you say about a girl who loves, paints, and draws monsters; please don't tell me that you have grown up and gone on to saner things, Jake!

Lynne Hess Woodward's new teaching job sounds both challenging and fun. She will be teaching German at Greenway Middle School, a new school with open classroom, in Pittsburgh. She is also starting an M.A. at Pitt in Education-Curriculum and Supervision. And, from Lynne, the classic comment, "Still happily married and still haven't increased the family past the two Siamese cat stage!" June Lovelace Davis worked as a Park Naturalist and will be teaching Special Education again this year. She and Glenn, who is teaching 6th grade, are still living in the hills of West Virginia with a big garden. Sounds infinitely better than suburbia.

Dee Kopcha Katlic has more news than anyone! She and Mark have moved to a house near Johns Hopkins Medical School, where Mark is in his second year. Dee will be going back to University of Baltimore Law School full time in the fall after working as a mortgage administrator at a local bank. Dee is most excited about her appointment as Chatham's Alumnae Representative for the Baltimore Area; in fact, she sounds eager to do some good work for Chatham.

Each year I also play messenger. Dee, without fail, has said hi to Chris Santucci, and, here's a new one, Lynne asks Ilana to write! Class secretary as a Miss Lonelyhearts type?

I think of Pam Howard Lang when I drive past Middlefield, Connecticut on the way to visit my family. Furthermore, Joyce Kossack, the burn, gave no news or gossip. The reports that Joyce is becoming a serious law student must be a cover up for Joyce's real desire to be the announcer on The Price is Right, dethroning Bob Barker. And, Maureen O'Neil failed to add any cryptic comments about the unliberated nature of marriage questionnaires. At least I know that she's not working for Bride magazine. Again, Anne Katsampes, where are you?

Eileen McGrath completed her Master's in Library Science and is working as the primary librarian at Colfax School in Squirrel Hill. She also has a second grade home room, which is something I thought you have to wait until junior high to have. Sunny Jenks wrote after her second day as an usher on the game shows (which one?) in Los Angeles. She is also working at CBS there in an internship program. She had just finished a Master's in Instructional Technology from Syracuse University, and over the last year she worked on instructional films and TV for Upstate New York Industry and produced a season of half-hour news programs on radio. A great amount of energy must have gone into all these projects.

As a finishing note, Rhoda's nuptials were indeed a joy, and I would call everyone's attention to B.J.'s unrivaled ability to allow the bouquet to bounce off her ankle without catching it. Cheers until next year to all!

B.J. reporting:

I might as well start out with the big news first. I ran into David Kuhns at the Georgetown Safeway, (the 'hot' singles spot of DC according to Washingtonian Magazine) and David informed me that he was getting married this Sept., a girl from Chatham, no less. Well, it looks like all those dinners in the cafeteria paid off!

Speaking of weddings, a few of us got together for Rhoda McLeod's wedding to Bob Glover in Litchfield, Conn. A beautiful town and a super wedding. Of course Rhoda Lou was in true form, aiming the bouquet for either me, Anne Peirce or Tim Mueller. Tim claims that I got in his way, and some ten year old beat us all out... a relief! Janice Hartman Anderson and John, Sydney Pool Scarborough and Cary, Anne Peirce and Bruce Landis, Laurie Comstock, Diane Pfanner and Tim, and Barb Studenmund were all there. We had a fantastic time. Rhoda looked great, Glove was beaming, and Gunther Gabel Williams can eat his heart out.

Diane Pfanner seemed really happy. She and Tim are still in Vermont, she's potting for a shop in town, Tim is still building, and they're waiting for the post to hit the garden. They had visits from Jené Schiros Beran and Bruce, and Terry Rupani Nagel and Rich, this summer. Jené has been teaching retarded children for the past year and will do so again this fall, as well as attend classes herself. Terry has been doing some good things, is a self-employed potter, worked as a volunteer on an excavation of a Monongahela Indian Village site which dated back to 1200 or 1250 AD. While up in Vt., the whole crew went to visit Jeanne Swankto who lives with Melanie Morton and Ernie.

Sydney Pool Scarborough gave a welcome home party for Nancy Blackburn Smithyman this summer. Sydney is with Mellon Bank as a commercial credit analyst and Cary is a project engineer with H. Heinz.

Suzanne Robblee Cottrelle is still at Pitt with Economics Dept., and continuing grad work history. Perry is a VISTA volunteer with the Allegheny County Welfare Rights Organization, and is working on his phenomenology studies. During a coming trip this summer they saw Billie Goldstein Narayanan and Dianne Buck Schrader.

Patty Patterson Werschulz has a job as a research assistant for a new drug company, Mylan Special Processes, in the awesome Mellon Institute. Mary Pat can finally tell me what was so secret about the building. Pat recently saw Becky Russo and Len Chapman '73 on their way through town.

Ellie Schechter Maney sounds good in the Bureau. She finished her MA in Deaf Ed., and will start a job with emotionally disturbed deaf children. Dick working hard-and I miss you guys.

Got a great note from Anne Pantelich. She, Doug are now out in Houston. Anne will be working as an apprentice to an architect and will take more courses while waiting to hear about school for next year. We missed you at Rhoda's too.

Sharon Ray is still in Chicago with an ad agency as a research associate. She spends her time talking to Lasse and Ronald McDonald, and her mission is to stop people from making disparaging remarks about Pittsburgh. Sharon, are you sure that you're ok?

Gayle Rose uprooted herself from home, Chicago and moved out to San Francisco, for promotion with Air France. She loves her job in SF; anyone out there is invited to get in touch.

Sheila Rosenbaum Dalmat finished a year teaching fifth grade and has now moved off to Nicaragua for six months. Her husband is working with the Ministries of Health down there and Sheila had to take a crash course in Spanish before she left.

Lyn Schneider Miller was in the process of packing up and moving to Colorado. Paul is returning to school for a second MA. This past year Lyn worked for the Federal Communications Commission and hopes to take some grad work in genetics while in Boulder.

Lydia Paul Tapley and Dean sound wonderful in England. I laughed the whole way through the letter. Lydia applied to Brentwood College of Education for a year's course in teaching and is hoping they'll accept her "American" degree. Boy, the days in the Snack Bar together really paid off. She moved up in the ranks and worked all winter in a Georgetown. Loved it — and had such a good time that I forgot to finish my thesis.

Amy reporting:

Barb Studenmund is still in Washington, DC, but is looking for another job. She is enjoying singing in the Washington Choral Arts Society while playing her new piano!

Rob Schuler is half way through her Master's in English at Carnegie-Mellon and starting her third year of teaching.

Georgena Terry has her MBA in Corporate Finance from Wharton and is working as a financial analyst with PPG Industries in Pittsburgh. She's kept busy participating in CAST I, Chatham alumnae-founded and operated summer theatre.

Cathy Setzer is working for the Ecological Consulting Firm of Rice Dir. NUS Corporation based in the Greentree area of Pittsburgh. She is an aquarist biologist who gets to do a lot of traveling. During spare time she has taken up trail-riding and downhill skiing (well, she's getting ready for winter sports time!).

Lynne Stauffer is moving from New York to Chicago — she's accepted a position as Associate Editor with Publishers-Hall Syndicate.

Sue Taishoff is still at it! Since getting her master's last year she has kept busy by completing all of her course work for her Ph.D. and is now reading for her orals which are coming up sometime this school year.

Robin Weiss saw Michael and Louise Burton this summer in California and Ruth Barron in Chicago. Robin has started medical school at Case West

Reserve in Cleveland, Ohio. She would really like to be able to get in touch with Judy Robbins . . . so any information as to her whereabouts would be appreciated.

Mary Stackpole is starting her third year of teaching and has reached the half-way mark on her master's.

Ellen Smith is a Senior Art Therapist at Rutgers Community Mental Health Center. A paper she wrote on one of her patients was accepted for formal presentation and possible publication by the Academy of Child Psychiatry.

Elisabeth Wilcher Ehrlich is in her fourth year of teaching remedial reading and almost finished with her master's work at the State University of New York at Brockport.

I am still hanging in here in Pownal teaching first grade. Life up here is good and I'm hoping for a lot more snow this winter so I can put my cross-country skis to better use.

This is Cyn Bunton reporting from Chicago where I'm trying to enjoy the last few "nice" days of fall before the infamous Chicago winter begins.

Nancy Campbell will be moving to Boston, Mass. shortly to begin studies at Katherine Gibbs School.

Upon completion of her studies she will be a legal secretary. Wendy Caparosa is also in school at the College of Physicians and Surgeons — Columbia University where she's studying for a certificate in physical therapy. So — if anyone is in need of legal or medical advice, you know whom to call! Crystal Burns is studying "leadership training" at Queens College in New York and is also a project trainee for Planned Parenthood. She'll be planning video tape programs for the agency. Debbie Rowson and Ida Levine have become Mid-Westerners. Debbie is studying Music (naturally) and Educational Administration at the University of Michigan, while Ida is studying Classics at the University of Chicago. Joanne Buas Georgeson is presently teaching in the Montgomery County (Md.) school system while Betsy Bopp is waiting to hear from her school district — about full-time employment.

Diane Bey is generally having a good time while debating between spending a couple of years as a VISTA volunteer or making a career in fashion merchandising (that's some decision!). When I talked to Mara Unger two weeks ago she was well and happy if still somewhat greasy after she and Ida Levine spent six weeks in Greece and Israel. Now that's what I call a summer 'vacation.' I am presently playing "career girl," working for an advertising agency. It's a real switch being in the "real world" again.

Thanks to all who donated money to the class fund. And to those of you who "missed" my post script, it's still not too late to send your check to the Alumnae Association—Class of 1974.

Ellen reporting:

After spending the summer as a playground supervisor, Becky Clingan Lisy is substitute teaching in and around Rochester, New York, where she and Gary are now living.

Pam Fabish taught a summer program for children with learning disabilities. She also found time to do some traveling with Margie Whitmer, visiting with Theresa Colantuono, Trish Hogenmiller, and Mimi Gawthrop Walls at Rehoboth Beach, and, later, on to Cleveland for Laurie Duber's wedding, where she saw Pat Corrado and Paula Belikove.

Laurie Duber Rosenberg and husband Ricky spent their honeymoon in Europe, and now they are living in Little Rock, Arkansas (!) where Laurie will be teaching and Ricky working for marketing research at the Arkansas Power and Light Company.

Susie Fetterolf reports that she is living in Philadelphia with Kris Barone and taking art classes at the Tyler School of Art there.

Pat Corrado is busy substitute teaching, and reports that she and Michael are planning a spring wedding. She also keeps busy by looking for a permanent job somewhere in Connecticut. Pat spent the summer working with emotionally disturbed preschoolers. She also attended the Duber-Rosenberg wedding and reports that "a good time was had by all!"

Lynn Emberg has remained in Pittsburgh, where she attends The Theological Seminary part-time, and works as a chaplain at Pitt with the university and city ministries. Another classmate at Pitt is Denyse Dunmeyer, who is doing graduate work in French. Denyse spent the summer waitressing and reports "no hot news" for the present time. Jolene Ereditario is also in graduate school, at the University of North Carolina, where she is studying biology.

Sharon Cottrell Pleninger will be living in England for the next year; Andy is attending graduate school there, and Sharon will be busy job-hunting.

Cathy Cusack is living in Virginia and working in Washington, D.C., as a securities clerk for the Union Trust Company.

Edie DeLisio spent the summer working with CAST-I, Chatham's summer theatre. She divides her time now doing volunteer work with theatre groups in Pittsburgh, patronizing Sodini's, and looking for a job — "as a star!"

Nothing special to report from here in New Castle. My apologies to all my friends who have heard nothing from me since graduation — hope to catch up on all the news soon. I spent the summer discovering how horrible unemployment really is, and now I'm busy job hunting and applying to graduate schools. Thanks so much to everyone who responded to my pleas for news!

Missie reporting:

Hi, here I am at Lehigh University working on a Master's in International Relations and my classmates are all scattered doing great things. Susan Gilbert spent the summer in Pittsburgh as the Assistant Program Director for the Y-IRC Family Park in Monroeville. Until she starts graduate work in January, on a Master's in Elementary Education, Susan said she will be working in her family's furniture store in Pompano Beach, and doing substitute teaching and tutoring.

Mary Ann Gilmartin wrote to say that she spent the summer as a Travel Counselor for the West Penn Motor Club in Pittsburgh. She will be starting graduate work this fall in Pittsburgh.

Linda Harger started graduate school this summer. She entered Northeastern University Graduate Program of Professional Accounting in Boston. Linda said she will be at Northeastern this fall but plans to return to Pittsburgh, January thru March, to work as an intern with an accounting firm in the area. Linda said she'd talked to Margie Nordheim — no news.

Vern Herron will start her second year at American University Law School. This summer Vern stayed in the D.C. area working as a research assistant for the Joint Center for Political Studies. Future plans, in her case, include returning to Pennsylvania to practice law and possibly teach.

Marilyn Horbaly wrote that she spent the summer working full time at Woodward and Lothrop (a local department store) and full time job searching. Success! Marilyn will be a kindergarten teacher this fall at the Woodley Hills Elementary School in Alexandria, VA.

Diane Hughey said she split her time this summer between the beach and graduate school at Duke University. This fall, she will be teaching high school geometry and algebra, while working on an M.A.T. in Math at Duke. Diane said she hopes eventually to get back to Pittsburgh to teach.

Congrats to Ellen Kardon and Brad Berman. Ellen said they went to Montreal after they got married. Then, they were off to the shore to see Chantal Obermeyer. Ellen said she had talked to Margi Whitmer and saw Betsi Liebenau at Ann Manoli's wedding. Betsi is moving to Boston, so the word goes.

Besides loafing this summer Beth Isikoff and Pat Corrado worked on their non-verbal cook book with hopes of getting it published. Beth is now teaching elementary school and has plans for graduate school in Boulder, Colorado.

Graduate school in Bethlehem is quite a change from my summer of sun, sand and sailing on Cape Cod, so I'd better get to work.

Mara reporting:

From the ten replies I received, it appears that the scholars outnumber the career women by a slight margin.

Lee Lemesh is a post-baccalaureate at University of Pittsburgh this fall and then will be reapplying to grad school for tropical ecology — good luck!

Paula Leshko Zuzo and her husband, Gus, are finally settled in Virginia, having spent two months finishing unfinished furniture. She's looking forward to classes at the University of Virginia.

Lynn Mack writes that her summer's been fantastic up in Maine where she worked in a gift shop.

After madly searching for an apartment she's now attempting to furnish it — in between her studies at Case Western Reserve Dental School. While she's looking forward to her studies at Case, she says she's a little leery about the ratio of 15 women to 120 men. Such problems!

After working as a Personnel Staffing Specialist for the U. S. Civil Service Commission this summer, Maureen McHugh will hold a teaching assistantship for graduate study in Social Psychology at the University of Pittsburgh. She will be helping with the course, "Psychology of Women" and hopes to continue her research on female motivation, while completing her doctorate.

Marilyn Miller is enrolled at the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor in the school's two-year master's program in Art History.

Even though Anne Lang wrote, "... nothing too new in my life," it seem exciting enough to be named as one of the 25 people elected to the Board of Directors of the National Organization for Women at their conference in Houston last May!

When it gets too cold to sell Good Humor ice cream, Sue Merriman plans to travel this fall. She's in the process of having "Gingerale" copyrighted, printed, and hopefully, produced in Pittsburgh. Good news — another musical is coming! It's a comedy about a private women's college (Chatham?)... the characters including a music major, an actress and a "dope fiend." As for academia, Sue hopes to attend the University of Wisconsin in 1975 taking up Theory and Composition.

Sue Leonard says things are going O.K. for her, working at A.T.&T. Long Lines in Pittsburgh, and while the salary's not fantastic, it does pay the rent. Keep plugging, Sue!

One of the execs among us, Kay Kiefer, has landed a job with Westinghouse Electric as a contract negotiator. The job involves travel, an expense account, trips and parties at the State Department and in the embassies in Washington, D.C. — and a little bit of paperwork. She just bought a 1974 Fiat 128, but socially she says everyone talks sailing, and she's had to learn a whole new vocabulary!

As for me, I'm keeping busy with community theatre, choral societies, and right now, I'm just about ready to begin "pounding the pavement" in New York City.

Jen reporting:

Most of the people I heard from have stayed in the Pittsburgh area — is this an indication that we're settling down already or that Pittsburgh has suddenly after four years become "where it's happening?" Anyway, here's what's happening:

Jacqueline Patten, after working with retarded children through the summer, is an intern at Pitt this fall in a year's program that will get her a Master's in student guidance counselling. Judy Nemzer — who as we all remember was one of the lucky ones to get a job right away upon graduating — is still really enjoying counselling at Women's Health Services in Pittsburgh, an "out-of-sight place to be employed," she says. And Lisa Nicholas, another early graduate, is "returning to school" this fall in a new role — as a teacher. She's instructing ceramics at Ellis School and will also continue to hostess and bartend at the Red Bull Inn — as she says, two very different ways of working with people. Annie Murphy ("never known for her written verbosity") reports that she's working in the delicatessen of Foodtown Supermarket, has given up commencing a career for awhile, and is quite happy. Judi Parker Wolf is also living a quiet happy life as a self-employed ceramicist with her own studio. She and her husband Barnes are living in New Bethlehem, Pa. Cindy Montgomery is continuing to enjoy the business world at the recruiting and placement division of Westinghouse. She also recently moved into a beautiful apartment in Squirrel Hill. I have first-hand evidence on that because I'm preparing to move in with her sometime in October. I've been studying corporate law at the Institute for Paralegal Training in Philadelphia (where Elsie Heard just joined the criminal law class), and hope to be working for a law firm in Pittsburgh as soon as possible! In the meantime, I enjoyed visiting or seeing Mara Mittleman, Barbara Sloane, Diane Sakilaris, Terre Ross, and Randy Gelfand Lewis, all of whom are fine and for the moment settled.

I guess we're all finding out how much of a pleasure it is to talk with (or hear from) anyone in the class now that we've all gone separate ways. I only to catch up on "informal news." So in closing, I especially want to thank those who answered my card, and to promise that next time I really will have everything right! Take care and keep in touch.

Betsy reporting:

Terri Weinrich reports that — after frantic searching she has taken a job teaching German at the Keystone Oaks High School where she is responsible for launching a new German program for the middle school. She also reports that she is attending Pittsburgh tonight and that she and Ricky have set the date, June 28th, for their wedding. Good luck!

Leslie Werner is currently working as an Associate Staff Assistant in the Marketing Administration Department of Westinghouse-Advanced Reactors Department. Loves her job, and says she is considering making a career in international marketing.

In her letter, Pat Simpson indicated that she is currently living at her sister's home, helping to care for her new twin nephews. Pat says she is considering graduate schools at this point.

Many thanks to Brooke Tennyson for her card. Hope all is well.

Pat Wintermyer is currently teaching seventh grade English in the Norwin School District and is working on her M.A. in English at Duquesne University.

From Arizona, Mary Stephens Schweiker writes that she is still hunting for some form of "meaningful employment." In the meantime she has been spending hours baking in the sun, not a bad alternative it seems!

Marjean Wallover reports that she has no specific job plans as yet, at least not until after her wedding which is planned for January 10, 1975.

Currently Suzanne Sliger is working as a waitress and within the month she expects to begin at Seton as a "Management Trainee." She intends to work a year and then continue on to graduate school at George Washington University.

Richard and I are now settled at Milford Academy. I arrived fully expecting to pursue a career but I have found, for the moment at least, that my role as houseparents is extremely time consuming. We have 11 teenage boys in our dormitory. It will be challenging, but we're sure the rewards will outweigh the problems of "communal living."

No class news was received from Margie Nordheim in time for publication in this issue of The Recorder.

The RECORDER: Official publication of the Chatham College Alumnae Association, Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania 15232. Published December and May.

What's In A Name?

With all due respect to William Shakespeare, he didn't know what he was talking about. To Chatham graduates and to the Alumnae Office the name is extremely important and so is the prefix. To "Mrs., Miss or Ms." is the question.

Some alumnae accuse Chatham, as a college for women, of insensitivity to its mission by its use of the old title of Miss or by addressing a married woman by her husband's name. The women's movement is supported wholeheartedly by the Alumnae Office but there are record-keeping problems that everyone may not understand.

The addresses are affixed to our mailings by means of an addressograph plate. New addressograph plates are ordered from a commercial concern, not made by the College, every time an alumna moves — and about one-third of all our alumnae move at least once a year. These must be kept up to date because the cost of mailing alone, plus the re-mailing charges if the address is incorrect, has become astronomical. This is one reason we strongly urge all the alumnae to keep the Alumnae Office informed of their address changes. Re-mailing a single issue of a RECORDER can sometimes cost as much as $.50-$.75 per copy, plus the cost of a new plate.

These plates will be changed upon request but for obvious economic reasons we will not arbitrarily change prefixes unless we are notified first of the preference. Some women are as offended by being addressed as Ms. as others are by Miss or Mrs. Because of the similarity of many names, it is imperative that the Alumnae Office know the married name and the husband's first name as well. To offer an over-simplified example, Mary Brown '73 may marry John Brown. There may be a Mary Brown of the class of 1935 or 1950. We need some way of determining which Mary Brown we are writing to or contributions to the Chatham Fund or requests for transcripts cannot be processed correctly. The Alumnae Office is the repository of all alumnae records and all the College offices depend on these records. We will use whatever mailing name you prefer but we do need the complete name for our files. We are more than sympathetic with your wishes but first please let us know your preference before accusing us of lack of sensitivity to changing life styles.

ADMINISTRATION AND MANAGEMENT ...A New Program

by MARY BETH PETERS

Mary Beth Peters with student Deborah Elliott '76.

Several years before my arrival on the Chatham scene an imaginative group of faculty and administrators were at work on the program in Administration and Management. They did their research and developed a proposal which was funded by the Lilly Endowment and the Carnegie Corporation of New York.

There was a growing awareness that something really new was needed to prepare women, educated in the liberal arts tradition, for non-traditional careers. The Program in Administration and Management is a really new development.

- It is new because it prepares women to become managers in all types of organizations, not just business.
- It is new because it is not a technical but a liberal education that is offered.
- It is new because of the assumptions which support it. We assume that a woman's life experience should become the basis for newly-developed management skills and style. We also assume that women will need practice in management functions as well as knowledge of those functions. We believe that to be effective managers they must be social architects; that is, they must be able to conceive and create human social structures which provide for effective and creative work. Of course, they must understand and know how to use quantitative methods for problem solving and planning. And with all that, they need to know their own values, and how to relate them to the changing social and physical environment.

So our curriculum includes Economics to enable the manager to relate her organization to the economy and to give her another way of viewing the world, another language to use. Many top level executives know economics well, and she should know what is required to get her to the top if she wants to go there. Managerial Accounting is included to prepare her to understand financial statements, records and how to manage the accounting functions. A course in the use of Computers for Decision Making prepares her to understand and use the computer in managerial functions and decisions. Because being able to express one's self clearly, descriptively and succinctly is essential to success as a manager (and as a human), there is a course in Expository Writing.

Early in her management education she is engaged in a two-term course called Experiencing and Managing Organizations. In this course, the future manager is taught to assess and to put in order her experiences in organizations and in managerial functions which she has already learned to perform. On that base is then built an increasing knowledge and understanding of organizations and the skills required to manage them effectively.

Calculus and mathematic models for decision making are considered a necessary part of her education. A one-term course to prepare future managers for the legal, ethical and societal dilemmas to which their organizations must respond is also a pivotal part of her education. On this basis of quantitative and qualitative knowledge, we provide a term of organization problem solving. Many case studies used in that course present problems with elements unique to women, because we believe it is our duty to prepare them to handle well the increasing opportunities offered women.

Depending on the type of organization a student expects to enter, there are certain other requirements, such as Public Administration, Labor Economics, the American Judicial Process, the Volunteer Systems and Money and Banking.

An excellent option made available by Chatham's open curriculum is the multidiscipline major. A student majoring in any other discipline may choose to add management, and create a unique curriculum. Such varied preparation is likely to prevent that graduate from suffering the "dead-end syndrome" which has plagued women for years. That is, a really good biologist may remain the firm's professional biologist while young men move in to be trained by her and leave to move on up the organization ladder.

The final requirement for the management major as for all other majors at Chatham is the tutorial — a special independent study project undertaken by the student in an interest of her own. With competent faculty guidance the tutorial can prepare the student to show real strength in an area of management which is unique to her — to be a "budding" specialist.

Naturally, the ingredient which makes any education useful is experience. Special experience for this major is provided by internships during the college career. Chatham's calendar, with its January interim, lends itself nicely to the use of internships. During January 1975, there were interns in Mellon Bank, Alcoa, Westinghouse, Gimbel's, Kaufmann's, Mercy Hospital, Pittsburgh Child Guidance Center, Bureau of Government Financial Operations of the U. S. Treasury, PPG, Rockwell International and the National Student Lobby. During these experiences much of their theoretical knowledge becomes an integral part of their decisions and actions. Or as the old saying goes, "Book learning becomes common sense learning."

The present group of management majors is small and includes sophomores and juniors as well as three Gateway students. The courses have attracted Gateway students who are college graduates but have come to prepare for entering the business world or volunteer organizations as professionals.

At Chatham we feel a strong responsibility to the organizations in this area to tell them what kind of graduate they can expect, and to help them prepare to make proper use of our graduates. Because most of Pittsburgh's heavy industry has previously hired male engineers, there are some changes needed if they and our graduates are to be mutually benefited. The interns have shown many of these organizations that women liberal arts students have a very real and important contribution to make. Based on that opening we continue to assist them in assessing the benefits to be gained by using our graduates and to make the preparation for them. Maybe that door was first opened by the Equal Employment Opportunity Act — but we are finding that many organizations are very receptive to our graduates.

The learning for those of us who develop and teach in the program is also great. This year, for example, we discovered that today's student is likely to be quite ignorant of the modern corporation in our free enterprise system. To that end we are proposing a course, available to first-year students, on the modern corporation.

Most departments of the College have contributed to the planning of this major. Special courses have been prepared by the Math, English and Science departments as requirements in the curriculum. Other departments have prepared recommended courses. This assures the student a broad background in the liberal arts which is so necessary to produce a well-rounded person.

We have also discovered real interest in areas such as marketing, personnel, distribution — which we will not be investigating in our curriculum. Consideration is being given to sponsoring short, non-credit courses in such subjects. These courses would be available to women in organizations in this area as well as to our own students.

A major concern which still is unsolved is how to determine the long-lasting quality of the education our graduates have received. Of course, that is not unique to our major but we are working to determine ways to measure — and hopefully to know how to improve — our curriculum based on real data from their work experience.

Mary Beth Peters, nationally recognized leader in organizational development and management science, is the Director of the Program in Administration and Management at Chatham College. This program, together with the program in Communication (reported in the spring, 1974 issue of the RECORDER), was initiated last fall as part of Chatham's New Directions for Women, a pioneer approach in the education of women. Ms. Peters has served as a consultant to a number of the country's leading corporations as well as with the Agency for International Development, the U. S. Treasury and numerous educational and religious organizations, including the National Council of Churches. A native of Houston, Texas, Ms. Peters received the B.A. and B.S. degrees in architecture from Rice University. She is one of seventeen persons to be nominated by President Gerald R. Ford as members of the Advisory Council on Women's Educational Programs.

Students On The Job

by GAYE TORRANCE '77

For many of us at Chatham the month of January means exciting internships in our particular fields of interest. These internships are individually set up for us by the Communication program advisors, the Career Planning Office or through a student's own personal contacts. After a meeting with our field sponsors we then devote the entire month working in a business environment where we are given the opportunity to learn the terms, techniques and processes used in the specific organization. At the end of the month the sponsors submit an evaluation letter of our performance which is filed in the Career Planning Office. This past January approximately one hundred Chatham students were involved in a variety of field placements ranging from hospitals, schools, advertising agencies, law firms, business corporations, institutions for the handicapped and many more.

Chatham's internship program exposes us to the field which we think we want to pursue in the future. Because of this opportunity, some students realized they did not enjoy the particular job after all; others became aware of the need for future education; and the majority of students gained self-confidence knowing they could handle such a job following graduation.

Beryl Gundy, a junior majoring in Sociology-Anthropology, decided to spend January working as an intern for Carnegie Museum in their section of man dealing with Archeology and Anthropology. Beryl enjoyed studying the collections and, as a result, realized the need for future education in order to be better qualified in this area. She has always been intrigued with the idea of working in a museum but wasn't sure until after her January experience. "After all," Beryl stated, "that's what internships are for!"

A few years ago a woman working in Corporate Design for Westinghouse would have seemed impossible. However with the help of a Chatham alumna, Chris Goulet made such an experience possible by spending January in three departments at Westinghouse dealing with Graphic, Industrial, and Architectural and Interior Design. As a senior Art History major, Chris now feels the need for graduate study in order to learn the technical aspects of art. "They were all specialists, and I was a generalist," she explained. But Chris also mentioned the experience was one of the most worthwhile things she has done at Chatham.

Since the January internships are open to underclassmen as well as juniors and seniors, Diedre Watters, a freshman decided to take advantage of the situation by working for the Greensburg Tribune Review. "You name it, I did it," she responded when asked what her job entailed. Features straight news stories, headlines and sports coverage were all a part of her daily routine as an intern reporter. Apparently Diedre handled the job with no problems since she was offered a summer position with the newspaper. Diedre who has always been interested in Journalism, admitted, "I felt like I was a part of the whole thing."

Cathie Valenti's internship at the East Pittsburgh branch of Westinghouse involved composing the company's newsletter, writing articles for the Pittsburgh papers and conducting interviews. Ms. Thelma Niesser, editor of the East Pittsburgh Westinghouse News and a Chatham alumna, gave Cathie a number of responsibilities throughout the month because she is a strong supporter of Chatham's internship program and realizes the need for experience in a student's field of interest. Cathie, a junior English major, plans to work in public relations following graduation.

CATHIE VALENTI wrote newsletter copy and programmed the in-house "tele-communicator" for the Westinghouse East Pittsburgh plant. Her supervising sponsor, on the left, was Chatham alumna Thelma Niesser.

BETH HYDOVITZ wrote the Women's News (in addition to general assignment stories) for WIIC-TV, Channel 11, in Pittsburgh.

The opportunity of working in a hospital with professionals in another internship option available for Chatham women. Under the supervision of Dr. Harvey Slater, the College physician, Beth Campbell observed the surgery procedures of patients in the Burn Unit at West Penn Hospital. As a sophomore majoring in Biology and planning on medical school, Beth was concerned with the differences in blood coagulation of burn victims. After writing a review on the subject she now realizes this field needs more research. As a result, Beth hopes to develop the topic more fully for her tutorial project and later plans to specialize in children's burns as a physician.

Junior Eva Kaplan served her internship in a law office to attain a realistic perspective of the criminal courts system through direct contact with courtroom participants.

According to Eva, it all worked out even better than she anticipated. She followed a private defense attorney and an assistant district attorney through their days in court and in their offices, at police stations, and did some research on a case. Learning about the power politics structure of the criminal justice system was, to her, one of the most important concepts for a budding attorney to learn.

Beth Hydovitz, a sophomore, is now an employed writer for the Sunday evening news at WIIC-TV station. She was never particularly interested in this type of work until after she spent the first two weeks of January in the Channel 11 newsroom. Although Beth spent most of the month as a newswriter, she also traveled with the reporters and helped produce a documentary in the Public Affairs Department. She has two more years at Chatham and plans to continue working at Channel 11 during that time; but, because of her internship, Beth's goals are now set for the future. She hopes to attend graduate school to learn the skills for editing, directing and shooting a news program. When asked why she wants to gain knowledge in all these areas, Beth confidently replied, "I would like to know how to perform any function for a news show. I don't want to be just a producer the rest of my life."

This past January I became involved in a variety of projects at Communicators Pittsburgh. Designing ads, writing press releases for companies and composing a cover letter were some of my responsibilities. Since the agency produces slide presentations and films for industries in the area I had the opportunity of learning how such projects are written, directed and edited. It is true that "learning is by doing" but, I must admit, I learned equally as much by listening to my supervisors during interviews, conferences and general meetings. As a sophomore majoring in English and interested in the Communication program, I feel the internships provide students with a terrific opportunity for becoming involved in their specific fields of interest. After my two internships of working in the Public Relations Department for the Pittsburgh Symphony and writing ads for Communicators Pittsburgh, I have gained additional knowledge that can only come through experience.

I'm sure most of the students who have also participated in Chatham internships will agree when I say that such field placements are exciting, challenging and definitely worthwhile.

Some Thoughts on Ecology For Technological Man

by DR. MARY SCHLITT KOSTALOS '67

A few years ago ecology swept through the nation resulting in a rash of "Earth Day" observances, clean-ups of littered streams and parks, and general concern for environmental matters. Although the fad has largely faded, the importance of ecology to technological societies remains. The purpose of this essay is not to tell you all about ecology but to briefly outline some basic principles of ecology and the importance of these concepts to us.

Ecology comes from the Greek word "oikos" meaning home. Ecology literally means the study of the home. Ecologists, then, are concerned with the relationships between living things and their environment. As in other sciences, ecologists attempt to discover basic principles and laws by which they can understand a variety of observed phenomena. The basic unit with which the ecologist is concerned is the ecological system or ecosystem. A system is a group of interacting or interrelated elements which form a collective entity. An ecosystem is, therefore, a group of living organisms which mutually interact with each other and their surroundings to form a functional unit. There is no definite limit to an ecosystem. The entire earth may be considered as an ecosystem of incredible complexity, or an ecosystem may be as small and relatively simple as a terrarium, a rotting log, or even a mud puddle.

The complex relationships in ecosystems have developed over long periods of time, for ecosystems, like individual species, have evolved. Obviously, individual species of plants and animals did not evolve in a vacuum, but in response to particular environmental conditions and the activities of other species. Therefore, evolution occurred at the ecosystem level as well as the species level.

The evolution of life and systems is believed to have taken place in the oceans of the primitive earth some two billion years ago. Simple molecules from the primitive atmosphere such as methane and ammonia dissolved in the water of the seas. Simple, inorganic compounds were carried into the oceans from the earth's crust. Ultraviolet light from the sun and electrical discharges from lightning provided energy to drive chemical reactions resulting in the formation of ever larger and more complex molecules, including amino acids and other organic compounds. Eventually these large complex molecules developed properties associated with life-primitive metabolism, reproduction and growth. As the numbers of these protoliving organisms increased, they began to use up the accumulated organic molecules faster than they were being formed, obviously a situation which would severely limit these early life forms. Some of the early living things evolved the ability to utilize energy from sunlight to synthesize their own organic compounds from simple inorganic compounds such as carbon dioxide and water. This was an important step because the formation of organic molecules (food) was now under biotic control and the supply of these compounds could be continuously renewed by the activities of the early photosynthetic organisms.

With a steady, renewable source of food available, the numbers and kinds of living organisms could increase greatly. With this increase there was competition among the primitive organisms for food and other resources. Some organisms did not compete successfully and became extinct. Others adapted. Slight variations among organisms allowed them to exploit slightly different resources and reduce competition. Thus, living things have spread from the oceans to most areas of the earth's surface. Major climatic changes resulted in the extinction of some groups and the evolution and adaptation of the survivors to new conditions. Note that this process is dynamic and that it is still going on today. Organisms adjust to changes in the system. This process has resulted in the diverse and complex ecosystems which exist today. Each organism is adapted to particular conditions and fills a particular role in the ecosystem. Organisms are interdependent and changes in environmental conditions or any organism within the system will result in changes and adjustments throughout the system. A dynamic equilibrium exists in natural ecosystems — a balance that is intricate and beautiful. Organisms are adapted to each other and to conditions. Populations adjust themselves to resources. Starvation and destruction of habitat are rare and transient phenomena in undisturbed ecosystems.

It will be easier to see how this balance is achieved if we examine some of the important processes taking place in any ecosystem. Two of these basic processes are the movement or flow of energy through the system and the cycling of minerals. All living things need a source of energy, and the use and transformation of energy (metabolism) is a basic quality of living things. The ultimate source of energy for living things is the sun. Green plants are able to utilize light energy to synthesize large organic molecules, such as carbohydrates, lipids and proteins. In essence, light energy is converted into chemical energy in the bonds of these large molecules. Animals cannot synthesize organic compounds from simple inorganic precursors and are dependent upon plants. Plant-eating animals or herbivores consume the organic compounds formed by the plants. Some of the food taken in is broken down for energy; other molecules are variously transformed into molecules used for growth, maintenance and reproduction by the consumer organism. Similarly, if a predator should eat the herbivore, the organic compounds of the herbivore's body become available to the predator. Note that at each step much of the food taken in is used to supply energy for maintenance of the individual consumer and is no longer available to be passed on to a higher level. Thus, energy is lost at each step and must be replaced.

In contrast to energy which must be continually supplied, minerals and nutrients may be recycled through the system many times. There are about forty to fifty elements that are used by living things such as carbon, hydrogen, oxygen, sulfur, nitrogen, calcium, phosphorous, iron and many others. These elements tend to cycle from one organism to another following much the same pattern as the flow of energy. Simple inorganic forms of these nutrients are taken up from the soil by plants and converted into various cell constituents. If the plants are eaten, not only the energy stored in the molecules of the plant but also the nutrients pass to the consuming animal. The elements and compounds may in turn be passed on to higher level consumers. At each level some materials move back into the environment through secretions, excretions or death of the organism. So far the pattern is much like that of energy flow. The major difference is that energy is lost from the system and must be constantly supplied. Nutrients, on the other hand, may be recycled indefinitely. The importance of the microorganisms such as bacteria and fungi cannot be over-emphasized in this recycling process. Nutrients tend to pass back into the environment in the form of complex compounds which cannot readily be utilized by plants. Bacteria and fungi break down these complex molecules and convert these compounds to simpler ones. Eventually the nutrients are reconverted to a simple inorganic form which can be readily utilized by plants and the cycle repeats.

These movements of energy and nutrients are merely two of the processes which tie ecosystems together and relate organisms to each other and their environment. In naturally functioning ecosystems these pathways can be very complex. Some scientists have compared an ecosystem to an individual organism. The proper functioning of an ecosystem is dependent upon the harmonious action of individual species just as individuals cannot continue to live without the unified and interdependent activities of the digestive, respiratory, and other organ systems. It is felt by some that the ecosystem is the last in a hierarchy of organization starting with atoms and elements and continuing through molecules, cells, tissues, organisms and finally, ecosystems. The ecosystem has been described as a kind of super-organism. Although this analogy can be pushed too far, it has the advantage of reminding us of the interdependency and interrelatedness of the components in the system.

Although the basic principles have been established in studies of natural ecosystems, they are equally important in Homo sapiens dominated systems. In our civilized and highly technological societies, we are often far removed from nature, and we seem to feel that we are somehow above the laws of nature and these principles no longer apply to us. But we are still a part of the earth ecosystem and our activities have profound and unexpected effects throughout the system. Let's look at just a few of the thousands of available examples.

Some years ago, in Borneo the World Health Organization initiated a mosquito control program which included the spraying of large amounts of DDT. The DDT controlled the mosquitoes but shortly after the spraying program the thatched roofs of the houses collapsed because they were being eaten by caterpillars which were little affected by the DDT. The wasp that had kept the caterpillar under control had been killed by the spraying. But the story doesn't end there. Houseflies were also killed in great numbers; the flies, containing large concentrations of DDT were eaten by lizards which in turn died. Cats ate the lizards and also died. With the death of the cats, the population of rats (potential plague carriers) multiplied explosively. Finally, the situation became so desperate that cats were parachuted into Borneo in an attempt to control the rats. Thus a program designed to control one species had repercussions throughout the ecosystem, finally creating a potentially more serious problem than the one originally caused by the mosquitoes (Berry, et al. 1974. Chemical Villains, C. V. Mosby Co., St. Louis).

More significantly, current research indicates that air pollution from industrial sources and power plants may be causing widespread, perhaps global changes in weather patterns. For example, there has been a slight but detectable increase in the atmospheric concentration of carbon dioxide worldwide. It has been hypothesized that this increase will retard the loss of heat from the earth, thus raising the average temperature of the earth a few degrees which will melt the polar ice caps and cause a considerable rise in sea level, enough to flood many coastal cities. Less speculative and better documented are reports of changes in local weather patterns downwind from major industrial areas. These downwind areas have been shown to have a significant increase in cloud cover, rain and hail. Such changes can affect the general habitat and, in particular, farming and crop yields. Another problem is related to the increased acidity of rain over large areas of the United States. This increase has been attributed to atmospheric pollutants which react with water to form acids. Acid rainfall may already be adversely affecting crops in some areas. Furthermore, acid water tends to dissolve soil nutrients and allow them to be leached away, thus reducing soil fertility. Again, serious consequences may be felt throughout the entire ecosystem.

It is obvious that the activities of man are having profound effects on the total earth ecosystem. In fact, one of the characteristics that distinguishes man from other species is his great ability to alter the environment. There is considerable disagreement among scientists as to the magnitude and seriousness of these effects. This is not an appeal to close the mills and return to the pre-industrial lifestyle. But despite our ability to manipulate the environment, we are still bound by the basic laws of nature. We are still dependent on other plants and animals. In the future we must learn to predict and anticipate the possible effects of our activities and learn to minimize the adverse side-effects on the earth ecosystem. We may have to recognize and accept limits on our activities. At the present time it appears that our ability to alter the environment far exceeds our wisdom in understanding and dealing with the changes caused and herein lies the danger.

Mary Schlitt Kostalos graduated from Chatham College in 1967 with a B.S. degree in biology. She earned the Ph.D. in biology at the University of Pittsburgh where her graduate work and specialized training were in the field of ecology. She is presently Assistant Professor of Biology at Chatham.

Report on the Gateway Program

by DIRECTOR BETSY LYTTLE SUATONI '59

The Gateway Program is a new program at Chatham, designed for women 25 years old and over, who have been out of college on a full-time basis for four years or more. There have been adult students here in the past, but it was just last spring that the College decided to make a definite program for them with the name "Gateway" and the addition of special services and conditions.

The effort is two-pronged: to increase enrollments and to make education accessible to the mature woman who wishes to return to college. The effort has been a successful one; there were about a dozen adult students here one year ago, and there are close to seventy at the present time.

The mean age of these students is in the mid-thirties, but the range is from the twenties into the sixties. Thirty-eight are seeking degrees; thirty are non-degree students. Thirteen are here full-time; fifty-five are here part-time. Twenty-five are from the nearby neighborhoods and the rest come from distances as far as Greensburg, Apollo, Sewickley, Upper St. Clair and many others. I think the rising numbers show the need felt by women today to continue to grow. Many have career goals, some for the near future, some quite long-range. Others are here for the simple reason that their brains are starving and need nourishment. Some women have degrees, but want to change career directions or get into something new, and they are taking courses to be able to do that. The common denominator among all the women is their enthusiasm and sense of personal growth. It has been most exciting for me to be a part of this program and the positive creative attitude of the College in dealing with students of multiple roles has been a joy to see.

Each Gateway Program student, like her younger counterpart, is assigned a faculty advisor to help her with any problems or questions. A student admitted to the Gateway Program may enroll in her first nine courses at one-half the normal tuition charge. Full tuition will be charged for the final nine courses taken for a degree. Degree candidates may apply for financial aid.

Career Planning Office Survey

Students and prospective students frequently inquire about what Chatham graduates do after leaving college. The data we have on you is incomplete in some cases, non-existent in others. Your cooperation in providing the information requested below would be most helpful to us in providing guidance and inspiration to today's students. If you are not currently working, we would still like to hear about your past experiences.

Dear Nancy,

Please take a closer look at your class news. There are few who have chosen to remain at home and be "mommies." Most have outside interests and many have jobs. There were no marriages or engagements and only four births announced in this year's news. Child rearing will occupy a relatively short time for many and then they will be on to other activities.

Do you think it is inappropriate for educated women to bear and raise children? It would be tragic if only the uneducated became parents. As mothers, we can help to dispel those old invalid stereotypes of women, both by attitude and, more importantly, by deed.

I do think, however, that some of the things which you find objectionable could be eliminated. Comments about how "busy" one is, the method of birth or feeding of one's baby or the "cute" things one's children do should have no place in the alumnae news. There is absolutely no reason for there to be any mention of diapers . . . ever. Class news should contain the things that we, as women of varied interests, are involved in doing.

Despite the format of the questionnaire, Chatham does care about the "dignity of women." A simple request for name, address, and "news" should be sufficient. The articles in the RECORDER have not dealt with "motherhood" but rather with the careers and accomplishments of Chatham's students and graduates. Articles like those of Dr. Smith and Ms. McNerney in the fall 1974 issue are what an alumnae magazine should contain.

There are far too many men who "put down" women; we don't need women to do the same to other women. Please don't turn your back on Chatham and your classmates because some have opted to follow more traditional paths, at least temporarily. Those who are "creative and involved with self-actualization" should inspire others to reach their potentials and help by showing what women can achieve. Those who are "mommies" today have many years left in which to make other contributions. Let us not deprecate but encourage all women to be what they are capable of being.

Sincerely,
Meg Alexander Sprenkle '63

A letter which appeared in the December '74 issue of the RECORDER, written by Nancy Beal '64 has prompted me to read through all the class news — straight back to the class of 1916. Ms. Beal accused Chatham graduates of dissolving into suburban mommies and abandoning their once-held goals to lives of non-thinking devotion to house, husband and offspring. Her greatest objection is to the RECORDER as a publication since, she contends, it gives the impression that the goals of a Chatham education appear to be the aforementioned activities.

I wondered for a moment whether Ms. Beal might be correct and that I might wake up one morning to find myself an ambition-less woman who hadn't realized I'd passed life by. My detective work indicated that she wasn't entirely in the right in her appraisal of Chatham graduates. They are living, working and studying in all corners of the world. Judging by their letters, I would say that some have made quite significant contributions to their chosen fields. There are members of the classes of '16 and '18 who continue to travel worldwide and hold keen interest in the lives they have made for themselves. (By the way, reading the news from these early graduates is a matchless experience since it tends to give rise to all sorts of speculation concerning one's later — and last — years.)

All this reading proved heartening; Chatham graduates not only age gracefully, they become more interesting after a period out of school. As a point of interest, I would say that it is only after 5 or so years out of college, difficult years of indecision, struggle and self-doubt, that we begin at last to see an orderly pattern in our lives and to appraise our goals in a realistic manner.

Yes, we have husbands and families; for it's the people in our lives that make them rich. We also develop as individuals, some becoming more noteworthy than others, as is to be expected.

Perhaps the one thing we tend to overlook (and I have been reminded of this by my husband) is the difficulty the men in our lives often experience in accepting us as true equals — in all areas of our living together. This, I believe, may be most evident while we are still in our 20's, still formative years when we (and he) are not yet established nor ready to be established in whatever it is we have chosen to do, years during which we may be tempted to compete with one another.

I must praise those fortunate men who have aligned themselves with Chatham women. I suspect that I am not the only one who has had to be reminded of the manly valor it takes to cope with us; for we're an unyielding, though not a selfish group.

It was my original intention to prepare a more lengthy and serious reply to Ms. Beal, but I became confused about what it was that I would have said to her. I do believe that what becomes of each of us is purely of our own doing; and that for most of us, the lives we lead are the ones we wanted. As Collette reflected, "all those things that might have been are things we never could have done."

But what have I done? I have begun a lingerie business and had hoped to open the second of my boutiques last fall but was put off by a sour economy. My husband, despite his conviction that he has reached middle age, has begun a new career. He has begun to study for a degree in architecture. My son is in nursery school but may be expelled for stubborn behavior.

I feel that I must respond to comments by one alumna which appeared in the fall 1974 RECORDER concerning the "repugnant" nature of the class news. First, of the total number of pages in that issue of the magazine, only 60% was devoted to class news. The remaining non-news portion has been enlarged in recent years specifically in order to provide a format for expression by any alumna who cares to exercise this privilege. Response to a specific question regarding this format made by me last year when I solicited class news was favorable.

Second, the pages of the RECORDER are, in fact, blank until we, the alumnae, write on them. The purpose of the class news portion — in my view at any rate — remains that for which it was named: to record the living experiences of the hundreds of Chatham alumnae as written by the alumnae themselves. Within some space constraints, the alumna herself is responsible for what is written about her; the college does not dictate any stereotyped male-oriented picture. The fact that our dissatisfied alumna was quoted should demonstrate a willingness to publish other than marriage and baby news. At a minimum, each one of us was directly associated with seven classes during our stay at Chatham College — assuming a four-year attendance — not to mention those alumnae met through alumnae club activities, family (have you noticed the number of students having alumnae relations?), reunions, and those simply met casually and unexpectedly (I met one in the corner drugstore a few weeks ago). I personally am interested in what the persons I lived with and knew of are experiencing. I also find it something of a historical microcosm of our society to browse through the years. For instance, have you noticed that the earlier alums seem to have been largely pre-occupied with family and teaching, while a significantly higher ratio of more recent alumnae are receiving advanced degrees and pursuing fascinating non-traditional vocations and avocations in addition to managing home and family?

Also, for many of us, the RECORDER is the only way we will be able to keep in touch with many of these women with whom we shared intimately 20% of the first 21 years of our lives.

In describing our alumnae RECORDER, I prefer to draw on a characterization borrowed from Tolstoy by another alumna and class secretary in the same fall RECORDER, and which I think is worth repeating: the true meaning of life and true happiness are to be found simply in living, in pedestrian daily experiences, and not in any grand design or philosophical schemes. This alumna found her class news full of precious details about our classmates' daily lives indicative of a fondness for Chatham friends that so many from so far away would share their lives and their happiness so freely. I can think of no more appropriate way to describe the objective of the RECORDER — and of its success.

Oh, yes, and a post script to all class secretaries. Let's all resolve not to make any mention about poor responses to requests for class news. I think reading such remarks over and over is in itself some inducement for not replying. Let us enjoy those replies we receive and hope to hear from additional respondents next year.

DEATHS

Martha Young McKeon, January 17, 1975
Mildred Weston Rogers, February 6, 1975

We extend our heartfelt sympathy to the families of both Martha and Mildred. Both had suffered broken hips and failed to recover from the after-effects.

Faye Atkinson McCune and her husband continue to live in the same home which they enjoy. Lucile Atkinson Baker's item of news is that she attended the wedding of her beloved granddaughter in December. From Christine Cameron Bryan comes word of a recent operation but improvement each day.

Our sympathy went out to Laila Clark Ament in November when her aunt, Mrs. Alta Dilley, who had lived with her for a number of years, died after attaining the remarkable age of 110. Laila is still following along with her various interests and is counted on at all meetings of Decade V.

The plan of Helen Craig Culley to move into a retirement residence has been carried out and she reports things are working out quite well. Though it may be called "A Leisure World," Helen says it is really a hub of activity. Louise Fletcher has been in Sarasota again for the winter and glad to be out of northern weather. She is unable to get around much because of the serious and painful condition of her knees but still attends AAUW affairs with Lois Hinckley, '31. Louise enjoys hearing about our Decade Club meetings. She sent me a newspaper picture of Donald Buka, son of our classmate Esther Rosenbloom Buka, who is again appearing in plays in Sarasota.

From Emma Geiselhart Osterloh comes news of a worsening of vision in her right eye, but she is grateful for the functioning of the left one. She spent several weeks in Connecticut last summer visiting her daughter Betty. She and Christine Bryan wish to be remembered to all. I have had no direct word from Jeanne Gray Orcutt and am very sorry to hear indirectly that she is in poor health. A prompt reply to my request for news came from Grace Wilson who reports she is still "going along" and thankful for that. A cane and a few pills are a help! I had brief but happy reunions in Florida last winter and in July, my annual visit in Oneonta, NY. More recently, I had a ten-day "vacation" in the hospital having tests.

Our only big news this year seems to be our reunion. Olga Losa, Mary Jeffrey, Mary Estep Starr, Betty Cameron Frank and your secretary join in greetings and best wishes to all. Some of us did not have too good a year healthwise but we all hope to be present at the reunion in May.

Jane Errett apologizes profusely to all her classmates for the absence of their class news in this issue of the RECORDER. Because of the pressure of many other things, she could not make this year's deadline.

NEW ADDRESS

Helen Treloar McGarrity (Mrs. John A.), 941 N. Oleander Ave., #3, Daytona Beach, FL 32018

Florence Fast McIntyre writes that she is doing her usual things, is well and anxious to know what you others are doing. Helen Treloar McGarrity also said "nothing special unless feeling hale and hearty at this point in time could be so considered." She thinks doing a lot of walking and swimming helps.

Very nice news from Hazel Curry Koehler — "a great granddaughter was born on our fifty-fourth wedding anniversary." Congratulations and our love to the baby who, unless some of you have been keeping back important information, is a first.

Edith Pew traveled to Greece in the spring and spent January in Florida. When Mary Reed Reeves wrote she was planning to go to a milder climate for a while and as always, has great enjoyment in her five grandchildren.

Caring for her invalid sister keeps Stella Espy, rather close to her home but she went with Edith to New York for several days.

Mabel Shaffer is as busy as ever with her many activities and is glad to have acquired some new friends with similar interests.

Gladys Sullivan Peters spent Christmas with her daughter at Seneca Falls, NY and also time during the year at Terra Alta, WV where she still maintains a home in which her son lives while working on his degree in Economics and teaching at West Virginia University.

To be able to walk about and drive again gives Elizabeth Murphy Walter cause for gratitude. Ellen Martin has not been well and is "up and down." Ada Lou Andrews Day has had some trouble with a previously friendly gall bladder but is better.

"Just enjoying life" is the word from Lucile Long Haseltine, especially since Dr. Haseltine retired this past year. Marcella Geary sends greetings to all as does Marjorie Caughey Musgrave whose two grandchildren are her pride and joy.

Edith Honsaker Schumacher continues to enjoy California and thankfully reports her husband's good recovery from surgery.

Thanks for the responses received and best wishes to each of you.

Because of illness Marion Rainey Johnston will not be able to continue as class secretary and no volunteer could be found to solicit class news for the RECORDER. If anyone is interested, please contact the Alumnae Office.

NEW ADDRESSES

Katheryn Kelty Tea (Mrs. Clark A.), 2520 Ryan Road, Apt. 81, Concord, CA 94518

Bee Stevenson McQuiston reporting for Marian Frank Patterson, our class secretary, who is away on a six-weeks' trip to South America:

Those members of our class who responded to my request for news are very much interested in our 50th reunion and most of them are planning to attend. Helen Ahlers Patton has already contacted several classmates urging them to save the date.

Betty Archibald Andruss has just returned from a ten-weeks' trip to Spain. Since her husband's retirement five years ago they have spent most of the time traveling to many foreign countries. Lois Brown Nabors and her husband visited their daughter and her family who have recently moved to Massachusetts. Lois is an elder in the Trinity United Presbyterian Church of Uniontown, PA.

Sally Chisholm Springer keeps in touch with Florence Steele Bullock '24 and is hoping that she (Florence) may be able to reunite with our class. Sally and Bill travel frequently to Illinois to visit their daughter and her family. Katharine Dashiell Roberts has already planned her itinerary from her home in Florida to be in the Pittsburgh area at reunion time. She will visit her daughter in Kentucky en route.

Louise Graham Brown and Martha Ganiear Garretson are recuperating from broken hips. We hope that both of them will be able to attend our reunion. Martha now makes her home in Waynesburg, PA. Margaret Herron joins with many others who wrote to send best wishes for a happy get-together.

Kate Kelty Tea and her husband enjoy their retirement in Concord, CA. Their older daughter and three grandchildren live nearby and their son, Clark, Jr. is an Episcopalian rector in Boulder City, Nevada. Their youngest daughter was married recently and lives in Michigan. Kate reports that her twin sister, Dot Kelty Fairchild is in a nursing home in Burbank, CA recovering from a stroke.

Jean MacColl Horton and her husband keep busy with houses in Ithan and Cape May, their vocations and avocations. Their son Rick is in the advertising business in Pittsburgh and their other son Stuart and his family live in Massachusetts. Jean reports that she unearthed some wonderful class pictures when she cleaned her desk recently. Do bring them with you to the reunion, Jean!

Harriett McCaw Hale wrote that she meets with Miriam McGormley Gordon and several other "PCW-ites" for occasional luncheons and get-togethers.

Our sympathy goes out to Mary Shane Muir whose sister, Mabel, and brother, Jack, died recently. Mary regrets that the celebrations of their 50th wedding anniversary and that of Marshall's ordination to the Christian ministry will interfere with her attendance at our reunion.

Frances Rolfe had just returned from an eight-weeks' visit with her sister in Connecticut.

I want to thank all of those who replied to my request for class news. Your letters were most interesting and I'm sorry that I could not include more details in the write-up. Save them up until we get together on Alumnae Day, Saturday, May 31st. See you then!

NEW ADDRESSES

Sara Davies St. Clair (Mrs. Floyd), 3700 Main Street, Apt. I, Munhall, PA 15120

Mary Harner Britton (Mrs. A. G.), 2160 Northwest Drive, North Huntingdon, PA 15642

Louise Hazen Meilicke (Mrs. Myron), 4621½ 103rd Street West, Bradenton, FL 33505

Mary Scott Scott (Mrs. Wylie T.), R.D. 3, Box 335, Eighty-Four, PA 15330

We wish to extend our sympathy to Ella English Daub and to Dulcinea Marshall Walker whose mothers died in 1974; and to Ruth McKeever Slater whose husband died last September. Mrs. English had reached her 94th birthday 3 weeks before her death.

Special from Ella: "Please say something about collection for 50th Reunion. Eleven people have completed their $50.00 donations." She means the rest of us had better get busy and finish ours! Ella has had a long struggle getting over her broken leg (of last January) and was still in bed with an enormous cast in April when her mother died in Pittsburgh and so was unable to attend her funeral. Now she is fine and is Recording Secretary for two organizations.

Adeline Crown Jubelirer says: "Primary in our interests are the activities of our grandchildren. Ann is 18 and a freshman at Yale University. Our grandson is 15, enrolled in Brown and Nichols with his eye on Harvard. We spent a week in London in October." They intend to return to Palm Springs for the golf and informal social life among other Pittsburghers. She looks forward to reading the RECORDER.

Sally Davies St. Clair has sold her home and now lives in an apartment. She spent last July visiting her son in Birmingham, AL. Loved being with the children but the sun was too hot for her! She and

Eleanor Boal Thomas get together frequently. Sally hopes to do some hospital volunteer work soon.

Harriet Evans last March had a visit to California. She is still working on "Meals on Wheels" and on the problems of housing the elderly and lonely, as well as with foreign students who are earning or have earned advanced degrees. She reads voraciously.

Margaret Gibson McCrum reports on her activities which are many and varied. This is her fourth year for delivering "Meals on Wheels." She is on the Boards of Presbyterian-University Hospital Aid Society and Early American Glass Club. She is active in her church and the Mt. Lebanon Alumnae Club; in Early American Industries Association and in Rushlight Club of Boston. Her travels consisted of a trip to New England and Canada last October and to Lancaster for a seminar on Early Moravian Folk Art in Pennsylvania.

Since 1940 Mary Harner Britton has lived in the same house in the country and their address has been changed 5 times! She and her husband expect to "poke around" in Florida in March. Mabel Hugus wrote her at Christmas that her organ playing had been curtailed by an injured arm.

Louise Hazel Meilicke says "Thanks to the Royal Travel Corporation who sent me literature for a trip to Hawaii for Chatham people in July, I had a wonderful trip." She met Martha Rial '29 and they had a fine time together. She continues: "I called to tell the travel agency how well-organized it was, and before I knew it, signed up with them for Hong Kong in September, including China and Thailand. It was terrific." She is still painting and a nearby village, Cortez, provides "plenty of material for fishing scenes and shrimp boats." She often wonders if someone from school is nearby.

Frances House Deiter, since retirement, still maintains her interest in teaching with summer courses in book reviewing, and by tutoring. In March, 1974 she flew to Florida with her daughter for a vacation and called on Kay Lowe Hall. Recently she has been taking care of her husband who is recuperating from a fractured hip.

Pegg Johnston McClintock still "is in Boca Raton and loves every day." She "pores" over the RECORDER when it arrives.

No news but greetings to the Class from Kay McPeake Arnold, Cass McRoberts Gunia, and Nancy Jane Montgomery. Ruth McKeever Slater is continuing with her Braille transcribing and was looking forward to a visit in March from her daughter and husband from California on their way to Parents' Week at West Point. Another notable achievement (I think) is her producing 64 hand-hooked wool rugs, 97 crocheted and knitted afghans for a Navy hospital, the Haverford State Hospital and other shut-ins.

Eleanor Mowry McKelvey writes: "We're still full-fledged members of the 'go-go generation' and have had enjoyable trips to Washington, DC, California, Hawaii and Europe; and to Houston to be with our family — but, after all, there's no place like home."

Anne Negley Brunot writes cheerfully, after a stint of snow-shoveling, that "a change of scene and some sunshine sounded appealing — in contrast to the sort of winter we've been having." But a contemplated Caribbean cruise had to be cancelled due to ship difficulties.

Emelyn Taylor Rohlfis writes from Newport, Oregon, that she and her husband have been retired for 2 years and are enjoying learning how to loaf. She is on the Board of the Portland Radio Station which "has worked out a Sunday program for the blind called 'Seeing Sound' consisting of music, reading of the Sunday papers, a book in serial form, interviews, etc." Also, she works with a group of business people and educators doing a study of the community college set-up in Oregon. She is thrilled at the important place Chatham holds in the present day world of education, in its persisting in training in liberal arts as well as in educating women to deal with a changing world, and concludes: "Our Alma Mater did the same rather thoroughly in the twenties, eh?"

Inez Wallis and Dulcinea Marshall Walker were in the Orient last summer and expect to go to Russia this July. Dulcinea who now lives in Toledo, says she misses shopping at Horne's. Inez visited Isabel Druschel last fall.

Isabel Watson Druschel wrote me last February, too late for the RECORDER, of her serious automobile accident from which she has fully recovered. She works each afternoon at Mental Health Services, helps in 2nd grade, and is Vice President of her county committee on aging. One daughter and family live nearby at "Travelers' Rest," a National Historic Landmark, which they are restoring to its original state. Her other daughter lives in Washington, DC. They all get together on many occasions.

Grace Wilson is engaged in her usual civic duties, fishing, and "all the things that make Florida fun." In January she flew from San Francisco "bound for the Fijis, New Zealand and Australia."

Thank you all for your welcome responses as to your travels and activities. They almost overwhelmed me and made me feel do-less (in a nice way, of course). Happily 3 felines — Monkey, Roberta Clementina, and Buzz crept in by way of 3 letters. You may guess which correspondent belongs to which cat.

NEW ADDRESSES

Lucretia Bond Wagner (Mrs. Glen W.), YMCA International House — Room 1009, 23 Waterloo Road, Kowloon, Hong Kong

Eugenie Feightner Coll (Mrs. Alfred W.), Royal York Apartments, Apt. 1004, 3955 Bigelow Blvd., Pittsburgh, PA 15213

Marion Hall Verner (Mrs. Porter C.), 100 White Hampton Lane, Apt. #811, Pittsburgh, PA 15236

We were sorry to hear of the deaths of Anna Miller Nolen, Isabel Bashline Hammond and Kathryn Watkins Strouss. To their families we extend our deepest sympathy and to Peg Wooldridge Fifer whose husband died in February.

Our 45th reunion at the College last June was attended by 11 members, including Mary Kolb, Ellen Connor Kilgore, Peg Wooldridge Fifer, Martha Ackelson Smith, Evelyn Thompson Wible, Frances Reeder Battaglia, Dorothy Appleby Musser, Anne Textor Thompson, Ruth Hunter Swishhelm, Ruth Lenon Dieffenbacher and Jo Mang Muir. We had a grand time and made some plans for a really big 50th reunion in 1979. This was followed by a mini-reunion in September at Mary Kolb's farm.

Retirement and travel seem to occupy a large number of us. Thoroughly enjoying retirement is Dot Warner who keeps active in the Sewickley B.P.W. and Century Club while attending the Elaine Powers Salon several times a week. Erma Bachman Stewart retired from teaching German at Butler High in 1973 and planned a trip to Hawaii this spring. Kay Reebel plans to retire in July as professor in the University of Michigan School of Social Work after 22 years. Jane Haller McCafferty says "retired at last" but it doesn't sound like it because she was busy as a book cataloger for the Washington Historical Society. Not doing much but enjoying it, reports Betty Rial Walthour. Betty MacColl terms retirement only a technicality because she is busy directing an Art Center and doing a lot of painting. Dot Appleby Musser was looking forward to seeing Betty in Florida this winter and was then planning to go to Mexico.

Ellen Connor Kilgore and Lee were looking forward to Florida also if they could get out of the snow at home! Very busy traveling last year were Anne Textor Thompson and Bob who visited Spain and Majorca, then Canada and Florida, followed by Holland and Belgium. Mary Louise Succop Bell has 5 grandchildren, all scattered, which gives her a good excuse for traveling to visit them. Florida was a popular spot for Elsie Duncan Harrison and her husband and for Bess Friedman Wasser and Sam who also took in Hawaii and Puerto Rico. Really far away are Lucretia Bond Wagner and her husband who wrote from Hong Kong that they were back in the Orient for another year of foreign missions work. Gene Feightner Coll's traveling was from a 15-room house to an apartment, which she loves.

Martha Ackelson Smith keeps busy with "Meals on Wheels" and as chairman of Arts and Crafts at her church. She was hoping to see Lucille Evans Lynch in the spring when Lucille visited in Greensburg.

Two special awards were reported by Carolyn Duvall Leffler, math teacher and head of her high school math department: outstanding teacher in Kentucky in 1973 and outstanding secondary teacher in the U. S. in 1974. Congratulations!

Martha Stem is still director of professional relations for the Optometric Extension Program and Foundation and has been invited to be on its educational program in Arkansas in June. Mary Lou Jones' "up-and-at-itude" makes her too restless to quit completely despite a broken leg last summer. She may settle down to rewrite a children's book for Houghton Mifflin. Peg Wooldridge Fifer keeps busy with her farm and poetry writing. Jo Mang Muir says Peg's collection of poetry, "Notes from the Fifers," is so enjoyable that it is a treasure everyone should share. Also keeping busy is Fran Reeder Battaglia who is going back to real estate sales after a six months' leave. Ruth Lenon Dieffenbacher spent last summer at Hilton Head coaching singers for a production of Cabaret. She found time in between recitals and recording sessions to have another piece published in the Annual of American Literature and Art. Evelyn Thompson Wible reports "nothing that will set the world on fire — just happy with our living."

granddaughter who may be a candidate for Chatham some day. Dot's daughter Annette is Reservations Manager for National Airlines.

Martha Bradshaw Stout's special news is that she now has a grandson, the son of her younger son Don. Martha's only traveling in 1974 was a trip to Chapel Hill, North Carolina, to see her older son Bill, who is on sabbatical leave from the University of Illinois. The new grandson's mother was Mary Steinmiller, the daughter of Betty Porter Steinmiller '28.

Dorothea Crawford Macy says that since her mother is no longer living, her trips to Pittsburgh are now rare. Dode does go to Tulsa to see her daughter and sometimes to the Beach Club in Naples, Florida, in winter. Last year she saw Hilton Head for the first — and loved it.

Ramona Crawford Shirey says that it makes her feel very old when she realizes that two granddaughters are old enough to wear long dresses, and one of them will be going to college in the fall! Ramona and Paul have a large vegetable garden and fruit trees, too. Two daughters and their families live close by, so a large garden comes in handy for the Shireys.

Several trips to the hospital in the past year have corrected some of Clara Falconer Simmermacher's orthopedic problems, but the big operation to correct the hip joint, and hopefully get her off the crutches, was scheduled for February. Because of the crutches, the Simmermachers haven't been able to travel for some time.

Gertrude Ferrero Prather's youngest, Mike, was married in December to a young lady who is also studying for her Ph.D. degree at Yale. Trudy has five grandchildren and is scheduled to retire as Supervisor of the Residential Treatment Program at Florence Crittenton at the end of January.

Martha Goffe Lane has also joined the grandmother class. Martha has asked anyone coming down to Sarasota to give her a call.

By chance, I met Ruth Haddock on the street in Pittsburgh during Christmas. She is "blissfully retired and loving the no-hours life."

Our sympathy to Mildred Harner Foltz who lost her mother last year. Mildred's husband Ralph had a heart attack in September, but is doing very well now. Mildred hopes that she and Ralph will soon be able to make the trip to New Jersey to see the new grandchild.

Kay James McCann and Ray spent two delightful weeks in Hawaii in May. The trip was one they enjoyed all the more because, until March, they had not expected to see the Sandwich Islands, and now would like to return.

Margaret Jefferson said on her Christmas card that she was due to retire at the end of this school year and had several projects in mind.

Florence Jones Maddox and husband William spent the last two weeks of May last year on a garden tour of southern England. Since their return they have been having "slide shows" of photographs which other members of the tour took. They are planning another trip in the early fall, this time through England and Scotland. Flo's eldest grandchild will be ready for college next fall.

Addie Lasner Sachs is delighted that after all these years she now has a daughter at Chatham! She is Mrs. Donald Solow (Nan Sachs) and has two daughters of her own. Nan had originally gone to Hood College for two years, then got married and had the children. Now she wants to finish! Addie is still brooding over the fact that Medicare welcomed her to its ranks last year. Every year Addie does the usual things: manages fashion shows, white elephant auctions, water calisthenics, etc., for their condominium complex.

Theodora Maloney Schechter wrote that after 40 years with the State she has retired. She and Henny Scott Everhart retired on the same day. The two gals had worked together for several years. Teddy stayed in Pittsburgh, but Henny moved to Phoenix.

Betty Marshall reported a fabulous two weeks in the Hawaiian Islands last May and sends her best wishes to all in our class.

Agnes McKain "is enjoying retirement more every day." Patsy Ann McKillips retired from nursing two and one-half years ago, and since that time has spent many weeks in hospitals. She moved to Gettysburg, about a mile and one-half out of town and very near the battlefield. She is able to be out more now and able to drive her car. Helen Miller was scheduled to return to the hospital in February for more orthopedic surgery. She is "still just crumbling away with old age!"

When Ann Norcross Brockschmidt wrote in January the town of Lafayette, where she lives, was alive with Mardi Gras balls and parties. Anne and Jack were going to the "Attakapas" ball which is Kreve of young women using a local Indian tribe as historical background material. Since Anne lives in the same city with her grandchildren, she keeps the cookie jar filled and is content to be "Maman" to the little ones.

Last year Kay Rockwell Potter and Bill traveled several times to Pittsburgh and twice to the island east of Florida, to Grand Cayman and the Bahamas where they found lots of wonderful beaches. In March they came to Pittsburgh to help celebrate Kay's brother Al's 60th birthday, and again in October to see the opening game of the Pittsburgh Penguins. Kay hopes friends will drop in when they come by the Potters.

Viola Smith finally had a chance to use the Spanish she learned so many years ago at P.C.W. In October, after the great tourist rush was over, she flew to Spain for two weeks.

Lois Sproull Hincley's only organizational duties are now with the Girl Scouts and that takes "more thinking than rushing about," Lois says. She has given up many activities because of some health problems, but since her hospital stay in December Lois feels much better.

Olive Wycoff MacCarthy and Parker traveled more than 20,000 miles on their trip to the Orient last spring. When Olive wrote, she and Parker had just returned from Palo Alto and a visit with daughter Marti and family.

Florence Wise Turner remarked that each time she looks at the RECORDER she shudders to realize how close we are to the beginning of the class news. Florence says that ever since her early retirement she has never been busier doing nothing in particular. She went on a cruise last winter and is looking forward to another one this spring. She still has the cottage on Lake Erie, and spends most of the summer there.

And now — for me, I am so pleased with the new job that I was assigned last spring that I almost wish that I could work another year! But, time marches on! Don't forget, all 31ers, next year will be our 45th Reunion, and we hope to see a lot of you at Chatham College on Reunion Day! Just think, we will be celebrating along with good old Uncle Sam.

Mary Duff Miller, January 16, 1975

Many thanks to all of you for your letters and cards in response to my request for news. Some had good news; others, bad. At least we were happy to hear! This spring we hope to be able to award a prize, or perhaps two prizes, from the Beatrice Lewis Memorial Fund. Last year no award was given because the quality of the entrants was considered below standards set by the English Department.

Our sympathy to Margaret Ray McDowell who lost her husband John last fall of a heart attack.

Eleanor Bartberger Dearborn comments that since she became a "bona fide senior citizen last November" she is enjoying all kinds of benefits! "EB" remarks that she is busier than ever with her job as Township Assessor, plus her work in the County Library Commission, teaching the Women's Circle at church, and working in community service projects. The Dearborns were robbed twice during the Christmas holidays, and both times they were at home in bed!

Two letters from Edie Beale Asper from Juneau, Alaska, brought the good news that Edie is now a grandmother and that her older son, Linn, Jr., has been appointed Acting District Court Judge for Juneau. Edie's younger son Jim is quite a carpenter and has built himself a cabin next door to Linn and Mary's home. Edie and Linn, Sr. are planning a trip to Australia and New Zealand in April.

Dorothy Bortz Kund has had some serious back problems, so the business trips with her husband Paul have had to be curtailed. However, Dot says that she keeps busy with politics, civic, and church programs. Dot is a proud grandmother to her only

Helen McCreery Eckels (Mrs. Lee W.), January 2, 1975

Ruth reporting:

Many thanks to all who answered with news. A long last our library will celebrate the completion of our remodeling project this spring which has been frustrating but interesting experience.

I toured Oregon, a state I had never before visited, after attending the Soroptimist convention in Portland last June.

Evelyn Aliff Dautlick's daughter Cory was married last July and both she and her husband are working toward doctorates. Evey is active and successful in negotiations to increase teachers' salaries.

Sara Allison Allman sends greetings to all classmates. Dorothy Ballantyne Miliken and Ed are enjoying his retirement after a wonderful trip beginning in September to Cape Cod, across the Trans Canada Highway, then to Iowa, visiting family and friends.

Jean Blair Hodgkin says everything is fine with her. Helen Chambers Swartz spent a lovely Swedish-style Christmas in Washington, DC with her brother and his family. Helen enjoys knitting, bridge and dinner-theatre in Florida.

Mary Crumay Kehew was able to take her delayed 23-day tour of the Alpine regions in September. She is doing four hours of homebound teaching each week.

Marguerite Cunliffe Gape reports her health is excellent. She is teaching kindergarten this year since there were not enough first and second grades in her area.

Genevieve Davis Crawford writes how much she enjoys seeing P.C.W. classmates at Salmagundi meetings.

Jessie Doudna Phillips says she sees Edith McBane, but not enough. She is happy that her daughter Anne and her family have recently moved from Minneapolis to Wilmington, Delaware, so that they can see them more often. John is a sophomore at Penn State from which David graduated last year.

Dorothy Edsall Fuller and Ed got figurative "cold feet" about going to Africa last year, so instead got literal "cold feet" in a great trip to Alaska. This spring they plan to go to England from where they will fly for a quick trip to East Africa.

Lily Engel Rosenberg was to sail on a cruise to the Caribbean in February. She takes advantage of Philadelphia's many cultural activities and keeps young through her daughter Bernice and twin grandsons.

Virginia Hall McAleese was in Pittsburgh for the Christmas holidays and enjoyed seeing Jean Ludebuehl Fisher and Anne McCullough Frey.

Our peripatetic Marjorie Hopkins, as you can see, is back in New York. She hopes to take her mother abroad again this year. Marj is still writing and we're proud of her. Mary Johnson Krudener reports they now have two grandchildren, Mary and Art are enjoying a busy retirement.

We are happy that Phyllis Lehw MacArthur was dismissed by her doctor just in time to go to Europe last summer where she says she spent five glorious weeks. She is doing substitute teaching and reading those books she didn't have time for before.

Betty reporting:

Edith L. McBane enjoyed several trips: Ft. Lauderdale, Florida; synodical meeting in Grove City, PA; United Presbyterian General Assembly in Louisville, KY; and she went with a small tour group to see some of the Church's work in Colombia, Costa Rica and Mexico City.

Eleanor McClimans Muncaster plans to move to their new home in Whispering Pines, NC, in the fall after Hal's early retirement from U. S. Steel. Their children, located in Atlanta, Detroit, Butler and Buffalo, are anticipating vacations with them in the South.

Helen McCracken Bennett's daughter Sue is still living and working at Wm. Penn College in Iowa, and son Wes is still stationed at Kessler AFB in Biloxi, MS.

Seventeen members of her immediate family were with Louise Metzgar Iams for Thanksgiving, including her ninth grandchild, Amy Lynne.

Ruth Nirella had a marvelous trip to Rio and South Africa to see Victoria Falls, Tanzania, Kenya, and Ethiopia. The safaris were exciting but rigorous. She hopes to go south the end of June.

Last summer Allison Pierce Wood had a fabulous trip to Hong Kong and is planning a trip to Acapulco in March. She visited Dorothy Newell the week before Christmas and was delighted to find her much better.

Edith Rial Benford is now living in an apartment in Greensburg where one son and his family also live, and her bachelor son lives in New York City.

Her two sisters are coming to visit Sara Stevenson Foster in March (Bee McQuiston and Ray Bair), and she is looking forward to seeing them. Sallie's children live too far away for frequent visits, but two of them made it home for Christmas.

After thirty-five years, Ruth Stewart Bernosky and her husband are retiring from teaching and settling out for Florida. In June they expect to go to Vancouver, B.C. and points north if gasoline is not rationed.

Miriam Young White's daughter Susan was married in November, and they had quite a family gathering. Mim's husband Roger is still running the FM radio station in Port St. Lucie, Florida, and enjoying his work.

No particular news, but greetings were reported from Helen Rowand Dunkle, Genevieve Shibley Karn, Martha Stuart Muhlheizer and your secretary, Betty Allen Clarke, who enjoys hearing from all of you.

NEW ADDRESS

Helen Wilson Houston (Mrs. James M.), 154 N. Bellefield Ave., Pittsburgh, PA 15213

Eleanor reporting:

Helen Birmingham Proctor continues to enjoy and to find challenging her work at the Day Hospital of Burke Rehabilitation Center in White Plains. In addition to community relations, she is now directing admissions at the hospital which is the only one of its kind in the country, a research and demonstration project under an HEW grant where the patients come in the morning and return home at night, literally a hospital without beds.

To Elizabeth Cober O'Donnell we extend, on behalf of the class, our deepest sympathy on the death of her husband last November. Judy, their youngest daughter, who had been working in Albuquerque, has returned home and is planning to finish her education. Gray and I had a wonder evening with Biz and Bill last July when we were en route to Wyoming.

"Life is good" wrote Shirley Gordon Hovencamp and indeed she sounded extremely happy in writing about her new life. Her daughter, Grace (Chatham '64), is doing very interesting psychological research, trying for a rigorous, short-term analytical method for testing emotionality of adults.

Jean Engel Reppun writes that after having only one of their seven children at home, now a few have returned and she once again runs a big household. Their first grandchild, Eric Stewart Reppun, Tommy's son, was born last June. Tommy graduates from the University of Hawaii School of Medicine in June; John graduates from Hamilton the same month. Fred is active in various medical and community affairs in addition to his practice and was chosen Physician of the Year for community and medical services by the Hawaii Medical Association. Jean is Secretary to the Hawaii Academy of Family Physicians and does community work as well when time permits.

"No noteworthy news — we keep busy with the usual activities," so report Katharine Dangerfield Buckmaster, Jane Harmeier Nims, Winifred Jeffries Saxon, and Louise Leadman Faller. Jane has had word from Eleanora Vigliarolo Mancuso to the effect that she very much hopes to be able to attend our 40th reunion this year.

Since her retirement Yuki Naito has been leading a carefree life, traveling quite a bit in Japan in order to know better her own country. Last summer she stayed in Sapporo for two months and writes that she learned a lot from the communities in the northern end of Japan. Also, she toured the cities and towns of the Inland Sea. The rest of the time was busy teaching English at home and doing volunteer work with various Christian groups. Yuki spoke highly and appreciatively of the article in the fall RECORDER entitled "A Personal View of the Inscrutable" by Marcia Ebenstein Kublanow, '58.

Dorothy reporting:

Gail Mourmoseff Keith had such a successful garden last year that she and husband George had time for only a long weekend in Washington, and a few one-day excursions. A lot of guests kept life from being dull.

Gertie Russell Lydic had a great "winterlude" in Phoenix, found the southwest fascinating, and says she's still living after trying all the hot foods

It's hard to determine when Ed and Virginia Schweinsberg Hyde find time to enjoy Florida weather, when she writes of a trip to London and Scotland in the fall, spending the holidays in Pittsburgh and Rochester, New York, attending a convention in New Orleans, and going on their third Caribbean cruise.

Ken and Mary Seaver Hewitt were off to Arizona in March and are planning for a Winged Safari in South Africa in September, with a stopover in Egypt on the way home. She has had some pictures accepted by Audubon.

Virginia Watkins DeMers has been getting a taste of theatre discipline by helping with costuming for summer theatre and with piano scores. She's planning to come for the reunion, as is Dot Woodward Evans. Dot reports that the uprising in Portugal just a few days before she and George arrived did not spoil a wonderful trip, which also included Spain and Morocco.

The status is quo, says Ruth Moorhead Sward and echoed by Dolores Steinecke and Dorothy Taylor.

As for me, last year's trip was most rewarding. Ted and I were literally winned and dined by the five families in Finland we went to visit. Joining a tour group for the rest of Scandinavia was almost restful.

This is a reunion year for our class, and we hope you will plan to come. The program is already set, now we need lots of people to make it a success.

Sally reporting:

Mary Jane Addy Braley reports that her daughter Nancy was married this past year. Sally Anderson Amsberg loves retirement, doing just what she and Herb want to do when they want to do it. Betty Belden is starting her eleventh year as Adult Program Director, YWCA in Erie, PA. Wishes she was starting college all over again. Perhaps by 1977 you will have completed your travels to England, San Juan, etc., and will come to Pittsburgh for our fortieth reunion. Elizabeth Bradley will have been with Gulf Oil Corp. for thirty-seven years in May. Also in May she plans a cruise to the West Indies. Volunteer activities take up much of Martha Branch Culbertson's time. She hopes to do some traveling this year.

Nancy Diven Seagren is happy that son Barry and wife Veronica presented her and George with a grandson. A trip to Switzerland in April to get acquainted with him is on their agenda. The sympathy of the class, extended to Nancy on the loss of her mother last December. Mary Follansbee Buck is happy that her daughter and husband and three grandchildren returned from Hong Kong after four years.

Elsie Dressler Helsel really makes her days and minutes count. Traveling to Washington, DC every week for six years was a bit much, so she left the Directorship of the Washington lobbying office of United Cerebral Palsy last September. Now she is Professor and Chairman of the Special Education Department at Ohio University and Director of the University Affiliated Center for Problems of Human Development, Chairman of the Governor's Council on Developmental Disabilities, National Task Force on Research Needs, Bureau of Education of the Handicapped, and active again in the League of Women Voters and AAUW. Daughter Marjorie is graduating this year and will be off to law school in the fall. She adds, "I love the opportunity to work with the young leaders of tomorrow — I think the young people in college today are terrific — they have it all together and their sense of values gives real hope for tomorrow." Doesn't that make us all feel good?

Betty Grace Hammer reports her travels this year took her to the Canary Islands in October. Peg Heggie Bryson saw many changes in '74. Son Michael received his M.B.A. from Harvard and is working and living in Pittsburgh; daughter Jeanie was married to Craig Clemens, a geologist, in the Chatham College Chapel, with an outdoor receiving line complete with a Scottish bagpiper. Louise Johnson Purnell and husband vacationed in the Midwest last September when the aspens were golden in Colorado. She heartily recommends a visit out there. They have one son in medical school at the University of Bordeaux, France, and one son at Lebanon Valley College. She hopes to attend our next class reunion and see many of you there.

I, too, hope many of you will plan on returning to the campus in 1977. If you have any suggestions for that meeting, please let your class secretaries know. I, Sally, thank you for responding with your news and money.

Issy reporting:

It is with great sadness that I report the death of two of our dear classmates: Helen Royston Hollingsworth on July 3, 1973 and Dorothy Sargent Garrison on June 9, 1974. Our deepest sympathy is extended to their families.

Florence Kinley Mercer is planning a wedding for their daughter Lynn in May. Their son Tom was transferred to Boston last September and loves it. Flo and Lyle are holding their own after all the trauma there was in Washington. They are happy to have their personal friends, the Fords, in the White House.

Betty Lewis Williams writes that she will soon be getting back to teaching after an illness. She sees Betty Grace Maxwell, Betty Winkler and Lillian Franz frequently when they get together for dinner.

Miki McBride McMaster reports a wonderful trip to Spain and Portugal the past year and sends a big hello to all.

Betty McCarty Boyd reports a very interesting year with a visit to England and Scotland in the fall and had just returned from a trip to Russia that included Swan Lake danced by the Bolshoi Ballet. There was also a fun visit with Chatham gals visiting Sally Amtsborg and also a surprise visit from Dorothy Motheral Porter and her husband.

Eugenie Miller Snell is learning to garden a bit. She had such good luck that her window shelf in the dining room is taking over and that soon there will be no room for the humans!

Jane Phifer Gwyer has now, she says, become a genealogy nut! Herb retired this January. It is hard to believe that their Gab 'n Eat group (Nancy Diven Seagren, Juliet Weller Gump, Doris Chatto Kimball, Betty Slocum Haldeman and Mary Baldwin) are down to so few in number. They miss the absent ones, after having met monthly since leaving Chatham!

Kay Pyle spent last summer studying wild flowers and wrote a column for her local paper. She is still enjoying teaching and is so busy that she hasn't time for half of what she wants to do.

Naomi Sayre Bartoe sends greetings from Mesa, Arizona. She retired in June. In August, they had a Four Winds trip to the Canadian Rockies and in September went with friends to Portugal and Spain. Naomi highly recommends retirement!!

Jane Seaman Berg is very pleased with the great academic strides Chatham has made. Their life, she writes, is much the same which is great! Jane sends greetings to all, as does Muff Potter Koerner.

Mary Travers Scott writes that her daughter Nancy, whose husband is an Episcopal minister, has moved with their family to Tucson, Arizona. Church work, club work and the care of her half-acre property keep her busy. Mary has charge of the ladies' program of the Pittsburgh Conference on Analytical Chemistry and Applied Spectroscopy which is to be held in Cleveland the first week of March at which time this reporter hopes at least to chat by phone with Mary.

Elsa Stiefelmaier Talbott and John were in Vegas and Hollywood on a fun trip last March. Their two grandsons live nearby for visits.

Mary Trimble Brittain writes that they had a splendid cruise through the Mediterranean and Greek Islands in the spring of 1974. A completely unanticipated bout with a detached retina on her left eye with surgery and ensuing convalescence clipped their wings for fall. Mary is still much interested in the Harnmarville Rehabilitation Center and is serving on its board of trustees. The Brittain's daughters are scattered all over the country, but "It's great and hectic when they are home for visits!"

Dee Whitehead Heinig is having fun decorating their new home in Wilmington. All of the family were home for a great reunion at Christmas.

Olive Wilson writes that 1974 was a good year for her and her hobby of collecting miniatures.

As your other reporter, I'm happy to receive every response. Out of 32 double postal cards sent, I received only 15. Almost half is not good enough for our class! Personally, Jim and I are well and busy. Judy and her husband are living in London at least until late this year and our son, Pete, will be working in Hawaii for several months. We gave them wings, but this is ridiculous!

Mary Jane reporting:

Elva Bogen Goodwin and Bob were back in the States on R and R and had dinner at the Uptegraffs with the Blacks and Dickinsons. They are looking for a retirement house in Hawaii for four years hence.

Mary Cole and a colleague at Psychological Service of Pittsburgh have just completed a research study on 60 successful women executives.

Peggy Cooper Uptegraff reports how great it is to be down to two in college at one time. Our thanks to Peg for all her work on our successful reunion weekend.

Our sympathy to Betty Duckwall Laubach on the death of her mother.

May Gregg Stockton is enjoying being a "grandma" with one grandchild in North Carolina. She is hoping for another to be available for more spoiling in Pittsburgh.

Helen Harris Davis and Dave are retiring to Williamsburg, Virginia. She warns us to start looking over our life-time collection of treasures. When it comes to moving everything at 13 cents a pound, try weighing old tax receipts against the baby books!

Betty Hobbs Dougherty reports that fly fishing, summer and winter, and five grandchildren keep her and Ralph plenty busy.

Totty Hoyt Faison reports a visit from Mid Boy Kostora and her husband Lee at Christmastime! When here for the reunion, Totty went on to Philadelphia, then to many historical spots in New England, and in November to Williamsburg, Virginia! Certainly the Bicentennial rounds! How many of us closer by will do as well?

Ivy Huetter McLaughlin and husband are right now enjoying warm, sunny Manzanillo, Mexico. Kitty Irwin Barnum reports that they are enjoying life at their delightful recreational community — on the golf course!

Esther Jackson vacationed in Holland and England this past year. Jean Keenan Konet reports much traveling also: to Italy, the Greek Islands, Middle East, and Central America.

Jeanne Kalish Samuels has been nominated to be Recording Secretary for the Alumnae Executive Board. Thank you, Jeanne, from all of us, for taking on this responsibility. Jeanne wants to know if anybody is a book editor. Her manuscript needs help and she'd love to hear from an alum who might be interested.

Mary Jane Kerr Leonard and Rowland rode their tandem 450 miles from White River Junction, Vermont to Philadelphia last July. No camping out along the way anymore though — a hot bath and a comfy bed mean a lot at the end of a cycle day.

Letitia Mahaffey Andree speaks for all of us who came to the reunion and enjoyed ourselves immensely and concluded that the years have been kind to us!

Mary reporting:

Good comments continue to be heard about our reunion last year. Amy McBride Bell, for one, who reported a busy, happy and healthful year. Lucy Stoehr Daugherty says reunions like ours should happen every year — we're the greatest! Lucy, who is still teaching, reported she and Don rang in the New Year with Gene Detwiler Davis. Another who enjoyed our reunion is Mary Jane Totten Dickinson. She reports that daughter Diane has been remarried and that son Scott, after graduation from Lehigh, is working for Texaco in Texas. Sadness in the family resulted from the deaths of Scott's mother and Mary Jane's sister-in-law and brother.

A fall trip to Spain, Portugal and Morocco was enjoyed by Florence Smith Hess. She has changed jobs and is working as a Population Social Worker in a residential center for emotionally disturbed children.

Hortense Norton Seedlock is becoming a Brailist with the Atlanta, Georgia volunteers. She avoided the usual Christmas rush by going to the Barbados over the holidays and hopes to go on a bridge cruise next year.

Mary Weber McClenahan has had a busy year by spending a big part of her time at the Halfway House for Women. Husband Bill is getting ready for retirement by selling real estate part time. There are no children at home any more — two are at the University of Wisconsin (one teaching, the other a student), one is married and in Cleveland and one is at Cuesta College in California.

A big volunteer job for which she did not volunteer — running the Red Cross Bloodmobile for the city of Glendale, Missouri — keeps Mary B. Weber McEwen very much involved. Her last child is a junior in college.

Betti Rindlaub Lord writes that she had a trip to Toronto for the Third Festival of Yoga and Esoteric Sciences. From there she went on to the Canadian Rockies. She is now a doll collector and a member of the International Doll Club. In addition to all this she is still teaching.

Doris Chatto Kimball's Molly is in her second year at Endicott Junior College and Rick will graduate from Edgewood High where Amy is a sophomore. Doris has started a catering business and is catering the high school teachers' lunches. She also writes a column in the Wilkinsburg Gazette about local activities in Edgewood. They had a great reunion with Sally Amtsborg, Julie Gump, Mary Baldwin, Lois Moses, Nancy Seagren and Betty Haldeman at Hilton Head last June.

Beth Pensom Fox, Lil McFetridge Wilson and

Rose Weller Black send greetings to everyone.

Your reporter appreciated hearing from you and especially enjoyed seeing so many at the reunion. Our special thanks to Betty Speer Schenck for her hospitality. She said she really enjoyed it too. I've just returned from a great trip to Guatemala and El Salvador with an art class that I attend

Natalie reporting:

Shirley Clipson Clarke has taken up weaving, (classes at Valley Art Center) and is about to buy a larger loom. For the first time in years, all her children were home for Christmas which made the holiday especially great. Mary Linn Colbaugh and Jack are happily back in Pittsburgh. I had lunch at her new attractive apartment in November with Weasie Caldwell Criss and Jean McGowan Marshall. So nice to have show and tell time with old friends. Jean and Butch had both Thanksgiving and Christmas in Boston with their three children. The girls are working and David is stationed in the Navy there. Beth Howard Smith visited Jean in January and they toured Chatham. Beth reported from San Diego — for the last time. Note her new address. She says her eastern trip was wonderful adding that Chatham campus has certainly changed in 25 years. The Smiths are moving to Tehran, Iran. Dick left in September. Beth will join him as soon as she gets Carl started in an Independent Studies Program at Point Loma Hi. In 2 years he can complete graduate requirements, but not graduate so that he can spend his senior year in a community school in Tehran.

Weasie McIntyre Casner is slowly leaving Texas. She wrote from Houston (80°). Her first grandchild arrived last January. Unfortunately he and his parents live in McLean, VA — pretty far from Illinois. The Casners moved from Dallas to Chicago in August. Weasie's daughter Sandy is to be married June 28 in Dallas.

Margaret Longwell Van Horn is spending her third winter in Florida — says she misses her northern friends. They did visit for three months in Pittsburgh last summer and hope to repeat that visit this coming summer.

Jean Hammer Schoman writes, "All news from a minister and his wife is printable." She says life is busier than ever. Their only daughter, Nancy, entered Grove City College this past fall in training to be a vocation. Carol Martin and her sister moved to Asheville, NC in November 1974. She tells me the meeting of the Smokies and the Blue Ridge Mountains at Asheville is beautiful.

Ann Stewart Butler says all her sons have grown and flown. David and Toshiko live in Tokyo. Dick and "Nirg" are at Robin AFB in Georgia. John is now a consulting engineer in Atlanta about to be married in the summer. Ann is still doing her librarian work.

The great event of the year for Jeanne Anne Ayres Widgery was the wedding of middle daughter Catherine to an Englishman. Jeanne Anne reports "truly a son gained as the old cliches come true." Jeanne Anne took two weeks' leave to do some research for her latest novel, as an Ossabow Island Project member, off the coast of Georgia. In June the Widgerys plan a trip to England, France and Switzerland. Last March they toured Italy. And later Jeanne Anne went to an English teachers' meeting in New Orleans. Quite a traveling lady.

From Alice Chattaway Kittle's Christmas letter I learned that the Kittles had two nice trips this past year — to Acapulco and Arizona. Son John and his Ann have a new home. Son Jimmy is active in Young Presidents Organization, nationally, and is still on the "500 Festive Board." The whole family keeps active in many civic groups.

I had a lovely long letter from Yvonne Da Silva Simoens. Poor Yvonne hasn't recovered from an accident she had about a year ago when she broke her leg. So she is on leave from her newspaper job. But she is doing "extras" for her paper and she is still writing books. Her son Carlos is studying and teaching music theory. He is also a composer and an actor at age 23. Daughter Monica is an interpreter in Congress. Yvonne is hoping if at all possible to make the 1976 reunion! Her charming letter should be seen by you all.

As for me, Natalie, life is pretty calm nowadays with the boys off. Lee is about to graduate from U. of Colorado and enter the economically cruel world. Douglas is in the process of finding a new teaching job — at an independent school. Peter Otis and Loie now live in Camden, Maine. We still do lots of gardening, preserving, swimming, cruising, skiing and work for the local hospital. No complaints.

Louise reporting:

Dorothy Goff Stiteler reports that she is in 1974-75 Who's Who in American Women. She is buyer and manager of an office supply and book store in Indiana, PA. Her oldest daughter is married to a Presbyterian minister in Pittsburgh, her youngest daughter is married and lives nearby; her youngest boy is at an Army Clinic in Thailand and the middle one finishes law school in the spring.

Jane Pierce Eaton is still trying to keep up with new concepts of teaming and open classrooms. "The little old schoolhouse will never be the same one we knew." Both daughters-in-law are teachers so they have much in common. Pat is fine as are all children and grandchildren.

Mae Oettinger Schweinsberg says her daughter Beth had another boy for a total of three grandsons. Son John works for Association for Retarded and will soon get his master's.

Keith Oliver Friday is busy with Gulliver's Travels, which is still going strong. She has two boys and one girl married with two grandchildren and only Peter remains single. She spent New Year's Eve in Italy with friends and sailed from Southampton to New York on the Queen Elizabeth II. It was a rough but interesting crossing as it was the beginning of a round-the-world cruise.

Jane O'Neill Shearer from June to October, traveled by car, plane and train over most of the United States. Her oldest daughter is a speech pathologist; her second daughter Nancy received her M.L.S. at Pitt but is a tennis pro; and Janet is a junior at Penn State. Together they have seven offspring from 10 to 28. Last fall she took a course in Public Opinion and Propaganda at Chatham. Tennis, "Meals on Wheels," gardening, and antiques keep her busy.

Mary Bertha Richards has just finished a session with the dental surgeon which shows the ravages of time (certainly not old age). She says that there is lots of social life in a small town to keep her busy.

Eleanor Schaffer Kautz sends greetings from Dayton. Her son Dave, in 10th grade, continues his passion for sports. John has a new job at National Cash Register. She is doing social work teaching at practice level and expects to lead a Social Awareness Training Workshop at the Child Welfare League of America Conference in Detroit.

Jane Shidemantle Cross keeps teaching. Barbara is a junior at Franklin and Marshall and lives at home. Cathy is a sophomore at Washington and Jefferson and is planning a summer in Big Sky country. She saw Jack and Mary Linn Colbaugh in York before they moved back to Pittsburgh.

Elinor Weible Stoltz thinks that they have all been "Coloradonized" and like it more all the time. Two of her children are away at school and the one at home is an avid skier.

Jane Zacharias has had a busy year that was more fun than working. She is involved with church, College Club, Harmarville, Pittsburgh Hospital and finds it interesting and time-consuming.

For me, Louise Caldwell Criss, this has been a sad and a glad year. Sad, because of the death in June of my sister, Barbara Caldwell Blackburn, '44, and glad because of the wedding of our daughter, Sally, to Robert Orr Allan. They are both graduates in Fine Arts from Carnegie-Mellon University and are living in Pittsburgh. Mother and my other sister, Marjorie Caldwell Berlin, '48, and I just got back from a vacation in San Juan. That beautiful blue water and warm sun was indeed welcome in the middle of our dreary winter weather. So, until next time, I hope all goes well with you and yours

The class extends its sympathy to Elizabeth Esler Duncan whose mother died in September.

My apologies to all for getting my response cards off so late. Many thanks to you who replied so quickly. I am back to working full time at the Philadelphia Center for Older People, Zion Branch, as the outreach-caseworker. I am also taking a course at the University of Pennsylvania School of Social Work. There is no question about it being challenging. I find the older citizens delightful human beings to be with.

We are hopeful that before too many weekends go by to drive up to see Jean Archer Rothermel and Dan. Jean sends along her regards to you all.

Sorry to hear that Pat Blue Byers's husband has not been too well. Let us hope at this writing he is feeling much better. Pat's grandson, Sam, is now a year old and "just adorable." What would grandmothers do without grandchildren to love and brag about? Paul, her oldest son, is now married and living close by; and Chuck, the youngest, is in 6th grade and a boy scout.

I must say I am envious of many of you who are traveling about. Mary Campbell Eckhardt and her husband are off to the Virgin Islands to sail in March and have their summers to look forward to in Chautauqua. Robin is in the final stages of his doctoral thesis at Cornell. Lynne and her husband live in Colorado; and Mary still enjoys her antiques while Bob watches over his flourishing helicopter business.

Edie Cole is still enjoying her work as a physical therapist. She also must enjoy her golf in spite of the fact, she says, Peg Dunseath Wilson usually beats her.

Good news from Lucille Cummins Connor. Ed received a promotion and transferred to Atlanta. They love it there, as do Buz and Cyn. Bus is in his last year at Georgia State and Cyn is working for the C & S Bank. Patti, the oldest, and her husband now live in Washington, DC.

Jean DeWoody Bailey is looking forward to the warmer days of golf and weekends on the farm. Jean casually remarks of a trip to Europe later. Jean saw Elinor Keffer Hoon last summer and Jane Evans Linsenmeyer at Thanksgiving. She reports they both look great as well as Pinky Garrett Gittings, Louise Haldeman Richardson, and Marian Rowell whom she sees occasionally. Jean says she is the only one getting old. Remember, Jean, that age is a state of mind.

Although it was a short visit it was great seeing Elizabeth Esler Duncan in October. Lib reports from Pittsburgh that she, Steve and Sarah are all fine.

Jane Fitzpatrick McGough and her husband have recently returned from a trip to the Caribbean. She said that the weather was marvelous but perhaps most important of all they had fun. News of the family reports Jane Ellen's marriage to Blair Olson in August; their oldest son graduates from Princeton in June and then on to law school; Hugh is a freshman at Bucknell; and Marita is in the decision-making process of choosing a college.

Florence Frey Burnite and her husband have retired in Gettysburg. They were feeling the stress of the many hours they devoted to volunteer work in Reading. With much interest they are now pursuing the field of genealogy.

Another grandmother thoroughly enjoying her grandchild, Eleanor Garrett Gittings writes that Dave is traveling quite a bit and busy as usual. Matt is a junior at Grove City College and Nora is busy with her 2½-year-old son when grandmother isn't around.

Janice Goldblum sends us greetings from sunny California. A dreamy vacation in Mexico, Virginia Hendryx Shank writes. Hopefully Ginny and I will get together one of these days for we don't live that far from each other. Ginny finds it more difficult to get the family together as one daughter is in Denver, one in Oregon working on a master's degree, and another in Texas. Jennifer graduates from Ohio Wesleyan this year with wedding plans in view. Kim will graduate from high school in June still not sure where she will be going to college, and Kris is in the 10th grade.

Seymour and Claire Horwitz Klein spent their 25th anniversary in Hawaii last summer. Quoting Claire, "That life I could take for a long time," to unwind from the many activities with which she has become involved. Her latest is serving on the Pittsburgh and Allegheny County Committees for the Bicentennial activities in Pittsburgh. Their youngest son Evan is a sophomore at W & J and chose to take his interim at Chatham, thoroughly enjoying the experience. Claire's only comment was, "The campus life is certainly different from our time!!!"

With time on her hands Jane Humphreys Agriesti has gone back to full-time nursing in a Community Mental Health Center, which Jane has found challenging as well as fascinating. Carl now has an office of his own — busy as a consulting engineer and doing income tax work. They love their new home and find it great for entertaining. Bruce is in 9th grade; Charles in graduate school and teaching chemistry at the University. Two boys are in Sarasota enjoying being on their own. Carol, just 18, is at the moment enjoying her independence in Florida.

Peg Johnson Miller is another working girl — has a part-time job in corrective reading. John is now a private consultant in marketing and management and very content because of the flexibility of hours and variety of jobs. They had a good fishing trip to Algonquin Park with John's father last summer and a trip to Florida to visit Peg's family. Children are all fine — and grandson Brian now three is a "doll."

Last but not least Elinor Keffer Hoon and her husband, after visiting friends and relatives, took off for a trip to Scandinavia.

Mary reporting:

The sympathy of the class is extended to Lorraine Wolf Regan for the death of her husband, Bob, who died suddenly on September 7, 1974 of a heart attack while golfing.

Dorothy Horne Mollenauer's big news is the arrival of Gretchen, their second granddaughter. Last October, she visited Kay Von Fossen Johnson in Denver.

Connie Lauer Stein is enjoying her new home, new friends, and good health. At Christmas she visited her son and his wife, both graduate urban-planners, working in rural Connecticut. Her daughter teaches in Saudi Arabia, where her husband is working on an Officers' Club for King Faisal's army. The limits on food and products and the restrictions on women make it an unusual experience.

Jane (Petie) McCall Downing thinks grandchildren are the greatest joy of middle age! She went to Maryland last July to welcome a new granddaughter and expects to go to Denver in June.

Janet McCormick McDole says "hello!" She works for Boeing Computer Services. She edited a user's and programmer's manual for their General Business System — on this she worked 60 hours a week for several weeks.

Amy McKay Core writes that Amy Jane is spending the year at the University of Dijon in France. Phil is a first-year student at Pitt Law School. Jean Archer Rothermel visited her last summer.

Nina Maley Ross and two daughters received master's degrees in 1974. Her son Dick is in law school, and her youngest daughter is ready for college.

Dorothy Marshall Autore has no exciting news, but sends greetings. Constance Meyer Waldschmidt writes that her son Chad and his two children and Bob, who is in his second year of law school at Vanderbilt, were all at Conneaut for a short time last summer.

Jeannette Meyers Erler enjoyed her cruise around South America which was to be an anniversary celebration for them.

Barbara Steele Mangan wanted to do something different, so she took a part-time job at Regis College as a secretary in Public Relations. Her daughter Judy works at the University of Hartford. Kathy began her doctoral studies at Ohio University and is to be published in Southern Review this year.

Marjorie Noonan Ladley feels she will be lucky to survive this year with two weddings and a graduation. Oldest son Tom was married in December and daughter Barbara will graduate from Chatham in May and be married in June. "When the second wedding is over we will have added two more W & J graduates and another Army officer to the family." Son Bob is at Boston University and thinking of transferring and Jane goes into senior high. There are days when the Alumnae Office seems quiet by comparison!

Peggy Suppes Yingling and Ed visited Amsterdam in November. Her daughter Molly attends Pitt. June is graduating and looking for a job as a paralegal.

Jean Sweet Bentley cruised the Caribbean last summer. She teaches and Bob is with Mental Health. She says she and Bob are getting fatter, meaner and older. Don't believe it!

Kay Von Fossen Johnson jaunts with her husband, as his new job in international education with the University of Colorado provides him with interesting travel.

Lorraine Wolfe Regan sends warm regards to all. She did have all the girls and their husbands with her for Christmas.

With your cards, birthday cards, and valentines, I have had fun! Thank you. Paul and I visited Ireland last October, without incident, and I enjoyed visiting the Decorator House on Woodland Road without accident.

NEW ADDRESSES

Ruth Ford Woodward (Mrs. Joseph E.), 1007 W. 68th Terrace, Kansas City, MO 64113

Betty McCrory McBride (Mrs. W. J.), 3217 N. Main Street, Findlay, OH 45840

Patricia Smith Joyner (Mrs. James A.), c/o Jean V. Smith, 517 McNair Ave., Pittsburgh, PA 15221

Patsy Speers Bradley (Mrs. Charles C.), 1005 S. Valley Forge Towers, King of Prussia, PA 19406

Alice reporting:

Many of us are involved in the school routine. Lois Allhouse Harnack is now a full-time student at the University of Tennessee, working toward her elementary teacher's certificate. Oldest son is in the Navy, youngest in 6th grade, and two others between. Dorothy Barrett Braden returned to college at Slippery Rock to update herself in the Early Childhood Education field. She's still thoroughly enjoying teaching nursery school. Janny Be Jameson has been teaching art classes. Last summer she and Bill had a fine trip to the Rocky Mountain states. Another teacher is Helen Clewer Armstrong the 4-5th grade level in the open classroom. Her daughter Leslie has graduated from Cornell College and is also teaching. Janet Brewster Reynolds son a senior so they're really spinning with many school activities. Her daughter just recovered from a long hospital siege after serious injuries resulting from a sledding accident.

Marion Cohen spent last summer at one hot playing all kinds of music. She learned to sail and ride a bicycle, until she fell off the bike and received a broken ankle from which she's still limping.

June Collins Hopkins writes they enjoy the island retreat on North Haven more and more each year, spending 4 months there and the rest on the mainland in Rockland. She still has her shop on the island, and an organic garden. Husband Bill is teaching for the University of Maine and has had success with classes at the Maine State Prison.

Alice Craig Coyne and Patty Smith Joyner had a delightful little reunion last summer in Foxburg with Janet Harkless Beattie (or to quote Janet, "a sort of aged slumber party").

Jean Dalzell MacMillan reports she still loves teaching, and now her children are all off; Stu working for the town of Estes Park and living in their mountain cottage; Doug and Meg are in Wooster and Miami U.; and Sally is in high school in London.

Emily Noll Zerbe says her biggest news was the wedding of their daughter in July. Linda is a graduate of Winchester, attended Muskingum College and received her B.S. in biology from Point Park.

Greetings were received from Carolyn Cos Lampl, Ruth Ford Woodward, Alice Hanna Ferenc Phyllis Ingraham Stout and Ruth Jenkins Horsburgh.

Marge reporting:

Lois Long Kingsland sends regards to all from the country. Daughter Kristin, a Chatham graduate, married and son Roger is studying architecture at the University of Utah. Lois Lutz Pierce has her first grandson (third grandchild). By now both daughters are living nearby in the Carolinas. Nina McAdam Handloser is busy as a real estate broker in San Barbara.

Lots of news from Jeanne McKeag Steele, who is teaching in the Graduate School of Nursing at Ohio State University and taking her 53rd hour post Master's. Her husband John is still with the U.S. Department of Transportation. You might see the son Ron's name off Broadway. Charlie finishes Master's in Education in April and Ellen is a drafts person and artist and has a two-year-old daughter.

Helen Robinson Forsyth's daughter is considering Chatham after June graduation from high school. Due to a nurses' strike at the hospital where she works, Helen is now "getting things done."

With youngest daughter Betsy now a freshman at Duke, Eleanor St. Clair Hurtt says they have time to travel now (Germany last fall). Andrea is doing environmental work; Bill and his family have a new home in New Jersey.

We are grateful to receive replies to our requests for news. You can imagine our surprise in hearing from a husband the news that Jean Thomas Fisher is now head of the Math Department. Also, they now have two granddaughters.

Marian Updegraff Sunnergren reports #2 son Ken will graduate from the University of Miami and looking forward to graduate school. They still have a two-year reprieve before Amy starts college. Maria is still free-lancing, mainly doing promotions and advertising for a "charming" convenience mall.

Jane Wood Ziercher's son Eric graduated last June and is working for IBM and Mark is in his last year at Ohio State.

Gertrude Schmeichel Hutson, Petie McFall Schall and Polly Wilson Ackenheil claim no news now, but look forward with the rest of us to our reunion.

Last summer my mother and I toured Eastern Europe for four weeks, mainly through Yugoslavia.

Ellie reporting:

Marian Arras Wallace has two graduations coming up — Jim, Jr. is job-hunting and Lynn is college hunting.

A phone call from Louise Baehr Larson was a real treat. We talked for ages. Louise has two daughters at Chatham. The weather and winter in Florida are great, as usual, for Patti Balch Lando. Lucy Beale Van Ness and Joe would be happy being full-time world travelers. They are planning a Mexican trip in June.

Eva Braziell Hively and Bob have an offspring on each coast now. Both children have graduated and are on their own. June Davies Rush's last daughter is entering college. June and Bob are both in the school system — June teaches and Bob is President of the School Board.

Peggy Dodge Poindexter will have two children in college next fall. She and Jane Campbell Little have met at alumnae meetings. To top that, Betty Fleck Hendrickson will have three children in college and mother taking classes. They have enjoyed visits with Robby Swann Baldwin and Jean Yeager Love.

Pat Gersmann Joseph visited Gloria Molinatto Spillacy in Atlanta.

Babs Gill Meagher is a happy grandmother. With three still at home, Babs is director of Social Service in a hospital.

Georgiana Gilliland Denniston and Phil have a new life style on the water, with the channels as their front yard and a sailboat on the dock. She highly recommends it for clean air and exercise.

Else Greger Miller is under contract with Warner Paperback Library. Her book should be out in late summer or fall. It's on thrift in the home — called "Found Money" by Millie Armstrong (her pseudonym).

Ruth Griffiths Magnuson's daughter was maid of honor at Isabel Griffiths Borland's daughter's wedding in Vassar Alumnae House. Jeff Harkins Smith is a grandmother and still has an eleven-year-old son. Jeff spent an evening with old roommate Penny Myers Smith.

Vicki Haverstick Myers will attend the American Booksellers Association in New York in May, and would like to see anyone in the area who can meet her. Vicki is still at the Art Museum and always busy.

Margery Himes is enjoying retirement from her teaching job, but still substitutes. Angie King Sedwick, while working towards her Master's degree, is promotion counselor for education, as well as registrar for the George Washington University Tide-water Center.

No special news, but "hello" from Marjorie Bennett Sherts, Kay Ciganovic, Mildred Corman Feinburg, Catherine Dom McCarrell, Lee Hutton Sage, Patty Jaycox Shaw, and Alice Kells.

From Ellie: Our past year was overshadowed by the death of our daughter, Jill, in an auto accident. The many beautiful letters from Chatham friends were heartwarming.

Chub reporting:

Greetings — and welcome they were — from Jane

McCormick Lohr, Peggy McSwain Friday, Jackie Neal Jackson, Ginny Toy Schenck and Jean Yeager Love.

Joan Kaufmann Mendelsohn is a full-time undergrad at U. Massachusetts, Amherst, aiming at '76 graduation. She is in touch with Ellie Goldfarb Hirsh, as many of us are. We all feel heavy hearts over the death of Ellie and Eggie's daughter, Jill.

Mary Alice Kline Morris is still teaching. Son Steve will be graduated from U. of Cincinnati this June; daughter Sally is in her second year, same school. Daughter Marty has finished a year's cross-country tour with "A Little Night Music."

Dolly Larson Webb's big news is that she is a grandmother. Only problem — baby Kelleen is 3000 miles away.

Vernie Lowar Scott finally acquired a daughter when her son was married at Christmastime. Vernie and Scotty plan to visit Acapulco this spring.

Barbara Mason continues to enjoy her "beautiful penthouse" and visits from lots of old friends on their way across the Pacific.

Ann McClellan Mealy described her children's activities and added, "Impossible they are all adults. My baby is in high school, but John and I don't feel any older."

Josie McKenrick Tobie also told of her children's plans — including a June wedding for daughter Ellen — adding "the AP's (aged parents) are still functioning well." Josie had a great visit with Elaine Sauerwein Mathison last September.

Mary Lou Michel Tiernan is having a new experience — with her girls gone from home — living in an all male household, doing third grade plays with younger son Charlie. Do hope the Tiernans come this way en route to Maine this summer. Nancy Walters Cobetto enjoyed seeing Mike twice last year.

Lou Power Hughes really looks forward to reading the RECORDER. Doris Snyder Hookway enjoyed a several months' visit with her French god-child whose parents came for Christmas. With both their children in college, Ron and Snyder are "feeling very much alone."

Marty Stewart Dimmick is president of the garden club and an Elder at church and planning to ignore her 50th birthday this year.

Deepest sympathy to Janice Wilson Bader whose husband died of a heart attack last summer. Janice is grateful to her friends, family and her job for helping her with her difficult adjustment. She and Bob had only been home a month from a trip to the West coast where they saw Ginny LeFurgy Tubbs who "looks great and is so happy as wife, mother and part-time teacher." All of which is what Ginny's card said, plus "plugging along with graduate studies required to keep the job."

Carolyn Wise Walp is teaching at Martin Luther King School — all open classroom.

AND, the four Harmons think they've died and gone to heaven. In January, 1974, GTE Sylvania bought Clark Control, the company Bruce worked for since his Lehigh days. We must have been at the right age for a new adventure — after 25 years in the Cleveland area — Boston is glorious, Sylvania is an exciting challenge, the children like their new schools, we all like our house in the center of two acres of woods, and, all is well.

Jeanne reporting:

Mimi Altman Russell is teaching school and directing all the plays. She may visit Chatham now that two of her sons are in the Pittsburgh area. Their oldest son has graduated from Penn State and is working in Greentree. Chris is a senior at Pitt and Scott is a freshman at Penn State. Gary is still at home.

Elizabeth Christy Snell missed our reunion because she was furnishing their vacation home in South Carolina. She said that their children are rapidly leaving "the nest." Tina is married and living in Massachusetts, Lindy, a senior, is majoring in Spanish at Ursinus. Tom, Jr. is a freshman at Delaware Valley College studying horticulture and landscape design; and Jim is a seventh grader and his English teacher is one of our classmates, Billie Bilderback Fredricks.

It was nice to see some of our classmates at our June reunion. We really haven't changed very much. I hope more of us will be there for our next reunion. I, Jeanne Anderson Nesbit, am learning to catalogue books by working in our church library.

Jean reporting:

Louise Diehl resigned from the Directorship of the Lancaster Chapter, American Red Cross as of March 1st and is looking forward to renewing old Pittsburgh friendships and perhaps getting involved at dear old Chatham after — ye gods — 26 years!

Jean Forward Frank's oldest son, Peter, graduated from Duke University in May, and is now working as a mathematician for Prudential, in Philadelphia. Second son Clint is a business major at University of Southern Illinois and Ken is a senior in high school. Tom is extremely busy at his advertising job, plus being township supervisor. Jean continues to put major efforts into music writing and local performing.

In Annapolis, Naomi Garlick Kinard is getting ready for a big Bicentennial celebration. She is very active as a guide for historic Annapolis, a docent at Maryland Historical Society and getting St. Anne's Church ready for Bicentennial tours. Winnie, at eight, is growing up and already talking of boarding school and college. Everyone is invited to Annapolis for a tour with Naomi.

Roberta Hanson Helm had the honor to christen a 600-foot boat in Rotterdam, Holland. It was a fantastic experience, she said. Her oldest, Bill, will graduate from A.S.U. in July. P.R. III, is in his second year at the Air Force Academy; Jane is 17 and a junior in high school; and Zeke, 12, is a sixth grader. She still buys jewelry for the Hospital Shop, volunteers, entertains foreign visitors and loves reading the RECORDER.

Louise Heineman Harper is now working four days a week and has just been ordained a deacon in her church. Donna is a sophomore in high school and a member of the Rifle Club, and is also very active in Rainbow Girls. Keith will be a freshman in high school next year and "I'm feeling older every day but enjoying every minute."

Betty Junk Weltman's oldest daughter is now a freshman at Indiana University of Pennsylvania. She is still getting used to not having her around and keeps busy working around the house and garden.

Harriet Kerr Daye finished her master's degree at Clarion in August and then took a new position with Intermediate Unit 6, that of supervisor of the Unit's full-time classrooms, which includes classes for mentally retarded and physically handicapped. Oldest an Harry is a freshman at Grove City College, Sam is a senior at Franklin High and Barbby, a junior at Franklin.

Jane Linton Smith was sorry she didn't get to the summer, but that's her busy time with end of year reading reports. She did get on campus with her daughter Meg in July. She was impressed with the lovely campus setting. "I was surprised to find Mellon Hall master bedrooms all chopped up into offices, and the lovely old bathroom all modern. This is progress?" Bud is busy with a new promotion. She still enjoys working and reading.

Marjorie Livezey Sims is working for Head Start this year as a social worker, and really enjoys it. Their oldest daughter Debbie began teaching high school English and French in September and is planning on getting married in May. "I sure have learned a lot about raising beef cattle since moving to Oklahoma!"

Carol reporting:

While Clara Miklos Hoon awaits good golf weather she is teaching part-time at Winchester Thurston. She has two classes of sixth graders for reading and loves it.

Joan Morledge Michaelian and her family had a great summer touring Niagara Falls and Toronto, New York state and Pennsylvania. She is busy teaching 12th grade English and History as a "Home-bound Instructor," and keeping up with four active children.

After receiving a master's degree as a reading specialist, Carolyn Mountford DeFrance finds supervising elementary student teachers at Youngstown State University very rewarding. She and Bill celebrated their 25th anniversary with a flight to Expo. Bill, Jr. was married in January at Ohio University and they are thrilled to now have a daughter in the family. John is studying architecture at Kent and David is a freshman at Canfield High.

Joan Nusbaum Cone has spent the last year traveling around the country doing game cooking programs for groups and television. She appeared in Pittsburgh last November on a local TV program and visited Chatham. They have no married children to date, but Art III will graduate from William and Mary in June.

Three generations are together now that Mary Lou Rider, her mother and 96-year-old grandmother joined forces under one roof. She still keeps very busy with her school counseling and had a delightful visit with Dorothy Swanson Fey last summer while in Chester County researching some Quaker ancestors.

We Strides are happy to be a united family again. Christy is back from a marvelous year in Italy and will go to Penn State in March as a transfer student from Chatham. Cyndy is working hard but still enjoying Kenyon and is now considering the possibility of her junior year in England. We're very glad to have Megan and Margot still around.

I do want to say how very much I enjoyed seeing you girls at our reunion. Though small in number, we had a most pleasant day and hope to generate more enthusiasm for our 30th. Another thought — I sent out more than 30 postcards and received 5 in return. Perhaps it's time to change from a yearly thing to maybe every two or three years. What do you all think?

Katie reporting:

Joyce Robinson Hauck writes that they had a busy year. Their eldest daughter, Janet, graduated in May from Salem College and is now teaching special education at the elementary level. Second daughter, Kate, was married in September to David Kuhns, Pittsburgher. They now live in Washington where David is an attorney with the FCC and Katie is about to graduate from American University. Son Charlie left North Carolina State after a year and one-half and is now working in construction at home. He plans to return to college after he has mastered the carpentry trade. Daughter, Liz, is a junior in high school; daughter Claudia is an active gymnast and ski enthusiast and is in the eighth grade. Daughter Suzanna is in sixth grade and appeared with Joyce this spring on Jeopardy on national TV. It was a special show celebrating their tenth anniversary on the air with past contestants who had ten-year-old children. She won a week in Puerto Rico which she plans to take with her husband later this year.

Mary Lou Tite Ellsworth says that they had a year of family change but full of happiness. Daughter Peggy graduated from Miami U. of Ohio, started working in Pittsburgh at the Pressley Ridge School for learning disabilities, and was married in December. Judy, 15, is a Rainbow Girl and an enthusiastic horticulturist and ecologist. Mary Lou's thing this year was being chairman of a College Club Scholarship play "A Lion In Winter" and being a board member of the Day Care Center.

Jeann Tsagaris Karidis writes that their daughter Cindy (Chatham '73) is engaged to a fellow student at Gordon-Conwell Seminary. They are planning a June wedding in the Chatham Chapel.

Candy Walker Hyser and Corinne Welch Patton have no special news but send their best to everyone.

Your secretary reports that their daughter Lynn graduated from Clarion in January of this year, is teaching fourth grade, and will be married in June. We are busy making all the wedding plans. Our son Mark is now attending Westminster College.

MARRIAGES

Norma Smith Watters to Raymer L. Mowry

NEW ADDRESSES

Anne Holden Loudon (Mrs. M. John), 19 Rockwood Road E., Plandome, NY 11030

Audrey Sommers Whigham (Mrs. Robert L.), 753 East Madison Circle, Pittsburgh, PA 15229

Nancy reporting:

Life is normally hectic at Gwen Bach Lammert's house. Steven will be going to Europe this July with the Foreign Study League and, as a senior, also starting the college search. The girls are doing well in junior high (7th) and high school (9th). Gwen is still active in the PTA, church, and Girl Scout work. John's father died last February and they have been trying to help his mother adjust to living alone after 53 years of marriage.

Eleanor Balent Young has completed her medical technology training and can now add MT (ASCP) after the B.A. from Chatham. She rewarded herself with a short Caribbean cruise and then went to work at Holy Cross Hospital in Fort Lauderdale. She likes her job.

"It is true," says Marilyn Black Auchterlonie, "Detroit is in a recession with many blue and white collar workers on leave." Their oldest son graduated in December from the University of Michigan with a B.A. in Economics. Marilyn is busy working as a Brownie leader and enjoying Amy and her friends.

Suzanne Blair Murray is busy working as a director of a nursery school for 3 and 4-year-olds. Her two older daughters are away at college and very enthusiastic about their respective schools. With only one girl at home, a freshman in high school, life seems simpler, and the three of them do a lot more traveling.

Ann Crouse Harvey attended the University of Connecticut this past June for a Tax Assessors course. On the job, she has just finished counting all the horses, cows, cars, and sheds in Bridgewater, and the Grand List, which must be written by hand, has been signed, sworn to, and filed with the state — and on time! Ann and Boot had an enjoyable trip to Puerto Rico last February.

Dottie Dodworth Scullin reports a new member of the family: "Purple Haze." The horse, along with daughter Charlotte, has won some ribbons. Charlotte and Dottie had a week in Blue Grass country where they had a chance to see Secretariat and Riva Ridge. Dottie enjoyed teaching a watercolor course and is still doing tours at Clark. Her arm has become worse so that hardly any handwriting, drawing, sewing, etc. are possible.

This year finds Mary Anne Doering Rinaldi oldest son in college and her second boy a junior high school. They are all well and doing fine.

Jay and Shirley Elliott Johnston took a delightful trip to Denver in June to the Kiwanis International Convention. Jay is a lieutenant governor of the organization. Shirley still enjoys teaching kindergarten and is busy with PTA work, Sunday School teaching, and three bridge clubs.

Maddie Engelhardt Sayles reports a ho-hum year with children continuing along in school. She and Bert are very active in school stuff — Bert a parent representative and Maddie continues tutoring reading and is head of the school volunteers.

Lois Franke Lee enjoyed the visit of her son and family from Iowa over the Christmas holidays. Karen, daughter number 1 and an A student, graduated from nursing school in June. Lois is scheduled to play piano for a wedding in April — a new experience for her.

Shippa Hoy Dible is still living in Lafayette, Indiana, and loving it. Both sons are in Purdue University and their 14-year-old twin daughters are freshmen in high school. Shippa had surgery this past summer and was cheated out of a vacation.

Barbara Hyde Asbury writes that she taught in winter, but hasn't had time this year after catching up with her busy family of five athletic children. Husband Charlie finished his Ph.D., and the whole family went to Ann Arbor, Michigan, for his graduation. Daughter Betsey, 18, is a Congressional Page at the House on Capitol Hill and is having the time of her life.

Kathy Jones Schurman and family have returned to Pittsburgh after a year in Maryland. Kathy is teaching kindergarten after becoming a certified teacher in May, 1974. Their children are progressing. Gary, 18, plans to attend college in September; Joyce is in 11th grade; and Joyce is in 7th.

Everything goes well with Pat Kennedy Earle. This summer, while their two college sons "labored" for their expenses, they took the two young children on their first West Coast visit from Monterey, California to Seattle, Washington. Nothing surpassed the enjoyment of the glorious fresh air. Son Jeff is a junior in business speech at Monmouth College in Illinois and Pete, a freshman, is a landscape horticulture major at Michigan State.

It seems that Beverly Sandberg Minor has been caught up in moving that she hasn't had time to pay attention to much else. Ces is now a marketing manager for Dorr-Oliver, an environmental company and seems quite content. Bev has become interested in nutrition and is on the verge of combining her chemistry background with her nearly completed M.S. in counseling to serve as a nutritional consultant to doctors and perhaps people with weight problems. Daughter Betsy is 19, Gary is 16, and the twins, Gail and Leslie, are 14 and pretty happy-sorry-lucky.

The Mooneys had a better year. My eye and back are well. Dillon is now working and plans to attend Edinboro College in September. David, a sophomore in high school, enjoys ceramics and pottery. Jim is still hanging in there.

Ann reporting:

Rita Howard reports, "No news but still looking for work in the pediatric clinic." Also no special news from Cissie McLeod Scalise except that her daughter Nan is a freshman at Slippery Rock.

Pat Myers Kovacs reports her family spent New Year's in Puerto Rico. Pat continues part time P.R. work. Daughter Lynn is awaiting word from colleges.

A career in residential real estate has kept P.O'Keefe Beede busy this past year. Her oldest son is a junior at Harvard, while her youngest is a junior in high school.

A little osteoarthritis is slowing down Adel Pfeifer Ferienc. However, she still teaches nurse school and Sunday School, is active in PTA and church, and bowls and golfs! Doesn't sound too bad to me! Adele's oldest daughter is a freshman at Indiana University of Pennsylvania.

Emily Seaburg Barends has joined the ranks of college parents. Their daughter entered Princeton University last fall. She has 4 younger children and keeps things lively.

A long letter from Norma Smith Mowry summarized her last 5 years. First her mother died, shortly after that she received her Ph.D. in Elementary Administration; then her husband Les was critically ill for 9 months and died. About a year later, Norma married Les' doctor and close friend. Norma sends best wishes to all.

Marguerite Sullivan Hannon was on campus recently, had lunch in the new dining room, visited the library, and was "very impressed." Mug's oldest son Mike chose Bucknell this fall. Pat, who is a junior in high school, has been chosen for an AFS summer abroad program.

Peg Tucker Thompson continues to enjoy her job in the Family Day Care Dept. in a welfare agency. Her husband, Pete, spent his sabbatical doing research at the University of Delaware, but now has returned to Swarthmore.

After no news for at least 4 years, Nancy Waddell Hill answered our post card! Nancy has recently been divorced and is selling real estate for Scott McCune in the East End and Fox Chapel, if anyone is in the market!! Nancy's oldest daughter is a junior at Carnegie-Mellon in the School of Design. Two more daughters complete her family.

During the summer of '73 Joann Walthour traveled in the British Isles, observing kindergartens and visiting with friends, which made it a very special trip. This winter she met Adele Pfeifer Feriari while she was visiting her daughter at college.

When vacation time comes around, Joyce Wilde Rownd and family spend their time at a lake in New Hampshire. Their oldest son is in graduate school at Pitt and from his apartment, can see Chatham! Daughter Debby graduates from Heidelberg College in June and Jim is a high school freshman.

Joan Young Drugmand reports husband Norvan was on his annual ski safari and this year went to Vail to visit son David who's enjoying the slopes plus working some. Daughter Ellen graduates from high school this year. Jane is 3 years behind her. Joan says she spends her time trying to keep up with everyone!

A full-time job, fighting inflation and fighting the "Battle of the Bulge," keeps Lois Young Flyte busy! Laura Miksch Diaz's travels took them to eastern Canada last summer. She was honored for being church organist for 20 years.

The highlight of Doris Seese Bell's year was having a German exchange student with them for 4 weeks and then their son went to Germany. Doris's husband spent 2 months in Brazil while she flew to the West Coast and Michigan for family reunions.

Marlene Shettel Stovicek's job sounds interesting and most challenging. She is Assistant to the Dean of Cleveland State University College of Law and handles non-academic problems. Last summer she refused to sign a contract offered her, holding out for what her male predecessor was getting in 1970! She was successful, but says it still isn't in line with comparable men's salaries. As chairwoman of the 25th reunion gift fund, you should be hearing from Marlene soon. At press time, we have $365.00 towards our goal of $2500. How about a donation this year and complete your pledge in '76?

Last June our 2 oldest graduated from high school. This fall Doug entered Colorado State University and Sue went to the University of Southern California. That leaves us with an "only child," which is fun for all of us. After living in Colorado 16 years, I finally obtained an R.N. license and have been doing volunteer work with Planned Parenthood.

Diane reporting:

Mana Balter Marcus is working with Inform, a research group which analyzes the impact of U. S. corporations on environment. Husband Bruce has a book entitled "Competing for Capital," published by Wiley Co., due off the presses in late spring. Lucy (4) and Joe (9) are doing beautifully.

With Ginger a junior at Bloomsburg College, Perry a freshman at Lycoming College, Cynthia in high school and college-hunting, and Eric in 7th grade, Sheila Burke Loeffler is the only one still in grade school where she continues to teach. Larry represents the Sterling Engine in the U. S.

Jeannine English Abel keeps busy teaching, performing and gardening. Her return to choir directing this season took care of her last remaining free day. The Abels had a hectic two-week trip to Germany, Austria and Hungary last fall, mostly to investigate musical instrument collections.

Thelma Fiori Lacerte and family have moved to Tennessee where Dick is now metallurgical service engineer for J & L Steel in the Memphis area. A 15-day tour of Florida and the Gulf Coast states in a Winnebago over Christmas was an exciting experience, particularly for their four daughters.

Betty Frantz Purdum is now serving on the Human Rights Committee for the Retarded in her area. With Bill being Chief of Staff, Sub Group 2, she is called on for more entertaining and Wives' Club activities these days.

In addition to her 30 private pupils and singing in a small chamber group as well as church, Marion Gallup Drummond has begun her elementary practice teaching at a private school. Her conducting class has nearly finished her — even southpaws have to hold the baton in the right hand. But, as she says, "Old horses can learn new tricks." She sees Sally Crum Ferrell frequently. Our sympathy to Sally on the loss of her father.

Lois Glazer Michaels finally heard from Alice Sedinger Domineske and reports that all is well with her. She also saw Lois Potts Adelson '54 in Atlanta. The Michaels had a second trip to Israel with the children (ages 18, 17, 15) and continue to marvel at the overwhelming beauty of the country and its citizens who carry on heroic tasks of building and creating in an atmosphere of constant tension. Lois is still a health planner with the Health and Welfare Planning Association in Pittsburgh. She also noted with pride that Al Berry Adams is a great Alumnae President.

Don and Peggy Harbison Hendrickson have been in Thailand since May '74 and especially like the leisurely life style and the tropical climate there. Peggy spent five months teaching English to Thai Army cadets.

The reply from Helen Halpern Berkson read like a travel brochure. She and Harold had a vacation alone in Hawaii which sounded fantastic. This winter the entire family got involved with the Adventure Theater in Glen Echo Park, MD. Harold, Deborah (15) and Joan (13) performed in Dickens' "Christmas Carol," while Helen helped out with publicity. In the Small World department, the director's mother is a Chatham alum, Grace Davis Mechling, '24.

Lynn Hann Baxter and the boys are keeping the home fires burning till daughter Lynn, a junior at Chatham, returns in August from her studies at the University of Fribourg in Switzerland.

Another traveler is Phyllis Hersh Spitz who had just returned from 3 weeks in Los Angeles and Hawaii. Chuck is a sophomore at Cornell, Bill is waiting to hear from colleges, and Kathy is in high school.

Jean Maize Kmetec's oldest girl will graduate from high school this year. After a couple of weeks in Europe, she plans to attend Wright State University in Dayton, where Jean's husband teaches. The other children (15, two 13's and a 10-year-old) have full schedules and keep Jean hopping.

Both of Ann Matlack Wieland's boys are attending Stanford, although the older one just took off a quarter to work and ski at Snow Bird, Utah. Daughter Linda is a junior in high school. Ann has enjoyed visits back to the campus — says it looks great and the girls are nifty!

No particular news but regards to all and a new address from Margie Beard Kelley.

I, Diane, am kept busy with volunteer activities at 3 schools, teaching Sunday School and being an unsalaried instructional aide in Spanish at the junior high. I'm also the neighborhood ding-dong these days — the local Avon person. Had a great phone visit with Jean Sweitzer Bower while in Columbus this fall to attend the only reunion my high school class has ever had. That was really something else — much fun!

Thanks to those who responded with news and best wishes to all for a healthy and happy year.

Fran reporting:

Nancy McGhee Mangold's family has just moved into a 225-year-old house, just in time for the Bicentennial. She keeps busy with her five children and a gift shop of which she is co-owner.

Holly Sherrard DeMart tells us that her daughter is a junior in high school and young Herb is a sophomore at Clemson. Holly is involved with her choir, hospital auxiliary, garden club, etc., while Herb still teaches engineering at the Naval Academy.

Jane Smith Morgan and her husband have been invited to England to visit one of the authors of the books her husband uses in his classes for National Steel where he works at one of its subsidiaries. She gets in as much golf as she can. Her oldest son Robb has enlisted in the Navy.

Sue Smith Sweitzer is busy working as secretary for her husband's park and playground equipment business. She and her family have completed a year-round home on Lake Ontario and enjoy their lake-front living.

The Hofers (Mary Carol Williams) are moving back to their old schoolhouse in Pennsylvania from Texas. They are well and happy, she says.

High school age children involved in basketball, wrestling and horse shows manage to keep Dona Lester DiSanto involved too.

Your secretary's kindergarten aged son Charlie has donated his mother's time for all the gala events that take place and she is going to have to take up horseback riding again to keep up with her daughter. A vacation in the Pennsylvania Dutch country gave Fran an insight into the Amish way of living that she wishes could carry over into our own. She thinks we could all use today some of the peace of mind they seem to possess.

McDonough O'Rourke. We extend our deepest sympathy to Marilyn Campbell Bowling whose mother passed away in January.

As for the Lafos family, Ted and I had a beautiful week in California in January. The rest of the time we head for our place at the beach with the three kids, the dog and the hermit crabs in tow. Thanks to all who responded; it makes the job more fun, and thanks to those who contributed to our class kitty.

late for you to reply. The post office is the culprit.

I had a most wonderful visit with Dottie King Cornell via the telephone. She and Dick hope to attend our reunion this year. Claire Koller Runger and Marita Pigossi Spangler visited together and plan to be here for our reunion, too.

The past six months have really been different for Barb McVicker Martin and family. Their daughter Dan is at Chatham and the rest of the family is living outside of Paris. They had the distinction of sailing on the last voyage of the S.S. France.

Hello to everyone comes from Natalie Stern

I met Betty Woods Goodwin unexpectedly while taking a Chinese cooking course. Other than much creative cooking, traveling every chance we get and collecting antiques, my life is busy but uneventful.
We are planning for our 20th reunion May 31, 1975 at Chatham and are hopeful that each of you will make a special effort to join us.

Lynn reporting:

I was disappointed at the few responses this year.
I don't know if it's apathy or the U. S. mails.

Carol LaRoza Andrews writes about their 20-acre farm, new since last November, where they are raising beef, chickens, horses and plan for pigs and lambs in the spring. They are both still teaching in New Jersey. Carol says the work, including fencing, gardening and all, is immensely satisfying.

Tee Speerhas O'Connor is looking for a job after finishing a training program for legal assistants at George Washington University. She reports seeing Judy Pitasky Markstein '56 during the past summer.

Jane Stocker Burfoot is continuing her courses with child psychology this semester. Son Rick is helping to coach a little league basketball team.

Rosalie Stern Wolfe has moved back to New England and is living back in Stamford after her divorce. She is in the process of applying to law schools hoping to start back in the fall.

After 22 years in one place, Rhoda Weitsman David will be moving in March. They are going to Richmond, Virginia where David will be manager of planning in the Phosphorus Division of Mobil Chemical Company. The family vacationed in Maine last summer.

Ann Yanko Wilkinson wrote her news one-handed, the other being occupied with new arrival,

Lara. Ann says their new house sits on a hill looking Santa Barbara, the harbor, the channel the islands. They also can see the oil platforms they aren't too bad as yet. The greenery is encroaching on her as she is not much at pruning and growth is lush there. She sees Carole (Willy) Wilson and her sister occasionally.

We had two vacations last year. A family camp trip to New England, where we stopped one night see Lynn Backus Wilson, and a trip with an couple to San Francisco. I quit work in December and am enjoying myself while deciding what direction I want to go next.

Mary Ann reporting:

Great day in the morning, it's news time again.
Absolutely tremendous hearing from you all.

Betts Backes' new marriage to Jess, who is American Bridge, has brought her an old house (15 years). They live on the third floor and rent out to others. Betts is still teaching science and math says "Hi" to all.

Lynn Backus Wilson and Helen Davis Rowe
each other quite often. Lynn and family have lived in the Boston area for two years. Hal travels a great deal. They will be going to the Balkans this summer in preparation for a trip to Russia.

Barbara Baker Kriendler spent a good part with her children 14, 12, and 9, and husband. Hal is still with Grumman Aircraft and in addition, he started his own business dealing in ancient coins.
Barb is still teaching nursery school. This May, Hal and Herb, combining business with pleasure, will visit Europe.

Gayle Conaway Haines has been lost for a time. Recap — married to a native Floridian, CP have two boys, Jeff (10), Christopher (6) — leave for Florida in six months — moving to a farm in the mountains of North Carolina to open a campground — wildlife photography has become an interesting hobby of Gayle's.

Dorothy Dieckmann-Harman enjoys her girls, 1st grader and 2nd grader. She and Dave had a wonderful time last spring on a Caribbean cruise.

Joyce Dull Sepp was sub-teaching until Kristin's birth. She enjoys being a new mother all over again.
much better than teaching. The two other children,
Kristin (13) and Kara (8), are in 8th and 3rd grade.

Marcia Froimson Baum's only news — "We have a new daughter!"

Carol Grim Kinsley is now teaching after receiving her M.A. degree in reading from Eastern Manhattan College. Her new husband is a golf pro and she spends few winter weeks in Florida.

Hannah Honig Kamin is busy decorating a new home. She and her husband love the convenience of being back in the city.

Barbara Johnston Tredennick took a college through campus last summer with children Ted (14), and John (10), and says it is still "loveable" ever.

Mary Killen Cochran stays involved in childhood activities including Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, U.
League, etc. and sends news that the German Language Dept. at University of Pittsburgh has established a memorial scholarship for Lore Foltin, who was the wife of the late Edgar Foltin of the Psychology Department.

Judy Kohn Goldie enjoys living in Annapolis.
Both children, 8 and 7, are in school. This gives her time to be active in ORT and to do some part-time office work.

Jackie Miller Van Doren and husband have added a fifth daughter to the list of eight children.

The Goodrum household is also a growing one.
Cern and now numbers 18 — 9 children, 2 dogs, cats, and parents Harold and Mary Ann. Harold is partner in Madden and Goodrum and Associates Advertising and Public Relations. He was honored last year with national first place recognition for his radio advertising campaigns. The baby is now 1 and I may return to graduate school. I wishes to everyone for a continued healthy happy year.

Birth reporting:

Only three members of the class of '59 rallied to celebrate our fifteenth — Debbie Brogenstein, Sue Allardice Neff, and I reminisced and laughed up on one another's activities. We were a little chagrined, however, to see that the class of '61 had many people attending. Because Debbie had just finished serving as class secretary, Sue and I agreed to assume the job. In early January I received the class list and the word that it was time to solicit names for the RECORDER. With the 1959 edition of Cornerstone in hand, I sat down on Super Bowl Sunday to begin writing fifty-two letters. In the conclusion to her reply, Marylou Linsinger Gault mentioned what I thought later that week after all the letters had been mailed — "Now that I've done
I feel so good!" A sure way to brighten a dreary
January is to reach out through letters to friends.

The thirteen replies I received were as reassuring and exciting as seeing the first crocus or pursuing the snow southward! Sue and I plan to send complete class lists to all of you and to encourage any of you to write to either of us when the mood strikes. I promise it will "feel so good!"

The first letter I received was from Betty Lou Milliken. As fate would have it, I learned that Betty Lou had moved from Meadville the year before we arrived and that her two sons (now ages 14 and 9) had been born in the same hospital as my ten-year-old, Betty Lou says of her children:
"Cathy is now 14, a freshman in high school and my right-hand-man in our home, something every working mother needs. Our other two, Sam and Mike, are AU swimmers on a year-round basis." Betty Lou has been working the past few years with the Washington, PA Hercules Incorporated plant and says, "I'm now a Senior Chemist and enjoying some of the benefits recently won by Women's Lib. The working wife-mother pace gets chaotic at times but I love it!"

Harriet Lewis Franklin has completed her doctorate in the humanities, with emphasis on English, from Carnegie-Mellon University. Though looking for a job teaching English at the university level, she is teaching the elderly self-defense at Allegheny Community College and is involved in a new program to teach teachers at the University of Pittsburgh. "We are trying to teach the arts, aesthetics, and humanities from a multidisciplinary approach."
She also plays tennis twice a week, swims at least a mile a day, and skis. Her husband is a marketing consultant in his own firm. The Franklins including a son 11 and a daughter 9, lived in Japan and toured the Far East then furnished their Pittsburgh home with furniture bought in Hong Kong.

From Illinois, Marylou Linsinger Gault writes,
"Please tell the ladies hello from me. We have found Rockford to be a very warm (not referring to climate) and satisfying place to live and after all these years we finally find ourselves referring to it as home. The boys are in seventh and ninth grades and involved in all the usual things, and that means that I am doing lots of chauffeuring! Jim is vice president of a small manufacturing company which brings the fringe benefit of my tagging along to interesting cities to conventions. I'm directing a good part of my efforts this year toward a Day Care Center for the Elderly and a Physical Fitness Course at the local college."

Mary Ann Martucci Baker is engrossed in caring for Susanna and watching her grow but she has much to report as well. Mary Ann says of Toronto, "I can't think of any city where I'd rather live. It's full of art, theater, music, and all manner of quaint ethnic restaurants and shops." Pre-Susanna, Mary Ann was a full-time student in studio arts — pottery. She had a show with two other potters and has her own studio. She hopes to get back to her pottery when she finishes her current assignment coordinating a program for students majoring in social research at a local community college. Sue Allardice Neff visited the Bakers last August. "She came just in time to help my husband get ready for a canoe trip in northern Ontario. She was really terrific. Their menus were thanks to Sue's expertise in camping and outdoor cooking."

Ruth McMillen writes that she is teaching fifth grade in the Fox Chapel Area School District. This year she has Fran Venardos Gialamas' youngest daughter, Elena, in her class so she sees Fran quite often. She visited Hawaii for her second consecutive summer. Then she spent two weeks on a cattle ranch in the foothills of the Ozarks in Arkansas. Ruth enjoys her apartment on the bank of the Allegheny River — where she can fish directly from the dock.

Sallie McQuiston Schneider reported that 1974 was not, for her, a particularly easy year. It began sadly with the sudden death of her father in January and that same month, her oldest daughter was ill with pneumonia. It was also her first year teaching at the Junior High in the Shawnee Mission District. But 1975 promises to be brighter. She and Bob are remodeling their older home and redecorating it in Williamsburg style. She loves teaching 90 enthusiastic 9th graders Unified Studies (Social Studies and English). Her daughters are ages 14 and 12. Sallie reminds us that if we travel through K.C., a place is always ready for us.

Carol Parker Berkman, another Pittsburgher, reports that she is primarily busy with her two daughters, Ellen and Marjorie, 8 and 4. She also enjoys playing tennis and experimenting with various art classes. She serves as a board member for the Colfax Elementary School and the Tree of Life Young Adults.

Carol Ritter Bowers and her husband Emmett, in addition to teaching in Texas, are busy with the Dallas Council for Foreign Visitors and do volunteer work at a Travelers' Aid desk at the local airport.
They also work with the international students at the University of Dallas and are a host family for a student from India.

Elayne J. Rosen exclaimed about changes at the Chatham campus: "Only yesterday I went to Chatham to deliver some questionnaires in connection with an agency study we are doing. Lo and behold, the parking lot is now the site of the library and the road leading to it, a pair of steps. What a shock!" Elayne is working with the United Jewish Federation in Pittsburgh and is involved in Social Planning and Research. She is also director for the speakers' bureau and works with an urban affairs committee. She is still an avid tennis player — "I'm in style now," she quipped.

Jeannette Roux Seaman has experienced a very adventurous year: "In May we bought and moved into a three-unit apartment building... we just about had time to throw dishes into cupboards when in July we dashed off to Germany for six weeks. If it weren't for the actuality of nine trays of slides, I'd still think it was a dream. The constant living relationship with the German students added great depth to the three weeks we were counselors for the exchange students. Then we spent three weeks on our own in Holland, southern Germany and Switzerland. Jeannette teaches in a K-1 Transition program which she feels has proven a worthy way of helping the educationally handicapped child who does not fall into the multitude of special education classes.

Elinor Roeger Nyhus and Paul plus children
(Chip, 8; Wendy, 7; Eric, 5; and Christina, 2) arrived in Paris in August and are now settled in a very convenient apartment in town. Elly writes that Paris has an endless choice of activities and though they are sure they can only "scratch the surface" in their three-year tour, they are enjoying it all tremendously. "On home leave last summer," Elly adds,
"we had many good times with Marie Smith Smith and her family."

Alma Salvetti Jennings and Brook with daughter Kathy, 9, and son B. J., 6, moved last October to State College where Brook is heading up a consulting group which deals with drug and alcohol problems and programs and other human services delivery systems. Though Alma hopes eventually to begin a few courses at the University, for now she is catching up on sewing and needlepoint and driving the children to ice-skating and art lessons. She is interested in getting together with other classmates in her area.

Irene Wilbar Appleyard says hello to everyone.
She and her husband Milt sing in a church choir and she is taking a class two nights a week. She is also fairly active in the League of Women Voters in Hershey, PA. The children's activities keep her busy:
David, 14, is training their golden retriever at dog training class; Jennifer (10) is busy with her Suzuki violin lessons; and Ann (12) keeps them all organized.

Sandra Wagner Gross has two boys — ages 6 and 9. She and her husband took them to Israel last spring. They were splendid travelers and they all had a grand time. Sandy says, "Unlike all of my friends, I have not returned to work. I keep busy as Chairman of the Evanston Planning Commission, playing a lot of tennis and skiing now and then." She enjoys the advantages of a university community and has just taken two courses — one in Russian literature and one in Shakespearean tragedy at Northwestern. She sees Lillian Kubrick Miller frequently (their sons are "best friends"), and she ran into Angela Blumberg Levinstein recently.

At Christmas, I corresponded with Marcia Fallon who really is a marvelous endorsement for Florida.
She enjoys the climate and activities very much.

This year I have tried to include some basic information that may have slipped a memory here and there. One of the most satisfying things about this "chore" is realizing that though years pass, the common denominator that drew each of us to Chatham almost twenty years ago still exists — call it commitment or values or whatever. Perhaps it is the mark of our liberal arts background but none of you who replied can be classified as apathetic or unconcerned. Each of us seems to be working to do what we can where we are to use the talents and education we have. That makes me proud of the Class of '59 and of Chatham, in general. But I might not have attended that 1974 reunion either if I hadn't developed a new appreciation and respect for what Chatham is doing right now. Last March I had the good fortune and pleasure to meet and be inspired by Dr. Lorraine Morgan who is chairman of the Education Department. That experience spurred me on to attend the reunion and to seize an opportunity to proclaim that I am a graduate of Chatham

Marianne reporting:

Robin Askin DeKleine is now teaching piano lessons five days a week since the purchase of a baby grand. The rest of her time is spent remodeling her home, reading, and chauffeuring their three kids! That is, when they aren't camping and traveling.

Sad news comes from Susan Engel Golden who lost her father very suddenly in March, 1974. Otherwise they are all well. Susan is on the elementary PTA Board, works with the Girl Scouts and Temple Sisterhood. Again this summer, she will teach adult beginners to swim.

Barbara Easton Marks has completed her master's equivalency in Early Childhood Education and is continuing to teach kindergarten, which she thoroughly enjoys after several years at the junior high level. The Marks have completely renovated the first floor of their home and are looking forward to a relaxing summer of travel and children.

Travelers take note! Suburban Paris is the new home for Marilyn Eckert Winters since Al is now manager of engineering operations for the U.K. and Europe. They welcome visitors to make use of their best investment — a sofa bed! Marilyn says French is tres difficile but they like France very much. Many things are different (but not necessarily wrong!) and many are the same.

Our news is another move; this time to sunny southern California where I'm really enjoying the tennis and out of doors. We love having a pool, when we have time. I'm working part-time in the chemistry department at U.C.L.A. doing research on chlorophyll and photosynthesis for an X-ray crystallographer. I just had a chat with Sam Spelke and we will have our first reunion in 15 years over lunch.

Jess reporting:

Given the economic situation today as well as the strong career drive many women now have, a pay-check is more and more frequently a necessary adjunct to female self-respect. The only unfortunate result is that many really worthwhile causes and organizations desperately need unpaid help. So it was nice to hear from Mary Booth Fassett Roberts that she is still happy and content in the volunteer sector. She sits on the Boards of the Art Museum, the church Altar Guild, and the Community Concerts, and is the Chairperson of the Elmira Committee for Project Hope.

By the same token Suby Hocker Ballay is another volunteer who believes that involvement is important. Her commitment is to creative drama which she teaches in a volunteer capacity both at her church and in the public schools. Our sympathy is extended to Suby and her family since the death of her father on December 20, 1974.

Hallelujah! Another member heard from. After fourteen years of silence comes a nice note from Giorianne Hubert Robbi. First of all, she has three children: Denise (7), an adopted son Jeremy (5½), and an adopted daughter Nelia (1). "In addition to husband, children, goats, cats, tropical fish, and dog, I fritter away the rest of the time co-editing a free monthly, township newspaper which has citizen reporting on all municipal and Board of Education meetings. I am working on the local Bicentennial Committee, too. In a really male chauvinist part of this country I am recently second alternate on the township Planning Board, and the only woman. Women are not really equal (here) yet, but we're working on it."

I was really amazed to find that only one of my respondents (and there were only four, hardly a representative sample of anything) was "gainfully employed" as they say in the vernacular. Sue Scheiner Druskin, along with mothering Michael (6) and Lori (5), also works three days a week as a social worker for the Minneapolis Public Schools. And for relaxation in winter she plays indoor tennis.

With regard to my own perspective, I am basically at home with Gerry (5) and Ned (2). My "outside" activities include singing with the symphony chorus, the League of Women Voters, and the town Historical Society, all of which take up what little slack there is in my time. I have also managed to get rid of most of my embarrassment regarding seven years of higher education and two degrees that have not prompted me to rush into the job market. It is truly remarkable that the liberation movement often forces those who do not work to make excuses for their choice. And it seems to me that our society will not be rid of sexism until such decisions on the part of either sex stop evoking the wide range of defense mechanisms evident now.

Donna reporting:

Back in school (this time for graduate work) and enjoying it is Paula Keizler Cramer. She enrolled in Bryn Mawr's School of Social Work and Social Research. Area of study — community organization.

Carol Lemke Keil writes: "Nothing new. We managed to stop at Dottie Seif Kapp's on our way from Butler to Pittsburgh during the holidays. We enjoyed seeing her and the boys."

From Shirley Lewis Minner comes news that she and husband Gene were involved in an encounter-sensitivity group. The Minners have since parted.

The Worthington Company where Judy Luttrupp is employed moved into larger quarters at the end of last year. "We're still in Fairfield, New Jersey though," says Judy. "It's going to be a really nice place, but it's been one long headache for everyone. With a small operation like ours (12 people in all), everyone has to do a lot of different things — but then that's what I like about it! Strangely enough even with the economy in such a mess, our specialized heavy machinery products — turbines, compressors — have been very good for the last year, we're booked through '75." Judy traveled to Hatteras last spring and Chincoteague (off Virginia-Maryland coast) in September.

Jacqueline Nadolny Rosenberger and husband Karl sound quite content. Writes Jackie: "Scott is in first grade and Todd will be ready for nursery school next year. Last year we had a little garden and did some canning for the first time. We had some grape vines and even made jelly. We also had weekly Bible study in our home, and Karl and I are chairing the Evangelism Committee at church."

Moving to Minneapolis, Minnesota last August were Barbara Neilan Franciosa and husband Joseph who's a cardiologist. Barb works full time in the Department of Medicine, St. Paul-Ramsey Hospital and also has an appointment as assistant professor in the Department of Medicine, University of Minnesota medical school. Last October she was certified as a diplomate in the sub-specialty of hematology, the American Board of Internal Medicine. "We're taking up cross-country skiing," she says.

Yours truly is kept extremely busy writing Tribune-Review, Greensburg. The largest daily newspaper in Westmoreland County, we began a Sunday edition last May which means work, work, work. But that's what I prefer. I've had time, however, for trips to the Thousand Islands, New England, John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts in Washington, DC and Disney World. All provided me with enough copy for some feature articles. Besides writing women's news and entertainment, I do a weekly restaurant column. What with all the good food, soon have to go to Weight Watchers.

Joyce reporting:

Complete consensus was reached on the way to improve our reunions — improve our attendance. Those of us who did attend all report having a wonderful time, and several mention being delighted with the opportunity to see the new buildings. Thanks to Jean Thonen Nickel and family for their hospitality, enabling us to have our "after reunion party!" Jean reminds all of us who missed out last summer that our next opportunity is in 1976, the 15th year reunion.

Barbara Pings Rawley says "hi" and reports "much news to relate it all." Arlene Sinkus Leis sends "best regards to all." Anne Putnam Mallinson reports that Bell Telephone transferred Bill to Pittsburgh. Karen Tiedy Ream tells us that Bob was transferred to Columbus where Karen is substituting teaching secondary science.

Family expansion is in the news for two of us. Dorothy Sief Kapp reports the Kapps are really enjoying their red-headed addition while Nancy Wright Bate reports that in addition to the three home, ages 8, 10 and 12, there are now two college. Marilou Querns found the new buildings campus very impressive when she stopped by in almost trans-continental auto trip last summer. Marilou says she "could not resist showing Chatham and its campus to a fellow traveler." She celebrated her seventh anniversary with the airline and still loves flying AA International Caribbean routes. Figure skating has been added to Marilou's home activities. She indicates, however, that she does not expect to be ready for next year's Olympic Games.

Carol Spelke Smaltz reports Connie, Carrie, and Jennie are fine and doing all the usual things in their respective age groups. Sam also reports that they went into partnership in Barr/Smaltz, a public relations firm. The firm's clients are primarily in the area but include Sam's former employer, the Huntington Library. Sam indicates she loves the new business challenges, ideas, and people and, considering the times, Barr/Smaltz is surviving pretty well. Sam admits that sharing with "starving artists" can be a problem at times.

Elizabeth Waite went to Panama City, Florida for another Beach Mission; New Orleans, and New England in her travels. She is teaching in a middle school — 7th and 8th grades — where conditioning, carpeting, the absence of bells and doors make teaching a new experience.

Sally Williams Vasse reports she is still working in the Medical Library of Hurley Medical Center and in the Parish Library at Christ Church, where her work required new skills after a disastrous church fire. Sally finds work on the Christian Education Committee and the parent-teacher committee developing a program to integrate all the arts into the curriculum of two schools both stimulating and challenging. Her comment on the latter includes, "Hooray for the Chatham Arts Counsel!" She continues to teach, study and play the flute. The Vasses enjoyed a brief visit with Marianne Byrn Caple, Chuck, and son John in Michigan at Christmas time.

Am sorry that my move from Dayton to Columbus and related problems reduced our news gathering time. Hope we will do better next year with more time to get news to the RECORDER.

Jancy Beach reporting:

So much has been said in recent RECORDER issues about the lack of relevance in much of the class news. This year, in the letter I sent out to my part of our class, I asked that perhaps we should look at reported births, marriages, etc. as simply vital statistics — surely as friends we all like to keep up with such events? And try to relate any "relevance" to the general news section. I asked for some ideas, reactions and gut feelings about being a woman today — and although the response was not overwhelming, the letters I received were all thoughtful — and thought provoking.

From Meg Alexander Sprenkle: "I think that the emphasis should be on those things that we find important in our lives. If we have pertinent statistics we will continue to report them — I used to feel that the questionnaire put too much emphasis on them and that the "additional comments" was of minor importance. I think the time may be ripe to re-activate the RECORDER "Feedback" section which died from lack of interest... child rearing will occupy only a small portion of our adult lives and most of us will go on to other things. (Quite honestly, the pre-school years were very trying for me, especially in the semi-isolation of Rhinebeck.) I think that the "burp of a baby" is going to figure less in future class news and that more of us will be joining those women who work outside the home. There are great opportunities and challenges ahead for all of us... one of the strengths of Chatham is the individuality of its alumnae and their varied interests." Meg goes on to report that she is still tutoring on the third and fourth grade level, doing volunteer work at the town library, joined the board of directors of the Planned Parenthood League of Dutchess County and works at one of their clinics, and is taking a bookkeeping course. [Ed. note — see "Feedback" column.]

Billie Walcutt Burg writes: "This is the most exciting time in history to be a female... now we have a chance to help bring about the true human equality Christ came to teach us about. Our family is working for these goals in several ways — working for the ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment here in Florida against incredible opposition; working with the Childbirth and Parent Education League of our county — and have just had labor and delivery rooms open to trained fathers, working to make the governing body of our church more democratic; working in many ways to provide trained counseling for troubled people at a price they can afford. And with our children — Betsy 6, Brian 3 — trying to set the examples ourselves. Every day is full to the brim and exciting."

From Dianne Rubin Newman: "Chatham is in the forefront of innovative education... and we should be more innovative and not let the RECORDER be just a gossip sheet. Chatham got so many of us on the right track... Volunteerism is my bag — but it may not be for someone else or for that matter mine forever. The point is that whatever we choose, the options exist and it is our obligation to seek the options we choose to exercise."

From Ellen Block Blumenthal: "I haven't written in for the RECORDER for a while because I didn't really seem to 'fit' with the vital statistics that were being stressed — no engagements, marriage, new babies. My life has changed considerably, however, in the last few years. Mickey and I have been separated for a year and one-half. I've gotten my M.A. in psych, and am working full time as a school psychologist in Baltimore city, teaching part time at a local community college. Being on my own has been a real eye-opener as far as learning about myself and how I cope. Although it's lonely at times, I've found that I don't really need to depend on other people to make me happy. It's a good feeling to know you can make it on your own. My girls are 6 and 10 now... I must admit, they help a lot."

And from Margie Conner: "I'd like to hear more about different life styles. Are there any alumnae who, like myself, have chosen not to have children? I'm living happily with the man I love, and because we don't plan to have children, we feel marriage is unnecessary."

In my letter, I also said that I felt that the news I'd received from the class of '63 over the years showed that a lot of the class was concerned with more than just the burp of a baby. Becky Albright Duncan took me to task! Here's a part of her lengthy reply: "Your repeated calls for 'relevance' rather than the mere 'statistics'... continue to annoy me.

Since our graduation the 'statistics' of my life have been the most relevant and most important experiences for me — a marriage, the deaths of my parents, a divorce, a second marriage (which is a most agreeable full-time job), a miscarriage, and most recently, the birth of our first child. Your quip about the mere 'burp of a baby' to someone with my history comes as a thoughtless and ill-considered remark. Have you ever thought how welcome that burp and the 24-hour-a-day responsibility that goes with it are to those of us who have desperately wanted children and for one reason or another didn't have them? Please try to understand that while I don't think my brain has disintegrated... I believe my life today has as much, if not more, meaning than the lives of my career-political-social work-oriented sisters. It's not the stuff of impressive alumnae magazine copy, but the stuff of life for many of us who like it this way... many of us lead what have been represented to be very commonplace lives — lives which are meaningful and joyous nonetheless. Henceforth, I'll not trouble you or your readers with boring statistics or glowing reports of how much we love the baby, how much we enjoy the dog, or how lush our vegetable patch is. Unless you hear otherwise, you'll know that this life-style continues, for we wouldn't want it any other way."

I'm sorry that Becky inferred any negative thoughts in my letter — but I am grateful to her for taking the time to write such a thought-full reply. Because I (Nancy Beach), have not yet had the chance to add to the vital statistics or lead what Becky thinks some of us feel is a "commonplace life," I find it interesting, encouraging and perhaps a mite envy-making to hear from women who joyously greet the responsibilities of children and family. I hope that Becky reconsiders, and next year will share more of her point of view with us. And thanks to all of you who wrote such marvelous letters. I confess I had to edit a bit for space and to prevent repetitions — so if I might have misquoted a bit, please forgive. To the rest of you who didn't reply, we're all looking forward to your comments and ideas next time around.

Fender reporting:

Once again I am disappointed in the few responses I received to my requests for news. Nevertheless, as always, it was great fun to read of the doings of those who did take the time to write. To those of you... many thanks.

Barbara Kessel Bloxson boggled my mind with details of her very busy schedule combining motherhood for a 7-year-old girl and two 2½-year-old boys... with work three nights a week at Macy's in Topeka... with being a Brownie leader. Barbara writes that Ray is Assistant City Attorney with his own office of Police Legal Advisor which he set up with the help of a federal grant.

It's back to school for Ann Niedermayer Fox at Pitt in the three-year Master's Program in Rehabilitation Counseling. Two days a week she works at Woodville State Mental Hospital specializing in Geriatric Counseling. Ann is obviously enjoying the challenge of being back in school again... combining that very busy schedule with the needs of a growing family of four children ranging in age from 5 to 10. The Foxes are now looking forward to their annual ski trip to Stowe in March.

It was wonderful to hear from Sandy Mollenauer after all of these years. Apparently the RECORDER hasn't been reaching her either. Sandy is an Associate Professor at San Diego State University in the Psychology Department. We now have her address and trust she will be able to keep track of the class as we hope to keep track of her.

Sue Hunt Roose reports from Virginia that all the Rooses are doing well. Jack began a new job last July as an Assistant Administrator of the Federal Energy Administration. The three children are now in second grade, kindergarten, and a two-year-old still at home. In her spare time Sue does lots of sewing, helps out in David's kindergarten class and is on the committee which oversees two church nursery schools. On weekends in the summer, the Rooses get in their trailer and go camping. Sue and Jack vacationed in Russia right after Thanksgiving and they shared my sentiments... back to Leningrad soon!

Sue Hill Warner reports that they moved last

Sarah Corwin Brady and Mike are still in love with Santa Clara. Mike is in school and Sarah continues to teach kindergarten as well as developing a curriculum center for teachers. On a swing through the Finger Lakes she dropped in on Dr. Ossman. "He doesn't appear to have changed a bit... still talking 'concepts,' 'issues,' and 'values.' It was good to see him after 10 years!"

Carol Craven Kratz wrote to echo her dissatisfaction with the format of the Alumnae News but thought it better to write than leave me in silence. I appreciate that. Except for the arrival of Erica, everything is much the same for the Kratz family.

Bonnie Dallas Palmer's letter says so much so well that I have included most of it as she wrote it: "I don't quite know what to say for the RE-CORDER; much of what Nancy Beal said in the last issue was true, and it's difficult to encapsulate a year's frustrations, aspirations, misdirections. The teaching market is tight and we're hanging on by our toes, trying to encourage and place our diminishing number of English majors. Rick and I were remarried a couple of years ago — he's a biochemist at the University of Wisconsin at Madison and we're running one of those commuting academic marriages which Time magazine finds so quaint and we find so exhausting."

Ginny Fisher O'Leary writes that she is deriving much satisfaction from her work and her son, Sean, who is 2½. Ginny gave up her 120-mile per day commute for a house closer to the Oakland University where she teaches. She is involved in quite a few research projects concerning the Women's Movement which keep her busy.

Karen Fried's family sent a short note telling us that Karen has been living in Israel for the past two years doing pure research in chemistry.

Unfortunately, this has not been one of my better years. My husband and I separated last May and the ensuing months have been full of many adjustments. Being separated with two small children in the current job market is not easy regardless of whatever progress has been made for the rights of women. My daughters, now 3 and 5, are doing remarkably well and are in a good day care/nursery. I am working for a law firm, not far from the White House, and enjoy being downtown. A big satisfaction recently was being able to get a car loan in my own name. It's a "Brave New World" and the girls and I seem to be holding our own.

Several letters this time commented on Nancy Beal's comment in the RECORDER of December, 1974, which touched on a lot of valid points. I thank Karen Blomquist Struckman for including it. However, if all the alumnae out there leading 'non-traditional' lives don't reply to our requests for news, there is no way we can significantly alter the content of the class news section of the RECORDER as it now stands.

My thanks to all who replied this time. Hope to see as many people as possible at the reunion. Can you believe it — 10 years!

Joan Reaps:

Susan Haas Nordby maintains a full schedule with Junior League, Kingsley House Junior Board, and church work, and last year enjoyed a trip to Europe. Susan says she and David are beginning to appear old to their Chatham babysitters.

It was another busy year for Elaine Hillman Moroney and family — another visit to Mike's family in Ireland and a visit with Lynne Jack Porterfield and Jim who were in Montreal for the World Cycling Championships. Her younger child started to kindergarten; but the time is filled in tutoring slow first-grade readers, prompting Elaine's decision to use her psychology background and become qualified to work with children so she is now embarking on an M.A. program. Her chamber orchestra, Mike's French lessons, and the family's skating interest continue to absorb the time. Elaine also enjoys having her "little sister" Judith Murray Walle '64 living in Montreal.

Sidney-Anne Hudig also reports a full schedule. After a "harrowing" time job hunting last year, she began selling yellow pages advertising all over New England — says in many ways it's like working for herself and provides contact with all sorts of businesses. In addition, Sidney has been learning Italian, attending the symphony, riding, doing needlework, and traveling to London and Maine.

Myra Hull Gillum and Gary hope to purchase a house this year. Meanwhile, Myra is still cycling and in January became parent coordinator for daughter Allison's nursery cooperative. Says Myra, "Women's Lib or no, I find motherhood very thrilling." Myra also enjoys helping head librarian Martha Repman with her library's free movie program for the neighborhood.

Linda Kates Meyer and family continue to devote their energies to sailing; last year the family took a two-week cruise on their sailboat, sailing up the California coast. It was such a good experience that they plan to repeat it.

Both sides of our system of criminal justice are represented by Sheila Kieran Greenbush and her husband. Sheila holds an interesting position as a computer systems manager for the NYC Police Department where she serves as manager, administrator, and systems designer of both computer and non-computer-related projects for various city agencies — for which services Sheila is one of the highest paid non-uniform personnel in the department. Sheila plans to pursue this career in government service, while Joel is a criminal lawyer.

Retail buying for Stix, Baer and Fuller, a St. Louis department store, continues to keep Janie Lanigan Gaitskill occupied — this time it's hats, while Russ buys for the "other" store. Russ will leave Janie behind for a month's trip to the Orient this spring, while Janie only gets to travel back to New York City.

Linda Lanus Tomlins sends regards from New Mexico. Following a two-month odyssey to Washington, DC by way of Key West, the Tomlins sold their house and are temporarily in an apartment while they look for another. With the children both in school, Linda has started teaching three-year-olds three mornings a week. Jack continues as director of Portuguese at the University of New Mexico and is involved in various regional and national language associations.

Carol Hartman Elden has become involved in the Child Care Consortium in Pasadena, which tries to establish better child care for working mothers. She says her own family is probably busier than ever now that her girls are older.

My days also continue to be occupied with my work and house, alumnae club activities, and my needlework learning experiences. We did manage a trip to Hawaii last fall — I'd recommend it to anyone. Jim continues his work in today's rather hectic world of investment analysis. I hope to see a goodly number of the class at our reunion May 31.

Mary reporting:

Can it really be ten years! Chatham has certainly kept up to the times, and most of us have aged more or less gracefully.

Judy Meub Haggerty and husband Frank switched roles last summer — he cared for the children and the house and she worked. The only confusion was on the part of her son who called Judy "Daddy" because she went to the office each day. Both Judy and Frank were glad to return to their usual routine at the end of the summer.

Susan Michaels Orringer reports that husband Mark is an Assistant Professor of Surgery at the U. of Michigan. They are in their first home — complete with garden and weeds. Besides caring for her two children, Jeff (7) and Lisa (4½), Susan dabbles in various organizations as well as helping at both children's schools. Interestingly, her mother is now enrolled at Chatham and having a great time. Susan expresses the feeling that many of us have — that it would be nice to be there now that things are so less regimented.

Pat Orleans Siegel keeps busy taking care of her 3 children, her husband and home plus working at her husband's commercial fishing company.

A hectic life follows Pat Papp Breman. She is president of her local Jr. Woman's Club which is involved in numerous community improvement projects. Plus, she is chairperson of a church affiliated mental health memorial fund aimed at communicating with the community on mental health problems. Husband Sid is an operations analyst at Ketchum, MacLeod & Grove and has just become a CPA.

mary reporting:

Linda Breitel Paez called from nearby Bowie, Maryland where she is in the midst of her 'organization year.' Linda is currently Vice President of the Washington Area Chatham Alumnae Club which recently put out a directory of all Chatham alums in the Washington area. I never realized what a sizeable group we are. She is also Chairman of the Gourmet Demonstration Club of the University of Maryland Faculty Wives and enjoys that. Last year, Linda joined a group of librarians to do research for the Department of the Interior. Mario is teaching at the University of Maryland and traveled to Belgium last year to present a paper. Son Jonathan is an active 2.

Diane Browarsky Levine writes that both of her children have 'come of age' (i.e., are in school) and that she is "still doing doctoral work in English, but the present market is so discouraging that it's put a damper on my graduate efforts." Diane is still trying to study for comprehensive exams while teaching part-time at Loyola College. Her husband David is on the faculty at Johns Hopkins University doing research on hypertension, medical education, health practices and the delivery of health care. Diane was pleased to see that Chatham made the Wall Street Journal.

Janice Patterson is still in love with life and with friends when she just moved into a new house complete with pool and with teaching students, her grandsons and her son. She and 40 students were in New York and plan to weeks in Europe next year. In between times, Janice is a reader for Recording for the Blind and a Chatham's Alumnae Representative in March. She reports lots of traveling last summer — visited with Dottie Raymond Matsui in California, Ingrid Von Dattan Detweiler in Massachusetts, Suzanne Archer Dawes in New York, and Lynn Schrieber Glass and Carol Craven Kratz.

Jinny Powell Hargrave has been living on the farm while teaching pottery. She participated in Jerry Caplan's sewer-pipe sculpture workshop and did some RAKU firings with her own students. The two days before Julie was born she was busy preparing her pottery for a craft show and market! Also, Jinny has started a cooperative pre-school group for son Jordon. In November, Jinny visited Judy Meub Haggerty and Julie Mamolen in Boston.

Martha Repman had just finished Jane Howard's "A Different Woman" when she received my request for news. "I am struck by the many fulfilling life styles of my friends and acquaintances from Chatham. The range we've chosen is exciting. I'm still struggling with who I am, and I once thought that was over with graduation... it's not just married women who've learned from the movement that identity needn't come from association with a man; many single women, myself included, are learning that it's who she is and not who he is that's important. All of this is to preface that I finally decided Martha Repman didn't need to be Mrs. Somebody Else to get involved in the church or to help organize a community blood drive for the Red Cross." This summer sees a raft trip through the Grand Canyon. Martha offers a comfortable bed to Philadelphia visitors.

Marsha Richards Bingler almost missed the deadline — she is so busy trying to get a Reunion Committee together. She is still very involved in the League of Women Voters. Last July the Mayor of Pittsburgh appointed her to the Pittsburgh Human Relations Commission; an assignment that is proving to be a very interesting and broadening experience.

Now that her twin boys are 5½, Jenia Royster Brown tells us she has some free time. She tutors inner city children plus teaching swimming and gym once a week. Taylor continues with the same law firm specializing in real estate practice plus giving a helping legal hand to environmental groups.

This has been quite a busy year — again — for David and me. Until the ninth of September we spent most of our time making our new house livable. In May we spent two weeks in Denmark and Norway — a rather pregnant me checking all the comfort stops! I retired from the library business at the end of June, and compared motherhood notes with Beverly Miller Blessinger. Anne arrived in the midst of canning season — we had just picked a bushel of apples the day before; we have lots of peaches but never got to the tomatoes. Our adventures ended by the three of us being snow-bound in Ohio for two days after the great Thanksgiving blizzard. I still am active in AFS and in the League of Women Voters.

Beverly reporting:

Has it actually been ten years since we graduated? In that time, many of us have gone different ways. Some have settled happily down as wives and mothers; others have advanced in careers. Most, it seems, have found a way to combine the two. As usual, I have enjoyed reading your varied responses.

Ronya Sieg McMillen writes that her 17-year-old Diane is a senior at Shaker Heights High School and is a National Merit semi-finalist. They are busy with college selection now; unfortunately, Diane won't consider an all-woman's college, so Chatham is out. Ronya reports that her 16-year-old David loves cars and girls, and that her 4-year-old Michael is a real joy.

A lively response arrived from Newport News with Jill Squire Popish reporting, "With Thea in first grade and Daniel in nursery school and me with lots of free time, I've joined the gainfully-employed. I'm the editor of the Jewish community newspaper on the peninsula and the area correspondent for a weekly Jewish paper out of Indianapolis. Paul has opened his own office and we're all busy and happy."

Pam Stirba Russell has had a busy year becoming a business woman. She and Bill purchased a small chemical supply company, and Pam runs the business. It is small enough so that Pam can work at home, employing a delivery service and warehouse. Bill is still with Eastern Airlines and the Russells have once again taken advantage of the flying benefits. In November they spent ten days in Israel; it was a fantastic trip. The girls are in first and second grades, so Pam is involved with PTA, plus Brownies, music lessons, and their local civic organization. Pam writes, "Last summer, when we visited Sheila Bennett Harris, we went to Chatham to see a play. It really has changed. I'm hoping we can be there for the reunion."

Ginny Stretton Smith and family moved again this past summer and are located in Fayette, Michigan. Doug left residential construction and took a civil service job at Fayette State Park. The main attraction is the restoration of the old town of Fayette, now a virtual "ghost town." It boomed as a pig iron smelting town around 1870 and died in 1890. The state is restoring it and making it an area museum. As for the rest of the Smiths, Dougie (4½) is fortunate to be going to a Head Start pre-school program offered in this area. They are in a rural region and many of the children do not have close neighbors to play with. Karin will be two in March.

Tina Swansen Cummings and John finally decided to do what they have wanted to for so long move to a farm. They have 44 acres (mostly corn-farmed by neighbors) and a 100-year-old sturdy farm house. They want more land, space and privacy to be free to be more to themselves. Tina assures us that they are not dropping out; they love people, but are after a more basic life style. Randy (7) and Amy (5) are excited too. Tina writes that she is enjoying her final year as a full-time mother, with hopes of working next fall.

Jane Tremble Baumann graduated with honors from Ramapo College last June. Jane writes, "I have finally joined ranks with all of you graduates." Now it's a master's in Public Administration at nearby Fairleigh Dickinson University. To support her increasingly expensive educational habit, she has a job as a legislative aide to a New Jersey assemblyman. Jane is finding that this is a very exciting time to be a part of the legislative process.

A reply from Susie Vansant Bartz arrived, reporting, "We have moved to Santa Barbara where we plan to stay awhile. After ten moves in nine years, we decided that the Navy was not for us or our children. Jarry is trying to start his own business, and I'm still chasing kids and making bread and setting up a pottery studio. For relief (!!) I counsel nursing mothers and teach classes as a LaLeche League Leader. Life is hard but good."

Ingrid Von Dattan Detweiler reports, "It has been a wonderfully active year — just the way I like it. I've increased my involvement with the League of Women Voters by becoming a member of the local governing board in charge of membership. I still observe the Selectmen's Meetings in Holden in order to keep an eye on our local politicians. Sean attends nursery school two mornings a week now, so I have a few hours to myself. Our new family activity is sailing and we now have a 27-foot sailboat which needs a name."

A reply all the way from Kirkland, Washington, has Marcia Webb Buxton writing, "Tom continues to work for the Boeing Company and I do volunteer work for Planned Parenthood. In September we had a lovely visit from Les and Joan Becker. Joan was among Chatham's librarians when we were students. It was so nice seeing them again and hearing the news from Pittsburgh."

Martha Wilson reports that her now one-year-old job in publishing is still great; there is lots of variety. Martha moved out of the house in Georgetown that she had been living in for seven years but is once again running the annual Georgetown House Tour.

After five years of waiting and hoping, Ken and I, Beverly Miller Blessinger, finally had a baby: Karen Marie, a happy 'n healthy little girl. I have taken a year's leave of absence from my job as reading clinician, and will probably renew this leave for another year. We enjoy getting together with David and Krein Howarth and their baby girl, Anne, who is five months younger than Karen.

Book reporting:

Heather Bastow Weiss reports that her family study project has just received another two years of funding from the National Institute of Mental Health. Her dissertation data collection includes a study on the division of household and child care tasks within families. Heather's husband, now a Cornell history professor, lives in their house in Ithaca to which she commutes from Cambridge on weekends. The experience may turn into a book, and Heather invites information and moral support from anyone else in a dual profession commuting family. Her dissertation is scheduled for completion in 1976, which time Heather plans to seek a teaching and research position closer to home.

LoLita Dawson Pfeiffer and Ray have given up the world of graduate school. They have left St. Louis, Missouri for St. Louis, Michigan where Ray is Assistant Professor of Philosophy at Alma College. Lita says that she is enjoying her orchestra playing, ceramics, reading, and especially her children. Ann Smith, their second child, was born just prior their move.

Bonnie Birks O'Connell is working as an instructional aide in a West Palm Beach elementary school. They have bought a house close to where they had been renting. Last summer the O'Connells had a reunion with Mary Rosenberger Hourigan and JoAnn Eustace Walther and their families.

Beverly Blazey Palmer is in her second year of teaching as Assistant Professor of Clinical Psychology at California State College, Dominguez Hills. Bev reports that she has been selected for inclusion in Who's Who of American Women 1975-76. Her husband Dick is finishing his two-year military obligation by serving as a psychiatrist in the Naval Hospital in Long Beach. The Palmers are confirmed Californians, although they greatly enjoy traveling.

Donna Beiswenger Riggs has been associated with CAST I (Chatham Alumnae Summer Theatre) and directed The Sign in Sidney Brustein's Window last summer. She urges all alumnae to plan to visit this summer and welcomes moral, physical and/or financial support for the project. Dick has also gotten into CAST I and designed the set for Brustein. Jamie and Joni Beth are now four and two. Donna credits them with bringing her "back from the real world of the theatre to the tinsel world of reality."

Penny Anderson Gladwell will have a story published this spring in Guidepost about their trip to South Carolina during a freak blizzard. She is still an active member of the Huntington, WV Chamber Orchestra and has played at local concerts and church music festivals as well. Dave plans to finish his M.B.A. at Marshall University this fall, at which time they will entertain ideas of moving.

Lenore Fellner Lessall sends greetings from London.

Liz reporting:

Jo Ann Greenfield Abraham is back in school at Monmouth College studying special education and reading. A new and larger home keeps her busy as well as her work on the Environmental Board of Matawan. Madelyn Gorchoff Osur is also studying while caring for her new baby. She has just completed an income tax course with H & R Block and a short session in Basic Human Interaction.

Lucille Finger Harding's family has purchased a small saltwater farm on the shore of Goose Cove, overlooking the mountains of Mt. Deseret Island. The Hardings will spend the summer farming and opening a shop featuring unusual natural artifacts of the land and sea.

Gini Gold is presently working on a newsletter for Congressional and administrative decision-makers concerning energy and nuclear power. Gini anticipates a move to Washington, DC this summer but in her spare time she's enjoying the Vermont ski slopes.

Connie Gray Voight has temporarily abandoned her campaign to help the local schools while she is enjoying Jennifer. Judy Gilbert Livingston and Sylvia Woods Mudenda got together and their daughters had as much fun as they did.

I received a fond "hello to all" from Janet Forbush Zuvers, Pamela Johnson Gutkind, Jackie Flynn Nygaard, Alice Hunter Weeman and Diane Furrer Holzheimer. There were also some criticisms regarding the format of our questionnaire. It would be nice to hear from a critic who has an alternative format.

Speaking for myself, I am very pleased with a new job as I was promoted to Director of Student Activities at Allegheny High School. The new position gives me the opportunity to meet students informally to plan activities unrelated to the classroom. Surprisingly enough, I miss the classroom from time to time. Have a good year!

Debbie reporting:

Last summer I resigned from Polaroid Corporation where I had spent three years designing and managing the employee communications department to become General Manager and Director of Communications for Super8 Sound, Inc., in Cambridge. We design, manufacture and market Super 8 film-making equipment. I live in Cambridge and spend many weekends in the north country where I have recently seen Laura Oliva, who is working for a kennel in Portsmouth, NH, Helen Read Steel, teaching in Wolfeboro, NH; and Ann Quenin, legal assistant in an Ossipee, NH law firm. Julie Mamolen is Sales Manager at Super8 Sound.

Sarah Leuthy Chamberlain lives in Manchester, NH with her husband Michael and two children, Jennifer and Joshua. After getting an M.S. in Early Childhood Education, she has worked for three years as educational consultant to a day care association in Manchester.

Carol Pogash is happily working at the San Francisco Examiner, writing about the new Brown administration, the high cost of repairing her 12-year old turtle back Volvo and anything else she wants to write about. "I still live with my old man Jim, also a reporter."

Lucy Hilmer is climbing the career ladder at A La Carte Corporation, where she's been named vice president in charge of mustard. She is still salesperson at the Sausalito Flea Market each weekend where she sells hot dogs and an occasional peroshki along with her partner, Gypsy Paul. They live together on a Sausalito houseboat Paul built.

Dael Kiesler Stichter wrote from Camp Pendleton where her husband Bob is still with the artillery regiment. She has two children and is a volunteer at 5-year-old Jenni's pre-school. "I am also an officer of the Camp Pendleton Wives Club and find it very rewarding. We love Southern California life." Roz Randolph and Phyllis Epstein visited last year.

Linda McPhilliamy Nielsen is teaching Russian at a high school near Denver and is finishing an M.A. in Japanese History at the University of Colorado. She visited the Soviet Union last summer to prepare for teaching.

Nora Levy Johnston, her husband and two children live in England and visited with the American grandparents at Christmas time. "Lucy and Peter were very puzzled by the fact that Father Christmas is called Santa Claus in America, and manages to stand on every street corner in Manhattan at once." Her husband is on the Board of Directors of C&J Clark Ltd., makers of Desert Boots and Wallabees, in his position as Company Secretary.

Shannon McGuire is finishing a thesis on Royall Tyler, an early American dramatist, at N.Y.U. She taught humanities last year at a local women's college and "hope never to leave academia to face reality again."

Teg reporting:

Trudy Levin Cushner is Management Specialist with Pennsylvania Legal Services Center, providing management and budget assistance to 21 legal services programs in the state. Her husband Arnold "still wishes to teach, but has resigned himself to long-term state employment." Hadley loves nursery school and his academic progress is fine, although unlike John Stuart Mill, he has reached his fourth birthday without being able to read or utter a single Greek word."

Andy Morgan Weyer writes from Houston where Tom has recently taken a job with Texas International Airlines in financial forecasting. Andy has recently refreshed her memory on diaper changing by going into the day-care business. This has expanded her family from Mimi, now age five, and Susanna, age three. She says "they are a constant source of bedlam and a frequent source of joy." Practically the same comments came from Andrea Moss End who is still at home with Ali (3) and Susannah (2). Andrea plans to continue with the challenge of homemaking, at least until her children are in school. Malcolm, her husband, is now creative supervisor for KLM, Puerto Rican Rums, and Longines-Wittnauer at Olgivy Mather.

Mary Ruddell Lindberg writes that she is currently involved with an experimental school in her neighborhood which she finds fascinating. Her oldest daughter Sara is in school; Krista, in nursery school; and Melissa, born this year. Mary is planning to go back to school this fall. She keeps in touch with Jane Birmingham Hanley who is living in Cleveland and also Mary Lou Patrick McJunkin in Charleston and has spent weekends with both of them. Eve Rubin Zincavage is teaching slow learners at the high school level and enjoying being a new mother. Her husband Walter has an NEH grant and is finishing his Ph.D. in philosophy. Somehow Joan Reinsner Auritt has found time to go back to producing and directing at WHYY-TV, Philadelphia. She says, "My husband Jon has been super with the twins, Bernie and Benji. Usually he takes them to his office where he or (when he's in court) his secretary looks after them." Sounds like a very busy life!

Frank and I have just moved from New York to Washington, DC so life has been pretty frantic the

...not less than this. I worked right up until the day we left to find another paper at Rockefeller University. ...my research with the above group. A previous paper appeared in the past Journal of Comparative Neurology. Frank is working at the Social Biology. ...and we are adjusting to life in "political city."

Jo reporting:

Hello! Greetings from Williamsport and, here with the rest of the country.

Mary Schlitt Kostalos and Janet Walker continue on the faculty at Chatham. Mary in the biology department and Janet in languages. Janet received a Ph.D. in French last May from Bryn Mawr. She teaches courses in French and Italian and is admissions committee chairman at Chatham. In addition, she takes Italian courses at Pitt and is planning a summer in Europe.

Marty Sebastian Moyer will combine mothering with part time work with the Veterans' Administration, where she continues her old job as a community care coordinator in charge of family care homes for ex-mental patients. She and George camped throughout Scandinavia last summer, quite a feat for one who was five months' pregnant at the time.

Sandy Stewart Shasby is movin' on. Mike will do a four-month residency in a Billings, Montana clinic after he finishes his residency at a Washington (state) hospital. From Billings, the Shasbys will move to Atlanta. Therefore, in four short months, Sandy will move her family of four (including two babies ages two and six months) not once, but twice!

The Greenes, Bobbi Subow Greene et al., have adopted the San Francisco area enthusiastically. Bobbi is art director of a local Easter fair and also is active in her support of a local animal refuge. Projects of the animal refuge include saving endangered species, sponsoring nature walks, teaching children nature appreciation, and making crafts for a fund-raising Christmas bazaar. Despite much community involvement, however, Bobbi finds her real enjoyment comes from being home with her two little girls, both under three and growing "too quickly."

Bobbi reminded me that the Big Birthday — 30th — comes this year, and Carol Swenson Foss wrote of attending husband Charlie's 10th reunion at W&J last October. (I ran to the mirror, and sure enough, it shows!) Carol also wrote of Dara Murphy's visit at Christmas.

A visit to Estonia with her mother to meet and visit with relatives was one of two highlights of Evi Tamm Metcalf's year. Evi discovered that Russia is vastly different from the U. S. in appearance, but its people are so much like us. Highlight number two was Alan, born in January, who turned her from an independent career girl of seven years into a full-time mother.

Janet Washburn Grana spent part of last summer on Nantucket with Dara Murphy. Also, Janet and husband Ed shared a house on Fire Island last summer with 10 other people, which she called a "good lesson" in how to get along with others. She sees Phyllis Epstein when Phyllis comes to New York on buying trips.

Like Evi, Jane Weigel Hubley had a year highlighted by a trip and a baby. In June, she and Fred were in Mexico City for an early celebration of their fifth anniversary. In September, a few days after little Karen officially entered the terrible two's, Brian was born. Her winter was spent doctoring and loving children.

Now stationed at Eglin AFB, John and Mariann Williams Yatsco are hoping to be settled there "for a couple of years at least."

My news can be summed up in two words — I'm busy. Ed keeps me busy helping him two days a week at the office. Jake is in nursery school, which involves carpool and providing snacks. Carrie is my little helper, but at two, her helpfulness often turns into a lot of work for Mom. In the community, I'm a board member of Tudor Hall, a home for pre-delinquent teenage girls; board member of churchwomen and law wives groups; on the alumni executive council of Dickinson School of Law; and active in a local judiciary campaign. Luckily, much of this can be done from the home or with the children in tow.

Lois reporting:

I guess I show that I'm getting the itch to go to school when I start my section of the class new with items from people who are currently in graduate school. Bobbi Franklin McKenna reports that is more than half-way through her Ph.D. program. George Washington and currently has a fellow teaching Chinese history to undergraduates. In course of a long newsy letter, Bobbi also mentions that husband Bob is out of the Army and working for a Washington law firm; son Jaime, now three going to Montessori school and that they went to Patti Johnson's wedding in Ithaca in January enjoyed seeing Penny Prudden Redfield, Mary Moran, Laurie Gould Grad and Susie Elliot.

Risa Ellovich is back at Indiana University and having returned from 18 months in the Ivory C doing dissertation research in Anthro. She's busy with discussion sections, auditing, modern day breadmaking and work on her dissertation.

Those working on Ph.D.s should receive some comfort from Vivian Garbuny Goldberg who writes that her best news is that she's not still in school. She got her Ph.D. in physiology from Georgetown a year ago, although she says she still hasn't recovered from writing her thesis. She's now working on post-doc in physiology at Georgetown. When she's at home in Maryland they go rock climbing on what Vivian describes as vertical cliffs!

Ginger Getman finished her M.Ed. with Teacher Corps last May and is now teaching kindergarten and pursuing her interests in spinning, dyeing and weaving. Ginger notes she enjoyed seeing P. Churchman and Kathy Perrone VanWassen at K. Cochrane's wedding last June. Ginger will be married this July to John Harkey, a free lance photographer and teacher at the Southwest Craft Center.

I was pleased to hear from Emme Day Erdossy for the first time in five years. In November she was elected manager and treasurer of the Chautauque ake Association, Inc., an organization she began work with as a Kelly Girl two years ago. The Association is involved with the maintenance of Chautauqua Lake, home of the famous institution. She says her work is quite varied and most interesting. Not only might she become the first certified female spray applicator in New York State, but also has managed to get women on the Board of Directors after twenty years.

Also heard from for the first time was Marcy Seeler Lawton who spent the summer with her new husband at the Smithsonian-sponsored field station on Barro Colorado Island in Panama. She reports she received her M.A. in the History of Science from Duke and is currently taking courses at the University of Chicago where she'll be starting her doctoral work in Human Development next fall. Marcy's husband Bob is doing graduate work in Tropical Ecology at the University and since they hate Chicago, they escape on weekends to look for eagles and owls.

The arrival of Jody Drooz Yoffie's baby a month early made life hectic for awhile. She's continuing her work with the Attorney General's Office from home while Alan is practicing law with the firm of Murdoch & Walsh. The Yoffies see Merle Pollack and family often and had plans for a Chatham reunion with the Intners and Marsha Weiss Bramowitz and Alan the weekend she wrote.

In a short note from Jennifer Gearhart Grason she announced the birth of a daughter and plans to spend June through December in Murray Hill, New Jersey while her husband will be on leave from CMU working for Bell Laboratories.

Jackie Emery Flynn and Ned have been informed by the Air Force that they may "anticipate" a change of assignment this summer. Jackie didn't sound thrilled by the prospect, but other than that she says her life is kept busy with activities with the A.U.W. and trying to keep ahead of her two-year-old daughter. I'm sure the rest of the class joins me in sending condolences to Jackie on the death of her mother this past October. Also, from California, Polly Fritz Weisrock sends greetings to the class.

My own news is of the economic crunch which has both my husband and me job hunting. I continue to keep busy with my two-year-old son and various political and social causes. We've seen Harriet Katz Bachman, Larry, and Seth a couple times this year and had a visit from Marcia Seeler who is now in law school at Boston College. Thanks to all who responded to my cards this year.

Harb reporting:

The response this year was very good, and I heard from several alumnae who hadn't responded before. Everyone seems to have settled down — in jobs, marriage, graduate school.

Sally Jones wrote most enthusiastically about her work with her theatre company, composed of four women and producing a play about every 1½ to 2 years. They are partially funded by the New York State Council on the Arts — the company is a non-profit organization. She also writes that those who now her will know that she and Jacques are still together. Since 1969, Sally has been to England, studied with Grotowski in Poland, and has taught a semester in the Chatham Theatre Department.

Congratulations to Gail Hart Davidson on her marriage. Her husband is a lawyer, and their wedding was attended by Marcia Seeler, Connie Weiss Sukernek and Marsha Weiss Bramowitz. Gail is a free lance educational consultant with the New York City Public Schools.

Most of those who responded are currently beginning, completing, or otherwise involved in obtaining their Master's. Bonnie Lombardo Ilch, mother of two-year-old Melissa, has returned to school part-time in the field of early childhood teaching. Eleanor Levinson Paris is taking courses toward a degree in psychology and her husband Jeffrey is finishing his M.B.A. Mary Hood Deitch has finished her master's in counseling, and is still teaching a Learning Disability Class. She and Harry took a long camping trip last summer, and returned to California via Canada and the Northwest.

Penny Lowe has started working on her M.S.T. degree (Master's in Science Teaching — Environmental Education) at Antioch Graduate School in Keene,

New Hampshire. Mimi Majewski Lenkoski also started work on a master's at the University of Connecticut, Hartford campus.

Harriet Katz Bachman writes that she has returned to work as a caseworker while Larry returns to school at Johns Hopkins in the field of physics. Diane Himes Ambrose and Don are busy decorating their new home in Mt. Lebanon. Cornelia Kennedy Atkins reports that she has taken up weaving. She and Larry drove back from New York City with Risa Ellovich.

Mary Kaplan has passed the California bar exam and has joined a friend in the first all-women's law firm in Richmond, California. Mary finds her job time-consuming and exciting — and quite a change from the freedom of student life. Mary frequently sees Ricki Shore Boyd who is attending law school.

Life with the Platz family in Lowville remains greatly unchanged. Our sons are now 5½ and 3½. Joe and I are busy with our jobs and our family — and life is satisfying. Best wishes for peace and prosperity (if this is possible) in 1975.

Merle reporting:

This year's responses brought news from my "regulars" and a few from people that have not responded before. Thank you all — with the price of postage I would feel quite cheated without replies!

Helen Pollock Starr and Ann Posner Fox both send friendly greetings. As does Judy Rogoff Katz who is wondering why she has not managed to get the RECORDER in two years but never misses the mail of the Alumnae Fund.

Does anyone have suggestions for what Eleanor Selling can do with a degree in Anthro, other than teach? Eleanor is attending Columbia and about to get a Master's of Philosophy in Anthropology, followed by a Ph.D. on Anti-Semitism with fieldwork in New York City.

Jean Robinson Andrews is also studying, but with different goals. Jean and Bob are busy listening to German language records and planning a "Europe on $5 a day" vacation as they hope to move to Germany for three years beginning in July.

In September Alison Oakes switched jobs and is now doing program planning, counseling, budget planning, etc. as Director of Youth Services for the Bernard Horwich Jewish Community Center on Chicago's North Side. She speaks to Sarah Bornstein and frequently sees Rosemary Liquori Dahood, '70. Alison, Ann Rosch Duffield and Peggy Rosenthal all expressed pleasure at the news of changes at Chatham. Annie put it neatly. She finds Chatham turning into a real environment for women.

Annie is now taking time off from work after the birth of her son. She is returning to work in March for a year and then hopes to take time off to spend with Jamie and do free lance writing. Annie is quick to point out that, even as a professional woman, having a baby is still a thrill. In addition to congratulations on the birth of Jamie, Ann and Tim merit another set. Tim has just gotten his first major sculpture commission for a large outdoor piece in Philadelphia.

Peggy Rosenthal has undergone a metamorphosis since I last heard from her. She is now an unemployed paralegal (something that Marsha Weiss Bramowitz can identify with), collecting unemployment and reapplying to law school. Her first experience in law school was a personal disaster partly as a reaction to being a woman in the male domain of Brooklyn Law School. This led to her undergoing psycho-analysis which was painful but had great results. Peggy would like to know if anyone else in the class has had similar difficulties and how they have dealt with them. To the more social — Peggy has seen Judy Bachrach (working as a journalist for the Washington Post), and ran into Laura Weill Brown who visited Chatham and raved about the changes in the campus. Peggy and Nancy Cohen Druchman have heard from Risa Ellovich who is back from Africa.

My year has been happy. As usual my winter is hectic. Our second son, William Ira, was born Christmas day. Richard and I took a LaMaze course and strongly recommend it. I am presently sitting in the midst of cartoons. We are moving as a protest to the landlord who raised our rent twice in the last four months. So much for New York City rent laws.

Ellen Newman Edelstein and Aaron have been able to take time away from decorating their new house to take a couple of long ski weekends.

After five years of living in different parts of the country, Marsha Weiss Bramowitz and I finally have seen each other aside from weddings. We have also seen a lot of Jody Drooz Yoffie, Alan and Alexy in Wilmington, New York and Baltimore, and also Eleanor Levinson Peris and Jeff. I have spoken with Connie Weiss Sukernek and Peter but have not seen them recently.

I am also fascinated by the changes at Chatham and I am sometimes jealous of Gail Weiss, '76 and Amy Newman, '78 who are there now. After the article about Chatham appeared in the Wall Street Journal I received several phone calls from people who were impressed with what they read. I was too!

Dottie reporting:

Everybody is as usual doing a lot of different things — I do wish that more of you would share your activities.

Moving was an important interest to several classmates. Tina Satz Miracle is finishing her Ed.S. degree in counselor education at the University of Florida after returning from Bolivia where Andy was doing his dissertation research for his Ph.D. in anthropology. Andy, Rebekah, Jed, and Tina all liked living there. Going from warm climates to cold climates — Kathy Williams Myerburg has moved to Minnesota since her husband, Richard, has a new job with a department store in Minneapolis. They live about ten miles from the city and find many occasions to ski.

Carol Zurheide Block, Bill, and Diana are just getting settled after moving to Ohio from New Jersey. Mommie's little helper is of great assistance in unpacking, I'm sure. Linda Richman Blackman, Marc, and David are moving to Bethesda, Maryland in June. Marc is doing an endocrine fellowship at the National Institutes of Health. Linda has been working part-time as a social worker at Bellevue Hospital. She'd like to know if there are any Chathamites in the area around Bethesda? She also asks if anyone has heard from Trudi Gammerman Linas?

Kathy Wright Mueller is teaching prepared childbirth classes for the Childbirth Education Association of Philadelphia. Kathy is an alumnae representative for Chatham, a member of the general board of her church where she and Don are involved in putting on plays. All these activities and caring for two children must keep them more than busy.

Ann Turnock is working part-time in the mission department at Bel Air Presbyterian Church and is continuing in the Master of Divinity Program at the Fuller Theological Seminary. She spent a weekend last summer with Polly Fritz Weisrock. Lynn Stewart is a claims adjuster for Royal Globe Insurance Worker's Compensation since June of 1974. She is planning a vacation to Rhodesia to visit her grandmother who will be living there for the next two years.

Laura Weill Brown is still teaching and enjoying her role as a Chatham alumnae representative. She also represents Chatham on a special committee that is studying the graduates of women's colleges all over the country. Marsha Weiss Bramowitz and Alan have been living in the 'yard' at Annapolis since July where Alan is assigned to the Naval Hospital at the Academy. They spent last summer traveling from Los Angeles to Annapolis. Marsha is looking for a job, taking courses for pleasure and decorating their apartment. Sounds like Marsha gets the life of leisure award for the year!

Sue Trees Juliano, Jim and Laura spent a weekend with Mimi Majewski Lenkoski and Peter in November. Sue spends most of her time with Laura, being involved in church activities and in domestic endeavors. Faye Singer Rosch is fully involved with Becca (4) and Eric (2) while Jeff still has another year of fellowship training in allergy and immunology at Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh. He is planning to practice as a pediatric allergist. Becca will be beginning kindergarten in September.

I'm just completing my Ph.D. and may soon be one of Linda Richman Blackman's neighbors in the Washington, DC area. Judy Light '67 and I met Frank Lackner for lunch last summer and have been threatening a visit to Chatham to see the new sites. Had a pleasant time with Georgia McKee Holmberg and Kathy Osmond (b. 1947) and Emy Hill Buka (b. 1947) are both in the same company. Kathy works in the finance and office at Webster, near Boston. Emy and Jack are deeply concerned with their past and present family life and are now both working in the entertainment industry. Emy even has her own magazine to read. Emy, a faculty member at University of Maryland, College Park is married to a chemistry teacher and is currently studying to become a nurse.

Nelle reporting:

A number of our classmates are continuing their education and/or educating others. Susan Belkin Glaser says she is slowly plugging away at her master's degree in School Psychology while teaching at a therapeutic pre-school for disturbed, retarded children. Marno Doczy teaches 4th graders in Pittsburgh. She has some graduate work behind her, and hopes to continue her studies this summer at Rollins College in Florida. Marno lives not far from Judy Weisenfeld Weinberg, but it seems they're having a hard time getting together. So from Marno and Judy, a special hello! Debbie Hagstrom Barton writes that Nancy Vaughan was a bridesmaid in her wedding. Debbie is still teaching 2nd grade, and she and Bruce are making plans for a house they'll begin building this summer. Carol Olbum teaches ceramics, and had her first one-person exhibit in September 1974. Future one-person exhibits will be at Clay Place in Pittsburgh this coming May and at the Sunrise Gallery in Charleston, WV in late 1975 or early 1976. Betsy Aufderheide Ruckman is teaching high school German and Spanish. She says that Tom has graduated from CMU and is now a Management Trainee with U. S. Steel.

Lena Genello Goldberg is finishing up her Ph.D. in Philosophy at MIT. Her area of concentration is the Philosophy of Law, and her dissertation topic will be the ethics of punishment and the rights of prisoners. Lena is seriously considering a second approach to the subject by attending law school this coming fall. Her husband Ron is a resident in radiology at the Beth Israel-Harvard University Medical Center. Lena has seen a number of Chathamites ex-Chathamites, including Maggie Farrell Borowsky, Donna May (living in New York), Lael McGuigan Pritchard, Nancy Stewart (who is about to begin medical school), and Sara Stotzer (studying social work at Boston University)

Peggy Evans is pursuing her Doctor of Musical Arts degree in organ performance and church music at the Eastman School of Music (University of Rochester). She is also the music director at a suburban church, serving as the organist and conductor of four different choirs. After passing her Ph.D. qualifying exams in South Asian Studies, Gloria Good Raheja switched back to Anthropology for her degree, so she'll be in school for a while yet. Gloria has started quilt-making and she and Raj are taking skiing lessons. Nina Blum is down south working toward her master's degree in Marine Biology at Florida State University. She expects to graduate this summer.

Now we come to the attorneys. Rosemary G. Rubin is proud to have had an article entitled "Manufacturer and Professional Users Liability: Defective Medical Equipment" published in the 1974 issue of the Akron University Law Review. Rosemary earned her J.D. degree last June, passed the Ohio bar exam, and is currently a staff attorney with the Stark County Legal Aid Society. During her final year at the University of Pittsburgh School of Law, Diane Berman headed the Moot Court program. Now, with law degree in hand, Diane moved into the real courtroom. She tries criminal cases daily in her capacity as an Assistant District Attorney for Allegheny County.

The rest of the crew are involved in various sundry activities. Jeanne Burton Leone works with religious music and publishing company founded by Brother Julius. The company is involved in helping the physically and mentally disabled, and in leading people to "happy, healthy, and God-centered lives." Jeanne says that she was healed of a diseased bladder without surgery or diet restrictions.

Debi Block Rubin is an occupational therapist at a mental hospital. Her major outside activity continues to be with the Harrisburg Free Medical Clinic. Debi is quite excited preparing for a move to Montreal, where Fred will begin his medical residence at a hospital associated with McGill University.

Mary Conway Vaughan is also about to leave the country. Her husband Rick has been given a special assignment by Exxon to work in London for 18 years starting this summer. Mary says they are hardly wait. In the meantime, she is busy chasing two-year-old twins, Michael and Mark, and enjoying cooking, sewing, and playing tennis.

Ann Harper Scott reports from Johnstown that she and Glenn share a huge apartment with a Scott puppy. Ann says that her job as a claims representative with the Social Security Administration gives her an inside view of the entire socioeconomic spectrum. As for extra-curricular activities, Ann plays basketball with an office group, is working on a 25-mile swim at the YWCA, and engages in public speaking on topics of concern within the women's movement, including self-defense and physical improvement.

Liz Cotsworth is still working for the Environmental Protection Agency. In fulfilling the requirements of her management intern program with EPA, Liz spent some time working in the Department office. Having completed her training, she is now a Foreign Affairs Analyst in the Office of International Activities. Her new job started off just as with a special conference in Italy.

Sallie Heidenreich Webster is a market research investigator for Procter and Gamble. She and Art just bought a house and are busy making repairs to it. Sallie and a number of other Chathamites, many of whom includes, converged on Pittsburgh for Betsy Hennings' wedding to Art Farley. Betsy and Art are in the far Northwest where Art holds the position of Assistant Professor at the University of Oregon.

From my east coast perspective, Betsy is living relatively close to Chris Babiar Harris. Chris and Sallie reside outside of Seattle in a tiny mountain town blessed with huge evergreens and breathtaking scenery. Chris runs the town library and Don works for the State Highway Department. She says is quite impressed with the new direction in which Chatham is headed. I agree completely, and certainly one 1971 grad who deserves recognition for her full-time involvement with the new Chatham is Vicki Falco, now the Assistant Director of Admissions. Outside of her Chatham duties, Vicki has spent a good deal of time coordinating a "College Admissions Hotline" for the state of Pennsylvania. In addition, she is a "founding mother" of the Chatham Alumnae Summer Theatre, which had a successful season last year thanks to the participation of many Chatham grads, both on stage and in the audiences.

I have to say that, in spite of the problems plaguing us all, the news was good this year and the class of 1971 seems to be in excellent spirits. Until next year, take care everybody.

Chatham reporting:

Having relocated to the big city of New York, Donna May admits to being a badminton freak — playing regularly with Kathy Ripin. Donna's abandoned the writing of her polemical first novel "All the Girls Look Alike" as she's lost 75 pounds — now that's an accomplishment! Baltimore doesn't deserve the bad reputation it has says Jan McGiffert Uehlinger — and she should know since she works with delinquent girls at a treatment center. Jan has finished her master's in social work and her husband Jerry is finishing up this semester at law school as research editor of the Law Review.

Having received her doctorate in bio-chem and having tried her hand at a research job, Jane Murray Weston is looking forward to a teaching position in England, of course. Alan does research for a pharmaceutical company and they holiday regularly on the continent — tough life. Another recent grad is Nora Ober Windmeyer who got her master's in library science but left the world of books to work the good earth with hubby Loren. Besides completely renovating a century-old farmhouse, Nora is busy learning the ins and outs of farming in Grand Pass (population 72). Summing up Maggie Overton's last four years reads like an atlas — Aspen, California, New York, Scotland, England, France. Now she's job hunting in Detroit and rehearsing for a chorus part in Oklahoma.

Sue Parisi is in her last semester of courses for her doctorate in musicology, specializing in early Baroque Italian opera (now that's specialization!). Sue's working as a research assistant and gives flute recitals twice a year. Irene DiNola is on Sue's wanted list — any clues anybody? Sue visited with Betsy Rom Bagstad when Sue was in DC for the American Sociological Convention.

With all this good news it would be unrealistic not to expect some sadness. We all sympathize deeply with Debby Patton who writes that her sister Katie, Chatham '75, died suddenly last summer. Bob's studying at Syracuse's School of Information Studies although she admits she's still not sure she wants to grow up and be something. Teaching swimming is still her favorite but Deb says she can't do that forever.

Diane Peterson Reilly has finished her academic edits for her master's in hospital administration and is working at Sewickley Valley Hospital. She and Frank, who has his own law firm, have a Victorian house big enough for all visiting Chathamites. Pete is published for the third time, her latest article appears in the December issue of the British Journal of Endocrinology. Sue Philbrick (cheers for another one's kept her maiden name in marriage) attends NYU at night and is half-way through her M.B.A. During the days she's a financial analyst for Tetley (in teal) while spouse Pete is a banker with Manufacturers Hanover Trust. Maggie Ragni has decided to go into internal medicine and writes that she's enjoying her last "free" days before starting her internship. And guess who's playing the ivory keys at the med school play? Maggie saw Mary Ann Shannon (another embryonic M.D.) who was doing some elective work at Children's Hospital.

Following their marriage, Hope Richardson Brownsky and Bob moved to California where they are studying scientology. She invites any teachers interested in a revolutionary study method to get in touch. Aberdeen, MD is quite a change from Honolulu but Betsy Rom Bagstad is enjoying her work at a craft shop. Before leaving the Pacific, Betsy and Steve had a fantastic vacation in New Zealand and Australia — come September, they'll be off again to parts unknown, courtesy of the Army. Betsy is waiting for a chance to use her newly-acquired M.A. in American Studies. It was great to hear from Maxine Schlosser Shore (everytime I get a query when I read Proust on the subway, I blame Max's tutorial). Besides getting her M.A. in French (Middlebury, then a year in Paris) Max has worked in NYC while studying at Hunter for a teaching certificate, honeymooned in Samoa, and camped around the U. S. While Kenny's at Rutgers Law School, Max is teaching high school French and takes weaving and pottery classes at night.

Another classmate making a big move is Pat Severance who has relocated to Minneapolis. Pat is an assistant buyer with Donaldson's. Have to award Pat the prize this time for most Chathamites visited in the last year. On the way to the Midwest with U-haul in tow, Pat saw Maggie Ragni, Sis Rainka Lieberman, and Pete Reilly in Pittsburgh, then on to Chicago to see Kevin Cartwright Cornell, '72, who lives within walking distance of Ann LaPat Lawrence and Alison Oakes. Arriving in Minneapolis Pat ran into Rooty Werner who also lives there.

As for me, I'm still grinding away in law school, busy with law review and a job as teaching assistant for two first-year law classes. I'll be clerking this summer with a Philadelphia firm but right now my chief concern is getting Tom over the emotional hurdle of his 30th birthday. He is still recuperating from knee surgery necessitated by a waterskiing accident last summer. That's all for this year, folks!

Barbara reporting:

Hello again — this year on the fourth anniversary of our graduation. It is hard for me to believe that it has been that long since we parted from Chatham, but I am sure that I will be saying the same ten years from now.

Congratulations to Mary Ann Shannon, who by the time the RECORDER reaches us, will be an M.D. graduated from Temple Med School and going into Obstetrics-Gynecology, and will also be married to Bill Portman. They will be living either in Philadelphia or in Pittsburgh depending on the computer which matches us med students for internships.

Linda Sigg Morgan is still teaching second grade as well as Junior Life Saving, and her husband Mike is teaching high school math and going to grad school.

Deborah Smith Schildkraut and husband Ira moved from Miami to Massachusetts after they both received Ph.D.s last December — Deborah in psychology and Ira in microbiology. They are now in the Boston area continuing their education with post-doctoral work.

J. Della Snyder Kapur wrote an interesting letter in which she raised questions with which some of us professional women will have to deal or have already dealt. In a capsule, just as Della received a job promotion from the Auditory Dept. to the International Dept. of Manufacturers Bank, along with an acceptance by the University of Detroit M.B.A. program, her husband Anil was offered a much better job in New York as a financial consultant at McKinsey & Co. Apparently, after considerable thinking she decided to join the ranks of the unemployed in New York. Della has become an avid squash player and may be a competitor in the state women's singles.

Beverly Swishelm is still in Lexington, Kentucky where she hopes to finish her Ph.D. in December 1975. During the Christmas season she saw Dena Loncoske Boxler '70 and husband Dave who are doing well. She also reports that she has bumped into Sally Hamilton '69 at the U. of Kentucky where she is finishing her Ph.D. in German.

Nancy Vaughan is teaching first and second graders in an open classroom. Last summer she traveled in New England and in the Midwest (one of the advantages of being a teacher). Also in the fall she saw Sue Philbrick at Deb Hagstrom's wedding.

Judy Weisenfeld Weinberg reports that she has started on her Ph.D. in Curriculum and Supervision as well as teaching in Pittsburgh. Husband Lee is a second-year law student and teaches part-time at Pitt. They were visited by Sally Pierce Shaw, Dan and Danny who were traveling across the U.S.A. after returning from Germany. The Shaws will be in North Carolina till the summer.

Lisa Wanderman is taking a breather from graduate school and is working as a gallery assistant at L'Antiquaire, an antique gallery in Manhattan. In December Lisa had a chance to see the new face of Chatham when she came to Pittsburgh for Betsy Hennings' wedding to Art, which was a mini-reunion attended by Pru Merton, Annie Wakeley, Nelle Sandridge, Maggi Overton and, of course, Mary Hennings.

Rooty Werner is now living in Minneapolis which she loves. She is enjoying her work which entails being self-employed and doing make-up demonstrations, coordinating fashion shows and modeling. It sounds like Chatham '71 has its own Rhoda. Rooty also wrote that she recently saw Joyce Kossack '72 who is to be married in May.

Molly Williams Stevens and Mark are still in California. She is working for a supply company but is hoping for a teaching position since she is also studying for her M.A. in Elementary Education at San Jose State U. Mark is employed by the Signetics Corp. after obtaining an M.S. degree in electrical engineering from U. of California at Berkeley. Alice Wolf is also in California where she is working hard at vet school at Davis. Congratulations are in order for Alice was selected for Who's Who in American Colleges and Universities. She is thinking of internships for 1976 and toying with the idea of radiology specialization.

Peggy Yockey Morycz reports that she has had a very full year taking care of son Bill and working. Peggy attended a conference in Washington, DC where she was happy to see Liz Cotsworth, Lorna Kent and Judi Soisson Dahman '72.

Vicki Zolan has been in Manhattan for the last 2½ years. She is happy to have a job and works as a secretary to three account supervisors at an advertising agency. She is also studying anatomy and physiology at Hunter College with the long-term plan of a master's in Nutrition. She also teaches a Yoga class for adults at the Walden School.

As for me, by the time the RECORDER is published I will have an M.D. which is hard to believe. I will be in Boston or Pittsburgh for a residency in internal medicine and ultimately I think I will specialize in endocrinology (hormones turn me on, so to speak). Last May I felt honored to be Janie Scherer Morse's only attendant at a beautiful Quaker marriage ceremony. Her husband Bob is a great person and there is lots of him — he is 6' 8". Janie is now taking a year off from vet school while Bob is playing professional basketball in Italy. They will be back in Philly in May when she will be going back to vet school and Bob will be starting med school at Penn. My parents moved to Rhode Island so now I can get away from Pittsburgh when I visit them. It looks like my sister is also going to medical school, probably to Harvard, where she has been accepted. Thank you for all your replies. Till next year — keep well.

Jan reporting:

Well, time sure flies when you get old!!!!!! Can you believe it has been two years? Everyone I heard from sounds healthy, happy, and busy.

There are quite a few people living in Pittsburgh
— Leslie Bender Saller and her new son Benjamin have been spending most of their time at home — learning and growing. She has kept busy with needlework and breadbaking. Leslie plans to attend Duquesne Law School night program in the fall. Clara is working on his Ph.D. in psychobiology at University of Pittsburgh.

Finding work very rewarding, Marydale DeBor has been doing paralegal work for Roslyn Lippman Esq. (The second woman in the country to be elected President of a Bar Association.)

Still in school, Diane Di Frango Guardino is working on her Ph.D. in plant physiology at Pitt is also teaching two biology labs.

More busy teachers are Chris De Pasquali and teaching Language Arts and Nancy Chubb teach-physical education. Nancy is also working at the Pittsburgh Free Clinic on Tuesday nights with Stokoe, Sue Merriman, and Phyllis Kitzerow.

Here, we leave Pittsburgh and branch out other parts of Pennsylvania. Jan Deitcher is working on a thesis for her M.S. program at Indiana University of Pennsylvania where she is also a grad-teaching assistant in the chemistry department.
Boothwyn, Joann Brandt Grisetti is a librarian at Bishop's Mill Historical Institute, a project for the Bicentennial. Gail Adams is teaching language delayed pre-schoolers in Media. She is hoping to attend graduate school in the fall, since two years pre-schoolers is enough! Gail's excitement of the year was living and working as a research assistant Jamaica for the summer. She lived a mile from the beach, participated in a social-psychological research study, and had a fantastic time. Gail offers first-vacation tips and information — just drop her a line.

Traveling eastward we find Barbara Haddad Kostreva in Troy, New York. She is a tech-assistant for the Hospital Association of New York State. Barbara aids in the preparation of applications for capital financing of hospitals and also does research work for hospitals. Also in New York, Shirley Bloom Werber is working on her master's thesis in genetic counseling. Shanan and Akiva are moving Israel in the summer. They are planning to live in Kibbutz Alumin near the Gaza Strip.

Ruth Abbott Clark is still teaching first grade Reading, Massachusetts and finding it much easier than last year (as I'm sure all second-year teachers are!). Dan and Ruth did some house-sitting during the summer in the oldest house in Cambridge (founded in 1657). Ruth gave tours and Dan battled the ceilings. Dan is now in his second year of law school.

In DC, Jain Bush is grooving on the good life great people. Jain, as "your friendly travel agent," went to Jamaica in December with Liz Naumoff a quirky tan. Also saw New Orleans and St. Thomas but she claims she hasn't put a dent in her tummy plans yet! Jain quit karate as a fifth degree green belt because she couldn't find the time. She says it's time to learn to drive but first will be visiting Holland Germany in April. Happy traveling!

Alone, I find myself braving the wilderness of west in Cleveland. I'm still teaching Language Arts 4th, 5th, and 6th graders and hoping to go to graduate school for speech therapy in the summer. Dan and I have just moved into our first home and we having a ball decorating. Otherwise just being happy and healthy!

Sue reporting:

Many thanks to those who sent me letters; apologies to Mimi Doboy and Pat Hickey for not having their current addresses and a pox on those who failed to respond.

Ah, fair Pittsburgh! With two years of classwork under her belt, Dottie Farrell is still enjoying meschool and is about to embark on training in hospitals. Future plans in regard to area of special-are uncertain but as Dottie puts it she is, "still sitting relatively sane and very happy."

Elise Feldman Zegerson received her M.L.S. from Pitt's Graduate School of Library and Information Sciences last December. She is currently working the Executive Director for the Hadassah Ziegler Youth Commission in Western Pennsylvania. She loves it. Also in Pittsburgh, Mister Rogers is lucky enough to have Norma Franklin Baker as a neighbor. Norma is working part-time also at M.L.S. from Pitt and is awaiting husband Bill's completion of his M.A. at Carnegie-Mellon. She and took a belated honeymoon to San Juan and Thomas in August — said it was marvelous.

Up in Massachusetts, Jane Halliwell-Senger is ree professions — house manager of a home for arded children, wife of a Community Psychology nd student at Boston College and mother of sixnth-old Kate. Over in Chelsea, Denise Mondano

s taken a job in the advertising department of the ver company she has been affiliated with for veral years. She and sister, Donna, have also estabhed themselves as accomplished mural painters in e Greater Boston area. They'd like to do this full ne but report that they are more than satisfied th their status quo. Also in Massachusetts is Judith in Gale. She has moved from assistant to full ordinator of the North Shore Help for Children, information referral and advocacy program for children which covers fourteen cities and towns in stern MA. Hard work and very rewarding.

Moving south to New Jersey, Diane Hayford and nce Paul are both finishing their M.B.A.s in nance and Accounting at the Wharton School in ay and plan to be married in June. Diane is already ying the job-hunting blues but looks forward to me openings in — you guessed it — Pittsburgh.
ing near Philly has been fun though as she gets gether often with Joann Brandt Grissetti and Ellen itton Bishop. And let it be known that Kaye ntner Culyba is alive and well and eating bonbons NJ though she refuses to communicate with her ECORDER secretary — me! No matter, I get the ottom line on Kaye and other recalcitrant writers rough my DC contacts.

Nancy Hicks completed her M.Ed. in Special Ed and was working in a residential treatment center for verely disturbed children outside DC, but she up nd took off for sunny California. Sitting here in the Georgia monsoons, I'm tempted to join her. Further o the coast, Lisa Heller is enduring worse than rain.
ne is finishing her second year of law school in regon. Actually, Lisa says the Pacific Northwest is eaven and her frequent excursions up and down the ast make life more than bearable. She is hoping for leave of absence to go to London next fall but ounds content to work hard and play hard for the me being.

Soon to be on the west coast is Marty Ethridge ullock whose husband Bernie has completed flight aining in Georgia. Mart is teaching arts and crafts to handicapped children and senior citizens. Marty ays the only change in their family structure has een the addition of a puppy.

Mary Higgins Enright has loved their stint in awaii but Tom is awaiting orders that will probably nd them stationed in Pensacola. She began a grad rogram in Econ at the University of Hawaii and ishes now that she spoke Japanese as she is the only "mainland" American in her classes. Mary has one quite a bit of traveling, the highpoint of which as two weeks in Hong Kong last summer.

Had to save Eleanor Gard's news for last — it was uch a fantastic description that I wish I could relate word for word. She and Steve moved back to their arm in Maine last summer. They have 50 acres of oods, fields, blueberries, orchards and coast — everything but people. They are attempting to live ff the land, which includes building their own ouse, studying and photographing wildlife, plantlife nd coastal insect ecologies, AND enduring a Maine inter with one fireplace! Eleanor sells some collages om time to time and admits that it is a hard life ut well worth it.

After printing that, I feel like Mundane McConeny ut I will say that I am well and happy. Am still eaching physically handicapped children but this ear I am in an infinitely more desirable environment. I am also plugging away part-time on my M.Ed. which, by all calculations, will be completed y 1984. That's it from the MOUTH in the SOUTH.

Donna reporting:

Sandy Kuritzky writes that she is presently employed as a commercial risk underwriter for Liberty Mutual Insurance Company. She says to stop in and see her if you're in the Philadelphia area.

Mickey Jehle is our New York career girl. She's the Assistant Director of Marketing Communications for McGraw Hill Publications, and writes that her job and new apartment are keeping her busy.

Mary Ann Hood Slavin writes that Neil started a new job in March and that they have been relocated to Boston. After spending a lazy summer, Mary Ann has started working for an electronics firm. Frank Mitchell is working in the Research Department of the Federal Reserve Bank of Cleveland. She plans to receive her master's in economics from Case-Western Reserve this year and hopes to enter law school in the fall.

Sue Lorenzi Brennan has had a busy year. She was married on June 15. Mary Higgins Enright, Phyllis Patrick and Ann Opdyke attended the wedding. Sue is still attending graduate school and will receive her master's degree in December. She also has a part-time job as the Assistant Administrator to the Mayor of the City of Duquesne and in addition is busy decorating her new home.

Sue Ifft is currently studying for her master's in Guidance and Counseling and has two part-time jobs.
Binky McClure is also a student in her second year at Villanova Law School. Donna Mondano is working for the Melrose Public Schools and writes that she and Denise opened a Studio Arts Shop this past summer.

Amy Ingraham writes that she and Dale are fabulously happy. She is working at Magee Hospital in animal research as "an anesthesiologist, semi-surgeon, semi-animal behaviorist, butt of anti-women jokes." Nancy Hirsch is still employed at the same advertising agency, however, with a new position.
Nancy remains active in the theater and still loves Pittsburgh. Kristin Kingsland Brown is presently working at the Ellis School and the Carriage House Children's Center (located in the old art center). She and her husband are planning to move to a new house in April.

Cathy Macdonald Molnar is employed with the Bank of Montreal and says that Toronto is just great.
She and Joe had a beautiful wedding last October, which my new hubby and I managed to attend.
Francine Mehlenbeck is finishing up her M.A. in vocal performance. Her spare time is spent studying fencing and karate.

The word from Olga Julius is that she will be married in August and will become a permanent resident of Greece! In the interim she is substitute teaching in the Canton Public Schools and is busy preparing for her wedding and move overseas.

Cynthia Karidis will receive her M.A. in Theological Studies this semester. She'll be getting married in June and her wedding will take place at the Chatham Chapel. Cynthia's future husband is presently studying for the pastorate.

As for myself, life has been treating me well.
After our marriage, Bob and I moved to Long Island.
I am still working on my Ph.D. in chemistry and believe me, that's enough! Thanks for all the replies and let's hear from the rest of you next year.

Deedee reporting:

Hello again all you fellow alums! I hope all's going well. It looks like there are quite a few of us who are still in school, so let's begin with the education seekers. Jane Quick is still working on her master's in Elementary Education specializing in reading language arts at the University of Florida.
After she receives her degree in December '75, she plans to either enter the Peace Corps or continue her studies toward another degree. (Jane's sister, a freshman at Chatham, is rooming this year with Sally Samuels' sister who is also a freshman. Chatham's getting to be a family affair.) Also in school is Jeanette Reese Blackstone. She's majoring in guidance at Duquesne. Jeanette and her husband will be "hitting the books" together since he will be back in school in September. Nicole Reinhardt Jeffers finished her first year of law school in June at Emory University. During the summer of '74 she worked in the Mayor's Office in Atlanta. Now Nicky is working for the Arlington, VA County government. She plans to continue with law school in DC. Ann Opdyke Deeley has been finishing up her work towards her master's in Judicial Administration at American University. Now she's studying for her comprehensive exam and hunting for a job.

Now — on to the Pennsylvania employees . . .
Sherrill Nelson is teaching first grade again at White Oak Elementary. She is presently taking some in-service courses but plans to begin serious work on her master's this summer. Phyllis Patrick, our "woman of finance," has finished the Management Development Training Program at Mellon Bank and is currently the Administrative Assistant at the Homestead Office in Pittsburgh. She's also taking some accounting courses at Pitt. Over Christmas Phyllis saw Norienne Reuhl who's working at Temple U. and Helen Sykes '74 who's working at Lake Tahoe. Sally Morgan Reis is teaching high school English again this year. Gerry is now in his last year at Duquesne Law School so they're looking around at different places for next year (New England, maybe). Lately, Sally and Gerry have been getting interested in redoing antiques. They've spent some great days tracking through old shops. Sally also reports that they spent a great New Year's Eve with Cathy Young, Nancy Hirsch, and Pat Hickey.

Becky Russo has been working as a copywriter and advertising saleswoman for a radio station in Ellwood City. (Like those Johnny Cash tunes, eh Becky?) Now she's planning on beginning a new career at the New Castle Public Library.

From New York, Diana (Nick) Nicholas writes that she's still working in the Mobile Home Park and plans to continue working there until she and Jim are married — maybe even after if they're in the vicinity.

From Ohio, Becky Popovich reports that she is still working at Ch. 25 in Cleveland in traffic/operations. She is also writing and co-editing the program guide. Becky send a special "hi" to Piggie.

From Massachusetts, Susan O'Neil writes that she's celebrating her one-year anniversary as Director of Public Relations and Promotion with the Springfield Symphony Orchestra. Recently, Susan was appointed as entertainment editor for Springfield Magazine where she's now a columnist. In her trips back and forth to Pittsburgh, Susan has seen Mary Stackpole frequently.

From West Virginia, Laurie Nelson reports that she's "getting totally immersed in WV culture by visiting Clay County fiddlers and my own personal herb doctor who has a cure for all my ills."

As for me, I'm teaching third grade again at Eisenhower School in Indiana, PA. It's a lot easier this year, so I'm really enjoying it more. I've started back to school too! I'm working on my master's in Elementary Education. Bill is managing to keep himself busy, too. He's still with Xerox as a Sales Representative — and really enjoying it. Until next year
... best wishes to EVERYONE!

Ellen reporting:

It was interesting to read everyone's responses.
However, I had hoped to hear from more of you.
Missy Sands Boveroux married Kent in June and spent the summer camping in New England. So many of you have been traveling — how I envy you!
Cathy Young (living in DC) spent last summer designing costumes at Chatham and traveling through Yugoslavia and Italy.

Before heading for Kansas City to work full-time for a stock brokerage and part-time for a law office, Cyn Woodward traveled in Europe and visited the West Coast. Susan Soodek also traveled in Europe (with overextended stays in Madrid and Rome) before going to work in Washington, DC for a government information service.

If any of you plan a trip South, Nancy Schwartz invites travelers to Virginia Beach to look her up.
She's enjoying life in Virginia and her work as a psychiatric art therapist at Portsmouth Psychiatric Center. Donna Schulz Krueger is teaching sixth grade in Fredericksburg, Virginia.

Debbie Tomaszewski is still living near Chatham with Phyllis Patrick and Jo Presnell '74. She's working as a counselor in a federally-funded program for the hard-core unemployed. Her boss is no one other than our favorite "Dandy-Don." Isn't that right Phyllis, Joanne, and Trish!

Susdy Sedmak is alive and happy "keeping her nose in the books" at Catholic University and working in a bar in Georgetown. Last fall she worked at the Department of Justice in the anti-trust division and got to "rub elbows with the city's hottest young attorneys."

Kay Sandberg's life sounds exciting! She is teaching English to nearly 400 Japanese students ranging in age from 4 to 54! This includes 2 classes of businessmen! She has appeared in several TV commercials, women's magazines, and has made several special appearances. Besides all of this, Kay will be attended Tokyo University in April as a research student in sociology.

Harvette Tipton is a Programmer/Analyst with PPG Industries and really getting to like it, especially the career opportunities in a rapidly changing field. After her marriage to Mark Mader in May, they are planning to stay in the Pittsburgh area at least for a while.

Both Sudsy and Kay send their love and Betsy Schwab, who is in Harrisburg participating in the Community Theatre's production of "Once Upon a Mattress," wants to know the whereabouts of Barb Flemming and of "Poo." As for me, Mary Higgins Enright, write!!!!

My year has been an eventful one. I married a wonderful man in August, am taking graduate credits in American History at Temple University, and still trying to pursue my career with the National Park Service in Philadelphia. I am working in Federal period homes and our new Portrait Gallery. It is the first major restoration that has been completed for the Bicentennial.

Bits and Pieces

SECOND SEASON

CAST I, the Chatham Alumnae Summer Theatre, will present three productions for its 1975 summer season. Joe Orton's comedy, "What the Butler Saw," to be directed by Victoria Falco '71, will be the company's first production on June 13-15, 19-22 and 26-29. The second production will be Lillian Hellman's "Toys in the Attic," winner of the New York Drama Critics Circle Award for the best play of the 1959-60 season. It will be presented July 4-6, 10-13 and 17-20 and will be directed by Edith DeLisio '74. The season will conclude with Neil Simon's "Gingerbread Lady" on July 25-27, 31, August 3, 7-10 and 14-17, to be directed by Nancy Hirsch '73. All CAST I plays are staged in the Chatham College Theatre. Tickets are $3.00 per person or $7.50 for the special season rate and $2.50 each for a group of ten or more. Volunteers for any area of production and management, from set builders to telephone answerers, are very welcome.

CHILDREN'S DAY CARE CENTER

Children have come to the Chatham College campus. This past September the Carriage House Children's Center opened in the Carriage House of Benedum Hall.

The primary purpose of the Center is to provide quality pre-school education and day care for children between the ages of 3 and 6, while offering flexibility in programming. The program is designed to meet the time schedule of parents who are studying or working in the Pittsburgh area as well as those who want their children to have a nursery school experience.

As well as the regular September through May schedule, the Center is also offering a summer program for children for the months of June and July.

The Center is non-profit and non-sectarian and is governed by a Board of Directors. Any further information can be obtained from Director Natalie A. Caplan.

Two new members were elected to the Chatham College Board of Trustees at the February meeting. They are Earl F. Cheit, one of the nation's leading experts on the financing of higher education, and Louise Royster Brown Chatham '67, Director of Parks and Recreation for the City of Pittsburgh. Dr. Cheit is currently Associate Director of the new Carnegie Council on Policy Studies in Higher Education and serves also as Professor of Business Administration and Associate Director of the Institute of Industrial Relations at the University of California at Berkeley. Mrs. Brown is the first woman to serve in a major cabinet post in the city government. Previously she was director of Manpower Programs for the City of Pittsburgh.

The Matrix, Chatham's student newspaper, is now offering subscriptions at $2.00 per semester and $4.00 per year. Six issues are planned each semester. Alumnae are encouraged to subscribe and to submit material of interest to the Chatham community for publication. Comments and suggestions are always welcome. Address correspondence to the Matrix, Chatham College, Pittsburgh, PA 15232.

The Jennie King Mellon Library would welcome alumnae volunteers to help identify a large number of photographs and memorabilia of the College which have been collected over many years. There are a large number of pictures of campus events and students which are unlabelled as to time and place. An exhibit will be on display for Alumnae-Reunion Day of some of the old restored photographs showing many of the College traditions and landmarks. Any alumna who is interested in helping with this project should contact Head Librarian Jan Levin.

HELP!!

The Alumnae Association needs you — your advice, your help, your opinions.

In consulting the office bible, Miss Laberta Dysart's book, Chatham College: The First Ninety Years, it came to light that 1976 will mark the 100th anniversary of the founding of the Chatham College Alumnae Association. Through the efforts of Dr. Thomas C. Strong, the second president of the College, then known as Pennsylvania Female College, the alumnae association was organized in 1876 with a membership of forty-eight alumnae. It seems especially fitting to celebrate our centennial with the nation's bicentennial. The Alumnae Office and the Reunion Committee would welcome all suggestions for activities to make this coming year's reunion a particularly memorable one. If enough interest is demonstrated, the Reunion Committee would like to schedule some special events on Friday as well as Saturday, June 4 and 5, 1976 — perhaps some mini-classes, a concert or whatever seems to be desired. Alumnae Reunion Weekend is for everyone, not just the reuning classes, so please — can we have some suggestions?

At the Annual Business Meeting on May 31, 1975, there was discussion of the Alumnae Association's election process. The Teller's Report revealed 164 ballots returned of the approximately 4,700 mailed. This is scarcely an overwhelming response. The constitution of the Alumnae Association stipulates that the nominating committee shall choose one nominee for each elective office to be filled. The ballot provides space for write-in votes (of which there are very few) and these are kept on file in the Alumnae Office for future consideration by the nominating committee. All of this is mentioned because it was suggested at the Annual Meeting that the offices to be filled at the next election might be advertised in the Fall issue of the Recorder. In this way, any alumnae who are interested in serving on the Executive Board could volunteer their names. To be elected in 1976 are: one alumnae trustee, second vice president, corresponding secretary, two directors and two members of the nominating committee. As each alumna knows who reads her ballot, a short biographical sketch is provided to give background information on each candidate. Most women's colleges operate with a single-slate ballot because, without large constituencies upon which to draw, it is difficult to secure multi-candidate slates. Special committees have investigated Chatham's election procedures in the past but have never recommended any changes. You may have an idea regarding the election procedure to make it more representative which has never occurred to the Executive Board. The Alumnae Office will welcome all volunteers for this year's slate and any ideas and/or comments on the procedure.

The Alumnae Recorder is a publication by alumnae for alumnae. It will be as representative of your views and activities as you care to make it. If you are doing something different, like sailing around the world with your family in your own sail boat as one of our alumnae is, or working in a fascinating or unusual job which we may not know about, please tell the Alumnae Office. You may not realize it but other alumnae are interested in reading about such activities. Now, more than ever before, your Chatham education is resulting in new and non-traditional occupations and life styles. The College keeps you informed of new developments on campus — won't you please help by keeping the College informed about you. Editorial help with writing articles for publication is always welcome — just contact the Alumnae Office.

“Where Have All The Heroes Gone?”

Senator Gale McGee and Dan Rather at Opening Session

On October 2-4, 1975, Chatham College presented on campus a symposium titled “Where Have All the Heroes Gone?” This symposium, a half-year in the planning, resulted from the thoughts and efforts of a committee composed of students, faculty, administration and alumnae, represented by Alumnae Association President Alice Berry Adams. Financial assistance was provided by grants from the Vira I. Heinz Fund of the Pittsburgh Foundation, the Lilly Endowment, Inc., and the Martha McGhee-David Fleming Memorial Fund. The basic theme of the symposium came from the students themselves — their questioning of the existence of heroes in today’s world. “What has happened to the hero in America?” “Is it possible to be a hero anymore?” “How has the women’s movement altered the concept of the hero?” This questioning was explored through workshops and special sessions which covered the fields of education, politics, the media, literature, philosophy, science and religion.

Because the whole symposium was planned for the Chatham students and the Chatham community, it was not advertised to the general public. Admission to the general sessions was by ticket only — first to the students, faculty and staff, then to a limited number of special guests, including two students from each of the 19 colleges of the Continuing Conference for the Liberal Arts, sponsored by the Lilly Endowment, Inc. The workshops were open to everyone.

The first of the theme-related events was the Opening Convocation address on September 9 by Dr. Sidney Hook, Professor Emeritus of Philosophy at New York University, who spoke on "The Hero in History: Myth, Power or Moral Ideals?" Following was a series of nine representative films, shown in the Chatham Theatre during September, which were free to the Chatham community and to all alumnae. Included in this series were: A Face in the Crowd; Play it Again, Sam; The Great White Hope; Citizen Kane; Little Big Man; The Trojan Women; All the King's Men; The Candidate; and Yellow Submarine. There were also special exhibits of books, periodicals and photographs in the Jennie King Mellon Library and an exhibition of photographs of painting and sculpture depicting the artistic treatment of the hero in art on display in the art gallery.

To open the weekend events was a performance on October 2 by the Dinglefest Theatre Company of Chicago of a musical satire, Idol Gossip, especially written for the symposium. This company also presented a workshop on movement and performance techniques.

On Friday afternoon, October 3, was the first of three sets of symposium workshops:

1. The Practice of Magic: the Hero in Education. The participants (Edward B. Fiske, Education News Editor of the New York Times; Alice E. Carter, Director of Education for the Urban League (and a Chatham trustee); Ted Soens of the Reizenstein Middle School; and Chatham faculty members Lorraine Morgan, Vivien Richman and J. Donald Stanier) discussed whether educators can accomplish the magical/heroic mission which has been assigned to them by society.

2. Psychological Aspects of the Hero. In this workshop Dr. James C. Diggory, Professor of Psychology, led a discussion of the contribution psychology focuses on methods of personality assessment which might be used in the description and early identification of unusual individuals, including heroes.

3. The Computer: Dudley Do-Right of the World? Chatham faculty members, Thomas J. Hershberger, instructor in psychology and Janice Carver King '63, lecturer in computer science, examined the exploits of the modern hero, the electronic computer, to determine if it meets heroic standards and whether this machine and other technological equipment can truly identify wisdom, gender and morality.

Tom Wolfe at Literature Workshop with William Sonzski

Lesley Stahl

The Opening General Session on Friday night, which packed the Chapel to overflowing, featured Dan Rather, chief of CBS Reports and author of The Palace Guard, and Gale McGee, United States Senator from Wyoming. They both spoke on their opinions of the general theme, "Where have all the heroes gone?"

Starting off Saturday's very full day of events was the second General Session, a panel discussion on "The Influence of the Media on the Making and Breaking of Heroes." Moderating the panel was Marie Torre of KDKA-TV who also lectures in the Communication program at Chatham. Members of the panel were William Block, publisher of the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette; Senator Gale McGee; John B. Oakes, editor of the Editorial Page of the New York Times and also a Chatham trustee; Joseph Rhodes, Jr., member of the Pennsylvania House of Representatives; and Lesley Stahl of CBS News.

The second set of symposium workshops followed.

4. The Hero in Literature dealt with views of the traditional literary hero as compared with the anti-hero so often depicted in contemporary literature. Questions were discussed of the possibility that the new literature reflects an unheroic age or that less imaginative writers exist. The panelists were Tom Wolfe, well-known author and journalist; and Donald G. Adam, Barbara Dallas Palmer '65, Marc Pollock and William Sonzski, all of Chatham's English department.

5. Can There be Heroes/Heroines in the Business World? The possibility of the existence of heroes in the business world was discussed, as well as whether there is a con-

Penelope Gilliatt

tradition between the concept of hero/heroine and the nature of business. Mary Beth Peters, director of Chatham's Administration and Management Program, led the discussion with Provost Doreen Boyce who is also associate professor of economics; Arthur C. Cowles, Vice President of Human Resources of Koppers Company; and Thomas Murrin, President of Public Systems, Westinghouse.

6. The Political Hero. This workshop examined the nature of the political hero in contemporary America or whether, in light of Watergate and Vietnam, there can or should be any. Lesley Stahl of CBS News, Joseph Rhodes, Jr., Pennsylvania legislator, and Erika King of Chatham's Political Science department discussed whether the presence of public relations experts and governmental control of information would permit a political leader to manipulate his/her image or if the American public is too cynical today to allow this to happen.

At the third General Session on Saturday afternoon Penelope Gilliatt's subject was "An Author-Critic Looks at the Hero-Heroine." Ms. Gilliatt is the author of the award-winning screenplay, Sunday, Bloody Sunday, and is film critic for The New Yorker magazine. She reviewed the typical and atypical heroes and heroines as created and presented by past and current movies.

The balance of the afternoon was filled with the last set of workshops.

7. The Black Heroes and Heroines of Tomorrow. The criteria for heroes and heroines of the past and especially for the future were discussed by Alice Carter of the Urban League of Pittsburgh and Deborah Holland of Chatham's Career Planning Office.

8. The Heroine as Philosophic Anti-Hero, or Who Cares Where the Heroes Have Gone? Lesley Stahl of CBS News and Nancy Crumbine of Chatham's Philosophy Department discussed the values which they would want today's woman to represent if she is to be the leader out of today's cultural morass.

9. Eulogy or Obloquy: Heroes in Science and Medicine. The extent to which science or the scientist is the hero was one of the points discussed by this panel, as well as whether the far reaching and sometimes unanticipated consequence of scientific discovery can make scientists heroes or villains. The panelists, led by Norman W. Chmura, Professor of Biology at Chatham, were Dr. Milton Michaels, Chief of Clinical Hematology at Allegheny General Hospital, Janice Carver King, instructor in computer science, and Tom Wolfe, author-journalist, who is currently working on a new book about the astronauts.

10. Is the Religious Savior our Ultimate Hero? Edward B. Fiske of the New York Times, together with Dr. Richard L. Morrill, Associate Professor of Religion and Dr. Wing-tsit Chan, Gillespie Professor of Philosophy, both of Chatham, discussed the ancient and complex relationships between the hero and religion. They felt that much can be learned about the basic outlook and commitments of a religion by examining the role it assigns or denies to its heroes.

Immediately preceding the final session was a seminar, Depicting the Hero: Writing for the Voice, presented by Penelope Gilliatt. Concurrently in the Theatre was the second showing of the pseudo-documentary film, made in Germany between 1934 and 1936, on the rise of Hitler, Triumph of the Will, regarded by many as a classic in political propaganda.

At the closing General Session in the Chapel on Saturday evening, Tom Wolfe's subject was "Will the Hero Return?" followed by questions and discussion from the audience.

Another feature of the symposium were several screenings of two old films depicting the hero of yesterday: Superman (the original animated version created by Max Fleischer) and Flash Gordon Conquers the Universe (produced in 1936 and starring Buster Crabbe as the "all-American" boy).

All in all, the weekend was a great success, both as to subject matter and involvement of the entire campus.

Tom Wolfe at Closing Session

1975 ALUMNAE COUNCIL

A very mini-Alumnae Council was held this year on campus on October 3 and 4, 1975, with only presidents and/or representatives of the alumnae clubs and members of the Executive Board present. These dates were chosen to provide the out-of-town alumnae an opportunity to observe and participate in the Heroes Symposium. Attendance had to be restricted to this small invited group because of the limited number of tickets available for the general sessions of the symposium.

Friday morning, October 3, was spent in meeting with Ann Eastman, the new Director of Admissions, and Pat Hardaway, Assistant Director of Admissions. The main subject for discussion was various ways in which club activities can be directed to help identify and meet with prospective students. Reports were also presented on club activities in the different areas. Present for this meeting were: Alumnae Association President Alice Berry Adams '53; Molly Miesse Patterson '70, second vice president (clubs); Helen Ryman '24 of the Downtown Pittsburgh group; Martha Lasky Sanders '58 from Atlanta; Sally Mercke Heym '63 from Boston; Joan Bretz Peirce '65 from Chicago; Debbie Wolowitz Cowan '63 from Cleveland; Linda Jordan '70 from Hartford; Diane Brutout Neimann '65 from Minneapolis; and Gini Gold '67 from New York. Representatives from the Columbus, Detroit, Philadelphia and Washington, DC areas were also invited but did not attend.

While the club representatives were meeting, representatives of classes with reunions scheduled in 1976 were discussing reunion plans with Gwen Bach Lammert '51, the director on the Executive Board responsible for reunion activities.

The club representatives spent the balance of Friday and all day Saturday attending the symposium events.

Panel at Educators' Workshop

COMMENCEMENT 1975

Helen Horix Fairbanks

At Chatham's 103rd commencement on May 23, 1975, degrees were conferred upon 134 seniors, including the first two graduates, Constance E. Hoechstetter and Florence Polins Schneider, of the Gateway Program established by the College two years ago. Sixteen members of the graduating class had been elected members of Phi Beta Kappa. They were: Deborah Kugler Alpern, Ellen R. Blustein, Janice Joy Cederstrom, Debra E. Greene, Pamela Jo Hake, Sherry Virginia Justus, Louise M. Laufersweiler, Jane Mina Moskowitz, Janet R. Necessary, Valerie Alice Norman, Penny Cyncynatus Paris, Linda Grace Sheer, Marilyn Spisak, Lauren Vyse Strotz, Mary Beck Tisera and Ellen Hughes Warner.

An honorary Doctor of Laws degree was conferred by President Edward D. Eddy on Chatham alumna Helen Horix Fairbanks, class of 1920. Mrs. Fairbanks was especially recognized for her career and her outstanding service to the College and to the Pittsburgh community. She had been president of Horix Manufacturing Company for many years and is now Chairman of the Board. In addition, she has served as a member of the boards of the Family and Children's Service, the YWCA and Psychological Services of Pittsburgh; was an alumnae trustee and a recipient in 1958 of the Distinguished Alumnae Award from Chatham College.

The commencement address was given by Dr. Mary Ellen Avery, Rotch Professor of Pediatrics at Harvard University and Physician-in-Chief of Children's Hospital Medical Center in Boston, Massachusetts. Dr. Avery was the first woman to hold the title of physician-in-chief at both Boston Children's Hospital and Montreal's Children's Hospital where she served from 1969 to 1974. During that time she was also professor and chairman of the Department of Pediatrics of McGill University in Montreal.

Administrative Intern Program For Women

A program of internships for recent women graduates interested in administrative careers in higher education is being sponsored for the third year by sixteen colleges — Agnes Scott, Cedar Crest, Chatham, Elmira, Goucher, Hollins, Mary Baldwin, Mills, Randolph Macon Woman's, Salem, Scripps, Skidmore, Sweet Briar, Wells, Wheaton and Wilson. It is designed to provide colleges and universities with a supply of qualified women for entry-level positions in all phases of academic administration. Funded by the Carnegie Corporation, the program will provide an administrative internship at each of the participating institutions for the 1976-77 academic year.

The program will stress training in areas such as financial and business affairs, financial aid, academic affairs, public relations and development. Candidates for these areas are especially encouraged to apply.

The ten-month internship begins with a one-week workshop in August. Each intern will then be assigned to a college other than her nominating institution. Applicants must be free to move to an assigned host campus for the ten-month internship. Each intern will work with a senior administrator, observing and participating in activities for which her supervisor is responsible. She will also engage in a study or project designed to deepen her understanding of the problems of college administration and to have value for the colleges.

Applicants must be nominated by one of the participating colleges. Young women recent college graduates or faculty or staff of the participating colleges with an expressed interest in administration in higher education are eligible. Each intern will receive a $7,500 stipend.

Chatham alumnae candidates should secure application forms from the Career Planning Office at Chatham. Deadline for return of applications to the College is December 31, 1975. Successful applicants will be notified in April, 1976.

During the first year of the internship program, 1974-75, Ann E. Lange '70 received the Chatham nomination and served her internship at Elmira College. For the current year 1975-76, Jane Marcus '70, who has her M.S. in Education from the University of Pennsylvania, was named the Chatham representative. Her internship marks a new venture in the program for she has been assigned to the Middle States Regional Office of the College Entrance Examination Board in Bethlehem, Pennsylvania. Chatham asked Jane to comment on her initial reaction to her new work and she sent us the following thoughts:

"Thanks to the Administrative Intern Program for Women in Higher Education, I have begun to emerge from five years in a "career cocoon." It is quite a revelation to see myself becoming a professionally challenged butterfly.

Upon graduation I plunged into the world of urban secondary education. Armed with idealism and a commitment to innovation, I set out to "save the cities." Five years later I still found students who desperately needed basic skills, colleagues defeated, and a bureaucratic system too entrenched to be changed. I was bitter, turned off, and looking for a way up and out.

When I was notified of my unusual placement as an intern at the College Entrance Examination Board, I was shattered! How could I actually work for those evil people who continuously shoved those SAT's down my students' throats? Even after I visited the Middle States Regional Office and met its congenial and dedicated staff, I still had my doubts. So, with my choices limited to accepting the placement or returning to a job I had grown to hate, I reluctantly said yes. After all, I'd probably learn something, make some valuable contacts and add a prestigious paragraph to my resume.

A week before I actually began work, I joined the other fifteen interns at a week-long workshop at Cedar Crest College. We were presented with a broad introduction to the many facets of college administration. I was impressed by the competency and charm of our guest lecturers, all successful men and women in their fields. I was also struck by the varied experiences and personalities of my fellow interns. What we did have in common was an eagerness to get started and the apprehension that always precedes a new adventure.

To date, I have been working only three weeks. In that short time I have been surprised by my own success at assimilating vast amounts of new information and at communicating knowledgeably with experienced professionals. I am using skills I'd long forgotten I possessed, and I am becoming increasingly confident in myself. (I should mention that I've begun to shoot holes in those myths about the College Board, too.)

I strongly recommend that any recent graduate who is interested in a career in academic administration apply for next year's program. With careful planning, a flexible family, and a great deal of luck, the ten months you may spend can become an investment in the future. They can also provide a way to break out of that cocoon!"

Deborah Whittlesey, the intern from Mills College who was assigned to Chatham for the 1974-75 academic year, and who was subsequently hired to work in President Eddy's office, did a study on career education and the liberal arts. She commented, "From my study I concluded that colleges such as Chatham who choose to integrate career oriented programs into their curriculums can do so without undermining their commitment to the liberal arts. The study and the entire internship were an excellent introduction to academic administration."

Assigned to Chatham for this academic year is Diane Dailey, Salem '71, with an M.Ed. in guidance and personnel from North Carolina State University, who will work with financial affairs in the College's Business Office.

(ED note: The following was taken from Jane Marcus' section of the 1970 class news. It seemed to the Recorder to deserve reading by more alumnae than just those who are acquainted with persons in that class. The questions raised are provocative and should provide some answers of interest to many alumnae.)

"Once again Cheryl Olkes gets special billing in the Recorder. Her general news tells of the continued rigors of graduate school and her frequent clashes with the sexist legal/business system. I know we can all repeat those horror stories many times. In the final paragraph of her letter, though, is an interesting proposition:

"...and incidentally, what would you think of a mini-sociological survey of our class five years after graduation. My experiences at Chatham changed my outlook and consequently my life and approach to it. We were an active class. Has there been a carry-over of that activism into our lives since?"

Cheryl's question leads to another piece of information. Professor Lee Tidball of George Washington University, speaker at my Intern workshop and herself a graduate of Mt. Holyoke, has just completed a five year study. She found that graduates of women's colleges are more than twice as likely as female graduates of coeducational institutions to be career-successful.

How about it? If you feel your experience at Chatham was a positive factor in the social and/or professional development of the woman you are today, why not write to the Alumnae Association? I'm sure our testimonies will be useful to them in recruiting eager young women and in shaping curriculum and policy. What better proof of Chatham's success in its mission than the documented success of its graduates!"

Dear Ruth Anne,

I had not intended to reply this year but your comments encouraged me to respond. I spent the summer clerking with a law firm in Pennsylvania. It was a wonderful experience — almost hated to return to law school. Finally quit my job at the post office — between scholarships and part-time legal work I think I can get by. Paul is in 8th grade now, hard to believe I'll soon have a teenage son.

I find both "sides" of the present controversy about the Recorder somewhat lacking in tolerance and perspective. For each person, at each time, there is a path that is right. What is important — what should be shared — is whatever accomplishment is personally fulfilling. What is written in can either give support to someone who is in the same place (voluntarily) or can show someone else that other life styles can be rewarding.

I can't believe that anyone of our age group who went to Chatham is not aware of alternative life styles. My reaction, therefore, to those who complain about news of husbands, children and domestic activity is that they are either so caught up with the fervor of the women's movement that they have become intolerant of other life styles, or they are somewhat fearful of their own liberated position and don't want the alternatives publicized as enjoyable. I think they have overlooked the fact that many of those who write of husbands, children, etc. are really just communicating basic facts of their lives — the things you might write on a Christmas card to a very distant friend.

I agree with them that many of the "housewife" reports sound like "Fascinating Womanhood" propaganda. Writing only of husbands' or children's activities makes their lives sound rather empty and meaningless. I wonder if they really have no other purpose in life or if they have just given in to their local society's pressure to stay within a certain role.

Those who are opposed to the present content of the Recorder should write in about their own experience, goals, feelings and life style. Boycotting the Recorder will not change it — contributing in the style they feel appropriate may encourage others to do the same.

The "housewives" should at least speak of the contribution they have made to whatever they wrote about rather than appear to be living through someone else. At the same time, if the life they have chosen is fulfilling, they should not let the more outspoken feminists make them feel guilty or ashamed about it; instead they should let others know the rewards of their choice. I am a student, a mother, a single woman, a worker, a homeowner, a union advisor, a committee member, etc. All these roles are important to me and at different times I may choose to emphasize one or another. If I concentrate on my career for a time and it is rewarding, I will want to communicate this to others. If my domestic activities have been more fulfilling during a certain period, that is what I would want others to know. But, just because something is right for me for a while doesn't mean that the other facets of my life are not important — or that other women engaging in different pursuits should be put down.

The most important thing that can come from the women's movement is the chance to be yourself — whatever that happens to be. Until we can all be honest about our own roles and approving of other roles, controversies like the present one will continue. Hopefully, enough women will try to understand each other that an acceptable balance can be reached.

Karin Rumstedt '64

(ED note: The above was in response to a letter sent by Ruth Anne Maier Bengtson '64 to her section of classmate for news for the Recorder.)

I read with interest the discussion among some alumnae regarding the inclusion in the class news about diaper changing and baby burping. (Nancy Beach, Becky Albright, Duncan '63, and responses to Nancy Beal in the Feedback column, all in the Spring 1975 Recorder.) On August 27, 1974 I had a baby and just last week I completed an Independent Study on new mothers. I have some thoughts and feelings to share.

First of all, I have learned more in the past year than in any previous time I can remember. I not only understand my mother — her motivations and her ways have become clear in my own developing relationship with my baby — but I respond to mothers in general in new ways. I have found that I have spent a great deal of the past year in soul searching and reviewing my life. Not at all the mindless idleness I had presumed to be the mettle of the homebound woman with child.

Never has so much been required of me! The dichotomy between my fantasies and fears and the realities of being a full-time mother is incredible. Many of my fantasies were based on my fear of "not working." What a laugh! Of course, in my fantasies "working" was the other type of work — the type I was paid for with a bi-weekly check and was regarded as a "professional."

The reality of mothering is overwhelming. I am touched by the exquisite joys of growing and developing with this little boy and of experiencing life anew with him. The reality is also the exhaustion I feel — the accumulation of one year without uninterrupted sleep, the constancy of the responsibilities and the lack of time to be by myself.

In addition, I have discovered that I have learned far more about my profession this year — the first year in eight years that I have not been in a classroom. I now understand the pleas behind the words of many of the parents I deal with through the years. The phrase, "Oh, you don't have children so you don't know," used to enrage me. "True," I would admit, "I don't have children, but there are things educational I do know." Now, I understand their words

Alberta Bannerot Lappe (Mrs. William), 220 N. Dithridge Street, Pittsburgh, PA 15213

Memories of Dorothy Errett, who died June 7, 1975, will long live for us in Rebecca Crouse Costanza's words, "Here's the radiance of the sunshine, here's the fragrance of the rose." Kind thoughts go out to Dorothy's sisters.

Seba South McCaw, too, has our sincere sympathy. Her letter told of her mother's death in January at the age of 104. Mrs. South was a student at the College in 1889 and 1890.

Gertrude Frame Patterson says that she and Ira are enjoying a quiet, peaceful year, and are very much interested in the Bicentennial.

Edna Gaw Colvin is recovering from a fall in which three lumbar vertebrae were broken. Her activities are also limited by arthritis. However, the little grandchildren give her much pleasure, and she has great pride in a granddaughter in college and a grandson in law school.

Adella Stewart Anderson, who lives at the Methodist Country House in Wilmington, Delaware, sends word that she is well, at age 83, and enjoys living in happy surroundings. Her daughter has three children and her son has four adopted children.

Melba Martin Ingersoll, Mary Stratton and Grace Woodrow extend greetings and best wishes to all. The rest of our classmates appear to be sailing on that "painted ship upon a painted sea." Perhaps they are saving their choice news items for our 60th reunion in the Bicentennial Year.

Your writer has been keeping the home fires burning, in and on the "Magic Chef;" but now, with a new passport in her pocket, is looking forward to an early Roman holiday.

NEW ADDRESS

Winona Sterling Hopwood (Mrs. Harold E.), 363 Sunset Drive, Fort Lauderdale, FL 33301

Lala Fournier Babbit writes that she still lives in Warren, "same old town, same old house — much too big but I manage. Have been well but don't do much going."

Charlotte Hunker Hays had her 18-year old granddaughter with her for a month. They drove down to the mountains for a week. Char visited her husband's sister in Warren, Pennsylvania, and saw Ruth Gokey Walters and her husband Roy at their lovely place on the lake.

Ruth Long says she keeps well and busy.

Winona Sterling Hopwood says she lives "a full and busy life here although my husband was confined to our apartment for a year. We had a very happy 55th wedding anniversary on August 7."

Florence Younkens Fowler writes "This has been a quiet time for me. I don't drive much anymore so don't take any trips. My children and their children do so many things. I enjoy their activities and sometimes keep their dogs for them."

Lala, Ruth & Florence sent greetings and best wishes to all the class.

Your secretary keeps well and busy. Had my usual trip to Traverse City, Michigan in July. We saw the Cherry Festival Parade which was led this year by President and Mrs. Ford. My heartfelt thanks to all who wrote. It was better response than last year but we didn't hear from everybody.

The class news was written in June from replies to a reunion letter sent out by the class secretaries.

Only four classmates could make it to our 55th union, but we had a nice dinner with Helen Fairbanks on May 30 and enjoyed a pleasant reunion luncheon and program at the College on June 1. Present were Katherine McFarland, Betty Davidson, Elizabeth Fleming and Helen Fairbanks. Betty enjoys her sons and their families in Pittsburgh and looks young and peppy. Elizabeth came from Bluffton, SC, PA where she lives with her sister and stays with Katherine. Katherine lives in Pittsburgh in the spring and fall, Florida in the winter and Chautauque in the summer. Helen is still working part-time as a for her the big event of 1975 was being honored with an honorary Doctor of Laws degree by the College.

Many classmates wrote and here are excerpts from their letters: Elsie Herron Atwell said they were busy in many activities in their community; going to Florida in the winter plus Christmas in California with their son; and usually a foreign trip once a year. Helen Bennett Nelson was planning a trip to Albuquerque to visit their son and new grandson. Julia Aspinwall Dunlap who plays a lot of golf and looks as young as ever was in Pittsburgh just two weeks before reunion so could not return. Virginia Wilson Gilbert has our sympathy in the loss of her husband last winter. She is well and very active and was attending her granddaughter's graduation at the time of our reunion. Gladys Wilson Green was also involved in grandchildren's graduations — three of them. She and Ed are enjoying their country home. Gladys Fournier Todd, who is well and busy writing poetry for a senior citizens' club, was going to her brother's golden wedding. Doris Fredericks Toney is moving from Auburn, California to their summer home at Long Beach where they will be nearer their children. Willard Crane Peebles cannot do too much traveling any more. However, she added, "I can truthfully say that I don't think two people ever enjoyed retirement as much as we." Margaret Harriet Hurst-Brown still lives in Williamsburg near her family and has just recovered from two serious falls. Winifred Black Lee wrote that she is not very well and spent five weeks in the hospital. Imogene Armstrong simply wrote that she was unable to attend. Mary Stevenson is well but could not come to our reunion because transportation to Pittsburgh from West Newton is non-existent.

Helen Allison Dunbar says like the rest she is going along with the aches and pains of old age. Janet Taylor, Harriet Kraus and she recently met for lunch and enjoyed talking over the "good old days."

Marjorie Caskey Curran reports that she has been suffering with arthritis. She would like to hear from some of us.

Virginia Coggins McNally had a wonderful Caribbean cruise in March. She had just returned from a visit with her son and family in Cleveland while writing. Upon arrival a surprise celebration on her 75th birthday took place with 75 gifts, wrapped in unique ways, piled before the fireplace. She stayed two days a week at the hospital where she has been personnel director.

Bonnalyn Connelly sends love and good wishes to all. She sent a note for Mickey Gray Harlor. Mickey was in the Health Care Unit of Judson Park Hospital in Cleveland Heights, suffering from exhaustion following the long illness and death of her husband late January. Our deep sympathy is extended to Mickey. We hope by the time the Recorder is published that she has regained her health.

Ina Connelly Cross is well and busy. Daughter Emily was married in July and is living in Cambridge, Massachusetts. She says that makes her score perfect.

one in Massachusetts and one in California. Still trying up the post wedding strings.

Dorothy Burleigh Courtney said they were just getting their bags for a Scandinavian cruise, including Helsinki and Leningrad. Had a lovely summer with visits from all the children and grandchildren. Jim celebrated his 75th birthday.

Harriet Hill Kraus says she and Bill are leading a good life, grateful for the happiness and good health of their three children and grandchildren with an age range from eight to seventeen. Bill is an invalid and they no longer travel but that does not prevent her enjoying life.

Anne Jay says she is going to the Carnegie lectures instead of the places themselves. Trips mostly to visit people.

Anne Kiskaddon Griggs sends best wishes to all class. She has had several visits with Carolyn Zell. They drove home together from Florida and she thinks Carolyn is as lively as ever.

Florence Newmaker Knapp writes that Byron is in the Jamestown Hospital for surgery and is still on the mend. Their oldest granddaughter and husband visited just after the granddaughter received a doctorate of literature from Rutgers. The John Kapps and Patty and husband visited for several weeks. Newmy says it is either feast or famine — a bit of family or none. They again went, in a party of eight, for four days of the Shakespearean Performances at Stratford, Ontario.

Jane Taylor says life is commonplace and feels thoughtful ways are leaving her, but still took her early trip to California. She had the flu, broke a toe and a rib. Outside of that she still is in good health.

Susan Tucker Newton took a Caribbean cruise to many ports including Caracas and enjoyed it immensely. Susan has had her paintings exhibited in the American Arts showing at Carnegie Museum and the Hunt Gallery at Carnegie-Mellon. In May she entered a showing at State College. Congratulations, Susan. Newt, after retiring, is working again and loves it.

Ella May Wilson Montgomery reports she is happy in Clearwater Beach. Keeps busy with Audubon — sharing beach birds and shells with young and old, the League of Women Voters, Common Cause, Health Care Board and helping at a nursery school. Says age hasn't made her over.

Your secretary gave up being secretary of a Senior Citizens Group so that she could spend more time in Falmouth, Massachusetts. Am in Springdale most of the time, spending very little in New Castle. Keep putting off disposing of the old family home and contents and seem to be packing or unpacking as go the rounds.

MARRIAGE

Marion Griggs to John J. Geise, September 27, 1975

NEW ADDRESS

Marion Griggs Geise (Mrs. John J.), River House
-812, 1600 S. Joyce St., Arlington, VA 22202

Delade Fitzgerald Olney

The above was great and unusual news, for Dr. Marion and Dr. Geise were married September 27th at St. Stephen's Church in Sewickley. He is a Chancellor Emeritus and Professor-At-Large of the University of Pittsburgh and both started teaching back in the old days at Pitt. As Marion says: "Life separates people" but we are glad they found each other, again.

Widowhood has become a fact of life to about a third of our "girls." Last year Jack Shane and Bart Smith passed on. Stella Wagenfehr Shane during this year has visited Olive Keck Comfort and Billie Hibbs Williams. All of these as well as Grace Davis Lechling, Ruth Baxter Hill, Helen Leggett Corbett, also Marion Stewart Smith — have found their children a lot of comfort and satisfaction. Esther Miller Kagan, also in this group, arrived back from a long European trip to wish us well.

The Florida contingent is content there — Leaore Allen with her retirement community; Barbara Coit Templeton, still active despite an ill husband; Gertrude Mixer Henry traveled to Canada to avoid heat and found it 90 degrees, came back to more great grandchildren and the long dedicated interest in the Red Cross. Her husband has a pacemaker and she some arthritis but is still chipper. Virginia Lilley Christ is still half time (winter) in Florida and the other half (summer) in Hawley, PA.

Marian Kimmel Darsie in California has not been East since 1962. She is a leader in her church, AAUW and PEO organizations and off to the Holy Land in November. Both Martha Glandon Luthringer in the Midwest and Louise Hamilton Haase in New Jersey are busy and enjoying their families. Sorry about the illness of Florence Steele Bullock's husband, in Philadelphia. And was deeply moved by a letter at long last, from Mary Wilson Damon telling why we had not heard in so many years. She has a granddaughter about to graduate from Chatham and our hope is that any hurts of the past will be assuaged when she attends her graduation.

Martha Crowley, retired from Academia sums it all up well: "Fortunately I live with my family, with plenty of leisure for friends, reading, concerts, records, TV with selections, my daily mile and great nieces and nephews to prevent the generation gap."

Here in Pittsburgh we find Anna Mary Orr has for the past five years been going to Florida each winter to the same place. Hedwig Pregler, now fully retired, has taken on two big challenges, first woman head of the United Church of Christ (Congregational) in downtown Pittsburgh and also head of Board of the Congregational Home. Bravo!

Elsie Goldberg Rosenshine and Carolyn Lohr Steele are both Mt. Lebanon residents I see often — the latter at Senior Citizens affairs. Both are fine.

Emma Miller Davis in Latrobe has been kept busy by husband's cataract operation, two children and traveling in South America.

Six of you stayed quiet and wrote nothing but I am ever glad to hear from you. Your Secretary has been busy as Vice Chairman of the Senior Citizens in Mt. Lebanon, in hospital work, and writing dissenting letters to all and sundry when outraged. Try it. You'll get results. Here is where my college education has paid off for the public good.

NEW ADDRESS

Bertha Gates Goodrich (Mrs. Forrest A.), 14312
Detroit Avenue, #1150, Lakewood, OH 44107

The next time we go to press it will be to report what promises to be a great occasion. Florence Samberg Evans has agreed to be our chairperson; the response to our request to send checks to Mary has made possible a bank savings account which will further increase our money gift to the College; as of now 16 of us are planning to come to the reunion.

Currently Mary Ailes Sechler has been having a bout with arthritis of the back and we are hoping it will leave as suddenly as it arrived one night. Her days this year have been occupied with visits to and from her three out-of-town daughters and their families and her son who lives in Pittsburgh; programs at the College Club; volunteer hospital work; and anxiously awaiting her 13th grandchild who should have arrived by now. We will hear in June.

Our letters to Ruth Bodner Decker (Bud) have been returned to us. If anyone knows where she is please send her address to Mary or me.

Helen Bromley writes that she keeps busy with A.A.U.W., church, and dog sitting for her sister's hound. Helen is coming to our reunion. We will also see Abigail Cresswell in June. Her year's activities have included all the interesting research connected with becoming a member of the D.A.R.; various affairs of A.A.R.P.; trips to Harrisburg and Jamaica; her cottage on the Gulf at Indian Rocks Beach, Florida; and a visit to Toronto over Labor Day to the Fair.

Eleanor Fulton McCracken isn't sure about coming in June. She reports that she has "really retired" — it takes her until Thursday to finish the Sunday New York Times including the crossword puzzle. Other regular activities are bridge and Red Cross once a week. Her oldest grandson has just finished his first year at Princeton. Not so long ago we were jolted when we heard that his parents had reached college age!

We regret to report that Alice Greves is badly crippled with arthritis and her sister writes that Alice can't plan to come to the reunion. We will miss her.

We learned that Louise Harcom Einstein plans to be with us next June. She and Mary visited one afternoon at Mary's daughter's in Chagrin Falls, Ohio, when Louise was en route to see her doctor in Cleveland. After repeated major surgery she has now recovered and was able to spend a week last summer at the Shakespeare Festival at Stratford, Ontario. Louise has retired from teaching at Youngstown University and is enjoying being at home.

Marion Johnson Kipp is one of our much travelled members. A ten-year-old granddaughter who lives in Alaska accompanied them on a trip to Europe. When they returned Marion spent two weeks in a hospital getting insulin regulated. By the time you read this, Marion and her husband will be with a Phi Beta Kappa seminar to Russia and Siberia. We hope to hear about it in June.

Julia Kadlecik Little has planned for many years to attend our 50th reunion and has scheduled her travels accordingly. During the summer they enjoyed bicycling daily with their grandchildren and she became a real traffic stopper with the 2-year-old in her basket. At present she and her husband are having a leisurely trip in the Balkans. She takes movies while he takes slides which they will synchronize for showing to groups. Julie studied Japanese Sumée art for 4 years which is a very exacting technique. In her "spare time" her activities include P.E.O., A.A.U.W., hospital auxiliary, gardening, occasional substituting; and teaching a chair caning class that meets in her home every Friday. I'm breathless!

We have just learned that Elizabeth Koehn Butler and Eileen Borland are planning to come to the reunion together. That's good news.

Elsie Moller writes: "I look forward to catching up in June." And she adds: "Do you think we'll recognize many of our classmates whom we haven't seen since '26?"

Martina Oetting is still very enthusiastic about her Florida living and we may have to move our meeting there to see her in June.

Audrey Reebel Early has already celebrated a 50th — her wedding anniversary. They were touring the Maritime Provinces of Canada at the time. Audrey has another record that I doubt if we can beat — a 102-year-old father who is in good health and still divides his time between his two daughters, Audrey and her sister.

Florence Samberg Evans spent a fun summer with a 16-year-old grandson who was visiting her. She said that after living alone for so many years that it was quite an adjustment to make for both of them, but well worth it. Her other interests include an occasional trip; going to her business twice a week; her Temple; and many kinds of handwork.

Catherine Sayers had a wonderful cruise last summer around the Baltic Sea. On her last day out she collided with a waiter and was the victim of two cracked ribs but the waiter emerged unscathed! Before coming home she spent two weeks in London. We look forward to seeing her in June.

Helen Simons Polhemus wants to come to the reunion but her husband has just survived a heart attack and they have not yet assessed the damage. We sympathize with her on the loss of her 95-year-old mother last March. Their oldest son and family were transferred to Seoul where he is to serve as assistant to the Chief of Army Chaplains in Korea.

Jean Thomas Iffert doesn't yet know whether she can come in June and she ends her note with: "I can't believe that I'm one of those old ladies we used to see coming back for their 50th reunion!" All things are relative, Jean, and I remember in my prep school days how anybody of 25 was to be pitied.

Caroline Timothy Mountford is excited about having a new granddaughter-in-law. Her oldest grandson was married in January and her middle one has just announced his engagement. She is looking forward to holiday shopping "for sweet young things." Her activities include church work; civic and club projects mixed with a little travel. She will see us at our 50th reunion — God willing."

Eileen Borland says, "Over the years I've kept in touch with Cay Sayers and Lib Koehn Butler. Their plans to attend or not will influence my decision — and I hope they will plan to go." And that is a story with a happy ending.

Mabel Breitweiser Hann spent last spring in Switzerland where her granddaughter, Lynn Baxter, spent her junior year at the University of Friburg. Lynn will graduate at Chatham at the time of her grandmother's 50th reunion. Of course Mabel will attend both events.

Bertha Gates Goodrich: "I'm busy, happy, healthy; mostly I say 'Have suitcase — will travel.' I will see you in June."

I am still dividing my time between Pittsburgh and Washington to visit my invalid aunt — the one I left college to go to China with so long ago. In March I went to Brazil to see two charter members of our Foreign Wives Group. On the way South I visited my brother in his new condominium at Vero Beach and almost became the eighth member of our class to become a Floridian.

Monica Keyser Foster (Mrs. D. V.), P. O. Box 75, Point Reyes, CA 94956

Julia Lustenberger Adams (Mrs. Edward), 2327 Mayfair Place, Topeka, KS 66611

Ruth Mary Wilkinson, Gateway Towers, 5-F, Pittsburgh, PA 15222

Our deepest sympathy to the families of Becky and Ruth (Mitz).

Ann Aber Buck retired from teaching 3 years ago, but John is still at the bank of Hollandale. Ann is the only woman on the Board of Directors in her building. She plays bridge and does needlepoint to keep busy. Their son, Larry, lives nearby (his son is 6) and he is with Computer Products.

Fran Frost Brumbaugh was in Pittsburgh last fall and had lunch with several of our class members. She took a Caribbean cruise last December and a Canadian Rockies tour in June by rail and bus. In September — a Western and Southwest tour.

Greetings from Kay Caldwell Mayer and Betty Corey Wallis. Betty has two grandchildren in college.

Peg Cousley took a New England tour this fall.

Suzanne Finley Heller and John spent last Christmas in London with Susan and her family near Liverpool.

Dot Floyd Warren had a visit with Pat McCurdy Bushnell and Evy Newton Flickinger and her husband at Evy's home in Hudson, Ohio in June. In July she visited Charlotte in Washington, D.C. who is assistant editor for the Association of Governing Boards of Universities and Colleges.

Helen Gordon has been promoting the sales of a book written by Elizabeth Boyer, a personal friend. Helen read the manuscript "Margurite de la Rogue-A Story of Survival." She sent me a book cover and it sounds very interesting.

Isabel Hoffmann Cooper keeps up her piano work but does not sing publicly. Her daughter Ruth is singing professionally. Isabel visited Oral Roberts University in June attending a Layman's Seminar. She spends the Christmas holidays in Pittsburgh with her daughter Ethel.

Mardy Jones Ruthart and Bob drove 6600 miles this summer to the Northwest and ended in Santa Fe to visit Bob and Jil. She was elected a director of the Iris Club of Lancaster, a club of over 600 members, and inherited the job of Program Chairman.

Hortense Ibach Knoll is enjoying life again after her illness which curtailed her activities for some time. She took a trip to the west this summer and is playing golf and starting fall activities of bridge, a literary group, A.A.U.W., and hospital volunteer work. With five grandsons and one granddaughter, she and Ralph keep young and busy.

Clare Lawler had to curtail her activities in A.A.U.W., hospital work, and traveling due to an arthritic knee. Hope you are up and about again, Clare.

Alice Mahood Torrens was hospitalized last January, but is doing well now and flew to Tacoma in June for her granddaughter's high school graduation.

Our sympathy to Kay Owens who lost a cousin with whom she visited much of her time since retirement. Kay took a trip to New England and around the Gaspe this fall.

Mildred Parrill Gilmore and her husband took a cruise last February to the land of Maya in Central America. They are interested in the Chatham Paris tour, if they have it in 1976, as they are booked for a New England trip this fall.

Betty Piel is teaching one class in Scientific German this year. She made some improvements on her home this summer instead of traveling.

Peg Port Arens has a new grandson born in July, making four grandsons and two granddaughters. Both families visit her during the summer.

Betty Porter Steinmiller and Dell have a new grandson, Kevin Stout. They took a western trip in July via bus and plane.

Gina Ray Randall bought a house in Sparta, New Jersey in 1966, which she rented out until last January, when she moved into it after selling her house in Ridgewood where she had lived for 27 years. She commuted to her work, 40 miles each way, until she retired September 1st after 15 years as Alumni Director at William Paterson College. She spent a week in Rio in the spring and a week in Romania this summer conducting tours like Chatham has started. Her daughter Trudy has bought a home near her.

Bess Rosen Birshten is still working in business and keeping active as is her husband who continues his interest in Stonewall Jackson, the public library, citizenship, and organization work. Their daughter Barbara is on the teaching staff at the Albert Einstein College of Medicine in New York. Bessie hears from Henri Spelsberg Costen, Lib Buchanan Plough, Sid Friedman Bigg, and Edith Gruskin Apple.

Ruth Mary Wilkinson and her sister, Honor, moved back to Pittsburgh in October, 1974 to a lovely apartment facing the Allegheny River. They took an escorted tour to the Pacific Northwest in August via air, boat, train, and motor coach.

Ruth Work Miller is feeling better after a long siege of illness and able to be out again.

Jimmy (Steve to some of you) and I drove to Mexico last December for him to help out a textile mill at Monterrey. After two days at the mill we went on to Tampico and Mexico City where we spent three days taking tours. 3,825 miles in two weeks, no trouble or illness. Barbara has been on T.V. and radio quite often this year discussing "Child Abuse" and "Sudden Infant Death." Our grandson, Gordon, graduated from high school and is here in Atlanta at Georgia Tech.

I enjoy your letters so much and wish I could give you more of the details. Thank you for writing and for sending your checks which are gradually increasing our fund for 1978.

Lois Watt Cooper (Mrs. Henry), 220 N. Ditt St., Pittsburgh, PA 15213 (summer)

There were 22 of us who gathered for our reunion, the second largest class there. We all agreed that it was a most enjoyable day. We saw a which showed the trend of college graduates in entering all phases of activity — business, radio broadcasting, law, etc. After luncheon we discussed plans for our next reunion. We agreed name the class gift which is traditionally the College at that time, The Laberta Dysart Fund. Dysart came to the College as a young instructor same year we entered as freshmen. She sent a contribution and wrote a letter recalling her memories of those days.

After we had talked about our travels, our commitment, and our grandchildren, a group of out-of-classmates toured the new Scaife Art Gallery.

Geraldine Anderson Daum wrote that she actively engaged in reorganizing the library of University of Sarasota, formerly Lawrence University, and was unable to attend the reunion cause school was in session at that time. The both active in church work. Her husband does of work with the Masons and she with the El Star and in between they both take many short trips. Annamae Beatty Dreibelbis was sorry she could be with us but her daughter and daughter's husband were leaving for Turkey at that time where he is in the Air Force. Ruth Beech Armentrout was so miss the reunion but serious illness in the fall prevented it. Pauline Bickhart Garratt and Frank now back in Pittsburgh. Polly hopes to be with us next time.

Myra Boor Fuller was with us in June and enjoyed this reunion especially well.

Marie Bowser Robbins is planning a trip to Hawaii in November and will spend the remainder of the winter in Florida.

Miriam Bulger is sorry that our reunion coincided with the visit of a friend from Scotland.

Viola Chadwick Rosso has recovered from surgery and reports the marriage of her youngest son and the birth of twin grandsons to another son is doing part-time work at Immaculata College.

Elizabeth Daugherty Dennis wrote me a letter and said they bought a house near Santa Barbara in 1936 and have lived there ever since. Her children are married and live in Albuquerque, New Mexico, Pueblo, Colorado; and Monterey, California. Her son is working in Marine Biology with the Navy.

Louise Dickenson was with us in June and almost as spry as ever. She had had a new operation in which plastic replaced part of the bone of the hip.

Helen Ensminger Hughes was unable to be with us because she had grandchildren graduating at the time. Dorothy Fisher Maury was unable to attend the reunion but she suggested that some of the classmates living in or near Pittsburgh might get together for a mini-reunion. 1980 is a long way away.

Frye Llewellyn regretted that she could not be with us. I hope to see her sometime in the fall before she goes back to Hilton Head for the winter. Mary Guckert had to have an operation in June but plans to be with us for the 50th. Imogene Fla Truman at last made it back from Seattle. She has been making promises for years and this time was here.

Marian Haines Schap stayed with me and my daughter, Dottie Seif Kapp '61, before visiting relatives in New Jersey. She is teaching music and attending workshops.

Winifred Hartman Whiteman has been thorough in reporting news for the last five years. She was happy to see so large a reunion group.

Martha Henderson Lewis volunteered to help with news for the Recorder and has found that caring from classmates and finding Velma Duvall Zlett living near her has been a joy.

Alice Hewitt Murphy probably has the record for a number of grandchildren in the class — 14. Alice and her husband have traveled annually to England where she has many Scottish relatives. As Grand representative to Scotland in 1972 a large banquet reception was given in her honor. In 1974 she served as District Superintendent of her School district in Redlands, California.

Mary King Guckert was operated upon in June but has fully recovered. Charlotte Linsz Edwards had the house she had lived in for 29 years and has moved into a smaller one that is near her son and his family. Amelia Lockard Moul stayed with Peg Jeffery Loftus while she was in Pittsburgh. She was one of the most lively of our reunion classmates. Peg returned in late August from her freighter trip to Yugoslavia and then took off almost immediately to attend the opera in San Francisco and to visit a business. She plans to look up some classmates in the California area.

Marcella Murray tried hard to get back for our 5th reunion but she is still working and could not get away. Marcy is chairman of the Southern California Alumnae Club and manages to see many graduates of Chatham in that area.

Meredith Murray Heckman has been living in the Pittsburgh area for two years and enjoys it. Elizabeth Helen Cullen enjoyed seeing everybody in June and spent busy with her six grandchildren. Louise Peterson Jamesson enjoyed the reunion this year. She has traveled extensively in Europe and has reservations for a trip to China. This sounds exciting.

Margaret Post Giffen is working as co-secretary with me and Mart. She visited her sister near Pittsburgh after the reunion and is now back in California. Sara Reamer Matlack had looked forward to our reunion but hurt her knee in Europe last summer and again at Christmas time. Again she writes that if any of you are near Media, PA in the summer or St. Petersburg, Florida in the winter, please do drop in to see her.

Dorothea Ryman Neilson has been our able author of news from the associates since 1970 and graciously consented to continue until 1975. She is still Research Consultant at Westinghouse Design Center and for the last three years has been Superintendent of Education at the Dormont Methodist Church.

Elise Searing Loxterman has a granddaughter who is a junior at Chatham who plans to study at the University of Madrid for her junior year. Elise and her husband plan to visit them in February. Elise's mother, Elsie Braun Searing, graduated from the college in 1902 and was president of the Alumnae Association.

Dorothy Thompson Seif retired as Chairman of the Science Department of the Winchester-Thurston School because of an age discriminatory rule. She presents this form of discrimination and fulminates against it whenever she gets the chance. She found me in her "retirement" to be one of the principal speakers in a Law and Justice Workshop series sponsored by the University of Pittsburgh.

NEW ADDRESS

Georgia Meinecke Weldon (Mrs. Robert G.), 1846 Camino Verde, Apt. A, Pleasant Hill, CA 94523

REPORTING:

Greetings to all and many thanks for all the notes. I love living in Mt. Lebanon where I am near my daughter and grandson. Traveling, bridge and the College Club have kept me busy and happy.

Alice Bair Albright is still maintaining two households — one in Ligonier and one in Pittsburgh. Also with greetings for all is Louise Blank Lecky who reports life is beautiful in Florida and that she would be glad to see anyone who comes her way.

Marion Brindle Miller keeps busy with house, golf and bridge. She was planning a trip to California to see their daughter and to Oklahoma to visit their son.

Fortunately for Betsy Dearborn Souren, her husband who had been very ill, is now well and working again. Their four grandchildren, two unmarried sons and a married daughter are a source of great joy to them.

Margaret Eisaman Muranyi and her husband enjoyed the summer at Chautauqua and were pleasantly surprised to see Alice Bair Albright and Charlotte Graham Dight. Peg said Chautauqua was a pleasant change from Florida where they spend their winters. Charlotte and her husband are also on the Florida-Chautauqua circuit, living eight months in Florida and the balance of the year in Chautauqua.

Ruth Grafman Weiner reports that her husband is semi-retired and they do some traveling along with enjoying their fourth granddaughter.

Jane Norman Widdowson is working as a secretary at Calvary Church and vacationed with her children and grandchildren who are all "boat happy."

Peggy reporting:

Besides enjoying my stint as class secretary I am president of my garden club, treasurer of the book club and some church work in between. I'm delighted with my new home — it's like keeping house in a doll's house. Our sincere sympathy goes to Mary Frances Tarr Peat whose husband Robert died in July.

Lillian Lafbury Wills wrote that after seven years they still think Florida living is heaven. She is busy with League of Women Voters, A.A.U.W., Retired Officers Wives, church work and acts as parliamentarian for many organizations — not to mention her children and grandchildren who live nearby. Also enjoying Florida was Ruth Miller Page who spent four months in Clearwater.

This fall found Rita Lefton Pincus back teaching in the Scranton School District and again conducting a teenage mothers' program. Besides her many volunteer activities which include serving as director of the Temple Sisterhood, she had a great trip to Israel and England this past summer.

Eight weeks in France, a trip to New England and a visit with her son Ed who is doing a poetry workshop for Sarah Lawrence College occupied Sally Miller Brash's summer. She is still assistant professor at Harcum Junior College, Director of the Children's Theatre and "Plays for Living," and the Allen's Lane Art Center.

Bertha Phillips Brown reports that she is to be married in October to a longtime friend and will acquire three more grandchildren, making twelve in all. Betty Rankin Foster now has six grandchildren and is active in church and women's club work. Last spring she visited in the British Isles.

Expected retirement at the end of this year from her work as Director of Social Services for Columbia Hospital will give Dorothy Russell time to do some traveling. As always she is very active in church work and is now an elder.

Retirement has also come to Sara Stevenson who has been teaching in Indiana. She says she has been busy pushing furniture around and unpacking endless boxes of accumulated "stuff."

Marion Stone Howard and her husband love the beauty, peace and quiet of the mountains. Stoney is assistant librarian at an all volunteer library and is active in the local garden club.

Another retiree, but not until next May, is Mary Woolridge Beyer who will leave General Electric where she has been "Girl Friday" in the Facilities Office. Her daughter and her husband are in Canada on fellowships for graduate study toward degrees in geology. Mary is hoping to learn French together with her 2½-year-old grandson who is learning to speak French along with English.

Eleanor Ewing Wilson (Mrs. Stewart), 902 NW Sunset Terrace, Stuart, FL 33494

Mary Louise Martin, 30 Griffing Circle, Asheville, NC 28804

Eunice Shatzer Stentz (Mrs. Edgar L.), 106 St. Andrew's, Box 1325, Pinehurst, NC 28374

Ruth reporting:

Peg Donaldson finds gardening delightful as part of a satisfying first year of retirement. The library, weekly, and American Cancer Society, monthly, are recipients of her volunteer help. She reports that Jane Mitchell Carpenter dropped by for a brief visit this summer.

As a Floridian Nookie Ewing enjoys visiting Luise Link Ely who lives about fifteen miles south. Now, with due thanks to the Recorder, she has discovered Mim Young White '33 just a few miles away. Summer at Van Buren, New York and a delightful week in Pittsburgh visiting friends rounded out a pleasant season.

Tending to a half acre of lawn, flowers, and vegetables plus vacation Bible Schools, picnics, and retreats involving two churches to which her husband ministers keeps Marjorie Gibson Shoemaker and husband Edwin very busy. Nevertheless she still finds time to be a Red Cross Volunteer at Presbyterian Manor.

As a board member of Day Care Centers, Peggy Goldberg Maxwell finds satisfaction in a necessary, rewarding program for preschool children. Peggy and husband Bob visited friends in Montana following which they joined a tour group visiting Yellowstone and Grand Teton Parks. The return home was highlighted by a visit to their son's family in Cincinnati.

After completing twelve years as media specialist at Seabreeze Junior Hi and two evaluations by Southern Association, Jean Hamilton Charlesworth has been named "Outstanding Secondary Educator of America." Youngest son Art has received a Ph.D. in mathematics from Duke University. This now makes the third one, with husband Art receiving his in Biblical Studies from Drew University in 1946 and son Jim also in Biblical Studies from Duke University in 1967. Jean still enjoys the grandma role to three lovely girls and one boy.

Synnové Haugom is still deeply involved in work for Treat Gallery at Bates College. She had occasion to visit Pittsburgh in June where she met Dorothy Schenk Van der Voort. This year will terminate Synnové's role as Maine Representative of the American Association of Museums. She is a volunteer in the "Citizens for Historic Preservation" lobby group.

Regards to all classmates from Rose Hollingsworth Stambaugh with no special news at this time.

"It's no fun to be a loser so I keep as busy as possible," says Ann Irwin Hoffman. Ann works as part time bookkeeper and clerk in a furniture store. She spent three weeks last spring in Florissant, Missouri helping youngest son Mark and his wife care for newborn twin girls. Middle son Chris married a woman with a six-year-old daughter so grandchildren leaped from two to five in one summer. Ann specializes in copper enamel jewelry with inlaid apples and Johnny Applesed dishes.

Josephine Johnson Rennick's husband has retired from the Energy Research Development Administration in Oak Ridge. They will make a trip to the Hawaiian Islands in October together with friends who are helping to plan the itinerary.

I'm sorry we didn't hear from more of you. However, I am grateful to those who did write. I spent an enjoyable month in California visiting mother and dad who are now 89 and 92 respectively and non-senile, a sister in San Francisco and a brother in Los Angeles. Greetings to all and hope to hear from you next year.

Margaret reporting:

Mary Jane Young has a new job, working four days a week for the senior partner in a law firm in Washington. This allows her to continue as a volun-best at the Smithsonian on Fridays. She visited some places of historical interest in the United States this year, too.

Our sympathy to Thelma Stocker Trost whose husband died at Easter time. Thelma retired from teaching in November because of his health and they spent a month early in the year trailering south. In May she visited her Army son Bill and his family and in late May her parents (aged 86 and 89) moved in with her. In the summer, she opened the kennels again and is boarding cats and dogs and she is busy.

Ruth Miller Allen writes they have sold their store (fifth one in Florida). They don't know what they will be doing or where, but the old address (Apt. 307, Hamilton House, 4650 Cove Circle, St. Petersburg 33708) will reach them.

Ellen Yeager Husak's husband has recovered from his heart attack of last year. They enjoy their two granddaughters, aged four months and two and a half years, and planned to vacation at Deep Creek and in New England.

Many of our classmates are enjoying their retirement. Avanelle Schlosser Grafton has completed a year and plans for a trip west.

Jean Ludebuhl Fisher and her doctor husband are enjoying a more leisurely life since his retirement two years ago. They spend time in a cabin in the woods with a pond stocked with fish near their Meadville home. Both sons are married and living not too far away.

Mary Lou Martin enjoys her new home in North Carolina where she does volunteer work three days a week. She vacationed in Hawaii for fifteen days.

Luise Link Ely writes that summer living at Beech Mountain, NC is fun, with lots of young people around at the Land of Oz and available for odd jobs. Bre had serious surgery at Duke, but it was not malignant. She is busy writing letters about a copyright law to insure that duplication pays off to the author in some manner. Says she got involved through her work for Holt, Rinehart and Winston. What sort of work, Linkie?

Harriet Tyler Martin plans a year's leave of absence to enjoy Paul's retirement, though she hopes to continue teaching until she is 65. Her oldest grandchild is in college this fall!

Among our vacationers were Dot Schenck Van der Voort and Bob who spent three weeks in London, Norway and Sweden, being awed by the beauty of the fjords and snow-capped mountains; your secretary Margaret White who enjoyed a month's vacation trip to Scotland, England, Belgium, West Germany, Denmark, Sweden and Holland and has not retired yet; Alice McCarthy Bowman and her husband who planned a trip to England for September, Marion Starkey Hamlet and Frank who vacationed in the Northwest and Canadian Rockies. (Incidentally, Marion's youngest, Sue, is a senior at Mt. Holyoke this fall and Marion keeps busy, including responsibility for her mother, now 90, and an independent aunt of 89.)

Thanks to Helen Walker Empfield for her note, even though she reports no news.

Sally reporting:

Jean Andress Berger and husband Bill, who is semi-retired, have given up on Wisconsin winters and are moving to Florida. Jean says they are happy and do enjoy their four grandchildren.

Helen Brown Buchanan and Jim are still using their camper to keep in touch with their children and their families. They spent a week in the Fort Wilderness Campground at Disneyworld in Florida, and enjoyed a visit from their newest grandson when he came up from Texas.

Mary Virginia Brown Bowden reports that after having been hospitalized twice all is well now with one missing gall bladder. Daughter Katie was married in March to an astronomer at the University of Texas, where she still pursues her singing career. The usual September vacation in London was planned. Mary Virginia urged the class of '36 to return for our 40th reunion and the bicentennial celebration.

Frances Ferguson O'Callaghan recommends the North Carolina mountains to Pennsylvanians. To last year's chair caning, Frances has added quilt making and canning.

Jane Griffith Potter reports that both she and Charlie have been ill this year. However, they are hopefully looking forward to a visit to Hawaii in October.

Charlotte Ley Glover extends best wishes to all as she looks forward to receiving the Recorder. Son H. Allen Jr. graduated from the University of Virginia Law School and passed his Virginia bar exams. Charlotte's busy library schedule was broken in July by visiting children and grandchildren in Sandbridge, Virginia.

Life is still busy at the Bowdens in Waynesburg; however, the family was all together for our usual Florida vacation in May. I finally found a hobby — I like to do crewel. I want to thank all of you for your fine cooperation during my five-year service as secretary, which comes to an end this year. Hope to see all of you at our 40th reunion.

Katrina reporting:

Dorothea Wirth Carpenter has started "retiring" by buying a sailboat and dividing time between sailing on the Chesapeake and working in Pittsburgh. She and her husband have just bought an old Victorian house to remodel on Negley Avenue not far from Chatham.

Carol Pfordt Davis's daughter, Susan, and her boys came on from Philadelphia last summer for a family reunion at Van Buren Point, New York, and Carol's younger daughter who lives nearby has a new son. Carol keeps busy with gardening and her grandchildren.

Speaking of gardening, wonder if everyone knows about Helen Lindsay Lee who has been the subject of innumerable feature stories having to do with her work in this field. Imagine how it would be to be able to paint, judge a flower show, be a flower arranger, write instructive books and think of ways which arouse interest of school children in growing things. She has lectured in Atlanta, Baltimore, Cleveland and Philadelphia. In addition to awards she has received for her work in flower arranging, she has taken prizes for painting of flowers, and, as if that weren't enough, she is now doing prints. Besides her creative work, our multi-talented classmate does her own gardening not only in Pittsburgh but at her summer place in Waterford, Vermont.

Agnes Ralston reports that she spent March in the hospital but seems to have recovered. She and Ruth Rosen Hartz play tennis together at Chatham — most of the time before going to work. Aggie is enthusiastic about the summer theatre at Chatham.

Jean Maeder Lindsay has another grandson and has moved into an apartment. She and Al have sold their house and moved last June.

Mary Jane Seaton Young and husband Ed are happily retired and living in Jane's family home in Zelienople. She retired from the Allegheny County Community College as professor of Marine Invertebrate Zoology and says that her second hobby, tracing fossil reefs and bioherms, has their house beginning to look like a museum. October's plans were for a trip by truck and trailer through southwest following her fossils and Ed's golf course. Their son Pete is an attorney in California, and I plan to see him while in the west, where he is ministrative assistant to a judge.

Helen Martin Woods and Ed are enjoying retirement in Pompano Beach, FL where they swim golf.

Betty McCook Mills says that her children scattered all over the place — Porterville, Tallahassee and Sun Valley. All are married except youngest and there are four grandchildren. Betty John keep busy traveling and fishing when he leave his medical practice.

Sana Mouromseff broke her ankle in three places last June. Hopefully by the middle of September could be given a walking cast and be back at office. Not a very fine way to spend the summer. Otherwise everyone and everything are fine.

Ceramics are Ginny Wertz Potter's bag. Not only does she teach the art but also sells some of things. She spoke in December at the Alum South meeting. A new grandson born in June brought to four the number of her grandchildren. While husband has been retired for two years and enjoys his leisure, Ginny seems to be busier than ever.

Elizabeth Saffer's card tells about her first (and she hopes last) trip to the Caribbean where she was fascinated by her fellow passengers' mountainous luggage. But in November she is going to Egypt will stop in England on the way back where she spend Christmas and New Year's. At last Liz has office of her own, and in her wry humor says, "So it was intended as a photographic dark room, not exactly luxurious and the view is not distracting but it is all my own and quiet."

Katherine Ward Parshall spent the summer in Hyannis Port, Massachusetts (their 42nd year there) with their son Ward from Cambridge, England where he is working on his Ph.D. in English Literature. Daughter Nancy and family from New Jersey, has two granddaughters and is "just acting like grandmother!"

Doris Pierce keeps busy on committees in a condominium in Fort Lauderdale and spends a lot of time traveling around Florida.

Mary Adah Trussell Gray wrote at Christmas that she was already thinking about the fortieth reunion next year. She wondered if Mary Virginia Brown I were going to make it. It should be a gala occasion.

Cameron and I are looking forward to his retirement next year, but, in the meantime are planning our annual hegira to Spain in November. I hope another year to serve on the board of our community. Since I was the only woman elected, naturally I got stuck with the job of secretary, almost a full-time job, but I find it most interesting and satisfying. Cheers to you all, and thanks for sending me such nice cards and letters for these five years!

Janet Riddle Brinker

Mildred reporting:

This fall Kay Arnold Dague's son David entered Siena College where his mother is secretary to the Chairman of the Science Division. The next exciews of Kay's year was the arrival of granddaughter Katie in January.

Mary Deemer Nagel has wound up an eventful year as President of the Pittsburgh Presbyterian, and continues her active role in religious affairs as an Elder of the Mulberry United Presbyterian Church in Wilkesburg where husband George is a trustee. Their youngest son, Harry, was married to Mary K. Woods on May 17th and their third son, Charles, has won his wings in the Air Force.

Dora Diamond Hake has collaborated with a teacher-friend to write a play on the bicentennial theme which will be produced by the school this year as part of their bicentennial celebration.

After her holiday in Nantucket this summer, Helen Finkel Eger started to bone up on facts about Japan in preparation for a 1976 visit to Osaka, Japan, where her son is a teacher in the American School.

Florence Gibbs Momeyer's youngest son, Alan, was married in June. Florence pointed out that living 5000 miles away from the newlyweds must make her an ideal mother-in-law.

After his retirement in October, Dorothy Hauk Bryen and Jim sold their home in Franklin Lakes, New Jersey and moved to Hilton Head, South Carolina. Dorothy is anxious to contact other Chatham alumnae living in that area.

Dorothea Hunter Maas and Ben are continuing their travels. In February they enjoyed a cruise, aboard a Greek liner, to South America. In October they will be visiting India.

Dorothy Kirkland Bauml is fascinated with her work in the Religious Studies Department of Pennsylvania State University and loves exploring the beautiful countryside of the area.

In June, Ruth Kleitz Buell and Bob attended the 18th International Airstream Rally in Manitoba, Canada. The rally was preceded and followed by an extensive tour of the Canadian and American Rockies.

Jean Lemmon Crick and Ed have sold their summer cottage at Madison and are now freer to travel. They boast of two grandchildren who keep them "young in heart." Jean relayed the sad news of the death of Amy McBride Bell's husband, John, in July. Our deepest sympathy to Amy.

"Greetings" and "call when you're in town" came from Mary Baldwin, Marjorie Chubb Randall, Elizabeth Coates Elliott and Helen Johnson Montgomery.

Last October, Lee and I were scarcely settled in our new home when we left for two months in California where we welcomed our first grandchild, Carolyn Claire Titus. My thanks to all of you who responded so promptly and interestingly to my cards.

Martha reporting:

Beatrice Lynch Conn spent the winter in Palm Beach playing golf and recuperating from a serious operation. She keeps busy with community activities.

Eleanor Meanor Croyle is kept busy being a "Real Estate Lady" — and houses are selling fast in Houston. She has three lovely grandchildren.

Margaret Perry Huessener writes that since retirement last December she and Dick will be spending their winters in Arizona but plan to be in Pittsburgh for the summer. Lee is working for Stouffer's restaurants and Ann is a junior in college.

Sara Reese Warrick is quite pleased and excited about their new daughter-in-law. Sally keeps busy with home activities.

Mary Margaret Schmitt has made a gift of books and pictures to the College which have been greatly appreciated. She has been traveling in Iceland where she spent three days in Reykjavik and then on to Copenhagen where she attended a mental health meeting. She also visited Spain and Mexico.

Helen Thomas Nevin writes "hi" to all. Her daughter was married in June.

Edith Thompson is now working at Langley High School in Sheraden — which amounts to more work and also a promotion.

Barbara McCormick Tener is now a legal secretary again. Her daughter Kathy is a vice president of a bank, and Connie is an insurance agent. She would welcome a Chatham face in Stone Harbor.

Mary Lou reporting:

Jean Aungst Talbot is doing her yard work, visiting her elderly family and doing as much swimming as possible. She enjoyed seeing everyone at the reunion.

Our sympathy to Elinor Bissell Offill on the death of her mother. Her father, who is failing, is living with them so their travel has been curtailed.

Pat Brennan Aull has completed a book of poetry this year and is looking for a publisher. She has seen Punky Cook several times.

Jean Burry Patten's Sam is going to teach at Shenandoah College in Winchester, VA this year. Son Rick is working on his Ph.D. at Johns Hopkins. One daughter was married in April, and the other is teaching in Reno. Jean hated to give up her job teaching in a learning disabilities class, but she hopes to find something in Virginia.

Peggy Christy Graham had her middle daughter home from Jakarta where she and her husband teach in the Joint Embassy School. The rest of the family gathered about, and they had a fine reunion.

Ruth Clark Nelson was busy and enjoying the hottest summer in thirty years at Ocean Park, ME.

Jean Curry Burt reports recent visits to Danville where her son-in-law is interning. She also had a nice visit to Charleston, SC where they were stationed during World War II.

Peg Dunseath Wilson, a member of Phi Delta Kappa, an international professional education fraternity, received the first Lay Leader Award for distinguished service to education. Congratulations, Peg!

It's back to 80 fifth graders for Betty Eastwood MacConnell at St. Thomas. Jim, Jr. is at Yale, and Jean is off to ninth grade. Jim, Sr. is now a full-time institutional chaplain.

Eleanor Hackett is treasurer of the Gaelic Arts Society of Pittsburgh and took an 8-day cruise on the Inside Passage in Alaska in July.

Audrey Horton Skillman and Paul are planning a new home in Deland, FL. Meanwhile, they've been in Connecticut with Priscilla and Chuck.

Caddie Lou Kinzer Trapp was sorry to miss the reunion, but her father was quite ill and passed away in June. She spent the summer moving her mother to a nearby nursing home.

Rachel Kirk Bobo just answered her card so that I wouldn't feel frustrated. She looked just great at the reunion.

Pat Krause Kosco had a cheery note that she hoped all her classmates had the same zest for life that she has. She really has it — her lone daughter was married this year, made another trip to Spain, and finished summer school. She's going back to work after twenty years, and is entering graduate school.

It was such fun seeing you all at the reunion. To those who attended, wasn't the brunch marvelous? The college should certainly be commended. Let's have a better representation the next time.

Frances reporting:

Helen Lohr Wright says there is nothing new, but she is looking forward to news of others in the Recorder.

Ada Lee Mangum Clark spent a quiet, pleasant summer at home going to the beach and enjoying the Florida sunshine and water.

Marianne McCallister Martin reports daughter Jean, 20, is a junior at Ohio University and Ellen, 18, is a sophomore at University of Chicago. She was sorry to miss the reunion but was needed at home.

Ann Miller Mayer will be teaching a second-third combination this year and is completing work on her master's degree. She is still breeding Dobermans and trying to learn as much about dressage as her horse, Flash Harry, already knows. She is well and loves California.

Mary Ellen Ostergard Lutz enjoyed visiting their son at Fort Hood, Texas, one daughter in upper Michigan and the other in New York City.

Mary Lou Shoemaker Hockensmith took a Caribbean cruise, is getting settled in her new apartment and is taking courses at the "Y." Son Frank is enrolled at Boyce Campus taking courses in Hotel-Motel management.

Frances Shoup Brant's summer trip followed the southern shore of the St. Lawrence River around the Gaspé Peninsula enjoying the quaint towns of the cod fishermen. This fall she is returning to teaching Special Education and getting "broken in" as your class secretary.

Helen Stevenson Berghaus reports their daughter Lydia has one more year in medical school. She is enjoying their apartment on the Allegheny River and planning retirement in North Carolina next year.

Jane Viehman thoroughly enjoyed seeing everyone at the reunion. She suggests that we make plans at our next reunion for a monetary gift for our Fiftieth Reunion. Any suggestions? Alida Spinning also enjoyed the reunion and is getting settled at her new address.

Mary Wolff Gamble is returning to work at the University of Maryland after a summer of loafing, reading, and traveling. Their daughter Sue graduated from Purdue and will spend the next year in a dietetic internship at Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston. Betsy will return to Earlham for her senior year and Tom and Niki are still in Berkeley.

Janet reporting:

Mauky Anderson writes that she enjoyed a visit from a young cousin from Sweden this summer and that she spent part of August with Joyce Wallis Brode.

Marden Armstrong Dahlstedt has just published her third book for children; is working on her fourth; toured England and Scotland this year — but the really big news is that her #1 grandson entered kindergarten.

Betty Baker Patterson's address is a bit confusing. She seems to have two of them, one on Connecticut and one in Florida. Pretty neat, Betty. When one house gets cluttered, you can go off to the other one.

Jean Burchinal Purvis has received the Jaycees'

Senior Service Award of Woman of the Year. It's no wonder with all the jobs she is handling. Nice going, Jean.

There's good news and bad news from Sunny Croft Armstrong. Her husband was not transferred as was expected and her daughter Alison was married. However, Sunny herself had to have spinal surgery and is now recuperating.

Ruth Demmler Benner reports the arrival of her second grandchild and that all is well with the Benners.

There is so much activity listed on Jane Chantler's postcard that when she says "no excitement" I believe it. She doesn't have time for any!

Anne Driver Toumey reports one through college and the rest working on it.

Traveling through Europe and Morocco has taken Dottie Lou Evans Kimball and her husband to many new places in the last year. They left New York just a few days before the terrible crash at Kennedy airport in which they lost many friends from New Orleans.

Betty Gahagen Lindsay still has grade schoolers to keep her young as well as a son in the U.S. Attorney's office. Her son Jim will soon be married.

Grace Mary Horton Haller wrote that she and Hank lost their mothers this summer and also to tell us that Barbara Maerker Baum had passed away.

If you are in Washington do call Margaret Hibbs Kellner who still loves living there.

Phyllis Keister Semple says "Finally, we are grandparents." Well, aren't twins worth waiting for? Congratulations, Phyllis.

Carol Bostwick McConnon reports seeing Mary Milne Hanson in Michigan this summer.

I saved you all 16¢ by seeing Nancy Scott Ralston at Van Buren this summer so that I didn't have to send her a postcard. She is feeling fine after having surgery in the spring and says "Hi."

The LaHues have become "ranchers" this year, and have increased their family. Their daughter Nan was married and their first grandchild was born. Mary Elizabeth also had surgery from which she has recovered and we send her our sympathy on the loss of her father.

Ethel Herrod Blackburn is still working for the Board of Education although her husband has retired. She is planning to move her ailing mother to Michigan and has not had too good a year since her stepfather died in March and her mother has been ill since January.

Things haven't changed much here at the Newtons. We still have three living at home and so we do much of the same things that we always have. Grandchild number one started school and grandchild number three was born so Bob and I had to buy a new dining room table with all the leaves we could get!

Alice reporting:

Alice McKain Porter is involved in community work — she thinks a "Girls' School" helped her. Since last newsletter, she and her husband are pleased to have become grandparents. They also had a wonderful trip to Greece to visit their son, who is teaching English in private schools.

Marjorie Norris Wherry is still writing music and her husband paints. He has a studio, where he also does framing, etc.

Ruth Notz Carland has two on their own and two still in college — Tim, a second-year law student at Pitt and Rob, a junior at Penn State. Their caboose is in eighth grade. Ruth almost missed getting in the newsletter because she was so busy getting apartments furnished for kids and canning.

Helen Shellkopf Cline had a great visit to the Bahamas this spring, but wonders where the summer went. She enjoyed a visit with her married daughter Karen who was in town for a week; but other than that, she golfed and "goofed" all summer. Son Tom is back for his senior year at Denison University. She sends greetings to all.

Mary Alice Spellmire Girts and her husband, Rob, recently moved into a "bungalow, big enough for two" complete with picket fence and eighteen rose bushes. She was pleased to receive a program of the Mt. Lebanon Area Chatham Alumnae Club. Her son Rob is an engineering physicist with Westinghouse. Her daughter Michelle is in Portland, Oregon, attending the Community College mornings and working at the Oregon Museum of Science and Industry afternoons.

Betty Steffler Baker's big news this year is the birth of their third grandchild.

Claire Stewart Burkhart reports that this is her twenty-first and probably last year teaching private kindergarten, as public kindergarten is now well established in Penn Hills. With one daughter in Nassau, another in Washington State, and one near home, but probably not for long, Claire is wondering where to go for the "golden years." Please, Claire, let's wait a few years before thinking in those terms!

Florence Succop Klotz has been in St. Louis a year and is still working on their house. Their two youngest girls are a high school freshman and a kindergartner. The seminary where John is Dean of Academic Affairs opened this fall with thirty percent more students, so they are looking forward to a good year in every way.

Dorothy Vale Roberts and I had a little visit last fall at a Parents' Weekend at Chatham, both of us having a daughter enrolled there. Dorothy finds that she is in her tenth year of teaching. She says that eventually she'll manage to get to a reunion.

Julie Wheldon Van Horn just wants to check in — they're still enjoying their travels, and Julie's having fun doing needlepoint.

Marjorie Wood Yearick had a marvelous vacation in Hawaii this summer and was about to leave for their annual trip to the Outer Banks in North Carolina. It will be their only trip in the trailer this year, as they are trying to cut down on fuel. Ralph built Marjorie a beautiful puppet theater for her work with children, and she is ecstatic over the two hand-carved, hand-painted antique puppets from Bali she found in Hawaii.

For me, Alice, there is nothing unusual to report. Our oldest son is in his second year of graduate study at Oxford, the middle two children have both taken time out from college, and the youngest is in ninth grade.

Ruth Firmin Jacobs (Mrs. Edwin H.), 2825 Silver Spur Lane, Orlando FL 32807

Cynthianne Say Calhoun (Mrs. Noel A.), 307 Escambia Drive, Winter Haven, FL 33880

Ruth reporting:

Jean Bacon Smith and her family went to Norway in June. They stayed in Oslo with Knut's cousin and visited friends and relatives throughout the country. Jean's children are in fifth and eighth grades and she keeps busy with a part-time job and co-leading a Junior Girl Scout troop. She reports that Aspen's climate is as heavenly as ever.

Norma Bailey McLean and Orison had the house to themselves this summer with daughter Nancy in New England, son Chip at Carnegie-Mellon and daughter Susan in California. Gladys Bistline Belz ditto. Their house is "quiet and peaceful" in the winter when the youngsters are in college and "jumping" at college vacation time.

Betty Bush Sinclair finished an M.A. in counseling after two years commuting up a mountain to the Appalachian University at Boone, NC. Had a wonderful time. Her fourth boy, Bob, is in college and only daughter, Margaret, age 15 is at home. Betty's husband gave up his medical practice to direct the hospital's emergency room and loves it.

Jeanne DeHaven Uhl and family are living happily in the small town of Morgantown, WV which is a quick trip to Pittsburgh and they visit here often. Jeanne just needs to finish her thesis to get her master's in nutrition. She loves living in the university town where husband John is V.P. for Rockwell. She's understandably proud of the fact that her five sons are Eagle Scouts. Jeanne urges nearby alumnae to get in touch.

Peggy Donaldson, director of admissions at Chatham for the past eighteen years, has been appointed Director of Community Services. As she will coordinate and plan new approaches to Chatham's programs of informal courses, the Chatham Program for post-college age women and Chatham Institute, a program of workshops/seminars open to the community. Peggy takes her new job November 1st and until then has a two months' sabbatical. She hopes to hear from many alumnae with ideas she can incorporate in the program. Congratulations, Peggy!

Evlyn Fulton continues happily as the Stewardship Consultant for the Synod of the Rocky Mountains. She travels through Montana, Wyoming, Colorado and northwestern Nebraska, and enjoys more every day. Dorcas Leibold, working for Travelers' Aid in Denver, and Evlyn have seen each other quite often.

Marty Harlan Kaufman married off her daughters in less than a year. Daughter Lynn became Mrs. Robert J. Van Raaphorst and lives in New England. More, MI. Betsy married Joseph Christof and lives in Pittsburgh. Marty continues to enjoy the beautiful mountains of Ligonier.

Gladys Heimert Aye's Pam married the assistant minister of the Sharon Lutheran Church and Ralph, is in his third year of Pitt medical school. Now he and his dad can talk shop. Gladys continues her volunteer work with time out for a trip to Puerto Rico with Tom.

Lu Ann Isham Staley writes "fly the banner. We'll have our fourth and last child in college this year." She's busy selling real estate and traveling and wonders if there are any Chatham alumnae in the Quint-City area of Long Grove, Iowa?

Portia Geyer McCoy spent another happy summer vacation at Stone Harbor, New Jersey with her family. She sees a lot of Tillie Wilcox Moncrief in her family, both at the shore and at home. Portia attended Tillie's daughter's wedding in Cleveland and would like Mickey McCullough Lohmeyer to know there was a lot of fond reminiscing while driving along Lake Erie's shores.

Betsy Kinney Johnson and John plan a visit to Japan soon and will catch their breath from weddings in five months. Daughter Debbie completed her five-year nursing course and will be a family breadwinner while husband Ira finishes seminary in Philadelphia. Daughter Cindy and her new husband will live in New Jersey. Paul is a Union junior. Betsy is working in the perceptual training program in her school district.

Patty Leonard Bodle and Bob are still playing tennis "with arthritic abandon" and completely involved in the art scene. Daughter Trish just graduated from college and is job hunting. Bob combines successfully ad agency copywriting by day and folk guitar playing by night. Barb Findley Cope and Jim visited the Bodles and savored North Carolina's assets and tennis facilities.

Ruth Lynch McFarland and Bob have recently enjoyed camping, beaching and traveling West. Fred starts an R.N. program in September and daughter begins her pre-med at Georgia Tech. Tom and wife are in Atlanta and Tom begins Emory School. John and his wife are in Washington, where John began his residency in Family Practice. Fred and his wife are in Connecticut where Fred is pastor at a Presbyterian church. Lois, John and wife had a great experience in Haiti, spending three months in a mission hospital there.

Ruth Laird Grant likes being a class correspondent, a very positive experience. I am serving on a hospital board, continue to work for retarded citizens and now have two young grandchildren available for cuddling at any hour.

Ann reporting:

Martha McCullough Lohmeyer reports on a very active family. Paul's work takes him to far places: Prague, Poland, Mexico, and Australia. Mickey expects to be able to join him on more of these trips soon. Sue is working on a large research project in public health care at Johns Hopkins. Jim is in Maine, where he works for a bank and his wife is in school. Barbara is at the Minneapolis College of Art and Design.

Lillian Shesby Bauer has rejoined the works as lab technician for the Chemistry Dept. at Lehigh Community College, and says chemical concepts have changed almost as much as the kids since 1944. Her boys (Rob 28, Keith 24) are working in Pittsburgh and still footloose. Lil's afraid he'll be too old to rock any grandchildren. Bob is still traveling the European circuit for Koppers. They had a fine trip to Brazil together; Lil's first time back since she lived there from '62 to '66, and it was a real eye-opener. She loves Rio, but says her favorite spot is still Deer Isle, ME where they vacation. She writes anyone who finds herself on the North Side to pop up in her office, 3rd floor, West Hall, Ridge Avenue.

Helen Smith sends a Bicentennial Thought. When I began my career in advertising, sample sanitary pads were not bound into 'Seventeen.' I don't recall billboards proclaiming 'Jock Itch?'. Nor do I remember, nestled between cornfields along the highways, barns advertising X-rated films, books, records, and novelties. In those days, nothing more useful than Mail Pouch Tobacco plied the 4-H trade. Then, on my first trip abroad, I didn't make room for a can of feminine spray and a back-up kit of wet-wipe dainties. I felt advanced when I learned to straddle a bidet. All that was a long time ago, of course. In those days, we didn't even compare arm-arms. I remember when I discovered tampons, I felt you should take their place beside the telephone and the pressure cooker as great gifts to personkind. And maybe today's young people feel the same way about beltless pads and sprays. They certainly must be thankful for the pill; God knows we would have been, too. But now — I'm beltless anyhow; jock itch never seemed a crucial problem, and I don't have much to spray for these days except aphids. All in all, it's probably just as well that most of my advertising business is industrial. Still, I can't help wondering what intimate conveniences are left for recovery over the next 35 years."

Secretary reporting on aggressive family bent on erecting all that was reprehensible in the Old Regime. Ann L. pursues her studies at Fuller Theological Seminary, works as an Intern in Mission at a large church in Bel Air, and is an aide to the chaplain at UCLA hospital. Christine is living in Wichita. Jim worked as assistant administrator in a hospital here a year and learned a secret: hospitals are ruled by nurses. He is now enrolled in a school of Robber Baronage, otherwise known as Wharton, aiming for a post-graduate degree simultaneously. Laura is in Indiana, PA, majoring in household chicanery and how to make silk purses out of sows' ears. Julie is deeply involved in a part-time market research job, and in journalism. Actually, her ambition is to be president. She is working on a term paper about affluence. I suggested a lead-line from a Roman excavation that translates, "Marcus is drunk," but the affluence will probably end up in the trash along with Marcus. Stoned. Nick is climbing rocks for sport, and the walls at work. I am the revolving-door and boss chairperson, while trying to write betimes. And I do now have a gold Volvo sedan inadvertently parked sideways on the front porch, blocking the door. Anyone with similar interests may correspond.

Helen Croak Johnson

Lucy reporting:

Deepest sympathy to Marjory Couch Lynn who lost her husband Robert this past January.

As you can see by the new address, Janie Field Taylor is back in the States after four years abroad. She is in the process of resettling but says it is so good to be home.

Priscilla Hendryx Salter is still Western Public Relations Manager for Westinghouse, which constitutes some kind of record for a temporary job — 19 years. She and husband Jack had a great two weeks on a Caribbean cruise this spring.

Harriet Hoffman reports that blood pressure is now normal and she is pounds lighter (good for her). She still has to avoid tension which is pretty hard when you teach sixth grade.

Helen Hunter White came to Florida again for her annual vacation. Her three girls visited off and on this summer.

Betty Beglinger Beringer is Mrs. Edward Beringer, married April 1974. He is with the City of Pittsburgh. This news came late last year so I am late with congratulations. Betty is Food Service Director for the First Presbyterian Church.

Margaret McKee Barnes reports that daughter Becky is in graduate school of Architecture at U. of Oregon; Judy is working in Colorado; Nancy is a graphic artist in Boston and Kay will be graduating from college in 1976. Patricia Cochran Brown's son is in medical school at Hershey and her daughter is at Purdue studying wildlife science. Helen Gilmore Reinhard reports that son Donald is in college and that daughter Patty graduated cum laude from Lycoming College in 1974 and was married this year.

Doris Fairfield Jamison is planning to go to the Yucatan in November with her husband. All children are now in college.

Lois Jackson Ritenbaugh was down this way and visited Disney World and also went on a Caribbean cruise.

Peggy Korb Smith's daughter Mindy graduated cum laude from Ohio University. Our sympathy to her on the loss of her mother this year. Arlene Levinson Rosenberg's son is in medical school and her daughter is studying music at the Conservatory of Vienna, Austria.

Susan Campbell McConnell is very active in church work as she has two ministers in the family and one studying to be one. Not only did she go to England but also to Russia and Hungary the year before. She went to her husband's high school reunion and had her own with Carol Thorne King and Jean Thompson Johnson. Jane McPherson Graber, Joan Davies Bream and Miriam Egger Hosack have no news but all sent their best wishes to all.

Lucy Sprigg Dorsey is trading water trying to keep up with her State Registrar's job for DAR. It is almost as much work as banking. Do wish that you classmates who come to Florida to go to Disney World would give me a call. I would love to see or at least talk to you.

Doris reporting:

Penny Myers Smith was on sabbatical, went to Europe twice, to Canada, then to Florida to sell her mother's house and bring her up to live with her. Penny then visited her daughter in Los Angeles where her son-in-law is beginning his internship. Last child is off to Pratt while the middle boy finished grad school in August.

Sue Norton Boord does freelance bookkeeping and works as a tax consultant for H&R Block during the tax season. Both girls are at University of Delaware. Their adopted son and family are moving to Oregon.

Flo Ostien Chew had a wonderful week's vacation at Ocean City. Flo has done some relief nursing at Comsat Lab. Her daughter Nancy attends St. Mary's College, both boys are in high school and the younger girl is in the sixth grade.

Sally Parker Herrup writes, "Paul, the seaman, is hoping for another overseas trip this fall. Everytime he leaves a country, a coup happens. My son, the CIA agent? David has been working in a physics lab at the University of Chicago — hasn't blown up the place. Is that success or failure? Mark is a senior in high school which means catalogues and applications again. We'll live thru it."

Ruth Perry Parker's Becky and Ed had a boy, Daniel Charles, in August. Ruth travels with Charley quite a bit.

Jean Purves Bowman had no special news. She asked, "How can such young women as we be celebrating our 30th reunion?" Peggy Riffle Kirby wrote, "Nothing new this year, but my best to one and all."

Doris Rowand Schroth is still busy as Coordinator of International students with a monthly dinner meeting for about 150. Chuck is active in Medical Assistance Programs.

Grace Savage Freeble and Chuck flew to Jamaica for a few days in July and are planning a cruise in November. Daughter Beth was married last December.

Emily Sawders Laisy is anxious to get settled in her new house so that she can "hurry back to an interesting job."

Helen Shriner Irvin is the case worker in the Partial Hospitalization Program at the Westmoreland Community Mental Health Center. John III is a senior at Lehigh, daughter Jayne just enrolled at Edinboro, Judy is a senior in high school and James is in the ninth grade.

Ginny Sommerfeld Hackman is a sales rep for a travel agency and husband Bob still sells heavy forgings and metal products. Cindy graduated from Ohio State three years ago. Robert is at University of Kentucky while the youngest is at Penn State.

Betty Sossong Gretzler and Walt like their "new 100-year-old" home which was remodeled in 1970.

Ronnie Staples Jorgensen is office manager for Medical Transcribers, active in Church and takes organ lessons. Daughter Suzi, after two years as a Marine, is working as a civilian for the Corps in Parris Island. Daughter Gail was married to an Army man last year.

Ruth Teplitz Goodman and Len were in Mexico recently. Ruth is taking an advanced studio course in jewelry at Towson State and had a piece of jewelry in competition at Baltimore Museum of Art.

Carol Thorne King's family spent two weeks in their Aspen condominium this summer and plan on spending Christmas there. Carol has three in college and Andy in tenth grade.

Joan Titus Dunlop has had more of her pictures published. She and Dick took a trip to Austria recently. Son Jim is at Kent in Canterbury. The youngest is at University of Wisconsin, Rick is playing music in Canada.

Ginny Uber Haug and Pete spent three weeks on the West Coast this summer. Their third daughter was married in May and the second daughter presented them with their sixth grandchild. Pete still teaches music in the Cedar Rapids schools.

Mary Wells Karlson is back as school nurse, taking graduate courses and writing term papers. Mary wrote, "Will it never end?" Mary's husband had some serious surgery this spring. Hope all is well now, Mary.

Jean White Markell volunteers four days a week at a V.A. Hospital in the psychology department helping with intensive group therapy. Son Leigh is moving to Burlington, Vermont for a new job with G.E. Jean just sent the sad news that she and George lost their son Tom November 1, 1973, after an illness of several months. Our thoughts are with you, Jean.

Marty Yorkin Berman's husband had open heart surgery this summer in Cleveland. Very glad to report that he is "home on the mend." Marty saw Carolyn Cosel Lampl while in Cleveland. Diane is still Asst. DA and Linda is still in med school.

Linnea Lundstedt Evans's son Kurt transferred to Pitt Dental School. Daughter Jenel is working on her master's in Early Childhood Development. Rich has completed the exams portion of CPA. Linnea and George have a three-year-old grandson.

Evie Matthews Reece's son Dale was married in May and will receive his master's in Computer Science from Union College in Schenectady, NY where he is an Administrator Officer in the Computer Center.

This secretary, Doris Sisler White, leaves tomorrow with Jim for a ten-day vacation down south. Daughter Diana and I flew to San Diego on her vacation in July. I noticed a "Robert Korb Smith" in son Jim's tennis shoes. It must be Peg Korb Smith's son. Small world!

See you all at Reunion.

Coil reporting:

Mary Aiken Brown and two friends are opening a shop called "Bookworks" in the Fox Chapel Plaza. They will sell books, cards and small antique-type gifts. She has also been taking flying lessons — a dream come true. Betty Albach Weamer has been busy helping raise money for the U. S. Equestrian Team and the Yellow Springs Foundation. In June they celebrated one daughter's graduation and another daughter's engagement and vacationed in Canada and New England. Gini Barkley Robertson and Doug took notice of 25 years of togetherness by going to Bermuda. Gini got to Pittsburgh in June for an organist's convention at Carnegie-Mellon and enjoyed a brief look at all the many changes on Chatham's campus.

Elinor Barrett Lavelle just returned from two weeks in Hawaii in time to send in her card. "Lin's" daughter enters college this fall and her two sons are eleven and fifteen. Audrey Bigelow Baur loves living in Valley Forge in a Pennsylvania farmhouse and extends an invitation to her classmates to stop in for a visit if they are nearby during the Bicentennial events. Their son Fred is a disc jockey ("Just Plain Fred") in Rockford, Illinois. They have a son, Kurt in architecture at Kent State and John is in fifth grade. Dorothy Berg Reed is alive and well in the mountains of Ligonier. Cindee, her oldest, is married, Rod is graduating from Jefferson Medical School next year and her youngest Ann is working for Amtrak in Chicago. She saw Eleanor Robinson Hastings and Nin Schenk Younkin recently.

Busy as ever is Marianne Boggs Campbell who is learning a new field, development for hospital fund raising, strictly grantsmanship and estate planning. She and Bill have their 25th wedding anniversary in October but will celebrate it in February by going to Florida for sun and rest. Another busy gal is Marge Caldwell Berlin who passed the New York State insurance brokers exam a few years ago and has been busy in real estate ever since. She says "It's a far cry from a B.S. degree in chemistry, but that's life!" Marie Cohn Chiles describes herself as a "compulsive volunteer" and lists Holly Hall, Home for the Retired, Bayou Bend Museum where she is a docent and a children's clinic for neurological disorders among them.

This has been a "quieter" year for Hilda Fish Bricker. They survived two graduations in one weekend — one in Pittsburgh and one in New York, then went on a Caribbean cruise. Your "quiet" year sounds exciting to me. Jean Forncrook Armstrong and family have had a sad year as Clyde's father and Jean's aunt both died after lengthy illnesses. They managed a brief vacation in Canada this summer — not long enough. Their daughter Cathy is a second-year law student and Missy works for a law firm in New York. Nineteen year old Chris is still "finding himself."

I know Amy Gage Skallerup finally got back to Pittsburgh because her daughter Susan is attending Duquesne (School of Music) this fall. Son Tom is in his third year at University of Maryland School of Architecture. Amy, Harry and Janet vacationed at Nag's Head and it seemed strange to be a family of only three. Two boys in high school and a china painting business keep Honey Holland Rank from stagnating. She and Dale were honored to find that Roger Staubach had included their names in his autobiography. Mary Ann Houck Brown finds a lot of her time is still spent in the car. Barb, fourteen, is on the high school drill team and drama group and Matt, nine, is in Little League. Sue, seventeen, is a high school senior.

A mini-reunion occurred in Roanoke in May when Mary Jane Humbert Upshaw and Carol Benel Newton were both there to collect college students. Carol's son was graduating from Roanoke College and Mary Jane's Jill had finished her first year at Hollins. Mary Jane's older son is twenty-three, at the University of Virginia and engaged. Chip is in sixth grade and still very involved with swimming.

It's no wonder we haven't heard from Betty Johnston Scheide for awhile as her life seems quite full. Betty is a clinical and school psychologist for Allegheny County Schools. She has her doctorate and lives in Squirrel Hill with her two sons, Chip, fourteen, and Rob, almost ten. She is divorced and has learned the intricacies of plumbing, electrical wiring, etc., although Chip is starting to take a hand in those departments now. This year the Pennsylvania Psychological Association has made her their president. Jerry Kimball Wells is planning to "retire" next year and smell the roses. Son Bob is putting himself through law school and Linda is at Purdue where her husband is on a doctoral fellowship. Mike is a junior and Rick a senior this year. Life has calmed down a bit for Janet Kirkup Marville now that the wedding of their oldest daughter is over. She married a medical student at Duke and they are living in North Carolina. They have another daughter in her second year at Lynchburg, Virginia leaving Janet and Bob enjoying a second honeymoon — and visits from the girls, of course. Janet keeps occupied with Board of Deacons at church, Garden Club beautification project, a study class, a silver jewelry class and is hoping to be free to travel a bit this year with Bob.

Speaking of traveling, Mary Alma Lapsley has gone in both directions. She included San Francisco in some of her business traveling for United Airlines. For pleasure she went to Amsterdam and took a Rhine River cruise. She loves living in Chicago. Striking out on her own is Shirley Lawrence Grasso who has been transferred by Metropolitan Life to their new service center in Johnstown. Her son Bill, eighteen, and daughter Andrea, fourteen, and dog will be making the move with her. Bill plans to attend the University of Pittsburgh at Johnstown and Shirley and Andrea expect to get active in scouting again.

It was good to hear from Wandalea Johnson Smith, Jean Hadfield Smith, Charlotte Exley Eck, Dottie Doolittle Collins, Sally Geary Hansen and Suz Harton Conklin though they all swore their lives were busy but routine. Suz has a son at Westminster and a daughter starting at Penn State. I'm afraid news from the Geddis household is quite typical: girls in various stages of schooling. After sixteen months in Germany, Chris returned to University of Virginia where she will graduate in January. Gail is spending her junior year at the University of Exeter in England. Sue is a senior looking around at colleges and Amy is in fifth grade. Thanks to all of you sending back your cards so promptly — it is great to be on the receiving end.

Suzy reporting:

Dr. Phyllis C. Martin retired from teaching in 1973. Now she has a whole new life volunteering at Children's Hospital, Carnegie Museum, Scenic Art Center, and Presbyterian-University Hospital for a week. Her husband still works at the VA. The late Ralph, an executive officer on the USS Dewey, received the Legion of Merit Medal for three years of work in SALT. Patty was married in February and will teach in Jamestown, PA this year. Rich is married and with National Cash Register in Wilkes-Barre.

Bobby Mueller Baylor quit her teaching job at Duquesne. At the moment she has still been unsuccessful in locating a lab position. Her son graduated from Clarion State in May and became a band director at a high school in Lewistown. Daughter Wendy went back to Indiana State as a sophomore. Robin graduates from high school in June.

Both Joy Wilson Douglas and Natalie Weller had a very happy year. Following a year in England and Scotland with her husband Bruce, Nat has kept busy with church committees and clubs. Nat is completely contented in her country home taking care of her husband Gray and sons Clyde, Gray Jr., and Ted. Both daughters, Julie and Julie, are married but come home frequently with husbands for Sunday dinner. Nat loves to bake, can, freeze, preserve for her large family and wishes life could go on like this forever.

Wilma Moore Stoebe and her husband have a real estate business in Fox Chapel which keeps her quite busy. They bought a fishing boat which they plan to use on the Eastern shore. Betty L. Franks, too, is going to sell real estate this fall. Her school begins. Her oldest son is a plebe at the Naval Academy and made the drum and bugle corps. Number two son is in a group which won the state parks competition and is making a record for the state. Nine-year-old Peter keeps busy, too.

Betsy Ross Kuhn's son David got home from the Navy this summer after two years in the service. He has another year and a half on an aircraft carrier then college. When much traveled husband L. B. has his annual August vacation, the family likes to go together at the beach. Betsy is looking forward to the convention at Myrtle Beach she and Les are attending in October.

Our sincerest sympathy once again to E. Robinson Hastings. Her husband Jack suffered a fatal heart attack November 25, 1974. She has a fourteen-year-old son Jim continue to live at the same address in Canton. Her daughter Frederica is a medical social worker. Married son Ed, attending University of Wyoming, made Robby a grandchild. She says "I'm hardly old enough for that." On the East to check out a camp for Jim, she saw Ullom Doig, Dottie Berg Reed, and Nin Schenk Younkin. (Dottie was visiting Nin in Somers.) Robby still edits two visitor magazines.

Randy Ullom Doig enjoyed visits with friends and classmates. In addition to seeing Robby, she had lunch at Jessie Gilbert Chew's house with C. Lopez.

Doni Vail Rea's daughter Joanne was married in July. She and Louise Diehl Steel '49 play golf together occasionally.

Helen Suckling Becker and Henrietta Garrett plus families saw each other at Deer Valley YMCA camp where they were both vacationing. Henrietta also helped chaperone the Shaler Band when they went to Disney World last year. Jane Naylor, another Chatham alumna, was attending nurse and her roommate. Son David is a senior this year and college hunting. Ginny is a school sophomore and spent three weeks in New York this summer, under sponsorship of the Presbyterian Church, repairing and rebuilding a church.

Carol Lenz Houck's daughter Melissa has entered the Chatham class of '79. Son Don received his master's degree this summer. Married daughter Cynthia went along on the annual family car trip because her Marine helicopter pilot husband was on a six-month Mediterranean cruise. "George had a marvelous time at Bob and Wanda's 25th anniversary party in Williamsburg last April.

Back to school in the fall, as faculty rather than students are Gig Petrovich Longstreth, Ruth Shaffer K., and Grace Migliore Frances. Gig has taught English in a suburban high school since 1965. Her boys are sophomores at Haverford and Margie is a high school senior. Now she has more time for her union activities. She had a particularly interesting experience as a delegate to the NEA convention. She extends the hospitality of the "Athens of the Upper Midwest" to all Chathamites passing through Madison. Ruth Shaffer Mook has remarried. She is also the very proud grandmother of two little girls.

Her son Patrick, a Duquesne University law student, has a new daughter Katie. Daughter Ellen's girl, Ruthie, is now four. Grace Migliore Frances is still a school social worker. Her eldest daughter will be a sophomore at Penn State, the youngest a junior in high school. She didn't move her post office did — from Somerville to Bridgeport, NJ.

The Boston area has completely charmed Ginger Carlson. Her new address next to the ocean has the background music of seagull cries and breakwaves. She says it's like a perpetual vacation. Attending the Bryn Mawr Paramedical school is a rich and rewarding new experience for Ginger.

B.J. Stewart Manning's husband Jim has been transferred from Pittsburgh to Washington, PA this summer. Her daughter is married and her son attends Virginia University.

More travelers to Williamsburg during April were Nie MacMillen Morris and husband George accompanied by her sister Joan Newcomb '50 and her band. Then in July they spent two weeks at her father's farm in Ohio. Her son Richard begins his second year teaching in Saratoga Springs. Jeff has his master's degree and works for the Connecticut State Department of Environmental Protection as a marine biologist. Ron starts his junior year at Castleton State in Vermont. Nornie sends greetings to all.

Helen Obermayer Sellers and Al had their first reunion vacation in Scottsdale, Arizona. They enjoyed it so much they want to make it a habit. She also had a relaxing summer vacation in Longport, NJ. (Rate! We couldn't go anywhere this summer because Tom had jury duty.) Hao's son Joe, a Brown University graduate, works for PACE (People Acting through Community Effort) in Providence. David, a sophomore at Dickinson, writes a weekly column for the college newspaper and has a regular radio show on the college station.

Geary Hansen and Will have been very busy with their music business this summer. Colleges have helped them with orders. Activities still include their orchestra, music club, University of Cincinnati Summer Band, and a recorder group. Will can again play his violin after breaking his index finger two years ago. Occasionally she sees Nancy McHall '45 and her husband at church.

Nancy McDonald Sutherland has one college graduate. Holly is a nurse in Pediatric Intensive Care at Vanderbilt Hospital. Bill was president of the Engineering School at Duke and has one more semester. Heather will be a senior at Duke and Laurel a sophomore at Vanderbilt. Ashley and Mac are at Mt. Vernon High. Heather is in fifth grade. "Good ole Mac" has a roaring tennis elbow from trying to play tennis with the younger generation. She has also been dabbling in oils and has sold a couple of pictures.

After teaching medical students for a year, Nie Zucker Bachman is thrilled to finally receive a formal appointment as assistant clinical instructor of Pediatrics at the University of Pittsburgh School of Medicine. Her husband Jim had major surgery last winter but had recovered sufficiently for her to go on a Caribbean cruise in March. Her daughter Ann is doing her practice teaching at Falkner School and will graduate from Penn State in December. David, her son, still enjoys being an auto mechanic.

As the news cards were mailed Mary Ruth Snyder was just about to leave for two weeks at their condominium at Plantation Hole on Kauai, Hawaii. She, her husband Mark, and two other couples were planning to golf at all the island courses and go snorkeling.

Ken and Phyl Dornberger Taylor have lived in the country beyond a small English village for many years. They used to have a large antique business, but due to Ken's ill health, they have a small shop now. They've become proper old "cabbages" on their acre of land, planting trees, shrubs, and bulbs, and growing their own vegetables and potatoes. Over the years Phyl has done many paintings and has written five books. Unfortunately none was published, but she suspects she'll still write number six. She says we'd all still recognize her in the same old blue jeans she wore for stage crew at PCW. She thinks of former classmates often and wonders how and where they are. She hopes life has smiled as kindly on everyone else as it has on her. Phyl sends her love to all and is looking forward to the Recorder news.

Marge Reckard and Janie Picard Pursell had no special news but wanted to say hello to all. Sometimes no news can be good news.

Tom and I have persuaded his oldest sister Elizabeth, who is a retired teacher, to come make her home with us. Now we are a family of four again — Tom, Marcie, Elizabeth and me. Our number two daughter Debbie got herself an apartment in Evans City and is learning to "make it" on her own. Perhaps this will give her the courage to seek an elementary position away from the Butler area which is swamped with applications. Auf Wiedersehen. I do wish all a good year.

MARRIAGES

Barbara Berkman to William Lesser, March, 1975

NEW ADDRESSES

Nancy Hughes Evans (Mrs. John H., Jr.), 21934 Lake Road, Rocky River, OH 44116

Barbara Miller Gregg (Mrs. Curtis H.), 291 Wardman Road, Kenmore, NY 14217

Jinx Neal McCreary (Mrs. Robert D.), 6143-73rd Way, Scottsdale, AZ 85203

Marylou Tedesco Naser (Mrs. Charles E., Jr.), 109 Firwood Drive, Pittsburgh, PA 15239

Janet Watson Lloyd (Mrs. Carl E.), Suite 423, 1100 Superior Avenue NE, Cleveland, OH 44114

Do Baney Conley enjoyed our reunion thoroughly but regretted that there were so few there. Maybe we can do better at our 30th?

Betty "Bibs" Bassett McMahon said that her news this year was to have been joyous — daughter Barbara was married on June 7, to a fine young man, Thomas Deschere. Betsy made the bridesmaid's dresses and all five sisters attended the bride. Then on August 27 Barbara, age 24, died of Hodgkin's disease. She'd had it for 10 years and lived a remarkably full and enthusiastic life, never once giving in to it or ever permitting sympathy. She leaves a big aching hole in their family — and many good memories. Our hearts go out to you in sympathy, Bibs.

Barbara Berkman Lesser reports her marriage last March and says she is sorry to have missed the reunion but things were rather busy at her house. Barb is Director of Student Activities at the Riverdale Country School in NY. She works with 5-12 grade students. Goes to work on the school bus every morning at 7:30! Son Steven is now a junior at Oberlin.

Nancy Beamer Stewart enjoyed seeing all at the reunion. She has changed schools this year and getting accustomed to a new set of bells, etc. Daughter Lucy (nine) had an accident breaking off both permanent front incisors. Quite a serious thing.

Barbara Black Bloomstrom reports that they have enjoyed gardening, golf, and friends this hot summer. Two children graduate this coming year: Johnny with an MBA from Ohio State and Karen from Wittenberg University. Beth, a junior in high school, will be college hunting next year!

Lee Corey Hanson send her regrets at not being able to attend the reunion but reports that she ran into Esther Peters Bleikamp at a luncheon and that Esther told her a bit about the reunion activities and those attending. House, garden and a variety of community activities keep the day filled to overflowing. Just when do those "relaxed, lazy days of retirement in the country catch up with one?" asks Lee.

Janet Crowe Gustafson reports that she and Gus are getting used to rattling around in an empty house and being alone for the first time in 23 years! Margaret is at Slippery Rock, Ann is back at Penn State after a spring term in Spain, and Carl is a 2nd Lt. in flight school at Craig Air Force Base in Alabama.

Nancy Hughes Evans reports that the good Lord did not intend for women of our stage of "maturity" to move because she finds that she is very good at finding a place for everything but terrible at remembering where these places are! Son Bob begins his freshman year at Ohio State this year. Linda is a junior in high school.

Dottie MacPhee Hunter was sorry to have missed the reunion but Miami is a "fur piece" from Pittsburgh. Cathy is in eleventh grade and Beth in eighth. Both girls are good students. Cathy is thinking of going into pharmacy — considering Auburn or North Carolina. Burke is working hard — all the stuff you hear about M.D.'s trouble with malpractice goes double in Florida.

Marilyn Lopez Dalton after 25 years has finally remembered to answer my annual letter before the deadline! Wish more of you would do just that! The Daltons now have three of their children in college, Lynn (21) at Duke, Becky (20) at Purdue, and Alan (18) at Miami of Ohio. Stephanie and Leslie are in eleventh and eighth grade. Marilyn has remained a full-time mother over all these years devoting more time each winter to her volunteer activities.

Barbara Miller Gregg said that she and Curt really enjoyed the reunion and plan to be at every one in the future. She's still busy with church affairs, Y.W.C.A., the feminist cause, and some political campaigning. Son Tony is enjoying ninth grade.

Jinx Neal McCreary reports that her daughter transferred from Chatham to A.S.U. as she had decided to major in Food Management which was unavailable at Chatham. She misses the school, Pittsburgh, and her friends. Jinx had planned on coming to the reunion but didn't get any info until she had already made other plans. She's taking "just one class at A.S.U.," a class in perspective drawing, the last class she is going to take! She is now associated with a decorating studio and anxious to find more time to work there!

Carol Norton Diffenderfer called me and we had a really marvelous gab-fest on the phone. She is recovering from some surgery done over the Labor Day weekend. She is still teaching English after eleven years and going to school — taking a few courses and holding a 4.0 average! Oldest son, Randy, after some time in business has decided to go back to Johns Hopkins University to work on his doctorate in chemistry. Daughter Wendy is a senior at Ithaca College in New York majoring in Audiology and Speech Pathology and Jan, the youngest is taking a pre-engineering course at the local community college.

Maryhelen Porter Heim wrote me a note in the spring — some people do keep my notes and pop up an answer from their "messy desks." Their son Allan is a senior in the College of Pharmacy at the University of Wyoming. Daughter Cynthia is a freshman in the College of Agriculture (Animal Science) at the University of Tennessee and daughter Martha is a high school sophomore. Husband Bill left Ohio State two years ago after seventeen exciting and rewarding years there. He started his own firm for charitable giving and educational fund raising. So far things have been very successful. Maryhelen has advanced from part-time phone answerer to full-time researcher.

Chardy Riccardi Zeiller sent me quite a lengthy missive. She is still employed by National Airlines — since July 1953, incredible! As much as she enjoys her job she says it is not her whole life. She has an exec husband, two children, a house and housekeeper, plus outside interests and she really doesn't need or want any BIG CAREER. Her husband is Manager-Curator of the Miami Seaquarium. Warren, better known as Mickey, has appeared on T.V. and radio in conjunction with his work. Her children, (Dorcas Leach and Todd Kierstedt, are now 13½ and 14½). They are really involved in many things at their school and have always enjoyed traveling with their parents.

Louise Richards Lane reports that the highlight of their summer was a 50th anniversary party for her parents where the entire family plus many other relatives were present. Rich is in his second year at the Air Force Academy; Maryl is now a Chatham freshman. Louise is still teaching kindergarten in Mt. Lebanon.

Jane Steele Edmundson reports that they now have a third driver in the family and she holds her breath when he goes out the driveway! They had an exciting week in Las Vegas and broke even — thank goodness!

Phoebe Thorne Birmingham went to school this past summer for several courses and cleaned house! The Cleveland flood waters came up in their basement six times! Phoebe is teaching first grade and says that school is a too busy routine! She prefers the job of taking care of family and house — guess she was born in the wrong era.

Jessie Tomlin McCurdy reported that September saw them sending daughter Brigitte off to Chatham where she lives on third floor Fickes, just as Jessie did twenty-nine years ago! In November their oldest daughter will be married in Chapel Hill, NC where she has been for her graduate studies in ecology. Rene and Jessie each have a religion class once a week during the school year which is both a challenge and a pleasure.

Jeanne Wilkofsky Bloomstein and her daughter Marcia went to Canada this summer while Marc was at camp. As soon as she arrived home the master's degree she had waited for for so long was in the mail. She's finally finished! She says she can't believe it. Congratulations, Jeanne.

Now, our news. As I told you all David has been told that there is "no signs of the disease." After two operations, plus thirty-one cobalt treatments the cancer seems to be gone. Ivan was released from the Navy and is presently trying to get a job. I, after much searching, was able to find a full time job working as a Nutrition Aide for the Beaver County Agriculture Extension Service. The job is a combination of Home Ec, teaching and social work and should prove to be very interesting. Stephanie is now in high school and getting along very well. What with treatments and job difficulties we spent the summer going out to our camp site every week-end and foregoing a regular vacation. Things are beginning to look up somewhat for the Cowles family. Let's pray they continue to go as well. Thanks to all who contributed to our Special Fund and thanks to all of you who answered so promptly this year.

Judie reporting:

It was so very nice hearing from Betty Cornell Hirsch by return mail. She reports that Joe, after seventeen years with Ryan Homes, has started his own building business in Olean, NY, but the Hirschs are still in Buffalo. Daughter Mary Beth was home from college for the summer. Betty is working part-time as a medical examiner for a paramedic insurance examining firm.

The Linowes family has had another good, but all too quick, year. I am fast becoming the shortest one in the family. Jeff is a junior at Syracuse and president of his fraternity. Ronni is a senior in high school and frantically looking at colleges. Gary is a sophomore in high school and plays the baritone horn in the marching band. Steve, twelve, is in junior high and the only one who is shorter than his mom! Harry and I went up to the Boston-Marblehead area this summer, then to California for ten days where Harry will become chairman of his C.P.A. group. I am now chairwoman of the Women's Division of United Jewish Appeal, a very time consuming but very rewarding job. I spoke to Pat Hopkins Shoyinka who is spending a year here in the States along with her two little girls (her son is in Nigeria but will come for a visit). She's temporarily living with her mother. Anne Braden Hansen sent her card back asking to be remembered to everyone. At this point, the Linowes family sends their best to all in this our bicentennial year. Come visit Washington, DC.

Barbara A. reporting:

Doris Fritschi reports a relaxing summer by way of a trip on the auto-train to Florida. Of course, she stopped at Disney World. A second trip took her to the area around the Skyline Drive to explore some old plantations before returning to her teaching career.

It was nice to hear from Mary Beth Hoon Pritchard. Her time is spent busily attending to her antique and gift shop, Cricket, which is four years old now. She was in an automobile accident a year ago that left her with a severe leg injury. Fortunately, she reports getting along well now with just a slight limp left and hopes to get back to some part-time teaching this fall.

Nancy Garlow Hoop is still 'blocking out' the fact that 'we girls' have been out of school for twenty-three years. Sad, but true Nancy. Her most significant event this year was receiving her master's degree and she says the family hopes a doctorate is not in the future plans.

At long last Pat Hopkins Shoyinka has been heard from. My cards had not been reaching her so she wrote to the Alumnae Office to say that she will be spending from September '75 until July '76 in the U. S. on study leave from the University of Ibadan, Nigeria. She is at Columbia University from September until May (see above address). For three months after that she will travel to certain cities in the U. S. and Canada on a research project. If any alumna residing in these cities has room in her home for Pat to stay for a short time, she would be most grateful. They are Columbus, Atlanta, Oklahoma City, Chicago, Olympia, Syracuse, Amherst and London, Windsor and Toronto, Ontario. I know Pat would enjoy hearing from or seeing any of you in the New York area while she is there, too.

The Armstrongs had a nice trip to Cape Code this summer and, at this writing, are settling all the children into school once again. We secretaries are 'thinking reunion' for 1977 and would like to remind you all of the class gift fund. Any donations would be appreciated over the next two years sent either to your secretary or directly to the Alumnae Office. We also hope many of you will plan to come to the reunion. Remember, it's our big one!

Elsa reporting:

Martha McLaughlin Ellers had a great trip last summer to Grand Teton National Park and a lowstone. Andy enters high school this fall. Elizabeth will be a junior. Husband Dick and Nauman Kramer and hubby Jack frequently trips through southern Ohio for the newspaper. Kramers' daughter Suzie entered Chatham this year. With both children away at school, Barbara Foresti is finding time to become involved in community affairs. Through an active citizens' union Barb is discovering how her local and state governments operate and is trying to do something about the apathy of the people. She saw Barbara Harris '50, Diane Barratt Swift '53, Ellen '50 and Helen Halpern Berkson '53 at the Chatham picnic in Washington, DC.

Marilyn Morgan Henderson is presently in Germany where her husband Jack is Commandant of the 4th Transportation Brigade. Their son graduated from Kenyon in May and is now a graduate work at Wayne State University. Let's hope in the August Mademoiselle college issue (with the Chatham girls — the gal without the flying name. The Hendersons hope to be in St. Louis by February.

Ann Hafer Berry found a minute to phone Conneaut Lake, PA and sends her hello to all and Chuck were going to California for a break this fall. Their son Scott is married and a student at Austin College. Young Chuck is in Pittsburgh and studying at Pitt. Their youngest boy is in high school.

I had a delightful chat with Marcia M. Stewart. Marcia has started two courses at Chatham this semester and is auditing a third, the last being an interesting study of the History of the State of Women. The Stewart children are attending Shadyside and Alderidge this year.

It seems we are all parents of college students. Janet Houston Rhein's daughter Sue is a junior at Denison with Nancy going to college next year. Janet wanted to be remembered to everyone with Joanne Kimmins Winslow, Lois Rothrock and Nancy Kelly Hilland. Nancy's son is married and is hard to believe we are coming mothers-in-law already.

There is no real news to report from the Cowles household. I thank you all once more for your response — verbal, written and material. I admit I'm beginning to really like this job.

Virginia reporting:

Betty Taylor Glidden reports the marriage of her oldest daughter Jane in August. Susan graduated from Southern Seminary Jr. College and is now a senior at Madison College in Virginia. The youngest, Patricia, is a junior in high school. Vacation time for the family is spent at their house in Orleans, CA.

The note from Fifi Rougraff emphasizes continuing efforts in physical therapy with capped children at the D. T. Watson Home in Dallas, PA. She took a trip through the mountains of Colorado and Wyoming. She hasn't seen any of her classmates lately but does see Janet Mitchell '50 at the Bird in Hand Gallery of which she is part owner.

Pat Nauman Kramer's daughter Susie is now a senior at Chatham this year and loves it. Pat is at all the changes in the campus and curriculum the twenty-seven years since she enrolled.

The Sweets are rolling along as usual. Dan is working and attending SMU. Dan is at TCU and the boys are planning to go into the insurance business with Phil. Becky won the Ladies Club Championship at the Country Club this summer, and, significant time, she also had made the varsity boys' golf team at high school. She is a senior and hopes to attend SMU. Leslie is in kindergarten and is still the youngest of all our lives.

Barbara reporting:

Marilyn Toner Wiley is now teaching third grade in a private school and loving it. Her daughter Pam, a senior, and Kim, a sophomore in high school, are planning a grand visit with Sally White and Wendy who spent a week with daughter Wendy in Virginia Beach.

Marilyn Wolfert Zimmerman has visited veral times last year as daughter Jean is an Emory university student in their five-year nursing program. e and Dick have been busy with moving his plant e to urban renewal.

Sally Weissberg Nussbaum has her family scattered far and wide. Selma is in her second year at the university of Pittsburgh Medical School (good [!!!!]), Bobby will be a junior at Emory, and Steve transferring for one year from Washington University in St. Louis to the University of California at Santa Barbara. Her youngest is a senior in high school.

Sara Jane Symser Naylor is teaching in the school of Practical Nursing, Allegheny County Community College this year. She was nurse chaperone for 200 students in the Shaler Area Band performing Disney World in April. Mike is a senior and Jenny sophomore in high school, both in band. Unfortunately her daughter Susie, nineteen, has had a bad run with obstruction from an ulcer, needing surgery that has recovered well. She and Geff had an old-fashioned barn-raising this summer on their farm property.

Ann Wood Pawlyk and family spent a month last summer in the Caribbean diving and sailing. Her next enters college this month, attending the New York School of Social Research in New York.

Dee Clayton Schaudt and Milt have Milt and Tim in high school; Cheryl, a freshman at Slippery Rock majoring in drama; and Debbie, their eldest, is a senior at Chatham, planning on medical school.

It was nice to hear from Nancy Vahey Eldridge and Doris Warner Brown who now has all her children in school and is looking forward to relaxing a little.

Betty Lou Wadsworth Hite and her husband celebrate their 25th wedding anniversary this year. She has three sons. 1 son is married, No. 2 son is eleven and their daughter works for Gulf. Betty Lou has been doing volunteer work in open classroom settings for three years.

Another sign of the times — Joanne Shelley and her daughter Nancy was the only girl on their Little League baseball team this year. Bob is busy with his insurance business in Pennsville, NJ, and the whole family was able to vacation together this summer in the Pennsylvania Dutch country.

RECENT REPORTING:

Isabelle Allias Staffeldt honeymooned in Europe last October. She is continuing to work at the hospital where she is currently studying the fire problems and finds it frightening — almost as bad as the news.

Margaret Berger Canon is working as a science teacher at Springside School (a private school in Millville). Her two oldest sons are in Maryville College; the other four are literally sprinkled throughout the local schools. Her husband Bob is associate minister of Chestnut Hill Presbyterian Church in Philly.

John Bishop Righter and her husband had a great time in 1974 building their new home which Rich had designed. Jean's daughter Kim is in her second year of art school in Pittsburgh. Their son Mark pedaled to Michigan's Upper Peninsula in August with Joey Koerner, Joan Frasher Koerner's son. Kevin, number two son, plays basketball and helps Jean reknit worn Oriental rugs.

Barbara Bolger Collett had a nice visit last year with Bobbie Shatto Freeman while in the Washington, DC area. Bo's children are Tom, age sixteen, Diane, age fourteen and Deb, age eleven.

Lois Bradley Fegley says her best news is that she is not moving this year. Lois and her family had a great vacation in Nassau where they had lived for nine years.

Anne Feullenwarth Sampson and I had a marvelous evening together last fall. When old friends get together, you simply pick up where you left off, even if the time in between has been years! Billie's oldest daughter, Michele, enters the College of Boca Raton this fall. Mark will be a high school senior and Bonnie and Matthew are busy swimming and playing in softball leagues. Billie has been doing a lot of silver jewelry casting and also works for the First Lady's dress designer on the side.

Elsie Gage Balano is currently having another art show in Vienna, Austria. Elsie's pictures are collages of tetrafilm and her work is super. She writes her children are all in the usual fun and games and daughter Carrie's eighth grade class went to Russia for a week.

Jacqueline Legros Beneridge wrote that middle age does have some advantages — all your friends are right there with you! Jackie's number one son Andy is a sophomore at Kenyon College, Brian, number two son, is a senior in high school and recently received the Kettering Award for outstanding achievements in math and science. Number three son Craig is the athlete. Number four son David is a lover!

Jane Miller Sumner is currently on the staff of State Representative Johnson of Dallas, Texas. She is also free lance writing and doing an assignment to D Magazine for a story on Margo Jones.

Nancy Miller Howard and family skied in Colorado last February and vacationed in Florida this summer. All three children, Kim, seventeen, Rich, fifteen, and Claire, eleven are active in A.A.U. and tennis tournaments in Minnesota and Wisconsin. Kim is off to Carleton College this fall.

Nan Norris is working at Calgon and expects to be there until they throw her out. She supervises a group of five chemists and two technicians and works hard! She's also been president of their homeowners' association for the past year wrestling with the problems of condominium living.

Angela Ottino Stahl had a lovely visit with Lois Potts Adelson in Washington, DC last February. It even snowed while she was there which was a treat for the Floridian. This spring Angie and her hubby went on a photographic safari in Africa and had a marvelous time, finding it even better than National Geographic.

Lois Potts Adelson had a great two week vacation in France, one week in Paris, the other touring the wine country. Her oldest son Andrew has completed his freshman year at Haverford College and is looking forward to living at Bryn Mawr this fall! Lois is working part time cataloging an art collection.

Norma Rearic Blank's two children are Jacob, nine and Mary, four. Rikki is employed full time at Blocher's Jewelry Store working on her title for the American Gem Society. In August, Rikki and family were off for a vacation in Bermuda.

Helen Savas Chakeres knows all about Chatham these days. Her daughter Jeanette entered as a freshman this fall. Helen says that she is much more excited over this than Jeanette. Her son Drew is a sophomore in high school and a member of the Junior Youth Symphony.

Barbara Senior Stewart reports that Harry is still in private practice of dentistry and his hobby is restoring Model A Fords. Bobbie says her chief priority is wife and mother to Tracy, seventeen and Wendy, fifteen; but her avocation is paramedic, doing 12-hour shifts as chief of a volunteer ambulance crew.

Audrey Shanaberger Kellermeyer left her kids and husband at home this summer and went on a backpacking trip through North Carolina and Tennessee. She had a fantastic time and highly recommends her wilderness adventure. Audrey is playing a fair amount of tennis and her children swim A.A.U.

Maryanne Taptich Barnes is doing lots of mothering these days. Her four boys are ages ten, eleven, fourteen and sixteen. She has also been doing needlepoint for her home and for the Bicentennial Project which will be hung in the Fort Pitt Museum at Point Park, Pittsburgh.

Lois Thompson Anderson and Bob have built a summer home at South Hampton, Long Island which they love and the boys are very involved in sailing. There are seven Anderson boys! The oldest two, Tom and Mark, are at Lehigh University. The Andersons hosted an AFS student from Spain this past year and Lois really enjoyed having him.

Barbara Young Hopkins and husband took their two children, Heidi (sixth grader) and David (third grader), to Deer Valley YMCA camp this summer for their vacation. Last summer they spent touring the west.

Pat Yount Hudson is back from living in Paris, France and misses it. Daughter Ann, twenty, will be going to the University of Denver this fall as a sophomore in Hotel Management. Mark is in his senior year at Mt. Hermon Boys School and Carolyn is a high school freshman. Pat earned her New York State provisional teaching certificate this year and will go on for a master's. The Hudsons bought a cottage in the Finger Lakes where they spend their summers and winter weekends.

I, Vicki, have three children: Tom, seventeen, Wendi, thirteen and Don, eleven. I have had a very active Camp Fire Girls Troop for six years now. I used to be a step ahead of them, but no longer. I continue to tutor first graders who find reading, writing and arithmetic a bit hard to handle. Bob and I had a neat trip this spring to the islands of Curacao, Aruba and Bonaire. If you enjoy scuba diving, head for Bonaire.

To my former classmates, cheers! Twenty-two of you sent warm, interesting letters. Many of you enclosed money for the class fund. Thank you. Now, if the other twenty-two 1954 graduates would send me a by-line on their lives, we'd have 100% participation! You must admit it's great fun reading, even briefly, on what "we girls" are doing. Our interests are varied. Our lives are diversified. Our titles are Miss, Mrs. and Ms. but one thing stands out, we are busy women! . . . Looking forward to hearing from all of you in '76. Happy Bicentennial.

Johanna Sawyer Seth (Mrs. Laudon), 227 Lehigh Street, Pittsburgh, PA 15232

Mimi Brice Bishop writes that husband Al is kept very busy with his faculty post at Pitt, his research and consulting. Mimi has changed jobs and is no longer in the Psychology Department but is now the Assistant to the Chancellor and Director of Affirmative Action. Daughter Janet is in tenth grade at Winchester Thurston.

Joanne Cochran Ellery and family are all well, happy, busy and adjusted. Cliff, sixteen, is as tall as his father, Liz and Becky are in junior high, Debbie and Kathy in grade school, Will in kindergarten and Richard in nursery school.

Carol Crissey Hill's daughter Cydney is a sophomore at the University of North Carolina. Cathy, a junior in high school, spent the summer in Santiago, Chile as an exchange student. Carol's family was host to a girl from Santiago last January and February. Daughter Janet is in eighth grade and was on a swimming and diving team during the summer. Carol frequently sees Maggie Siviter Emery at the swim meets.

Barbara Delaney Brown has a daughter each in junior high school, grade school and nursery school. They've taken trips recently to Disneyland and San Diego.

Pat Egry Curreri and family have become avid skiers. They have been traveling a lot — to Lake Tahoe, Dallas, Hawaii and Florida.

Sonya Klein Vernau has kept busy with Scouts, PTA and band boosters. She sends regards to all.

Jacy Kurtz Meyers and Karl spent the summer at home except for visiting Andy (eleven) at camp in Canada and Beth (fourteen) at camp at Penn State. Son Alan (sixteen) worked and acted as family driver this past summer. They all skied at Vail last winter, and Jacy and Karl took their usual trip to Barbados in March. Jacy has accepted the Presidency of the Pittsburgh Region Women's American ORT, which keeps her busy. Karl has been named a partner in his firm.

Mary Jo McKee Groppe is now a former PTA president and to celebrate, is learning to play the guitar. She and the family took a trip to San Diego in May where they enjoyed seeing Carole Williams and other friends.

Marilyn Miles Oliphant has been named Michigan Editor for the Harris Publishing Company and will be in charge of their new Industry Directory. Daughter Harriet is quite a gymnast and has taken three ribbons at area meets. Daughter Melissa still takes care of her two horses and rode in two shows this summer.

Judy Pitasky Markstein and her family have also been traveling. From December to August they have been in San Francisco, Vermont, Pittsburgh, England, France, Florida, Maine, Massachusetts and New Jersey. She is taking some college courses in between trips.

Johnnie Sawyer Seth is in her eighth year with the English department at South Campus, Community College of Allegheny County, as an associate professor. Her son David is in Princeton and daughter Amy graduated from Pittsburgh Academy this past summer. Husband Laudon is a theater technician, and was technical director for Chatham's first season of CAST productions, where Johnnie helped build the sets.

Sandy Sheriff Horrocks' two older children participated in the National Canoe Championship at Ottawa and Montreal this past summer. Norman's mother visited them during the summer, her first time away from England.

Joanne Starling has done some traveling to Florida, Boston, New York City and Pennsylvania. In July she became Associate Director of the Berna-lillo County Mental Health Center. They have a large program with a staff of over 300, so it keeps her busy.

Christie Walter Rinehart is still pursuing her interest in the scientific and spiritual nature of consciousness as it applies to creativity in all its aspects. She is working with groups and picking up "courses" whenever and wherever they are being given. Her family is also thriving.

Shirley Zierer Byers is back in the career world as an administrative assistant in the Career Planning and Placement Department at Clark University. She is also secretary for the Prelaw Advisory and Evaluation Board of Clark, and is president of the Sociedad Cultural Hispana. Husband Bill, in addition to being a professor of photography, is a free-lance photographer. He published a book on Ceramics this past spring, and is currently doing the work for a book on stitchery. Shirley often helps him and still finds time to take care of sons Christopher and Douglas, now eight and six.

Peggy Pattison Moore, Joanne Hammond McDonald and Joyce Kiesewetter all send "hellos."

The Lewis family came to Nakhon Phanom Royal Thai Air Force Base last March as a result of Bill being promoted to Colonel. We are enjoying the base and our jobs — he is Deputy Commander for Maintenance and I am Director of Personnel. Because of our long work hours — seventy hours per week — we have been unable to do any traveling except a 5-day trip to Bangkok, which was lovely. Bill's elder son John is in his final year at West Point, and Eric has joined the ranks of the wage-earners. We will be leaving Thailand in March '76, if not sooner, so I will be able to see all of you again at the class reunion in June. In the meantime, regards to all.

Lorrie reporting:

Our classmate's kids are getting older, more talented, versatile and helpful this past year. Benita Biggard Rapport and Marcia Katz Kresh have lost their cars to their children who are now busy chauffeuring their siblings. Marcia's new-found time is taken up with a "ten-year program" for perfecting her golf game. Benita writes she is continuing in Penn State grad school and hopes to be called to substitute teach. Carole Ashman Briggs pressed her teenaged driver into service quickly when she suffered a broken knee cap. She managed to attend summer school at Indiana University of Pennsylvania and (are you ready for this nostalgia?) Andrew, the baby the HD&B class observed, is a freshman at college.

Never underestimate the ingenuity of class members. Marcia Ebenstein Kublanow has opened a plant shop called "The Garden" in White Plains. She applies the principles of Ikebana to plants. (Remember her article on Japan in the December, 1974 Recorder?) Linda Behrend Kaufman is part owner of a crafts shop, "Hands of Man," in Pikesville, MD, representing craftsmen from all over the U.S. Barbara Berg Morrison managed to sandwich in a visit with Barbara Goodstein Selbst and Barbara Sickles Bernstein in New York while attending a tennis trade show. The business has expanded to two indoor racquet clubs for which Barb does buying.

From commercials to travelogs. Sally Johnson Woods, Clara Jean Babb Ersoz and Barbara O'Callaghan tell of recent trips. Sally and her family traveled throughout the Southwest and the Coast. Clara Jean and Namik went to the Bahamas. Later, with the family, they went to Turkey "to relatives, see all the historic spots, swim in the Mediterranean and try to speak Turkish." Barb and Jack went to the Caribbean.

Among others who travel short hops are Barbara Goodstein Selbst who is going back to college to fall for teacher certification. In her spare time she is teaching nursery school, doing learning disability testing and testing pre-kindergarteners. Son David is cooperating by starting first grade this fall. Also on the road is Lois Ingham Peeler who is consulting in Christian education for her church conference in Maine. Eldest son Scott, a cross-country runner, has to give mother some pointers. Libby Ann Petrolas is "doing a lot of theatre locally and teaching nursery school." Sally Johnston Woods is finishing her fourth year at her church's nursery school.

Still fighting inflation and losing is Barbara Asche. She and Nancy Galley saw one of our former nursing teachers installed as president of the National League for Nursing at a convention in New Orleans. She also saw Peggy Burgette Newman come to Pittsburgh to see her parents. Peggy is now a time physical therapist with the Detroit public schools. She also keeps in touch with Carol Jefferson Heiser.

I had a great letter from Carol Cowley Greenland. She has married Arnie, whom she has known since kindergarten and re-met at their 20th high school reunion last year. The kids, now sixteen, fifteen and thirteen, are doing well and Carol has been busy modeling the house.

A last-minute note came from Mary Anne K Braithwaite telling of a wonderful vacation in the Carolinas shared with sister Nancy and her family. Phyllis Prinzo McShea and her family — six adults and eight children! After two years of part-time library work with Westinghouse, Mary Anne is working full-time at their Research Library.

Yours truly is very pleased to announce no for this year. I did my "nursing thing" as camp nurse for the handicapped adults. Otherwise — status quo — sincere thanks to those who took time to share their lives for the Recorder and for the personal element of your secretary. We'll catch up on all the details at the reunion two years hence.

Nancy reporting:

Somehow this year I thought I would be able to obtain 100% response from my half of the class. However, there were only thirteen responses of forty but this was two more than last year.

It was good to hear from Wendy Hamer Evans. Her current news is that they will be moving from Wilton, Connecticut in June '76 to Londerry, Vermont. All four boys — five through sixteen are very excited about it. Wendy is still pursuing her watercolor paintings and this fall will have a show of her own teaching some new techniques.

Martha Lasky Sanders reports that life in Atlanta has changed little. They are still involved with the Little League, federal and state prisons and community work. Recently Marty became a member of the Jewish Community Center Arts Council and is excited about their activities. She is planning to teach fourth grade again in the fall.

The biggest news from AiRin Lee Kim is that she moved they made from New York to Massachusetts. Jay is happy with his job — vice president of the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston. They like the England living very much which has lots of challenges, yet much less of the rat race. AiRin has a busy year with substitute teaching, selling the house and taking the children to their activities. Last year they toured Canada and visited cousins in Montreal. Also, her parents are visiting from Korea.

Noonie Leet Stark writes that she has been teaching at the Federal Corrections Institution in Newbury. She is teaching Reading, English and Math to prisoners who are enrolled in a Pre-GED program. In January she was elected to the vestry of the Episcopal Church. One of the things they tried was a up discussion for newcomers to talk about the joys and sadnesses that accompany the moving process. It worked so well that they plan to expand to the community. Noonie says that the children in Redding and that the country has more to offer than suburban New Jersey. They are enjoying the ability that a small town affords them to be complete citizens.

Betty Ann Maruca Wolke writes that Bob had a book published in the spring — Impact: Science Society. After taking the summer off she has returned to her part-time job with the U.S. Dept. of Commerce doing the Consumer Price Index for the Pittsburgh area. Her daughter Leslie has begun third grade at the Sewickley Academy.

After spending an exciting and hectic year as the assistant coordinator of a Communications Skill Center at the Community College, Janice Miller Smith has been "relaxing" the summer away. She has been attempting to learn golf, sailing and swimming with her children. During the fall she will teach developmental writing courses at the Community College and return to Carnegie-Mellon for her doctorate.

Judy Moore Goehring writes that she is a typical suburban mother trying very hard to keep up with two daughters and their horses and a son who plays hockey. She had a nice surprise during the summer when Sonia Kurtz Matlick stopped to visit with her. Carol Moran Russell writes that they have found a home in Connecticut to be an ideal home. Her children will be in the fourth and sixth grades in the fall. She keeps busy with PTA, volunteer work, and substitute teaching in the upper middle school science department.

Elaine Rockwood Cummings spent the summer improving her golf game, working with Project Outreach to register new voters and chasing after her 11-year-old. She expects to continue being a "full-time substitute" teacher in the local high school. Recently she has learned to macrame and has hang-planters all over the house and patio.

The most exciting part of the year for Barbara Ford was to visit the Far East again and to show her mother where she had lived and worked fifteen years ago. She said that pollution had ruined Tokyo but that they did enjoy Kyoto and the countryside. She continues working as a regional coordinator for the CETA program and has monthly meetings in Washington, DC.

Barbara Sickles Bernstein writes that all is well in that Neck. She has gone back to school to get a master's in Reading and Learning Disabilities which is exciting and stimulating after being away from it so long. Barbara has been working the past two years with children with learning difficulties and in the Adult Education program as a substitute in the ESL (English as a second language) classes.

News from Claudette Smith Cooper is a transfer to Denver, Colorado. Her husband Ross is already working there and the rest of the family will go as soon as they can get the house sold. The children will be entering the tenth, seventh and fifth grades. Bobbie Weitsman Marks writes that she is the treasurer of the PTA this year and hopes that she can get the books balanced. Her children are in the third, fifth and eighth grades. In July they visited her mother Rhoda in Richmond, then on to other historic sites in Virginia, including Williamsburg and Antietam.

As for myself it has been a busy and happy year. The nursing program at the College is progressing and our second class of graduates doing quite well on their State Board Examination. In May, I attended the National League for Nursing Convention in Barbara Asche in New Orleans. In October, I will be vacationing in St. Martin and Puerto Rico where I plan to visit with Gisela Paoli Villafana '57.

Dibbie reporting:

Seventeen members of the class of 1960 were present at our fifteenth reunion. It was a delightful day capped with our own wine and cheese party in Mellon Hall. Had prizes been given to the classmate who came the greatest distance, Lee Davidson (Bermuda) and Nancy Levendorf Recht (California) would have shared the honors. Our class gift in memory of Glenda Rich DeBrock brought the greatest response in participation our class has known. I am so glad that all of you wanted to be a part of this gift and to each of you my thanks for your generous and eager participation. A letter from Dr. Eddy echoed my sentiments. If you were unable to give at the time of our reunion, your gift is still most welcome. Please be sure to label your gift for our class and the cause and send to the Alumnae Office.

Lauranne Gay Brunner writes that when she married last August, she inherited an instant family. "My husband has two girls in college and two boys, aged sixteen and twelve. Learning to be a mother, caring for a house and teaching elementary art part-time have kept me busy this past year."

Laddie Lochner Krutten sent a glowing report of several weeks in the Adirondacks. With a taste of classroom teaching in the wind for fall, she is hoping that Chatham speech classes will serve her in good stead! She also will start working on her M.S. and has done her bit for the Bicentennial with a certificate from the mayor to prove it! Laddie says she's already looking forward to the next reunion and hopes more classmates can make it.

Morissa Bernstein Lundy writes that they moved into their newly built home last December. Her children Ellen and David are both in junior high. Summer travels found the Lundys in Cape Cod and Minnesota. Morissa sends her regrets to the class as does Sorel Berman from Brookline, MA.

Nancy Cohen Stein invites anyone visiting the Santa Monica area to stop in. Herb is a pharmacist at Hollywood and Vine while Nancy keeps up with Mark, eight and Amy, two.

Talk about keeping up! We haven't heard from Naomi Kipp Smith for ages and welcome her card from Juneau, Alaska. The Smiths live on the edge of the Torgass National Park. Naomi is Director of the Alaska Occupational Safety and Health Program and enjoys interesting visits throughout the state in the line of duty. "Public administration is interesting . . . there is so much to learn." Naomi's husband Gene is Finance Officer for the State Department of Health and Social Services. The Smiths have two children:

Joel, thirteen, is a Honda nut and Jenny, ten, spent the summer tripping to Europe and Pennsylvania with her Kipp grandparents. Naomi welcomes any Alaskan-bound travelers!

My notes found many classmates either embarking on or just returning from summer travels. Bobbi Friedman London enjoyed family trips to Victoria, B.C. via various national parks and the Oregon coast. Fall plans show a return to the usual volunteer jobs. Betty Goodridge Westgard camped with her family in Michigan and spent a week with Holly Wilbar Appleyard '59 in Chautauqua.

Sue Decker is now the Assistant Director of the Brooklyn Museum for Administration and Planning, "a career come full circle since, in the ancient days of 1960, I almost pursued a career in fine arts." Sue recommends a visit "to this gem of a museum. We're only half an hour from Manhattan and I hope anyone who comes will give me a call." She expressed her regrets at having missed our reunion as did Lucy Gray Gilligan who had planned to attend until the last minute when Ray's business interfered. Lucy saw Judy Allen Mitchell '61 at a dinner for President Eddy last spring in Boston. Ann Curry Haux, now practicing for 'Hell's Angels' on her Honda 100cc motorcycle, spent two weeks on the Cape this summer and sends regards to all.

Margaret Cooke Skidmore writes that "my big thrill this year was to show the film 'A Woman's Place' at a national meeting in Chicago of the Council for the Advancement and Support of Education." She then spoke to a workshop on ways of attracting women to a women's college. "I was in good company with professional representatives from Mt. Holyoke, Douglass, Simmons, Sweet Briar, and Clark College. Note: Those of us attending the reunion had an opportunity to view this OUTSTANDING movie of which Margaret speaks. It supports the woman's place and her ability to hold that place in today's world of business. The movie is available for borrowing and if you have an interest, write the College for more information."

Lee Davidson Davidson enjoyed a summer visit to Washington, PA to see her mother and family. Lee reports that she still runs the Bookmart in Bermuda where life is getting so updated that zip codes have been added (see new addresses) and that one can call Lee by simply picking up and dialing 1-809-29-2-2970. "That is quite a feat when you think on it!"

From Tehran, Iran comes a newsy letter from Laleh Baktiar Ardalan. "I've had to give up Girl Scouts because I am now working full time in Nadar's architectural office doing graphics, report writing, etc. I really enjoy it after so many years at home. I keep busy in my spare time as well. I have just been commissioned to write a book for the series called Art and the Imagination. The English publisher is Thames and Hudson — the American, Avon. The series has done works on The Sacred Dance, The Mystic Spiral, Astrology, Alchemy, The Tree of Life, Tantra, Tao, and so forth. I have been asked to do one on Sufism and Art. It is a very exciting project but I've had to reorganize myself as my deadline is October." Laleh's book is to be published in April when the Festival of Islam is held in London. It is called: The Mystic Quest, Sufi: Art, Music, and Architecture. Laleh's letter was written from the Shiraz Arts Festival in the lovely city of Persepolis after which she and Nadar were setting off for Paris, Ned to attend a meeting, Laleh "to finish my book."

And finally, a note from Arleen Boyda Porter says that after four years of substitute teaching, she will take on a full-time fifth grade. I saved Arleen's note till last because I wanted to thank her and Clair Judd Schweriner for their willing service as class secretaries. With this issue of the Recorder, I am joined by two new secretaries who were pressed into service at our reunion. I assured them that it is a fun job — which it is when you keep the news coming and our postage fund bubbling over (which it isn't yet but my thanks to those of you who have mailed your dollar). I have no particular news myself except that for those of you who saw me at reunion with my leg in a cast due to a skiing accident last January, the cast came off in mid-June! For those of you who didn't see me, the cast still came off in June! Cheers to you all. Thank you for your generosity to our

Barbara reporting:

Norma Hunt Mahle sends news of growing children and a busy life along with her greetings. Claire Judd Schweriner's year was busy with school and community activities and highlighted with a trip to Spain. Carol Koepke Brown has kept busy with college teaching. She served as Adjunct Professor in the Humanities Department of the Northampton County Area Community College. Barbara Kurtz Brody took a five-week Western trip with Jill and Jim and their student from Iran along for a different viewpoint. Barbara is keeping busy with tennis and some oil painting. Nancy Levendorf Recht was one of the girls who traveled far to be in attendance at the reunion. She found it amazing that no one looked any different. Nancy went to summer school taking Abnormal Psychology in preparation for beginning work on her master's in psychology at Chapman College. Nancy still runs into Natalie Barish who now teaches at a local college. Natalie sends her regards to all. In case you have forgotten, she taught us Freshman Biology.

Judith Levine Weintraub had a two part vacation in Pittsburgh and then the beach in Delaware. She is awaiting a paralegal job at the Consumer Product Safety Commission. Faith Magdovitz Willis is still teaching sociology at Brunswick College. She just finished national research on life styles of university women graduates under an A.A.U.W. grant and is active in the Governor's Commission on the Status of Women, Cancer Society, United Way and A.A.U.W. With the children, Sarah, eight and Tommy, seven, they toured the West this summer. Amy Markus Kellman enjoyed the reunion and thought it nice to know we've all made it this far. Amy is still writing for Teacher's Magazine and job hunting. She also served as a consultant for Wilson's Children's Catalog. Winifred McDowell is still at Garrison Forest School and enjoying good friends, beautiful surroundings and a recent trip to New England. Berenice McGrew Fitzgerald is busy keeping up with the 8½-year-old twins. "With Brownies, Cub Scouts and music lessons in the fall and spring and swim team practice and meets in the summer, it leaves little time for my bowling and flying." Joan Munroe Mahoney is once again giving lectures and leading twenty medical students through their lab experience in Biochemistry at Terre Haute Center for Medical Education. Joan and Andy vacationed in the Ozarks and St. Louis with fourteen-month-old Colin.

Jane Patterson is still working in obstetrics and gynecology at Kaiser in Los Angeles. Her current volunteer project is the Feminist Women's Health Center. Jane is still infected with the travel bug and has added Mexico, Guatemala and New Zealand to the list. She has started to bicycle to work as her contribution to the energy crisis but the Hollywood Hills are like Pittsburgh. It is three miles down in the morning and three longer miles up at night. Bernice Rosenberg Printz is busy with her job and the twins who are starting junior high this year. They had a pleasant vacation in the spring to Hawaii. Dottie Schall Schweiger's new baby keeps her occupied while husband Jim is serving as president of the high school's Band Parents Association, which keeps everyone busy. They continue to play occasional duplicate bridge and have accumulated a few master points.

The Goettler family had a wonderful year with trips to Aspen and the Caribbean highlighting the activities. The tennis bug has bit all the family. The children are now in high school, junior high and elementary making it necessary to join three separate P.T.O.'s. Let's try for better response next year. With only four more cards, we would have had 50% return.

Gayle reporting:

Jill Putnam Huston reports that she had two ink drawings accepted in the Three Rivers Arts Festival this past spring.

Jane Sanford, still with Kodak in Rochester, still travels — this year to Aruba. Now living only with Spooky, a feline, she says, "It pains me to realize that I am now completing fifteen years with Kodak and am faced with a minimum of eighteen more unless in the meantime they come up with a better retirement plan."

Lanie Souza Matthews sends best wishes to all and reports that she still loves teaching fourth grade and does her best to keep up with 13-year-old Leslie.

From Anne Turner Arnold come greetings and news that she does substitute art teaching and the illustrating of children's books for Southern Connecticut College. The Turners have a new home and enjoyed skiing at Bromley this year.

Modestly referring to a "few" items of news, Yseult Snepvangers Freilicher reports that in addition to working part-time for the Institute of International Education, she will be composing more filmstrip background music for McGraw-Hill this fall. Mort's book on Estate Planning in a revised and updated second edition will be published in November. She says "He claims it's soporific but I think it's great."

Barbara Stone Hollander is back at Chatham enrolled in the Gateway Program. This is the program for us "older" students who want courses to start or finish a degree, for a career or who just want something for personal enrichment.

Although they report no big news, Ruth Pincus Gujarti and Judy Woodruff Laughlin send their best to all.

From Mary-Anne Koenig Pomputius in Vincennes, Indiana comes an account of her usual very busy life. Their move was occasioned by Bill's taking over the pathology department of the local hospital where he also teaches degreed lab technicians. Besides driving her daughter to Evansville every day to school she finds time for family bicycle trips, deer hunting, Girl Scouts and museum trips to Washington, New York and Chicago. She was selected to be one of nine doctors' wives to represent the state of Indiana at the AMA-AMA Auxiliary meetings this past summer.

This reporter is still doing the usual balancing act to meet the demands of one daughter, one house, one collie, two cats, and one job. (In this connection, I was on a panel sponsored by the Federal Women's Committee on the problems of Working Parents late in August). As time permits, I am attempting to further liberalize my education by taking courses in auto mechanics, plumbing, tennis, and — this fall — tap dancing. It's a trip!

Faith reporting:

Terri Abrams Zions and family have returned the States after over two years in Europe. Terri traveled extensively this year: Africa, France, England, Sweden, Denmark and Hungary.

Wendy Barton Christner continues to manage sheet metal erection company. Her eldest son, a freshman at Shady Side Academy; David, an junior high and the twins go into fifth grade. Terri have a garden this year and Wendy is busy canning and freezing. They've vacationed in Florida and on a fall trip to Boston and Chris' twentieth reunion in Yale.

Karen Batt Cohen is working at the Opportunities Industrialization Center teaching English as a second language. She and Harold enjoyed a vacation abroad this summer.

Ginger Campbell Miller sends the following comments to Nancy Beal's remarks last year. "Sorry, I see that Nancy should select such a small issue to cause her to dissolve her interest and support in the College. My only reply to her is . . . why bother reading the class news if you find it repugnant? There is certainly some worthwhile reading in the first part of the magazine. And, Nancy, why not contribute to the magazine positively, negatively."

Sally Clarke Veil and family have had a great year. Mark enters junior high this fall and Sally has a part-time job with Snelling and Snelling Employment Agency. She and Fred are finding the increasing independence and maturity of their children a liberating and enjoyable experience.

Linda Clinton Henschel writes from their new home built in a prune and yellow plum orchard. She's a busy and enthusiastic farmer's wife — exactly what she had in mind fifteen years ago. They've started picking apples. Linda and her girls thrive on the fresh air and they help her in fruit and vegetable packing house.

Frank Dunlap Marciano has returned to Nazareth College, to take reading courses that will qualify her as a reading specialist. She hopes to return to teaching this fall, even if only as a tutor. The twins Susan and John will be four in November and are a source of never-ending amazement and joy.

Helen Hirsch Bostock is working for a consulting engineer one day a week. The family spent a day a week at Sandy Island Camp this summer. Jennifer is active in Girl Scouts and Vance is entering nursing school this fall.

This has been a busy year for me, Faith Buchner Zarro. I continue to be active as vice president in the co-op nursery Joseph and Jimmy attend. Our boys, Mike and Jimmy, are finally walking and climbing over everything. The past few years and for a couple to come will be dominated by little boys. They are frequently frustrated, but we have terrific times with them. I frequently see Ethel Woefel Fiderer and Kathie Batt. We've spent a lovely evening with Sally Clarke Veil and her family at their home. And had a very good annual Labor Day weekend invasion of my parents' farm with Helen Hirsch Bostock and our families. Thanks for the replies. Hope to hear from more of you next year.

Zoe reporting:

To be in one home for any length of time seems to be an achievement for some of us. Kathie Otto McDowell and Mac are busy in their new home. Kathie is involved with the Juniors, singing in the choir, and is involved with the Eastern Connecticut Choir at Christ Church. He is now with St. Paul's Church and will be receiving Washington and Jefferson's outstanding Service Award from their alumni association.

Gail Seigrist Naftel has moved three times since ember! Jim is now a management consultant. Be are looking forward to what Atlanta has to offer, aside from unpacking — again.

Stretchen Wright Gantzer will be moving to Charlotte, NC soon. It will be their ninth move although after five years in Rhode Island, it is hoped she has not lost that special touch for settling in. She saw Jane Saunders Pauline and family who are temporarily living in Andover, MA.

In her home for one year, Judy Schenk Eley has been redecorating, gardening, doing volunteer work, working with the AAUW, keeping an eye on fifteen-month-old Laura, and lending moral support to John who has been assigned to the Conflict Preparedness Division of the Federal Preparedness Agency.

Starting the gorgeous greens to growing outside the new home has Sara Westlake Delmar occupied, as has the nursery school teaching, visiting bicentennial Bion and "super" Disney World. Ellie Schriber and Wilde went to San Francisco and Cape Cod before taking the kids off to school. She has completed a pilot research series of Basic Reading books for H. Rinehart and Winston and has now become publicity director for the League of Women Voters in Rutley.

"Exciting, exhausting" — Amy Parker Doty is working full-time for the University of Rochester Medical Center on a joint project of the Cardiology and Hematology Departments. Seems many steps toward our basic biology days.

Carole Sprinchorn Colter is involved with wildlife. She even went to the National Wildlife Summit Conference at Estes Park. She is a volunteer with the Catawqua County Humane Society and in quieter moments is a school librarian. Penny Ulman Schwarz is member of the executive board of the Friends of the School, teaches music at a nursery school and acts as membership chairperson for the ORT chapter. Nancy Stein Elman has received a promotion to associate professor of Education at Pitt. Congratulations.

Jo Mitchell Soltman switched from being an architect — consultant at a health spa (high pressure wears one down) to full-time motherhood. Her vacation includes teaching teenagers at the Temple, being a member of the speakers' bureau of the Pittsburgh Council for International Visitors. Of her visits in third and fifth grades she says, "I'm relishing these two precious people who are now real companions for me and distinctly an asset at dishwashing time." Makes me (Zoe Warwick Sherman) stop, and though the packing boxes, enjoy my own a bit more. Peter is comptroller of the new Niagara Hilton and is finding out about all the places here in the state to see. By this time next year I hope to have thoroughly researched this whole area. Research plans are always welcome!

Karen reporting:

Suzanne "Cool" Clewell represented one of my two surprise phone calls this summer. She called from the Denver airport during a layover. "Cool" has thoroughly enjoyed the change from classroom teacher to reading specialist in Kensington, Montgomery County, Maryland. Wendy Haskell called and I met her at the airport. We had a two-hour rapid fire conversation until her flight left for the West Coast.

Dorothy Cohn Porper and Carol Baker Wildemann are now happily Dorothy Cohn Fox and Carol Baker Cox. Carol is also Carol Baker, Ph.D., professionally. Dorothy is working full-time in the personnel business and has moved to Manhattan. Her son Jeffrey is six and in first grade. Her letter indicated a wiser, happier and more involved individual. Carol is the Associate Director of the Testing Service of the University of Pittsburgh and also is doing some teaching in a graduate research course for teachers. She suggested, and I heartily concur, that the Pittsburghers of our class should band together to help the out-of-towners for our 15th reunion.

I was delighted with the responses to Nancy Beal's letter throughout the Spring Recorder. Russ and I have had a good year and the girls are growing well.

Many reporting:

In looking at the responses, things seem generally more quiet this year, though nonetheless satisfying for the most part. On second look, perhaps I'm just mellowing. There's an undercurrent — a ripple of change, of growth, of endings and new beginnings.

In between working on her house and freezing vegetables, Margaret Fulwiler Jernstedt starts a teacher certification program this fall, working as a first and second grade teaching intern with after-school courses. She continues on the advisory council to the Mental Health Center and resorted to ski lessons to keep up with Greta (nine) and Heidi (seven) on the slopes. Reassuming her maiden name, Sue Haskell also returns to school. Instead of working at the Veterans Administration Hospital and going to social work school at night, she's a full-time Master's of Social Work candidate this fall. Having finished one year at Princeton on her Ph.D., Millie Grossman Zacher begins at long last on her doctor of medicine.

Further reports Millie, Phyllis Fox Catz was elected to the local School Board (Phyllis also took on the unemployment office with her children in tow — I can picture it vividly — though Millie didn't say whether this was before or after her election!). As go political winds, Gwen Gurnack finishes up the year as Legislative Aide and assistant business administrator to her New Jersey assemblyman (he's not seeking re-election) and looks to a state job in 1976. I too have foregone partisan politics for a while, working with League of Women Voters non-partisan Voters' Service for the fall elections.

An even more dramatic change is Sandy Heisler Shapiro's. With Harvey's accepting a position as assistant administrator of Parkway General Hospital in North Miami Beach, she found herself packing up her northern roots and transplanting them around a pool twenty minutes from Fort Lauderdale beach (What a way to move!). As Robin (4½) starts kindergarten in a completely open school, Sandy works in around the schedule of Amy (2) some bowling, golf, Welcome Wagon and A.A.U.W. activities.

It was good to hear from Amy Lisbonbee Barlow. Her youngest (of four children) will start kindergarten this fall giving her no children at home for the first time in eleven years. Wow! Her husband is Associate Director of Special Programs for the Graduate School, U.S.D.A. While in Arlington, Amy's also advised a teen-age girls' church group and tutored developmental problems in reading. Likewise, Nancy Greco Moran looks forward to an unusual two free mornings a week with Steven in school full-time and Lauren (3) in nursery school. Jason Reppenhausen's in nursery school too, but Julie Givner Reppenhausen's running it: "quiet home town nursery . . . becoming more like a business" . . . so where comes the "free time?" Squeezed in somewhere between Kristin's Brownies, New Milford American Red Cross Board, Charlie's commitments chairing Sherman's Inland Wetlands and Water-courses Commission and as executive officer of Lake Candlewood Power Squadron, they spent a sun-sand-rum-and-Coca-Cola week in the Exuma Islands.

The prize for beginnings, growth, and change goes this time, though, to Zak Krasner Barbarosh as Judi combines her own experience with part-time counseling of expectant and new mothers and co-chairs a N.O.W. Task Force on Consciousness Raising.

Didn't Nancy Beal do her bit towards consciousness raising (and feather ruffling, to steal a quote)? There are still ripples from the stone throwing of a year ago. Judy Germaux Page summed up my own thoughts on the subject "To me an important part of women's rights is the right to do our own thing" (and I speak as an "at home bra burner"). As those of you following this type of thing may have noticed, Louisiana didn't get very far with the Equal Rights Amendment this time around and I think part of the problem was and is this notion that equal rights means "get out of the home." It doesn't. It won't. Until we women stop name calling — looking down our noses at each other whether it be because we are or we are not employed, unemployed, married, unmarried, childless, childbearing — we're just spinning our wheels.

Enough editorializing and onto a segment I'm dying to label "Broads Abroad!" Do I dare risk offense? How far goes poetic license? It's meant all in good fun — no seriousness, please!

Janet Kessling Boese now lives in Chelsea as part of Klaus' five year term as general manager of Fidelity Bank's London branch. While there, Janet will start on a two year M.B.A. at London Graduate School of Business Studies. She, Klaus, Kirsten (nine) and Alexander (seven) look forward to a "Philadelphia leave" next summer. Judy Germaux

Page and her family will be stateside too next summer for a long-awaited furlough. Intriguingly, their house in the Philippines is bolted together so it can be taken apart and stored while they're gone and reassembled wherever they are, on returning. (Who says "you can't take it with you?") The Pages vacationed in the field this year visiting the "Eighth Wonder of the World," the rice terraces at Banaue, which proved well worth the harrowing, twisting, narrow, no guard rails ride. Karin Gemassmer Ehle wrote from Germany in between trips herself, having returned from three weeks on a North Sea island with her children. Having also spent three weeks with the children in February in the Swiss Alps, Karin was packing with anticipation for a trip to Brazil to visit her sister in Rio "leaving my whole family here with the grandparents. It will be quite a new experience for I've never left them all alone. . . but once in a while I think one must get out alone. It is the year of the women."

And so it is, as I too glance over the prospective horizons. Bill graduated this spring and began a new job as controller for a movie theater chain. Beth began school full-time this September, and now to see what I'd like to "begin" (if anything). How nice to be able to ask the question. How nice to hear from you all and special thanks to those who helped the kitty.

Ruth Anne reporting:

After Nancy Beal's bombshell last year, I applied some extra effort in contacting my thirty people. I wrote a lengthy letter to which I had given much thought, had it Xeroxed, and then wrote personal notes on almost all the copies. In the past five years I've had fifteen or more replies; this year, FIVE!!! I now realize first-hand what the term "Silent Majority" means! And, truth to tell, the five replies I got were such excellent, "in-depth" replies that I'm glad there weren't more! I shall quote fully and apologize to my respondents for what cutting I've done.

If there was ever anyone who had unusual news year after year, it was Nancy McBride French. This year she began "For once, I don't have the 'mundane' to share," as though she ever did in the past! "Don and I were divorced last July and he has remarried. It's been a year of heavy adjustments for me and I am thankful for the new doors that always seem to open when the proverbial 'bottom' drops out. I feel alive and well with the first chance I've given myself to view the world and my place in it, on my own — to make choices, to laugh and to cry. I've learned to reach out and to be human and what good friendship means. My girls (Amy, seven and Iona, five) and I live a simple life and things that were necessary have been honed down. I work two jobs; one as promotional director for the Lockport Mall and one as Public Relations Director of the Aquarium of Niagara Falls. I'm taking time for Nancy, too. I bought sculpture tools and clay for the first time since my Sculpture tutorial."

Both Nancy French and I were delighted to be visited this summer by Nancy Pierson Tolley, husband John and son Christopher, age three. They were on Yankee shores for a summer visit and it was a real shock to hear Nancy speaking the Queen's English with quite a comfortable clip! In January Nancy was elected Joint Secretary of the Hale branch of the National Housewives' Register, a group of women (largely housebound mothers of young children) in search of cultural and intellectual stimulation. They meet twice a month to discuss a book, poem, recording or film; go to a play or art gallery together; have a panel debate or a speaker such as a marriage counselor, the prosecuting solicitor for the Greater Manchester Police, an acupuncturist, a prison governor; and occasionally they'll have a party!

Nancy Tolley and Susan Offill Killgallon both spoke of the challenge and fulfillment of motherhood, having voluntarily chosen that role after several years of employment. Susan, a mother of four (including a set of twins) and Nancy Beal lived together for a time in New York City while both were teaching and finding their jobs thoroughly rewarding. Susan finds it ironic that someone who's been a teacher and found that work fulfilling, should "denigrate the role of motherhood," which is so closely allied to that of the teacher, and which certainly requires "creativity and involvement with self-actualization" (Nancy Beal's criteria). Susan and Nancy Tolley both suggest that Nancy Beal's bomb should perhaps have best been set off in the Public Forum section rather than the more folksy Class News section which they find interesting and valuable as a means of greeting and keeping in touch with our former colleagues.

Mary Ann McCormick Tucker's response was "Amen" to Becky Albright's reply to Nancy Beal's comments. She has been working part-time at a toddler nursery for exceptional children and doing speech therapy there, as well as singing with a choral group and all the car pooling that goes with a six-year-old in first grade and a four-year-old in a Montessori school. She rejected returning to work full-time because she didn't want to miss David's last two years before he becomes a full-time student. Besides, she likes being at home as a mother. She feels we can all make our choices and is just as interested in hearing about her more career-oriented classmates as those who are doing what she is. Each is as important and worthwhile. For her the Recorder serves as a newsletter for this purpose.

With gratitude for her clarity and depth of perception, I would like to quote at length from Karin Rumstedt's letter, as it succeeded in putting an end to my Teutonic reaction of acute dyspepsia over this matter! Karin writes "For each person, at each time, there is a path that is right. What is important — what should be shared — is whatever accomplishment is personally fulfilling. What is written in can either give support to someone who is in the same place (voluntarily) — or can show someone else that other life styles can be rewarding. I can't believe that anyone of our age group who went to Chatham is not aware of alternative life styles. My reaction, therefore, to those who complain about news of husbands, children and domestic activity is that they are either so caught up with the fervor of the women's movement that they have become intolerant of other life styles, or they are somewhat fearful of their own liberated position and don't want the alternatives publicized as enjoyable. . . The 'housewives' should at least speak of the contributions they have made to whatever they write about, rather than appear to be living through someone else. Writing only of husband's or children's activities makes their lives sound rather empty and meaningless. . . I am a student, a mother, a single woman, a worker, a homeowner, a union advisor, a committee member, etc. All these roles are important to me and at different times I may choose to emphasize one or another. . . Those who are opposed to the present content of the Recorder should write in about their own experiences, goals, feelings and life style. Boycotting the Recorder (and I might add, parenthetically, the College itself) will not change it — contributing in the style they feel appropriate may encourage others to do the same." Judging from the tone of that letter, if I were in Concord, California and needed a good, thorough lawyer in the near future, Karin would be the first one I'd look up! (Ed. note: See Feedback for complete text of Karin's letter.)

As my mothering horizons broaden with Sallie, three and Matthew, one, I (Ruth Anne Maier Bengtson) will be taking the Provisional Year with the Junior League this year with an effort to "get my head sorted out" and to help set me off on the path of community service — something I've thought about long enough. Now it's time to get involved.

Janet reporting:

This year I decided to ask a relevant question instead of sending out "sexist" forms. Next year — back to the forms. I asked what would you do differently if you were starting college now?

Mary Shaker says she would have liked more thorough counseling. Linda Weinberg Rosensweig feels she would not have done much differently in college since her present career is developing from her original interest in history and the academic world. Linda says, "By the time the Recorder appears, I expect to have my dissertation accepted officially and have a D.A. degree in History from Carnegie-Mellon University." Linda also got a paper published in the Journal of British Studies. Linda's two girls are in fourth and first grade. Yes, L family news is still acceptable.

Linda Wason Bardonner joins a college faculty too. She is at the University of Calgary Demonstration School and is involved in student teaching. Linda loves her job as it enables her to spend time with two girls.

Toba Schwaber Kerson also is teaching; she's the School of Social Work at the University of Pennsylvania. In May of 1976 she will receive two doctorates; one in Sociology and one in Social Work. Toba says she would not have changed very much at Chatham. She found her experience an open one and the professors more broad-minded than at any of the three universities she has attended. She wishes on your marriage.

Linda Simmons Bacon writes from San Francisco that she has been working for the Smithsonian Institution's centennial American Art Index and doing free-lance research. Linda said she would have liked to have more specific guide to a career and training for a job to be more intense before graduation.

In Arizona Elizabeth Watson Merchant is getting a master's in early childhood education. Elizabeth feels that the general generalist is passing from the scene and a liberally educated female needs a specific direction to go in. Counseling is essential and she would have taken a career-oriented field, not history.

Sally TerBush Drescher says that with her career open to women she would not have had to choose a scientific field to insure getting an equal job to a man. She thinks the Administration Management Program developed by Chatham is excellent and deserves national publicity.

Joanne Zweig Friedman is quite busy with a full-time home, and a part-time job plus a growing private practice. Natalie Sekovits Lustig is looking for a part-time library job. (Good luck.)

If I had to do things over in today's economy, I would not have become a teacher, but in the sixties I was quite satisfied with my choice. I do think that good counseling is the key to success. Next time when my youngest is in nursery school, I will be out if part-time teaching jobs exist.

san reporting:

Kathy Birris Frommeyer and husband Tom moved from Pittsburgh to Indianapolis and then to Sylvania where they hope to remain for a while.

Barbara Brenman (who wins my award for the best letter written in 1975) married Stephen D. Newman, ascending bureaucrat and accomplished science fiction freak," however, she has not changed her name. Barb was seriously ill last year and was "poked, pressed, tested, interrogated, consulted, humiliated" by herds of aspiring sadists parading as physicians."

Lynnette Burley McNally is working towards a master's of Divinity and hopes to be ordained a deacon in the Episcopal Church. Lynnette works for the YWCA evaluating and planning programs as well as with a teenage theatre and a program for the learning disabled.

Leslie Caplan Itskowitz's year included trips to Florida and Canada, volunteer work at Montefiore Hospital, and involvement in women's groups. Leslie reports that she enjoyed a CAST play at Chatham's theatre. With Amy six and Marc three, Leslie is participating graduate school.

Susan Coleman Heckman and husband Jim are into their second year of army life. After July Jim will be on the orthopedic staff of a teaching center. Susan was 5½-months pregnant and lost a baby last year. She, Jim, and four-year-old Coleman are looking forward to being permanently settled.

I received greetings from Nancy Coulter Burger and a Pittsburgh fan letter from Marti Coyne Scott who claims that they no longer roll up Pittsburgh streets at 9 p.m. Marti says that with music at Heinz Hall and sporting events at Three Rivers Stadium and the Civic Arena, Pittsburgh is actually featuring night life. Summer was filled with a trip to North Carolina, a vegetable/weed garden, 110-year-old house, and golf. Marti sends thanks to all who voted for her for Director of the Alumnae Association.

Hoping not to jinx her luck, Barbara Crick Klingsporn notes that she and Hal have set their record for living in one place — three years. Greg and Geoff are reading and swimming, and Barb is enjoying family life sans career.

Attorney Louise DeCarl Malugen is still practicing her specialty of bankruptcy law and is also active in the women's movement. She and John are traveling to South America and will visit the ancient ruins of Machu Picchu and Cuzco. The Malugens see Rachel Stein Gragg and husband Mike on occasional sailing trips.

Jeri Donohoe was divorced last year and is using her maiden name. She is working for Town Consultants, Inc., an urban planning and housing consulting firm, and would like to hear from Joan Saglio.

I seem to be enjoying the best of all possible worlds: working in the A.M. and family, NOW meetings, tennis, etc. the rest of the day — and all this in lovely San Antonio. As for the details, I agree with Barb Crick Klingsporn who wrote, "It's always so hard to capsule a year or two. Somehow events seem so trivial in retrospect, but it's the circumstances and emotions . . . surrounding them that really count and somehow never (rarely) get conveyed."

Kathe reporting:

"In time all gaslights and ivy, too
Will be faded with our song
But we'll remember the friends we knew Remember we belong."

Nostalgia, anyone? Our tenth reunion will be June 4 and 5, 1976. A surprising number of classmates plan to attend, according to the poll Betsy Van der Voort Brown and I took last spring.

Carole Early Cupps is getting ready for winter in Michigan by having her St. Bernard fitted for a harness to pull the children in a sleigh! Carole has played tennis and tournament golf this summer. Andrew's kindergarten is a special alternative program with K-3 in one room. Sam likes real estate and they feel quite settled in Kalamazoo.

A move to Chicago was a big change for Judi Fellows Duchek's family when Karl became corporate controller of Booz Allen and Hamilton in June. "Kurt makes sure I get my workout every day."

Her new brother is a delight to Bronwyn, 4½, and to parents Tom and Marty Friday Roberts. Marty got her Ph.D. in Social Psychology from Boston University last May; she is teaching part-time at a local college and getting clinical experience at a community counseling center. She welcomes anyone visiting the Marblehead area during the Bicentennial.

Hannah Gilman anticipates another tense year in the Boston school desegregation plan — her job at Boston University involves schools in South Boston. She planned a long-awaited trip to Japan in October. She enjoyed a Chatham potluck supper last spring when Dr. and Mrs. Eddy were in Cambridge.

Allie Graham Weber moved across the river from Wheeling this summer "for cleaner air and better schools. Matthew and Margaret are five and fantastic." Allie is teaching English full-time at Belmont Technical College, and Paul is Assistant Controller of Imperial Glass Corp., a subsidiary of Lenox. Allie volunteers in two juvenile justice programs.

A very fulfilling first year in Cleveland finds Ann Greenhouse Klein on the staff of Resource, a job placement and job development service for college-trained women. "The real answer for women of the future is better career counseling earlier." Family takes the other 50% of Ann's time.

A letter from Bobbie Hewitt Orloff brought life in Oregon a little closer. She is Activities Coordinator for Tryon Creek Nature Center and State Park, a 600-acre natural habitat for beavers which adjoins the Orloffs' property. In response to the furor over the Recorder's content, Bobbie recommends the writings of Anais Nin. We should be tolerant of each other's life styles, "for we will all do great things in our own time."

Judy Howard Reilly plans to study Library Science at Pitt beginning this fall. Jay is now six and in kindergarten. The Reillys vacationed in Florida and South Carolina this year, which the children loved.

Heather Martin Price has Beth in fifth grade, Mag in first, and Amy keeping her company at home. They are extensively remodeling their house. Jim is now a practicing civil engineer.

The Hills spent a quiet year. My book recommendation is On Death and Dying by Kubler-Ross, as I lost my grandmother last spring following my mother's suicide a year ago. I hope I have grown through these experiences. We have become more active in our Presbyterian church. In May we had a wonderful visit with Margie Morrison Hofer and family in Miami; and I worked six weeks in a library program for elementary-age children this summer, telling stories and directing traffic! New class secretaries will be chosen at our reunion; I have greatly enjoyed my stint.

Judy reporting:

Kristin Jellison Casteel and Ruthe Klein Kaplan sent their greetings. Kristin had just been visited by Betsy Pincus Candler and her daughter Beth. Ruthe is spending a lot of time keeping a very curious baby out of trouble and finding ways of keeping her sister from being bored until school starts.

Sandy Kretz Callahan has spent the last year as the Director of the Southwest Mississippi Area Agency on Aging. She has done some really exciting things in this area, many of which she would have never believed possible. But Sandy is never one to stay too long in one place. She is now enrolled in the Ph.D. program at Brandeis and will be studying social planning and public policy with an emphasis on gerontology.

Shad Mirza Ahmad sent a long and interesting letter. She recently finished her Ph.D. thesis on "Changing Social Status of Women among Muslims of Aligarh." It gave her new insight into problems faced by women raising their status. She added "I too face some of these problems, but I am different — in that, I have a consciousness which, in general, Indian women lack. I am still temporary lecturer in Sociology at the University here. A male, who was less qualified than I and who was a whole year junior in university service was appointed permanent lecturer. The unofficial justification is — well, she has a husband to support her whereas this poor man would have starved!! So I am still temporary after six years of service and feel quite threatened and insecure, lest some other starving male may appear on the scene!" Shad and her husband Sohail are having a lot of fun rearing Soophie (female) and Saif (male) to "maximize their potential regardless of sex."

Marjorie Morrison Hofer continues to be enthusiastic for mothering Stacy. She said that although she is presently in the traditional mother-wife role, she feels she is open to lots of possibilities once Stacy is in school. She is helping husband Bill in his new business, Design Matrix Inc., a graphic and exhibit and environmental signage design firm. Bill is now working on designing exhibits for the new Dade County Zoo which will open in a couple of years.

The past year has seen some real changes in the Pike household. With the arrival of Billy in April, I gave up my part-time job for the time being and am now trying to adjust once more to not working for pay. I still do some therapy on a volunteer basis. I am also the local representative on a county-wide committee on child abuse. There is not much to do in northeastern Arizona if one is not interested in the out-of-doors, so as incredible as it may sound, I am taking up golf, cross-country skiing, and all of us have become real campers, even Billy. I am interested in all the discussion about our differing life styles, but at the same time I am disappointed in the implied intolerance of our individual differences. Why is being a career woman any better or worse than a mother or wife? Why can't we combine career, motherhood and anything else we choose or don't choose without being criticized for it? We were all different while at Chatham and I never felt I had to apologize for my difference then and I certainly do not feel as though I need to apologize now. I enjoy Billy and Abby very much. They have enriched Harl's and my life immeasurably. I also really enjoy my work with people and planning social programs in a service-poor county and state. I am not willing to give up these parts or any part of my life but at the same time, I think that it is important that each of us makes our own choices and lives life styles that are comfortable for us. Our education can liberate us from the tyranny of stereotypes, not cause us to impose new and just as rigid stereotypes on others. We can be enriched by our differences rather than making them barriers between us.

Betsy reporting:

Madelon Rose Pross plans to attend our tenth reunion next spring. Hope to see all of you there too!

Two young daughters, Jennie and Caroline, are keeping Nancy Ross Delatush busy. She is also working part-time cataloging non-book materials in the education media center at the University of Maryland. Her husband George is teaching senior high school English, and is also a part-time faculty member at Catonsville Community College.

Deborah Payson Dechert has a son in second grade and a daughter in kindergarten. Debby is studying the Chinese language and culture which I know to be very difficult. Good luck, Debby!

Betsy Pincus Candler is teaching in a Montessori pre-school and working on formal certification through Saint Nicholas Training Center in London by correspondence. Her daughter Beth attends Montessori in the mornings and kindergarten in the afternoon. Mother and daughter took a trip to Boston this summer to visit a cousin and Kristin Jellison Casteel. Husband Dan has a new job with Marathon Oil Co. Their "new" 70-year-old house is a challenge but is only a seven-minute walk from Dan's office. Betsy visited Chatham last spring and found the new library impressive. She, too, is looking forward to the reunion.

Two babies under two are keeping Jennifer Potter Silver hopping. Adam is twenty-three months and Benjamin is four months. Jennifer is also working (between maternity leaves) on an urban planning job. She is planning on coming to the reunion and would like to urge everyone else to. "It will be such a kick to see everyone!"

Cathy St. Clair Haag now has a part-time job in accounting with an employment agency. She finds a home requires a great deal of time as they just put in a new patio. Cathy also raised a vegetable garden which I know to be time consuming.

Carol Sheldon Hylton finds that a one-year-old son, Kevin, a recent move, and courses toward her A.G.S. degree fill up her time. She has heard from Becky Blasingame Rosenfeld whose husband Rob is practicing psychiatry in the army for his period of service. (Ed. Note: See Carol's letter on Feedback page.)

Sharon Smith had a good year in the gorgeous town of New London, with its 2,000 winter residents and 4,000 summer residents. A bonanza snowfall on April 5th made skiing possible through May. Sherrie is planning on attending the reunion and is hoping lots of us will. Me too!

We would like to extend our sympathy to Carol Brown whose husband recently passed away.

As for me, I'm busy with music, drama, sewing and other crafts, counseling, and entertaining which I love to do. It is a wonderful life in the Midwest. Come see us. If you don't, we'll plan on seeing you at the reunion.

Barbara reporting:

Sage Tower Mumma continues her activity with the local newspaper and is also teaching poetry to third graders. Her children are the usual handful but Sage writes they are her favorite job of all.

Linda Whitmyre is working at Point Park College in Pittsburgh as director of financial aid. She enjoys this job and has recently finished her master's degree.

Jackie reporting:

With a few lurid and occasionally unreported exceptions, the beginning of the class alphabetically living very quiet lives this year. And Kevin and I be just about the dullest of all.

Sally Barnett, one of the liveliest of this year's correspondents, is now attending the Graduate School of Library and Information Sciences at the University of Pittsburgh and looking for a job to replace her summer work for Alcoa. Sally has been teaching high school in France and the U.S. for few years, and hopes to return to France after finishes her M.A.

Kathy Beard Davidson and family have moved to a new house. Kathy designed the house herself very simple with a lot of wood." She writes, "I had something to say that would go bang, but it's very quiet here."

Lera Berkowitz Greenberg continues, according to her, a placid suburban existence. "I even have a car on wheels!" She is working more often in the clothing business, having been promoted to sales buyer on the inside track, so to speak. She hopes to someday return to school for a master's degree.

Marcie Binstock Swartz, also a Pittsburgh suburbess, plans a trip to Bermuda this fall. The trip is a reward for her recent accomplishments.

Susie Birkhead d'Ambrosi is looking hard for a "Very frustrating!" she reports.

Labra Burdick is just about to be promoted to supervisor of Maine State Homemakers, which she will add to her present title as Manager of Connecticut Homemaker Services. In January 1976, Sabina planned to return to school for a degree in public administration through the generosity of the State of Maine. But she couldn't persuade the university that James Joyce seminar would make her a better public servant. Universities are notoriously shortsighted.

Susan Burke Clemow reports adding to her house a new kitchen, bath, family room and guest room designed by her husband Brian. She is working in a cooperative nursery attended by daughter Katy, 7, and finding two children "not much more fun than one."

It's a chilly fall day inside my study as well as outside it, and I am finding it extremely hard to tell about Kathy Chalmers Kondylas way up there (Brrr!) Alaska. Kathy is working on an engineering degree at the University of Alaska, in addition to her work with British Petroleum Alaska.

I talked with Sherry Conklin, who claims to be in contention for the title of "dullest classmate of '68." Frankly, she hasn't got a chance of winning it. Sherry has been doing casework for the Social Security Administration since she graduated from Chatham, sometimes working 60-hour weeks for months on end. She says she sometimes sees Judy Mats Stahl, Jan Miller Kahler and Nancy Chiere Fisher. Sherry plans to take a psychology course at Chatham this fall with Frank Lackner. I'll never forget that man!

Jane Cooper who wrote the most interesting and printable note of all, is continuing at Rutgers Law School, where she is in her third year of studies for a J.D. degree. This summer, Jane worked in Newark, New Jersey, as a law clerk for the county prosecutor and also researched and reported on aspects of the New Jersey correctional system for her state. Jane writes that her heart was broken by a guy, who "drifted off and left me terribly disappointed."

Cory Dautlick Pingel, after three years at Western Michigan, entered the educational research program at the University of Pittsburgh, where she is pursuing a Ph.D. degree which she hopes to receive next summer. There are a number of Chatham graduates in Cory's program, including Jane Coulter Berger, Judy Linehart, Judy Light, Karen Lake and Susie Birkhead d'Ambrosi. Cory saw Donna Dalton Call in some of her classes recently, and notes that Donna is the same bundle of dynamite that she was when she assisted with the Chatham psychoses and served as resident of Beatty Hall.

At Fordham University Law School is Gail Davis, who wrote the most lovely letter last year. This year grumpily replied that she will never answer another fill-in-the-blanks letter like the one I sent her this fall. Some people didn't answer it at all the time. And I'll be the first to admit that fill-in-the-blanks lacks, somehow, the personal touch.

Mary Ann Denning Fisher is busily repainting a town house, finishing a J.D. degree at Southwestern College of Law and working at the law firm of Jewell and Patterson. Mary Ann writes that Diane is back in Houston, having been promoted (again!) by Gulf Oil.

Thanks to everyone who answered my silly letters. It requires a great deal of maturity and forebearance to answer a letter which makes believe that people's lives can be described by a checklist of simple categories, and I was delighted to receive so many replies in spite of the ridiculous form of my letter.

Last spring I saw Frank Bonn at a political science convention. That heartthrob of Chatham yesteryears is a little gray and the tiniest bit wrinkled (I hope he doesn't see this!) but very much the same otherwise. He was discussing themes of literature and modern political thought, which was an interest of his when he taught political philosophy at Chatham. Also I see Bill Keefe from time to time, as he heads the political science department at the University of Pittsburgh, where I am (still!) seeking the Ph.D. At least as smooth as ever, he continues to be the practical politico, perhaps more accomplished than ever after his sessions with the Pennsylvania state legislature.

We are looking forward to a visit from Linsie Whitlock Silvestro and husband Tony. He is very fond of thoroughbred race horses, and we managed to persuade the two of them to visit us and the Rolling Rock race meet at the same time. We are hoping to see some other Chatham friends during Linsie's visit. Best regards to all classmates from Kevin and me.

Goldie reporting:

Katie Hennings DeFazio is now a caseworker with the Child Welfare Services of Allegheny County. She wrote quite extensively about her three years in Grenada, West Indies, including the country's revolution and general strike. After returning to the United States in May 1974 and re-adjusting to the American lifestyle she was struck by the waste of American society. She says, "I doubt if I'll ever get to graduate school — but living in Grenada was an education in basic reality . . ."

Several of our classmates have been busy with new babies. Harriet Dye Bakalar took her first graders on a field trip and her daughter was born that night. Pat Elio Cash has been super busy not only with a new daughter but with building a new house on five acres of land. She and Dennis plan to do some farming including raising chickens. She also commented on past issues of the Recorder criticizing motherhood: "Having spent time on both an outside career and as a mom, I've enjoyed both. The most important thing to me is that I, as many other women, have made my choice without feeling my lifestyle has been dictated." Shelly Israel Mark praised the Lamaze course and is now busy with her two daughters. She's involved in a discussion group at the local library for parents of pre-schoolers and edits the Co-op Nursery School newsletter. Jill Dworkin Eisner and Irwin welcomed Jodi Michelle into this world in June. Preceding her arrival, the Eisners moved to New York City and are truly enjoying its museums, theaters, and the playground in Central Park. Judith Herbst Goozh and Cathy Horowitz Saltzman are busy with their respective families and send regards. Hope including them in the paragraph with the new mothers doesn't cause any trouble!

Mary Holland reports that she's Education Director of the Vermont Institute of Natural Science. She helps to design natural history programs to be taught to elementary school children. Molly Day finished her master's thesis at Bank Street and is teaching five, six and seven-year olds.

I've been busy with Amy, three, and Richard, one, and various community activities including something new — working with juveniles in a detention center. Joel and I are finally enjoying the addition to our home whose groundbreaking I mentioned in last year's report. I didn't hear from a lot of my "regulars" this time but hope to hear from you next year.

Zelda reporting:

It was very pleasant to hear from Ann Kessler Guinan for the first time since graduation. She notes, however, that she does have enough news to make it worthwhile. Besides the birth of her son David she is working on her dissertation and will be at the British Museum next summer reading cuneiform tablets. She has already left for Iran, where her husband will be teaching, and plans to do some archeological digging while she's there. She hopes that anyone passing through Shiraz will look them up.

Carol Kuhn Silver writes that she has resigned from her supervisory job and gone back to teaching children. She ran into Ann Joseph on Martha's Vineyard and reports that Ann is happy with her job and looks marvelous. In what little time is left from her teaching position, she has been attending graduate school in special education.

Bobbi Livingston Reitzes sent a thoughtful letter describing what she has been doing and her thoughts on what she will be doing in ten years. With two children, she is looking for a part-time (five hours a week) job but hasn't had any luck so far. From her letter, she seems to really enjoy her present home-mother orientation, with a little time left over for reading or gardening. She mentions that Alice Kessler got married on July 27. Congratulations, Alice!

Elinor Marks is still enjoying the sunshine in Hollywood, along with a promotion. She is now the supervisor of three VD clinics in Los Angeles, the first woman in the nation to hold that responsibility in her program. VD is a major and growing health problem and we wish her good luck.

Kelley MacIsaacs Ouellette has moved to Austin, and the city seems to agree with her. She and Dean have learned Transcendental Meditation and feel they are experiencing many benefits both in their feelings about themselves and in relationships with their son Amos and others. Transcendental is also the best word to describe the mood of her letter, and we wish her present and continued happiness.

Chris Joyce Miller finds her new house provides the needed space for a toddler. She also had a visit from Pam Poch Foote this summer.

Here in Lexington things continue much as they always do. I did spend five days in Chicago at the American Psychological Association meetings and had a marvelous time. Paul will defend his dissertation in a few months, and I hope to be finished with my doctoral classwork by spring. Finally, to all who asked, I did find a dissertation topic that looks really interesting. Dr. Joyce Brothers, move over!

Georgia reporting:

Since visiting us this past spring, Ann Joseph has not only been busy at her job at the Environmental Protection Agency, but also has found time to begin refinishing furniture, and to travel to Martha's Vineyard, where she saw Carole Kuhn Silver.

Elfriede Pittman Manresa has, in the past five years, traveled to Algeria, France, Italy, Germany, Switzerland, and England, with several trips back to the U.S. in between. She is now married, and living in Spain, where she teaches English.

Leslie Miller writes that since her divorce, she is resuming her maiden name. Her new job is Data Processing Manager for Albert M. Greenfield Company, involved in Philadelphia-based real estate management.

Barbara Morgan Spiegelman and Stan are both at Westinghouse Corporation now. Since completing her Master's in Library Science, Barb works part-time as a consultant in their Nuclear Energy Systems Library, Nuclear Fuel Division, with Kathleen Kratt Neeley, who is now a full-time librarian there.

Kathy Osmond graciously hosted my parents, my husband, and me, while we visited in and around Boston in April, during the Bicentennial Celebration. Although busy at the Office of Financial Aid, Wellesley College, she still finds time to participate in a bicycle riders' association, and go camping and sailing.

Pam Poch Foote and John are still at the same companies; Pam's position as Personnel Supervisor at Estee Lauder involves increasing responsibilities, so they relax by traveling; in May to the Club Med in Guadalupe, and in summer to Southampton, Long Island. They also visited Cris Joyce Miller and Ray in Swampscott, Massachusetts, and Jill Dworkin Eisner and family who are living in the New York area now.

Chilton Richardson Knudsen is now Clinic Director for Planned Parenthood Center in Wheaton, IL, and is also teaching biology at Du Page Community College.

Debbie Rosch Blanchard and Dick have moved back to Buffalo, where they are redecorating their new house, and spending evenings at the Bolshoi Ballet, the New York Shakespeare Theatre, and the Shaw Festival at Niagara-on-the-Lake.

Joni and I spent five weeks this summer in California, enjoying San Francisco and its environs. The balance of our time was spent in Los Angeles and San Diego, returning via New Mexico and the Colorado Rockies. While still completing my dissertation research, I have also been working as Executive Committee Woman for the Republican Party in the twentieth ward. We often see Emily Hill Buka '67 and her family.

Pati reporting:

Ellie Scheirer's letter from Florida plainly shows she is enjoying the Florida beaches but says that she misses fall and winter. She must really miss the cold weather since Ellie reports that she visited Nova Scotia last winter! She is still busy working on a competency-based teacher education program at the University of North Florida, as well as traveling to Colorado for a conference and to San Francisco. Helen Sparks Trollman was on her way from Oshkosh to Chicago and off to house hunting again. Helen will be transferring with IBM to their Chicago finance office, and John will work for Motorola's Communications Division. She says that it will be hard to give up the resort living they've grown accustomed to for the past two years, but opportunity calls.

Mandy Timney Finizio sent lots of news about a very busy year. She married Frank Finizio in July and they are living in Needham, MA. Frank, a graduate of Colby College in Maine and Boston College Graduate School of Management, works as a manager of systems, analyses and budgets for Stowe-Woodward Company. Many loves her first "challenging, exhausting, and rewarding" year of teaching and was looking forward to returning this fall.

Connie Swjantek Simons sent along greetings and a new address. Susan Schmerer says that all is normal with her as she starts her second year at the University of Oregon Law School. Candy Saly Curry is also busy continuing her education. Her husband Norm is finishing his Ph.D. dissertation at Bowling Green State University, and then they plan to move to Johnstown, Pennsylvania.

Ellen Schreiberman Salk's full schedule has her working mornings at a day care center and also painting in her own studio. She hopes to combine working in art and counseling. Ellen would like to hear from some of her old friends, and her address is 7761 Eads Avenue, La Jolla, CA 92037. Davida Tunis Philips divides her time between her children and doing charity work for Cerebral Palsy. She can hardly believe that her older son Marc started kindergarten this year!

Laurel Weiss Rothman is finding two children to be quite a challenge — more than twice as much work as one! Laurel isn't working now and says that she misses the stimulation of other adults. She would welcome any visitors to Toronto. Betty Shapiro Kaplan worked as a film editor for National Football League Films until the day before Emily Louise arrived. Betty's now busy with Emily, but still plans to do some freelance work with NFL Films this fall. Barbara Stern Heffer reports that Alison Jill is a delight and that motherhood is a most rewarding experience for her.

The main word in my vocabulary this year has been "new." Jay has a new job, joining a law firm in Greensburg, PA, where we moved into a new house with our new baby. That's more than enough novelty for one year! I "retired" last December after six and a half years of teaching, and Jason was born in January. Now I'm busier than ever and do prefer spending the day with one child of my own rather than lots of someone else's children! I still find time to read, sew, knit, and I've just taken up bargello needlepoint. It was certainly good to hear from everyone, and a happy year to all.

Diane reporting:

Trinka Bickle, still a fellow New Yorker, reports that she is planning to "retire" and to relax a month or two before trying her hand at free-lance. She visited with Lisa Garber in Canada this summer and saw Susie Patton Munn and her husband. Melanie Duncan's wedding in June.

Maggie Dawson Hobbs had Suzanne W. Murphy, Phoebe Morse, and Betsy Krieger '71 members of her wedding party when she and Peter married in June. Peter is on a fellowship at Georgetown, while Maggie, MAT in hand, is job-hunting.

Mary Archick Antimary and Linda C. Goldman have both sent their young sons off to school this fall. Linda's Michael is in nursery school but he and sister Danielle are keeping Linda busy. Mary enjoys the peace while Mikey is in kindergarten, but she's already contemplating year's dilemma; to work or not to work once Mikey spends the whole day in class.

Jobs, new or old, already occupy time for some of us. Linda Canan Horn is still working on children from juvenile court in Contra Costa County and continues to love both work and "her" child. She and Ron spent an enjoyable vacation in Hawaii this year. They anticipate Ron's completing his doctorate within the next year or so.

Susan Craycraft Willard and John are again traveling, although Susan says she'll be job hunting in February. They camped at the Finger Lakes for part of their vacation — a welcome rest after ten months of junior high school kids. Sue says both she and John would like to relocate — can anyone help them on that? — and are hoping to work as National Park rangers next summer.

Relocating to some degree or other has several classmates busy. Diane Cohen moved this year to a new apartment in Wilkinsburg. She's in her sixth year of teaching chemistry at Churchill High School. During the past two summers, she's been traveling: first to France, and this past summer to California. She occasionally sees Eileen McGovern '71 at international folk dancing sessions at the University and she sends best wishes to everyone.

Ruth Abraham is now living in Maine in a new house.

house near the water. Her new job is at Adon College, where she is Supervisor of Film Language Labs. Across the country, Anne Eher Ertel and Jeff are settling into a new life in Oregon. Anne will be working "at anything to wide food" while Jeff takes up his studies in accounting at the University of Oregon Business School.

Ella Ashworth has been settled in Hartford for a while now. She's working for the North Central Connecticut Emergency Medical Services and taking a course which will qualify her to "person" an ambulance. Her letter reflected a common feeling in writing, "These sketches always make one's life seem neat and orderly that it amuses me to see them in print." Of course, within the confines of space, this is the best that can be done. Besides, on those hectic days, isn't it nice to think that the chaos can fit neatly into a phrase or two?

Nancy Clark Davis had a busy June in 1974. She is married, got her B.S. in Nursing and is now a fledgling R.N.

My own life, for example, is markedly topsy-turvy right now. I had scarcely enough time to read after my vacation in Alsace before my first term law school crept up on me. I'm walking around in a daze muttering, "Student, who, me?" and wondering if my acceptance at St. John's was merely an unchecked clerical error. More seriously, I am tremendously pleased with my new student status, and am looking forward to the challenge of the law school experience. I hope you are all as contented as I am.

Letter reporting:

Although the response to my request for class was less than half this time, I thank those of you who did write to me and who generously contributed to bailing our class treasury out of deficit financing.

Mary Ann Dievendorf Bickerstaff and her family have moved from Connecticut to New Jersey where she found Tom has a new job. Mary Ann has sung semi-professionally quite a bit this year including a soloist stint for the Wethersfield Arts Festival.

Melissa Dodge Lloyd reports that husband Mike has his own firm in architectural and development services. She's keeping busy with her 18-month-old toddler.

Judy Foecking is currently writing her Ph.D. dissertation in German literature while also teaching Intermediate and Scientific German classes at Case Western Reserve University.

After spending the month of August on Cape Cod, Pam Gast will teach a combined first-second grade. She's also working on a master's degree in elementary administration and supervision at Boston University. Pam's also become quite a seamstress, taking about half of her wardrobe.

Katrine Geha Kirm and husband Steve are working in the human service programs of King Center in Louisville, Kentucky. They provide human relations consultation and training to business, industry and civic groups. They've also taken up figure skating. Katrine reports that she had a visit from Jacki Falco '71 and heard Ilene Sirocca perform on the Pennsylvania Bicentennial Barge when it was in Louisville.

Ellen Gonchar sends greetings. She is presently in between jobs and hopes to return to school for a M.D.

Caryn Hall Anstine also sends greetings. Her baby weighed 10 pounds, 6 ounces at birth — as she describes, "quite an armful."

Sherry Handsman Steiner spent most of the year writing in New York. She spent time with classmates Susan Thorn, Andrea Pratt, and Ann Ungar. In April, Sherry and husband Julius moved to Philadelphia where Sherry is administrator and actress for Pocket Playhouse, a repertory theatre.

Sincere apologies to Judy Harding who has been inconvenienced due to a clerical error. To set the record straight, Judy is not married and her correct address is 126 King Street, Northampton, MA 01060.

Fran Conkey Trafton and husband Peter are off to Fairbanks, Alaska where Peter will fulfill his commitment as a doctor for the Army. Fran and Peter are stationed in the Canadian Rockies this summer.

Fran writes that anyone passing through Fairbanks is most welcome.

As for me, I am working on my doctorate in Early and Middle Childhood Education at Ohio State. Our vacation this year was a sunny and warm December in Jamaica. We had wonderful visits this summer from Cathy O'Daniel and Cindy Plotkin Mervis and her husband.

Cheri reporting:

Although more alumnae from the class of '25 managed to attend our last reunion than did those from '70, the few of us there made ourselves heard at the alumnae luncheon. In the midst of discussion of law school, the economy, the new look of Chatham, and children, it was pointed out that most of the information requested on the Recorder form letter that I had always sent out was no longer appropriate. And although I was not a math major, I realized that it was cheaper for me (since I do not request reimbursement for postage) to send 8-cent postcards rather than 10-cent letters. Because I forgot my return address on the original cards, I sent a second notice requesting news. I didn't even ask for a dollar to replenish the class treasury which is in the red on the second card hoping the dollar wouldn't keep people from writing. And guess what? Four out of twenty-two women were sweet enough to answer. That's some record. A thousand thank yous to Betsy, Pris, Naida and Janet. Here's their news.

Naida Karoly Finane is now an assistant to the chairman of the English Department at the College of Marin. Her recent visitors included Anne Murton, Pris Jameson Richardson, Janice Lee and Mary Kay Connell. Our class is not featured in the spring Recorder, Naida.

Although threatened by a move to Tennessee, Pris Jameson Richardson and Ray are still in Greensburg busy with gardens, motorcycles, spinning, weaving, yoga and various volunteer activities including the Greensburg College Club, Welcome Wagon and helping to set up a local branch of the A.A.U.W. together with Janet Kugler James. Pris enjoyed the reunion and her trip to the West Coast where she saw Naida and Jim. She and Ray occasionally see Janet Kugler James and Gene who both are enjoying their jobs and their house. Like Pris, Jan enjoyed our reunion although she wished the attendance had been better.

Betsy Jackson's letter was super as usual. She is now the Director of Student Activities of Middlebury College in Vermont. She deals with all the student groups such as the Black Student Union, the Women's Action Coalition, Freshman Orientation, etc. Betsy says the view of the mountains from her place is fantastic, good for her plants, and Chatham people; such as Anne Wakely who, Betsy says is skinny and still working for the Highland Community School, Phoebe Morse who still works in the Vermont Attorney General's office as Assistant A.G., and Prue Merton '71. She is busy with her job, Friends Society and women's issues including a state conference on rape which she helped organize.

I am still fairly tied to my home because my children are so young but I make time to be active in various volunteer organizations. I do craftwork and planted a huge garden which kept me busy canning and pickling through most of the summer. Matt and I went to army summer camp with Joel for two weeks. Hollee is learning to walk and both kids terrorize poor Zeebie all day long. Hopefully next year at this time we will know what Joel is going to do when he finishes his residency at Eye and Ear. That's all. Have a healthy year.

Jane reporting:

David Allerton Patterson, first son of Molly (Miesse) and David Patterson made his debut, naturally, so Molly writes, on April Fool's Day. Molly's stopped working for the time being but may go back later this year. David Sr. has graduated from law school and is anxiously awaiting the results of his bar exam. The Patterson family had just returned from a relaxing and well-deserved summer near Ligonier.

Another new set of parents are Kim (Oates) and Joe Tumbler. Their son, Christopher was born in June. Kim's still making the transition from working wife to mother, but she's enjoying the change along with her new home. Joe has become an officer of the Girard Bank. Kim writes that she saw Barbara McEliece twice this year.

Gayle Parker seems to have become the alumnae secretary for "associates." I'll briefly report all the news she sent: Carol Lee Crocker and her husband Todd are living in a restored, circa 1700's tavern in Concord, MA. Their latest addition is a son born in June. Frankie Whitman lives near Ithaca and works in what sounds like a fabulous restaurant called Moose Wood. Through Frankie comes word that Julie Frick is working as a garage mechanic in Ann Arbor. Dolly Tetzlaff McCurdy is in Cleveland keeping active in politics and caring for her son. Kathy Adams Weaver, Paul and their two daughters are off to live in London for twenty months. Gayle herself has moved to Philly and has begun teaching at Wyncote Academy. From her letter it appears that she is "THE" English department.

Dede Newport writes of a marvelous study-tour she took to Eastern Europe sponsored by Scholastic International. She recommends that area of the world to all traveling Americans. On another trip to a conference in Chicago, she ran into Barbara Jacobs who is now assistant editor of American Libraries, the official journal of the American Library Association. Dede keeps in touch with Margaret Walsh who is settling near Pittsburgh where she continues to teach speed reading. When she's not traveling or working, Dede performs Old English music with the Peoria Recorder Consort. Dede, Larry Malfatti would be proud of you!

Phoebe Morse wrote what she called a "quickie note," but it's packed with news. She's still an assistant attorney general for the State of Vermont, splitting her time between criminal trial work and women's rights litigation. In her spare time she's learning about floor-joists, sheetrocking and wiring so she'll be prepared to spruce up the old, one room schoolhouse she's just bought. In June, Phoebe was a bridesmaid in Maggie Dawson's wedding. Others in attendance were Susan Rice Miller and Robert, who by now are in Moscow for two years with the diplomatic corps; Elaine Sherer McNutt and her husband Frank now living in Myrtle Beach teaching and making pottery respectively; Suzanne Wilson Murphy, working with Ralph Nader's group in Massachusetts; and Betsy Krieger, '71. Phoebe sees Jennifer Lewis '69 who visits the ski country quite often it seems.

Dena Loncoske Boxler had just finished her Ph.D. and was in the process of moving. She was starting a new job with Schering Corporation in Bloomfield, NJ on October 1.

Low and I would be in Hong Kong right now if I hadn't been chosen as Chatham's candidate for the Academic Administration Intern Program. (Details of that experience appear elsewhere in this issue.) So we're busy applying for jobs overseas for next year, eager to have a few years out of the country before we think about settling down.

Susan reporting:

This time last year, as I sat down to write the class news I was secretly patting myself on the back for getting so many questionnaires returned from the women in my section of the class. This year — and I try not to take this too personally — I received very few and am quite baffled I didn't hear from more of you.

Cynthia Plotkin Mervis writes that she has just completed a very satisfying year as Director of Activities at the Jewish Home and Hospital for the Aged in Pittsburgh. In June, at the Therapeutic Recreation Institute convention (held at Chatham, incidentally), she presented a paper on a program she'd developed at the Jewish Home for the socialization of elderly patients. The paper was well received and a summary of it will be published in November, 1975. She reports that she and Michael are fine and had just returned from a weekend stay at the home of Evie Lewis Freeman and her husband. She adds a P.S. in which she admonishes me for addressing her envelope in her husband's name and I apologize to her and to anyone else out there I offended by doing so. All I can say in my defense is that that's the way the list I get reads and I have to type those damn envelopes as fast as I can, the demands on a book editor's time being what they are.

Patty Peckinpaugh writes that hassles with a greedy landlord this year forced her to move from her beloved mountain retreat back to urban South Denver. But that seems to be the only cloud in an otherwise successful year. She reports she's in the process of becoming a student advisor in the College of Business at the University of Colorado at Denver; she's been teaching modern dance both privately and at the university; her catering business is picking up; and, along with a partner, she hopes to have a business based out of a health food restaurant going within the next few months.

Jackie Savani Mitchell is still working on her dissertation at the University of Pennsylvania and husband Rick is the branch chief for the federal Environmental Protection Agency. Janis Roseberg Wasserman reports the birth of a new baby, a daughter, Quinci Ann. And finally, Julia Pollock's mother returned the questionnaire and wrote that Julia is in Israel now, working on a kibbutz and studying Hebrew.

And that's it! Oh, where are you, Wong? Susan Rice Miller? Andi Pratt? Jonnie Pearson McElroy? Rica Scheidecker Packard? Clare Ruthenburg Silet? Susie Patton Munn? All my faithful correspondents — I would also welcome the not-so-faithful! Well, at the risk of sounding a bit like the rabbi at the Sedar table, perhaps next year will be better.

In the course of writing this column, I've decided not to speculate on why I received so few questionnaires. But I will report Cookie Ungar's speculation when I mentioned the matter at lunch the other day; she thought that perhaps we all had reached some sort of sameness in our lives, a happy plateau not too much different from last year's situation, which made the reporting of any "news" beside the point. Being twenty-seven is a lot different than being twenty-two, she remarked. Perhaps there's some truth to all that. I prefer to think the situation is caused by more mundane matters: I sent the questionnaires out too late (though I didn't); you never received them (possible); I didn't give you enough time to respond (h-m-m-m, maybe); all the questionnaires were stolen from my mailbox while I spent two weeks in Nantucket this summer (a situation I must consider, New York being what it is). As I said before, I try not to take it too personally.

But you're all dying to hear my news, right? Well, I'm still at Doubleday, still an editorial assistant (now for the editor-in-chief); still editing the books other editors bring in. In trade publishing, you see, the name of the game is acquisitions — what authors an editor can bring into the house — and I'm learning that it takes years of building up contacts to build up a list of one's own. But I've made a start this year, the bare beginnings of a real career as an editor (although, ironically, Doubleday thinks of me as an editor but has yet to give me the full title). I've acquired three books, a fourth one will be signed up soon. The first novel I ever acquired for Doubleday is a period novel spanning three generations set in Galveston, Texas from 1877 to 1920. It will be published next June, so be sure to rush out and buy a dozen copies. The paperback rights were sold just last week to Bantam for $150,000. Not bad for a rookie editor. Until next year . . .

Pat reporting:

After five years on the road, Margaret Walsh is again in Pittsburgh, where she will be Manager for Evelyn Wood Reading Dynamics. The job involves teaching and promotional work at various colleges and companies in the area, and Margaret hopes to set up a class on the Chatham campus.

Ilene Sirocca is 'between engagements,' taking a well-deserved rest after a summer of touring seventeen cities in six states. She was a soloist in Pennsylvania '76, a Bicentennial program of symphonic and popular American music, sponsored in part by the Pennsylvania Bicentennial Commission.

The past year saw several changes in the household of Tom and Diana Urban Eichler. They became parents of Jeremy Jacob and moved into a townhouse on the other side of Reston, VA. Other good news is the opening of Tom's new dental office. Diana also sends news that Lori Gray is very happy working as an editorial assistant at Pyramid Publications.

Suzanne Wilson Murphy is working as Student Activities Coordinator for the Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group, a Ralph Nader-inspired organization. The Group is active in examining energy policy, recycling programs, consumer complaint mechanisms and water and air quality standards. Jack is working at the Clinic to Improve University Teaching at the University of Massachusetts/Amherst, and will attend Columbia School of Library Science in the fall. Both Suzanne and Jack were amused to read in last year's Recorder that he was married to Judy Harding. The latest word is that Judy is only a close neighbor.

Pam Stock Curry and John send greetings from California, where she is working for the Stanford Heart Disease Prevention Program. Her program is trying to assess the impact of mass media on our behavior toward smoking, cholesterol, exercise — risk factors in heart disease. John taught calculus at Stanford; he hopes to complete the Ph.D. this spring.

After five years at Western Psych, Nedra Sheatz Brody has moved on to Children's Hospital, as a Social Worker for the Developmental Clinic. Her job involves family assessments, and group and family therapy. Davis has left Kaufmann's to open his own clothing store in Oakland. The Brodys are also purchasers of a townhouse in Shadyside.

Joining the list of townhouse owners in Shadyside are Jim and Sue Sponzilli Harland. Their immediate plans after buying the house were to coax vegetables out of the Pittsburgh soil. This fall Sue returns to the University of Pittsburgh as a teaching fellow and to her work on a Ph.D. in English. Jim will divide his job as a rehabilitation counselor between Council House and Pitt.

Cookie Ungar spent her summer doing Shakespeare and local beer (!) commercials in Louisville and is now back in New York to begin another season off-off Broadway. She frequently sees Susie Schwartz, Sue Thorn and Sherry Steiner who are alive, well and kicking around New York according to Cookie.

Connie Wiencek-Kobalka is now the Coordinator of Volunteer Services for the West Side Community Mental Health Center in Cleveland. She will be kept busy supervising volunteers, editing the agency's newsletter, and orienting new staff members. Walt worked this summer for the law firm representing the plaintiffs in the Kent State case. The Kobalkas are looking forward to a vacation in New England this fall, "before Bicentennial fever really takes hold."

I spent this summer "out East," teaching Portuguese at the Yale Summer Language Institute. I will be at the University of Iowa for the coming year, as an Instructor in Portuguese.

Sue Sponzilli Harland has graciously offered to "take over" this section of the class news, at least for the next five years. I think the five-year rotation system is a good one, and I hope one of you offers to relieve her in 1980. I will miss the promise of a full mailbox in the fall, as well as the cards and letters I receive from you throughout the year. It's been fun.

POST

Barbara Ann Harland

Andrea McClelland Hill

Julie reporting:

Many of our class have recently earned or are working on their master's. Anne Bonte Hackett is accumulating credits in education at Michigan State, and teaching third graders again. Jamie is a licensed independent builder now, despite the economy. Ann Brooks has recently earned her M.S. and is teaching medial reading at the junior high level. For sport she has taken up white water canoeing. Barbara Ellen Hill plans to take some time off from the twins to work on a master's in Developmental Psychology. She and Bruce have moved into a new house and Barbara is busy with many community groups. Carolyn Alter has also earned her master's in Art History at North Carolina, Chapel Hill, and is heading to Illinois to work on her Ph.D. at the University of Chicago. Kevin Cartwright Cornell is continuing her work with the Chicago Department of Public Works, soon to be a research analyst in environmental impact. She is planning a master's in Urban Planning at the University of Illinois. Ted is now with a law firm and waiting to hear about his bar exams.

Joanne Fiedler starts back at Chatham this fall, at in the capacity of laboratory instructor for the psychology Department. Ahh, the memories of penarian rat cages, and perception games, how well I can all remember. Jennifer Aung Din Wiegand is spending her time at the Mount Holly, New Jersey public library where she is Assistant Director, and is becoming an authority on rare books dating back to the 1700's. Janet Bartini Blair is doing photography and information chores for a stuffy corporation in Albuquerque, but she didn't write on letterhead paper, so we won't know who. Dianne Buck Schrader is still working part-time and she and Rick converted their Dodge van into a camper this summer.

My life is a new job at the University of Rochester and an old farmhouse in Honeoye Falls, NY. The highlight of the year without a doubt was the celebration of BJ Singer's marriage to Steve Malower in N.Y.C. this August. Beej was beautiful, and it gave many good friends a reason to gather again. Thank you Beej, Steve, Herb and Marcia.

Julie reporting:

Diane Pfanner has been down in the Virgin Islands on St. Thomas, helping her family out with a resort they have built there — Point Pleasant. It looks beautiful, and if anyone would like any info on it, Diane would be happy to send it to you. She would be back in Vermont with her pots and dog soon. Rhoda McLeod Glover, your semi-annual letter to her is overdue! Laurie Plesser Brodie and Tom are very happy in L.A. He's been working on a fellowship in Cardiology while Laurie has quit her job and plans to go back to school at UCLA.

As of last January, Kathy Plunkett Hunt sounded very good, enjoying some leisure time. She's in Indiana just across the river from Louisville, Kentucky. Suzanne Robblee Cottrelle has been working for the Women Studies Program at Pitt which she says has been very interesting. She hopes to finish her M.A. in History at Pitt by December, and after that, she and Jerry plan to leave Pittsburgh and travel in Latin America until their money runs out. Since Chris Sage moved closer to them, they've been making an effort to keep her out of trouble, but Suzanne says it's hard. Speaking of Chris, she lives about an hour outside of Pittsburgh, working with mentally retarded adults at the Exceptional Development Center at Lawrence Hospital. She's also been involved quite a bit with bluegrass music — she does a weekly bluegrass radio program over WXP-FM (91.5) in Pittsburgh Tuesday nights (8-10 p.m.).

Karen Roberts Sellman is still in Ohio, teaching second grade and working on her M.A. in foreign language education. Her husband Jerry finished law school in June and already has a job in Columbus. She's seen Mary Stackpole and her in-laws were guests of Vicki Lau in Hawaii last year.

Shelly Rosen finished a clinical traineeship in oncology and will transfer to the University of Pittsburgh, School of Medicine this fall. Sheila Rosenbaum Dalmat and her husband spent 7½ months in Nicaragua where Sheila taught school and Michael worked on managerial problems in the Ministry of Public Health. They then moved on to Pakistan where Michael taught management. By September they will be in Columbia, MD; Michael at school at Johns Hopkins in a Ph.D. program.

Terri Rupani Nagel and Rich have moved to the country where they are both self-employed in pottery and leatherwork and do a bit of traveling to craft fairs. This past winter they were snowed-in for five days and had to seek their own wood and melt snow for water. Terri has her own studio behind their house. Anne Pantelich spent the past year in Houston, TX. She's been taking a few courses for architecture school which she'll enter next year at either Rice University or C-MU. She was in Pittsburgh this summer and visited with Mary Stackpole and Ellie Schechter Maney — and finally got the chance to take a white water raft trip down the Youghiogheny River outside of Pittsburgh.

It seems that I've had quite a full year. I've been working as the "Registrar" (Oh yes!) at an all-boys prep school in DC. I work with the seniors on college applications and am also on the admissions committee. I really enjoy it there. In June, Joyce Kossack married Stephen Lamb and had a super wedding — Joyce looked fantastic. The next day the two of them graduated from Georgetown Law School and have moved to New Jersey. And I got married too. I was very lucky to have so many of my close friends there: Ellie Schechter Maney and Dick, Amy Wroldstad Burger and Jim, Julie Wilkins and Hugh Nellans, Barb Grossman, and my old counselees Cathy Young and Nancy Hicks, plus Liz Naumoff. It was a very special day for me, and I don't think I've ever been anywhere where there had been more love and happiness among a group of people. As for Steve, he's pretty special also. He graduated from Kenyon in 1971, and works for a real estate firm in Washington. I hope everyone has had as wonderful a year as I have — and another great one coming up.

Amy reporting:

This past summer was my summer for seeing Chatham people. In July I saw Sara Stotzer and Nancy Stewart at the beach near Rockport, MA. We were next to each other escaping the 100° heat. Then in August at Beej's wedding I saw Julie Wilkins, Barb Grossman, and Ellie Schechter Maney. We had a good time — only wished Beej had more time to talk!

Sue Taishoff has finished all requirements for her Ph.D. in History except the dissertation. She spent last summer on a NSF grant at the University of Michigan and will be there this year doing research and research design.

Mary Stackpole finished her master's in Elementary Education at Pitt this summer. She saw Kevin Cartwright Cornell and Sharon Ray while in Chicago.

Carolyn Wuchina Snyder sends greetings and reports that she officially retired from the Pittsburgh schools — but sounds busy with her 18-month-old son!

Rob Weinbrenner Schuler finished her master's in English at Carnegie-Mellon this summer and is permanently certified to teach English. Diane Tirpack Kangas, who now lives in New Hampshire, stopped by to visit Rob.

Susan Vance has been extremely busy "professionally" this past year with papers and conventions. She received her master's in Clinical Psychology from Temple University in 1974 and has finished her requirements for her Ph.D. This fall she starts at Syracuse University to write her dissertation. She'll be working in conjunction with the Upstate Medical Center.

Barb Studenmund reports most enthusiastically from Washington, DC. She has a great social life, a new job at Changing Times Education Service, her "professional" singing job, and a guinea pig. What more could one ask? I believe there's a Studenmund who was/is responsible for the craziness on the Williams College radio station — could it be that it runs in the family?

No class news was received from Sally Miesse and Ann Peirce in time for publication in this issue of the Recorder.

Cyn reporting:

Everyone seems to have had an enjoyable summer. I am of course assuming that everyone who didn't respond to my letter was having so much fun that they didn't have time to write! Those who did respond however, seem quite busy. Ruby Bowe, who had just returned from a vacation in Virginia when she wrote, is now enrolled in the Master's Program in Sociology at Duquesne University. She has also been in touch with Jane Kirui '73 from Kenya.

Elizabeth (Betsy) Bopp is now working in the Medical Records Office of Columbia Hospital. She finds the work 'interesting and unusual.' Crystal Burns is now attending Brooklyn College Graduate School in communications (what else). She has kept in touch with Linda Cralle who now resides in California and loves it! Wendy Caparosa has graduated and is now a physical therapist. At this writing, she wanted to work in Boston, Atlanta or Phoenix. I'll check the postmark on her next letter to see where she finally settled. She and Barb Sloane did a little drinking and reminiscing about Chatham this summer. Joanne Buas Georgeson spent the summer travelling out West visiting Colorado, Wyoming, Utah and Montana. She's now preparing to return to teaching in Maryland.

Before returning to Pittsburgh, I had the pleasure of having my picture taken with Mara Unger and Ida Levine who are both well. I've also talked to Deborah Rowson Smalls who received her M.A. in Administrative Education in August and is now working and Mae Isaac who is still in the Rape business! I have returned to Pittsburgh to study for an M.A. in International Affairs at Pitt. If anyone is ever around the place, drop by and say hello.

Missie reporting:

Well, here I am freeloading on Cape Code. As of June, I was granted a Master's in International Relations. I retired for the month of June and celebrated the 4th of July by starting to work for a woman who owns an international manufacturing company and two boutiques specializing in foreign clothes, jewelry, cosmetics and objets d'art. The amazing part is that she didn't start the business until she was 62 years old — having never held a job or done business before. Not only are the three enterprises booming, but also expanding. And so am I. I have temporarily retired my comfortable world of culture, language and diplomacy to study accounting, business law and management. This seems to be the pattern of the class of 1974. The class seems to be mounting a frontal attack on every field imaginable — often times combining two or more fields in one blow. Let's look at some of the combinations!

Susan Gilbert wrote that she finished her M.A. in Elementary Education at Pitt in May. She spent the summer in Boca Raton, Florida working in the family furniture store and taking a workshop in curriculum development at Florida Atlantic University. At this point, Susan plans to return to the "Burgh" and look for a job teaching or in the advertising field "if it proves productive."

Karen Gilgoff is moving to DC as of October where she has a "super job" as Assistant Editor of a monthly labor magazine dealing with the AFL-CIO groups in hotels, restaurants, bartenders and catering services. The editorial office is moving in with the legislative office in Washington and Karen is moving with them. Sounds fantastic! Karen said that she and Elayne Rosen had spent Memorial weekend with Andy Fox Krupp and her husband Bernie. Then off for a "demoralizing" round of cheap apartment hunting. She finally wound up at Laurie Purcell Djinis' wedding in Wellesley, MA. The report is that it was a beautiful Greek Orthodox ceremony and was attended by such notables as Shelly Listman and Ellen Blustein.

Bonnie Gotjen Steele dropped a long letter in the mail. First, congratulations to Bonnie and her new husband. Besides getting married, Bonnie has been working as a systems analyst for P.P.G. Industries and is working on an MBA at Duquesne at night. Bonnie reported that Sue Rehrig spent the summer with her while she was finishing an MBA at Pitt. Sue is now in Allentown working for Haskins & Sells. Further report is that Renee George was working in Buffalo this summer and is now touring the country in a van that she bought and fixed up for home-type comforts. Her eventual plan is to wind up in Colorado as a ski instructor.

Jo Salim is in the Army and has been to Pittsburgh to visit Bonnie a few times. Jo is stationed in Georgia and is working in the base hospital. Bonnie reports that Jo especially likes her new car, the feeling of independence and the travel opportunities.

Linda Harger finished her M.S. in accounting in September at Northeastern, then was moving back to the Pitt area to begin work in October for Arthur Young & Co. Linda, let us know your address when you get settled.

The chicken pox kid, Elsie Heard has moved to Philly. Elsie took criminal law courses at the Paralegal Institute in Philly and is now running Felony and Homicide division of the District attorney's office. With time out for good behavior, some tips from Perry Mason, Elsie hopes to start school next fall.

Vern Herron is on the go. Vern worked for Office of Legal Council in the PA. Health Dept. (Harrisburg) this summer. She took a week off to visit Linda Cralle in California who works at UC and is "doing fine." Vern plans to finish her studies at American University in May, 1976. She hopes to return to Pennsylvania, take the bar exam and open practice.

Marilyn Horbaly has an apartment with Carol Cusak. She was "relatively successful" in the watercolor course she took this summer. Time has passed and she was starting her second year teaching kindergarten at Woodley Hills Elementary School.

Janice Johns spent a star-studded year touring with the "Chuck Corby Revue" as an entertainer. What an exciting way to spend a year! Now Janice has moved to New York and will start work on MSW at Columbia — hopes to finish by May 1976. She reported that she had seen Leslie Werner who was working at Westinghouse and Marilyn Miller who was at the University of Michigan.

Carol Katonik, wow! Carol is film editor and producer of taped interviews of Pittsburgh's ethnic peoples for Pitt's Oral History Archives. She is working on two films and is producing "Women Hold Up HALF The Sky" at WYEP-FM radio. Carol reported that she successfully grew a vegetable garden and set up a Batik and Tie-Dye studio this summer. Additionally, spent the 4th of July weekend at Antioch College at "The Socialist/Feminist Conference." Carol wants to start a women's coffee house/bookshop in Pittsburgh. If anyone is intrigued or interested, call her (412/687-4458).

It sure sounds as if the class of '74 is charging into the Bicentennial Year with great gusto and determination. If you plot your mind and your eyes on something, you can do it — keep charging.

Mara reporting:

It has been a busy year for me — I worked as a medical receptionist/aide in an obstetrician/gynecologist's office and was quite active in local theater and choral groups. Now I'm looking forward to attending the Institute for Paralegal Training in Philadelphia, where I'll be studying criminal law — quite a change from music!!

Wally Kissel Mertes will be returning on a part-time basis to Georgetown University for the master's program in French. She and Doug toured New England in May and saw Wendy Holloway and Linda Harger in Boston — both are doing well.

Down in Virginia, Paula Leshko Zuzo is hoping for a week aboard a research vessel as part of her thesis as research assistant, while Gus is working on his thesis.

Ida Levine loves Chicago, where she's studying toward a master's in Latin and Greek at the University — and still finds time to have several "jobs" in and around the city.

After spending a summer in Pittsburgh, Marilyn Miller is getting ready to go back for her second year at Ann Arbor, where she is working toward her master's in Art History.

While working as a contracts representative at Westinghouse, Kay Kiefer is attending Georgetown University, earning credits toward her M.B.A. in Finance and Investments — and Westinghouse is picking up the tab! That sounds like a great job!

Along with attending the graduate school in Social Psychology at the University of Pittsburgh, Maureen McHugh has been involved with teaching the "Psychology of Women." This year at a half-way house in Butler, she'll be doing research on alcoholism.

Lynn Mack had a great summer in Maine painting Brad's parents' home, and then returned to Chicago where she worked as an instructor for incoming dental students... and even found time for tennis with Mara Unger.

Carol Knopfler Ruderman and Bob are currently living in Knopfler, where Bob is a resident in Pediatrics and Carol is working in a management training program for the Chicago Board Opticians Exchange.

en reporting:

There seems to be no one generalization to be made about this section of the Class of 1974, except that everyone whom I've heard from seems happy and content — which certainly isn't the worst news to hear!

Debbie Mosby spent a hectic but marvelous summer as musical director in performing arts at a Y camp where "working" hours stretched from seven A.M. till after midnight — "piano players," Debbie says, "never get rest." Needless to say, she loved it. She should finish her master's in musicology from Syracuse ("with luck") next June.

Annie Murphy, now in Pittsburgh rooming with Betsy Becker '75, holds the record for most work experience to date. She worked her way from receptionist to senior research assistant at a New York City executive recruiting firm before moving to Pittsburgh in April, and has tentative plans to start back to school next fall.

Judy Nemzer has already taken that plunge, and is presently beginning work toward a master's at the Graduate School of Public Health at Pitt, where she plans to specialize in administration of health services. She (along with an article in the Post-Gazette last spring) reports that Ellen Blustein is managing the Roots Natural Footwear Shop in Shadyside.

Cindy Montgomery has also forsaken full-time employment (and sharing an apartment with me) for graduate school — in her case, it's study for a master's of Industrial Management at Purdue University. She received both a grant and a resident assistantship, and plans on really hitting the books for at least a full year.

Judi Parker Wolf continues her ceramics work in a variety of ways, teaching both individual and craft sessions and supplying several stores with her work. She asked about Lisa Nicholas, who, rumor has it, spent at least the summer in Europe, also working in ceramics.

Francesca Peckman writes that she is nearing completion of her master's in psychology, on her way to a Ph.D. in clinical psych. She's also been working with emotionally disturbed children at a mental health agency. She reports an active social life and eager anticipation of the winter months, since she's become a confirmed ski bum!

Gwen McCreary Davis has been working as a personnel specialist at Motorola in Mesa, Arizona, since graduating from Arizona State last May. She and her husband are both in school part-time, but they try to make side-trips to Mexico whenever they have the chance. Despite all this, she still reports a twinge of homesickness after a visit to her sister at Chatham last year.

As for me, I'm just completing my first year of work as a corporate paralegal for the law firm of Reed Smith Shaw & McClay in Pittsburgh and am seriously considering law school for next fall. In the meantime, I'm taking a course at the Graduate School of Library Science at Pitt. These activities keep me in close touch with two classmates: C. J. Behrend, who is dividing her time between part-time paralegal work at Reed Smith and courses at Duquesne Law School at night (which doesn't leave much time for anything else) and Diane Sakillaris, who will be finishing her master's in Library Science from Pitt in December and whose future plans are "extremely open-ended." I've also managed visits to Mara Mittleman and Randi Gelfand Lewis (who is also going the law school route part-time at George Washington), and received a welcome overnight visit from Kay Sandburg '73, who has returned to the States from twenty months in Japan and plans to start her master's in East Asian Studies at Stanford this fall.

Once again, thanks to everyone who wrote — it's great to hear what's happening.

Margy reporting:

It certainly was good hearing from so many people this fall. Can you believe it's been over a year since graduation? Everyone seems to be putting their Chatham degrees to good use either in the business world or by increasing her education:

Debbie Samelson writes that she is entering her second (and last) year of graduate school at CMU's School of Industrial Administration. She spent this summer working as a research assistant at Carnegie-Mellon concentrating on Organizational Behavior. Also at Carnegie-Mellon is Lynne Schramm. She just received her master's degree in Statistics and is beginning work on her Ph.D. This past spring semester saw Lynne working as a statistical intern at J&L, Pgh. works. She said the practical experience was "invaluable." Sue Rehrig just graduated this August from Pitt's MBA program and has a job with Haskins & Sells CPA firm.

Patti Schuster Georgalas wrote to say that after a short stint as a museum curator in Philadelphia, she decided to enter Wharton School of Business to get her MBA. She's majoring in marketing and finance and only has one more year to go. This past summer she worked as a management consultant in a Philadelphia Bank. Deborah Rowson Smalls just received her master's degree in administrative education and was initiated into a professional fraternity, Phi Delta Kappa. She plans on working for an insurance company for about a year and then returning to school for her doctorate in September 1976. Karen Prus, the only traveler that I've heard from, has just completed a year's study in philosophy of science, logic, and metaphysics and German at the University of St. Andrews in Scotland.

Then to bridge the gap between school and work, Linda Reilly had been working in Industrial Steel Sales in Pittsburgh for J&L and has just recently been transferred to Cleveland, where she will also pursue graduate studies at Kent State University.

Teresa Ross Cognetti has been working as a paralegal since graduation. She is also involved with a Bicentennial Committee for the historic Christ Church. Sally Schlesinger has been teaching at the Yeshiva School in Squirrel Hill. She's also continuing her education by pursuing a graduate degree in elementary education from Duquesne. Becky Pringle Corbin is working as an analytical chemist at the Northern Virginia Forensic Lab, Division of Dangerous Drugs and Narcotics. She says, "It's just like the TV show, Hawaii Five-O." She and Mike have bought a house about 30 miles from Washington, DC and have been spending their time trying to fill it with antiques. Cherry Semple is currently working at Pittsburgh National Bank and attending graduate school at the University of Pittsburgh. In her spare time she's working at the Home for Crippled Children. Elayne Rosen is working at an advertising agency and as she puts it, "is taking one day at a time." She saw Ellen Blustein, Shelley Listman and Karen Gilgoff at Laurie Parcell's wedding August 16.

As for me, I've been working at the Joseph Horne Company as an assistant buyer for the better part of this year but have just moved home to save money for my marriage in March and will now be working for Lord and Taylor. I've seen Kit Hanson McDonough in my wanderings and she is happily ensconced in Rocky River, OH with husband Al.

Everyone sends her regards and is eagerly looking forward to hearing everyone else's news.

Betsy reporting:

A number of our class members have settled (at least for now) in Pittsburgh. Terri Weinrich Rosenthal, note the new surname!, reports that she and Ricky were married on June 28, 1975. Terri is returning to the Mount Lebanon school system to continue teaching German and is also continuing her work on her master's in German Literature. Leslie Werner is also still in Pittsburgh, and still working at Westinghouse, in a position which she finds requires a great deal of work in communications.

In spite of the difficulties in locating teaching positions, a number of our class members are now engaged in the profession of education. Pat Wintermeyer is again teaching seventh grade English with the Norwin school district. Pat also reports that her master's of education in English is coming along; she finds herself a bit pressed for time... sounds familiar? But, all in all, she says it's been a beautiful year!

Elsewhere in Pennsylvania reside two of our class members. Janet Summers is living in Philadelphia where she is in her second year of a four year doctoral program in optometry at the Pennsylvania College of Optometry. She loves the city and her program at school. Also, from Pennsylvania, I heard from Pat Simpson who is currently residing at home until the job market eases up. Pat is working part-time in Philadelphia as a translator. She is hoping to pick up more hours at work and possibly take graduate law courses.

From Cleveland, Mara Unger reports that the past few months have been extremely busy. Mara had just returned from Chicago where she had a chance to visit Ida Levine and Cyn Bunton. When not traveling Mara occupies her time as a faculty member at Fairmount Center for the Creative and Performing Arts teaching ceramics. Her work with the center has also included a number of art shows, and a chance to really work with her materials; she even has orders from stores for her artwork. In her free time Mara also fits in a course in ceramics at the Cleveland Institute of Art. She expects to be attending the Greater Cleveland Congress — International Women's Year Conference... sounds interesting. Just as a note of interest, many of the letters which I received reflected a genuine concern over the persistence of inequality for women in the male dominated work world. In a variety of ways we seem to be attempting to deal with this matter.

From out west Mary Stephens Schweikher writes that she is now residing in Paradise, AZ — sounds inviting. Mary and Paul are both beginning their second year teaching. Mary is still working in a pre-school. She reports that her summer was spent traveling and visiting in Kansas and California.

Donna Wilson Hopkins reports from West Virginia that she is currently pursuing a career in banking; her position is head bookkeeper and accountant at a local bank. She is also taking accounting courses evenings. Donna's husband Scott is busy writing his master's thesis this year.

From the east, Pam Whitcomb writes that she is developing her skills for a career in photography. In Pittsburgh, Pam was freelancing but due to pure economics she found it advisable to acquire secretarial skills at Katherine Gibbs. She is enjoying Boston especially in this Bicentennial year. After Pam finishes her courses she hopes to find employment in some area of photography.

In a brief trip to Pittsburgh I had the chance to visit with Jo Presnell, Carol Lee and Mildred Morrison. I almost had an uncontrollable urge to head for Woodland Four. A mysterious card came from Caryn Stern from London and other points in Europe. Richard and I are now back in school. Our dormitory is small this year... we only have charge of seven boys. As a result of a financial upheaval at Milford, I found myself teaching full-time in the elementary school at the academy. I have a situation which I believe to be more than ideal, nine students, grades four through six, in a four-room building which I have total reign over. To say it is an educator's paradise is an understatement. Like many other members I am also taking courses perhaps towards a master's in Educational Media and Technology. I'm sorry that I didn't hear from more people; it seems the Recorder provides an ideal method of keeping in touch. For those of you who wrote, thank you for your notes; for those of you who didn't, I hope to hear from you before the next issue.

Of Special Interest

Chatham President Edward D. Eddy has been named by the All Pennsylvania College Alumni Association of Washington, DC as the recipient of its 1976 Citation for his outstanding contribution toward the advancement of the American ideals of education. This association was formally established in 1949 as an organization having a three-fold purpose: to foster the common objectives of the alumni of Pennsylvania's institutions of higher learning, to honor the Presidents of those institutions, and to accord recognition, by awarding a Citation, to an individual who has made an outstanding contribution toward the preservation and advancement of the American ideals of education. Among the past recipients of this Citation are: Dr. Herbert L. Spencer (president of Pennsylvania College for Women from 1935-1945), Dr. Milton S. Eisenhower, Dr. John C. Warner, Dr. Eric A. Walker and Dr. Frederic W. Ness. The Citation will be presented at the Association's 28th annual luncheon on February 7, 1976, at the Marriott Twin Bridges Motel in Arlington, Virginia.

Entering this September as members of the class of 1977 were twelve alumnae daughters. They are Betsey Asbury daughter of Barbara Hyde Asbury '51; Margaret Brown, the late Mary Kathryn Strathearn Brown '42; Jeannette Chakeres, Helen Savas Chakeres '54; Deborah Forsyth Helen Robinson Forsyth '45; Martha Heckel, Joan Goodwin Heckel '51; Ann Hendrickson, Elizabeth Fleenor Hendrickson '47; Melissa Houck, Carol Lenz Houck '48; Suzanne Kramer, Suzanne Nauman Kramer '52; Mary Lane, Louise Richards Lane '50; Leslie Lubic, Jan Kimball Lubic '55; Brigitte McCurdy, Jessie Tomlinson McCurdy '50; and Tonia Payne, Sally Goedicke Payne '66. Transfer student Ellen LeRoy is the daughter of Marjorie Tilghman LeRoy '39.

Jerry L. Caplan, associate professor of art at Chatham College and a prominent ceramic sculptor, has been selected "Artist of the Year" by the member groups of the Arts and Crafts Center of Pittsburgh. The honor is given annually to an artist who has made an outstanding contribution to the artistic climate of Pittsburgh. Mr. Caplan was recently chosen as one of ten Associated Artists to exhibit work at the Madden Galleries in London, England.

For the child I taught had been nurtured and observed from those first moments of life and had developed before their eyes into the person I taught. Of course, they wanted their child handled very carefully.

But even more important now is the community I feel with mothers everywhere. The prejudices and the notions of our separateness are heightened in this society where we have been socialized to accept motherhood in fairy tale descriptions and are isolated in our fairy tale cottages with the accompanying inhuman expectations. Instead of isolation we have much to learn and share with each other — real everyday experiences and the knowledge that we are not "a headless pair of breasts" (Angela Barron McBride's term found in her exciting book The Growth and Development of Mothers).

I feel fortunate that I had long enough to develop in a profession which I left feeling my competence and a sense of satisfaction. I also feel fortunate that today I am at home and learning with my son Kevin about myself, about him, and about life. The unsung heroines of today may be in the apartment or house next door to you. Those who are coping with an education such as I got at Chatham — encouraging me to consider myself an intellectually competent and creative individual — may find the schism between the old myths of our society about mothering and the reality of both the mothering and the real societal attitudes toward mothers difficult to reconcile. I do. But I'm also finding courage in the words of women writing and speaking of their experiences.

For anyone interested, McBride's book is beautifully sensitive and humorous — a song to and for women. Barber & Skaggs, The Mother Person and Jessie Bernard's The Future of Motherhood are also supportive and encouraging. I hope some of you might find as much nourishment in these books as I did. And, to those of you who read the Recorder and wince about the tales of diapers and burps, please recall that some of us still manage to think while we rinse out those diapers.

Dear Chatham Alumnae Recorder,

Another year has passed — do you believe it! I've been quite busy trying to keep up the law school pace. I was elected president of my class again at Pitt and consequently spend a lot of extra hours working on things like first-year orientation, speakers' committees and social committees. As a matter of fact, one of our most successful functions was held at Chatham in September.

This summer I did legal research for the Bureau of Consumer Protection (PA Department of Justice). I first worked down there during Interim at Chatham in my junior year. It's a challenging and rewarding place to work. Right now I'm working with the Legal Assistance Program down at the prison — if you don't think it's an experience working with young men your own age who have served time for armed robbery, murder and every other crime you could mention! Words can't describe it. So far I'm the only woman to volunteer as a legal assistant, not only because law is such a male-dominated career, but also because women were not encouraged to participate. I'm hoping after my first several cases are successfully handled, more women will join the ranks down there.

My husband Dave graduated (with honors) from Pittsburgh Institute of Mortuary Science and is now serving his apprenticeship with a funeral home in Pittsburgh. After I graduate from law school in '77 we will return to Harrisburg where he will become associated with his father and where I will establish my legal practice.

This coming weekend is going to be a great one. Because of the law school life, I don't get out much, so when I do it's a grand gala happening — I make sure of that. Nancy King Jurkiewicz and her husband Rod are coming in from Philadelphia; Ann Clark is coming from Cleveland; Lynn Schramm Recktenwald and her husband Jack and Susan Calderbank and Joe and Lesley Ann Laakso from upstate New York are all coming — we're having our annual get together at the Rolling Rock races. Lynn is in the doctoral program in statistics at CMU. Susan is in dental school at Pitt. Lesley is working for a public relations firm in Albany and Ann is in law school. We're all doing our thing!

(ED note: The above letter arrived too late for inclusion in the regular class news and yet we feel compelled to print it. It says so much about a recent (and almost typical) Chatham graduate — graduate school, marriage, a home, Interim experience leading toward her professional career, outside activities and friends involved in similar life styles.)

Happy 100th Birthday To Us!

The Chatham College Alumnae Association is celebrating its one hundredth anniversary this year. Through the efforts of Dr. Thomas C. Strong, second resident of Pennsylvania Female College, the Alumnae Association was organized in 1876, seven years after the college's founding. The stated purpose of the association was to promote the interests of the College and of education in general, and to foster fellowship among members. From an original membership of 48 graduates in 1876 and no name changes later (to Pennsylvania College for Women in 1890, then to Chatham College in 1955), alumnae today number approximately 5,000.

Dues for membership were $.50 per year which entitled each member to receive her copy of the Recorder. The Alumnae Recorder was first published as a yearly newspaper on June 8, 1883. It is interesting to note that even in those early days the first editorial read, "But when they (men) say women have no business ability, we rebel; and we graduates of the P.F.C. are going to disprove it as far as we are concerned..." Also that same early year showed the beginning of the great mobility of alumnae — they were reported working in Japan, studying in Germany, and one letter from an alumna living in Fort Ellis, Montana Territory, who had "married into the cavalry," discussed the Indian situation on the frontier post. In the second issue, published in 1884, an article by Georgina Legley '83, addressed itself to "Women's Influence on Reform."

TO ALL CHATHAM ALUMNAE

One of my most vivid memories of many evenings in the theatre is the closing scene of Helen Hayes' great portrayal of Victoria Regina. The Queen is acknowledging the cheers of her subjects after many years in her reign when she hears one voice above the others calling, "Go it, old girl!" It is a passing commoner saluting the great tradition.

That is our message to the Chatham College Alumnae Association on its centennial as an organization representing the former students of the College: "Go it, old girl. You have more potential pep than many of us half your age. We're proud of your record of extraordinary concern, loyalty and generosity. Thank you for who you are and for what you are becoming."

Edward D. Eddy
President

Within a few years the question of coeducation also arose by way of a letter from an alumna to the Recorder in 1886 which read:

"I have a boy. What does the P.F.C. mean to do for his proper education. Of course we Alumnae think our college is the best, and I am anxious that my son should have the advantages of the best. Do you think Miss Pelletreau could be induced to admit him by the time he will arrive at years of discretion? At present his age is four months, so there is time for grave deliberation."

Equally early was the College's affirmation of its firm belief in a liberal arts education for young women as a basis for vocational and professional pursuits. In 1911 Cora Helen Coolidge, then dean and later president of the College, spoke in chapel on the "New Vocations of College Women," calling attention to sixty-nine lines of work other than teaching and nursing which were open to college-educated women.

In the Archives Room of the Jennie King Mellon Library is a treasure trove of old and new photographs, programs, bound copies of the Recorder and the Sorosis (the students' monthly literary and news magazine which was succeeded by the Arrow, then by today's Matrix) and other memorabilia. The Recorder chose for its readers some pictures of places, people and events that have come and gone over the past one hundred years.

Report On The Community Services Office

by DIRECTOR
PEGGY DONALDSON

This office opened November 3, 1975 and it's been jumping from the very beginning. Literally everyone has ideas about how Chatham can serve the wider community and there are many viable options from which to choose. As Director I welcome and invite your suggestions and ideas, too.

Our first project was a mail survey to enlist ideas and ascertain interests in continuing education among the 1,300 local alumnae and a random sample of 6,000 local residents in our own and nearby zip code areas. The response was quite good — 20% return from alumnae (the questionnaire arrived in their homes Christmas week!), and 8% from Chatham neighbors. The suggestions have been noted and a small beginning made in response by the College.

For instance, in cooperation with Kaufmann's Department Store and the Urban League of Pittsburgh, three credit courses were offered Thursday evenings at Kaufmann's downtown store for the convenience of working women interested in professional development. Courses offered to date include Managing Organizations, Managerial Accounting, and, beginning May 20th, Introduction to Computer Science. Twenty students are currently registered for Managerial Accounting.

In response to the interests expressed in the December survey, a series of non-credit courses designed for personal enrichment is being offered on campus once a week for eight weeks, April 5 to May 27 — nine courses will meet in the mornings and thirteen in the evenings. Babysitting service is provided for registrants with pre-school children. The courses include: Upstairs, Upstairs (taught by John W. Cummins, professor of English at Chatham), Paris Past, Paris Present (Harry Goldby, associate professor of French at Chatham), How to Survive Your Adolescent and Post-Adolescent Children (Vivien Richman, associate professor of education at Chatham), Medical Issues and Society (Dr. Frank J. Suatoni, Jr.), Personal Financial Planning (Carol C. Mullaugh, registered representative with Parker/Hunter Inc.), Law for the Lay Person (Laura Horton, attorney at law), Assertive Behavior Training Workshop and New Directions for Women Workshop (Job Advisory Service staff), Pittsburgh — Its Early Beginnings (Cordelia Suran Jacobs '60, adjunct professor at Community College of Allegheny County and a member and docent of the Pittsburgh History and Landmarks Foundation), Comparative Religion (Solomon M. Kaplan, lecturer in religion at Chatham), Detente: Design, Dilemma or Disaster? (Jo Husbands, instructor in political science at Chatham), Ceramics (Jerry Caplan, associate professor of art at Chatham), Physical Fitness (Patience T. Blayden, associate professor of physical education at Chatham), Modern Dance (Bernice M. Rosen, lecturer in dance at Chatham), Yoga, Bridge and Paddle Tennis.

All summer plans are not yet complete at this writing. It is a certainty, however, that CAST (Chatham Alumnae Summer Theatre) will produce at least three plays in the Chatham Theatre from June 11 to August 15, including Blithe Spirit, Philadelphia Story and Sleuth. Also, the Music and Arts Summer Day Camp will be in session for its 21st season, June 28 to August 5. Both of these ongoing programs have proved popular with Pittsburgh residents.

Presently plans are under way for a Women in Management Seminar and non-credit summer classes in writing (expository and creative), ceramics, typing, yoga, New Directions for Women Workshop, study skills, and child development. Local alumnae will be advised when summer course offerings and instructors are finalized.

Stay tuned for future developments and programs which go beyond the traditional fine educational programs for which Chatham is known and well respected. And keep those ideas and letters coming!

LIBRARY NEWS

The Jennie King Mellon Library has recently received several book collections as gifts to the College.

A library of some 600 volumes in French was given in memory of Marguerite Maisonnat Owens by the estate of her husband, Edward J. Owens. Madame Owens, who taught in the French department at Chatham from 1938 to 1953, is well remembered by her students. Her library consists primarily of French novels and poetry.

Christopher Magee Steel, a lifetime Pittsburgh resident, has given 133 volumes in memory of his mother, Margaret Magee Steel. She was the daughter of C. L. and Elizabeth Steel Magee for whom Pittsburgh's Magee-Womens Hospital is named. The books from Mrs. Steel's library, many collected on her travels, represent English, Irish and American literature and early American history. There are several first editions and many hand-tooled leather-bound sets. These books will be housed in the Charles Fletcher Lewis Room for special collections.

Alumna Mary Margaret Schmitt '38 has donated a large library of approximately 1,000 titles. Among these there is a heavy concentration of volumes on nursing and psychology.

The College acknowledges these gifts with gratitude.

Two books have been authored recently by Chatham alumnae. Lois Shook Becker '59 has written How to Make and Sell Your Arts and Crafts, published by Frederick Fell Publishers Inc., which deals with the techniques involved in making and marketing various arts and crafts. A book of prose-poems, titled Metro-Mosaic, has been written by Mary Edwards Foster '66.

CAMPUS FUGITIVE

by BARBARA DALLAS PALMER

Barbara Dallas Palmer is assistant professor of English at Chatham College from which she graduated in 1965 with a major in English. She received her M.A. and Ph.D. degrees from Michigan State University. Since then she has taught at Wayne State University, Detroit, Michigan, the University of Leeds in England where she had a fellowship, and at Northern Illinois University in DeKalb, Illinois. She joined the faculty of Chatham College in 1975.

In The Adventures of Huckleberry Finn, Twain cautions the reader that "persons attempting to find a motive in this narrative will be prosecuted; persons attempting to find a moral in it will be banished; persons attempting to find a plot in it will be shot." I share his point of view. If there is a motive in this article, it is to try to clarify for myself what has happened in education during the last ten years. If there is a moral, it is the enduring value of humanism. If there is a plot, I am amazed.

The research method I have used for this essay has much to recommend it, namely that it is so shabby as to be unrecognizable and thus unassailable. I simply asked questions of students, colleagues, and myself on the vague topic of "change in education." I don't particularly like some of my data, but the salvation of this research method is that I can claim an inadequate sample or an inept interviewer. It is a bit difficult to claim these mitigations for the questions I asked myself, but I count that a trifle.

Time's endless monuments, at least in terms of the physical campus, have altered rather drastically. The Woodland parking lot has been merlined into the library, the library is the music center, the music center seems to be the bookstore and post office, and Murray Hill apparently slid somewhere. The old snackbar is a corridor, and I can't even find the underground passage from Mellon to the carriage house . . . music center . . . post office. Something curious happened to Mellon; the Tudor line spawned a Hanoverian. And amidst all these shifting sands, I find myself with a nickname I am trying to live down (Scots parents who name their offspring "Bonnie" — and misspell it to boot — probably should be smothered in haggis), a social life I am trying to live up, and a salary I am trying to live on.

These are minor insecurities, however, when compared to the changes which have occurred in college students during the last ten years. Sometimes I doubt that even the landmarks — or historical markers — stand; the territory is uncharted. I feel vaguely uneasy generalizing about today's students, particularly since I have heard their generalizations about us, an unsettling experience at best, ego-shattering at worst. Most of the time I feel neatly categorized as a dinosaur who calcified while wearing a pleated kilt, knee socks, and hockey boots. Some of the changes are superficial and require only a translator; some are more profound and affect both pedagogical technique as well as the direction of educational institutions.

I asked a friend if he thought students had changed and he surmised that they "are wearing their busts lower." He also said that "they all seem to be blond," but I fear that is the forlorn hope of an aging colleague. After that bit of whimsey, we talked about teaching during the years of protest and, of course, wandered back to our own values of college students in the early sixties. My college career, although I did not know it at the time, was defined by certain events which turned into symbol clusters: the Cuban missile crisis, the Kennedy election, Robert Frost "saying a poem" at the Inauguration, the assassination, the Peace Corps. It all seemed very brave and new, at least in retrospect. I cannot remember what we read for pleasure but have the vague suspicion that undergraduate English majors do not read for pleasure. I suppose that Holden Caulfield was our literary hero, as McMurphy of One Flew over the Cuckoo's Nest is today, although one of my students perceptively suggested that they are the same character, the person confused and abused by society.

Female role-models were at a premium, and I am not sure how many of us consciously were concerned about their absence. Our female faculty members helped immensely to set out sights higher, but beyond that level Margaret Mead and Margaret Chase Smith seemed to carry the whole burden. Our assumptions were that we would make it, but I don't remember spending much time wondering why other women apparently had not. Had more of us tried to crack the corporation structure, law school, and medical school, instead of trotting off to graduate school, the barriers might have been visible earlier. But one might add in defense of our aiming at the teaching profession that we were more influenced by an ideal of service and the intellectual challenge than the so-called safety of a traditionally "feminine" occupation.

In some ways these years were preparation for university teaching during the late sixties and early seventies. At least we valued giving over taking; service was more significant than salary, if only in terms of a metaphysical accounting. But there were practical difficulties. My notes were in lecture form and now my students wanted to discuss — not discuss everything but the factual knowledge I had accumulated. The horrors of trying to lead a discussion of medieval literature when no one knew or cared when the Middle Ages were was something no neophyte should face. "Relevance" was the battle cry and course enrollments rose or fell on that criterion. "Relevance" encourages a personality contest among faculty, a competition to be grooved and when this demand was coupled with an oversupply of Ph.D.s and constricted tenure, the contrast between idealism on one side of the lectern and squalid politics on the other was disillusioning.

Pedagogical experimentation was an inevitable and not undesirable consequence of student demands. No longer could the yellowed graduate school notes flake on our Hush puppies as our lecture, "like a wounded snake, drag[ged] its slow length along." Never having been too comfortable in the twentieth century (thus my intellectual retreat to medieval and Renaissance studies) and convinced that all machines are carnivores, I was not happy with technical innovation. My videotapes committed unnatural acts, my films abandoned their middle reels in transit, my tapes were voiced over by the Audubon Society, my Xeroxes dreamt of a phoenix-like regeneration and consumed themselves utterly.

I didn't fare much better with students' requests for manual term projects. The argument seemed to go that since Thoreau had planted his own beans, they should be able to make collages, scrapbooks, and needlepoint toilet seat covers instead of writing term papers. I did manage to point out that Thoreau had hacked out a few more words than beans; the answer was that he couldn't have written on an empty stomach. Thoreau obviously wasn't giving me much help — and they didn't read Emerson, who stayed quietly in his study writing term papers — so I gave in and announced to the class that they could do manual term projects but that I would choose the subject. They could choose the medium: needlepoint, paint, sculpture, whatever. They thought it a marvelously fair compromise, laudatory noises on all sides, until I told the most aggressively manual student that his subject was the Bayeux tapestry. He was ecstatic for the two days it took him to get to the library, where he discovered that the embroidery is 230 feet long. He wrote a very nice term paper on the Battle of Hastings and appended a charming postcard of that section of the Bayeux.

Innovation with means of human communication went better for all concerned. The late sixties were a crash course in leading discussions, student reports, modal units, role-playing and acting scenes, and learning to listen rather than talk. What I had to learn was that classes which escaped the perimeters of my definition of teaching were not necessarily threatening; the converse, limiting discussion only to what I already knew, was the true threat to education. They were not very pleasant years; courtesy was almost jostled off the field, brutal exhortation often flew the colors of "sensitivity" and "perception," and "liberalism" engendered its own intolerant inquisition. But on the whole, the years of protest produced a questioning attitude, a willing suspension of disbelief which opened more doors than it closed.

It may sound odd to talk about "a new generation of students" when only four short years separate the euphoric revolution from the pedestrian potato planting, but today's students are significantly different from their immediate predecessors. The reasons are difficult to assess. Certainly the economic situation, the disillusionment which followed Watergate, the general social malaise contribute. When I asked my students what defined their college careers, they immediately said, "the impending economic disaster, the shaky institutional structure, a closed society." These answers rather sadden me; so very much of our history, our poetry, our philosophy, our frontier ethos announces growth and expansion. With the exception of the Depression years, the nation has admitted no cloud cover to its aspirations; and that these students should feel restricted at the onset of their adult lives offends me. But there also is a maturity here, a realistic assessment of opportunity; to perceive that limits exist is maturity, to accept those limits without challenge is waste.

What are Chatham students like today? That is an idiotic question for a faculty member to try to answer. Our perceptions are limited; when we see them in classrooms and offices, we usually are playing a role, they usually are playing a role. The concerns we impose on them may not touch them; their concerns may never be perceived. The truth leaks through, of course, but perhaps in unrecognizable form: I reveal more of myself when explicating a poem than when answering a direct personal question, and I suspect that I learn most about them when they are camouflaged in apparently intellectual garb. So it goes, the uneasy balance between "professor" and "person" — one tires of friends who continually profess, and I suspect that the converse is equally true.

They still drink beer: it is good to know that some things are constant in this protean world. They do not play 24-hour floating bridge, nor do they watch soap operas en masse. One of my more traumatic academic experiences elsewhere was the discovery that my missing students were likely to be clustered devoutly around a student union television set watching "Search for Tomorrow" instead of doing it. They are not "brighter than last year's entering class;" that marvelous public relations saw became unprovable five years ago. Their heroes, if any, seem to be women who have succeeded in various fields, and they qualify this answer with "and keep their humanism" in the long climb up. What they mean by "humanism" is a retention of warmth and sensitivity to people; and they complain, with just cause, of the few women they have encountered who are rude and supercilious to subordinates, particularly to inquiring students.

Their daily lives seem paradoxical to me, in that they either are off campus or else isolated in their rooms. Quiet relaxation has replaced the group dynamic, and my students say that they spend a lot of time alone with their thoughts. The wider community, of course, is not only open to students but also is an education resource which they must tap for internships, field placements, and cross-registration. Obviously this academic diversification opens up social life. Benedum's Christmas party included a few fraternity men left over from the 1965 Christmas party; some scrubbed young executive types who were trying to master the art of balancing an ashtray, cigarette, and punch cup over a Kirman carpet; several ebullient Steelers who had just mangled the Cincinnati Bengals; and a couple of astoundingly cordial faculty members.

The students' academic demands are difficult to assess and even more difficult to meet. I am lecturing again, for there seems to be a resurging trend toward information-giving. Fortunately, the process does not end there, but they seem to realize that knowledge is a helpful prerequisite for discussion. Ten years ago, "performer" was an obscene description for a professor; five years ago it was a union card. Now it seems most important that faculty are "interesting people," whatever that means. I think that I was very interesting at the Benedum Christmas party. Students now say that they can get the material, the course content, themselves (o forlorn hope!); what faculty should provide is a point of view and a stimulation of awareness.

They seem less ashamed to admit what they don't know; the appalling aspect is the magnitude of the void. As an undergraduate I was terrified to reveal my ignorance. I had a vague intuition that I should know who, say, Andreas Campellanus was, although looking at the way I spelled his name in my notes, I didn't have a chance of finding out. I now get questions like "What's meter?," and although I inwardly blanch, the far more frightening prospect would be for them not to ask questions.

Speculation about faculty members' personal lives still occupies prime time, with about as little substance as I suspect we had. They say they talk mainly about what the professor does in class, but that ain't what I hear, friends. One of the funniest stories I overheard was concerned inquiry about whether Professor X had a drinking problem, because "he took our senior seminar out to dinner and had two cocktails." Sometimes they seem extremely sophisticated and world-weary. Other times I find myself having to translate enormous passages of Shakespeare's or Chaucer's bawdy for them ("He can't mean that!"; "Mercutio makes what gesture?"), because they never suspect that anyone over 30 — to say nothing of someone over 400 — can entertain an indelicate thought.

Three characteristics of these students appear valid enough to salvage for generalization. First, they are asking for utility rather than "relevance" from their formal education, but they need guidance to make choices which will cover a career pattern instead of just the immediate skills to get a first job. Second, they are a heterogeneous group in age, background, interests, and aspirations. This diversity ultimately can bring nothing but rewards, both in the classroom and out, although it certainly produces initial difficulties in assumptions and expectations for both students and faculty. Third, they are for the most part goal-oriented, but they realize that there might be a socioeconomic ceiling on their goals. They see no point in hitching their wagon to a star when the transit system is destitute. Neither cynical nor idealistic, they are justly cautious.

If it is not the best of all possible worlds for students, neither is it for faculty. The inadequacy of students' academic preparation reduces me either to quivering indignation or inaccurate reminiscences of how sterling our qualities ten years ago. I am not sure that students today treasure precise and colorful communication, except when pragmatically enforced ("This term paper is grammatically unacceptable. Rewrite."). They do not seem to perceive or appreciate subtle manipulations of the written and spoken word; I occasionally wax lyrical on Shakespeare's diction only to have a student ask me what "diction" means, a question which certainly dries up the professorial fountain, probably to the benefit of everyone including Shakespeare. Some students cannot write a sentence, and a few even have severe qualms about identifying one in a line-up.

A nationwide intellectual provincialism has emerged in the last several years, a restrictive trend which limits learning to the immediately applicable. I would hope that Chatham is holding out against this trend, for elsewhere I have seen the effect of succumbing. Students demand "skills," "ideas" are disreputable at worst and unprofitable at best. A state legislature cuts the university budget; in consequence the administration mixes some magic formula called "Student Credit Hours Generated" (trans.: "Fill up those seats, folks."); a faculty member, sensing that he is about to lose his job because his enrollments are down, calls his course in Greek philosophy "Effective Dialogue for the Marketplace;" and the resultant hybrid is either a bankrupt business or a farcical university. I would hate to see tarnished the medieval ideal of the university as a community of scholars; the consequence is dullness, the eighth deadly sin.

This emphasis on acquiring skills leads us to what I think is the major problem facing small colleges, the desirable balance between the liberal arts and vocationalism. The idea seems to be that too many liberal arts courses will turn one into a skeletal unemployed oracle and too many vocational courses will produce a wealthy cretin welder. So much has been said and written on this subject that a few more words can't hurt. Does my reader remember the first three lines of the Inferno? They translate "In the middle of the journey of our life/ I came to myself within a dark wood/ where the straight way was lost." Perhaps Chatham's best course is simply to sit down on a grassy knoll and wait in the wood for a bit until a Virgil clearly illuminates the path. The alliance we try to produce between humanism and skills is uneasy at times, but far more uneasy would be premature and exclusive resolution. I have noted that fence-straddling is painful to one's posterior, but more painful is falling off the same.

Once upon a time there was a university which tried to save money. With all the corporate acumen the administrators could muster, they voted to close down the campus over Christmas, thereby saving an immense sum in heat, light, and personnel costs. The pipes froze and burst, the repair costs exceeded the savings, and a moral on extreme solutions is lurking nearby.

Some of these problems have remedies, or at least we can apply leeches. Cross-registration means that our students can take advantage of specialized courses and equipment without Chatham's running the risk of staffing and supplying limited, transient programs. The Gateway program adds an incalculable dimension of reality to the college; these women have experience in living which the brightest 18-year-old in the world cannot read in books gleaned from lectures. The Communications and Administration-Management programs have tremendous potential to meld liberal arts and vocationalism. The Intern program not only provides practical training but can function as a foot in the door, an introduction, a rose-colored glasses removed.

At some point one must not only teach these young women but must suggest to them that their lives may involve hard choices. Very few of us are equipped to be Renaissance women; the expectation is unrealistic and, in all but a few instances, unrealizable at a reasonable cost. Temporarily or permanently, the marriage may fall to the career, the career to the children, the public life to the private, the private life to the public; Lord knows at least the dust falls — all over my house. What above all we owe these women is the knowledge and confidence to order their own priorities.

Professor John W. Cummins used to tell us that the last critical question was always "So what? What does it mean to me?" I think that he was talking about literature, but it is not an inappropriate question to ask of life. In the last ten years I too have changed. The whole world does not have to be furnished in Scandinavian modern; those clear, sterile lines somehow do not account for the convolution of my Baroque life. I am thin and tired and wrinkled. The days when I wondered if a dress were "too old" for me are gone forever. When truck drivers honk at me, I automatically pull the car over to see if I have a flat tire. The most appalling discovery is that Cubism makes sense.

I do not react graciously when someone asks, "How does it feel to be back?", because I came to build a future, not to recapture a past. In some respects, being back at Chatham simply involves a teaching job, a career opportunity, and not a romantic attempt to go home again. But pseudo-schizophrenia sometimes does spring up, usually triggered by a physical detail of the campus which invites the woman to look at the erstwhile girl. It is much like Fellini film where the frames of past and present rush by simultaneously. I now sit in the Conover Room for meetings, and a corner of my eye always watches that girl who wrote a tutorial there. But the déjà vu is desirable in that it provides an intermittent measuring stick of time and change. I would say that "hopefully I have gained more than I have lost," except that as I tell my students, whose minds boggle at grammatical subtleties, what they no doubt mean to say is that they "have hope." So do we all.

A conversation

Ann Heidbreder
Eastman

Director of Admissions

by DIBBIE SPURR HOLLOWAY '60

Ann Heidbreder Eastman has spent most of her working life in book publishing, where she promoted books and reading. Now, as Director of Admissions at the College, she promotes Chatham to prospective students.

Ann graduated magna cum laude from the University of Michigan in 1955, where she was elected to Phi Beta Kappa. She finds that having attended a large co-ed university is, by virtue of contrast, an asset in talking with students about the College. At Chatham, she says, a student does not attend classes with tens and hundreds of other students. She does not have to wait in line to see a professor. And she does not have to wait for hours, days, or weeks for books at the library. At Chatham, a student has the privilege of earning as a woman in a women's college.

Post-graduate courses at Columbia and New York Universities helped to equip Ann for her present position as well as for the jobs she held in publishing. She has been associated with many major publishing houses — Macmillan, Holt, Rinehart & Winston, Random House, McGraw-Hill, Knopf, and Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, to name a few. From editing technical books, college and high school textbooks, and children's books she "jumped the fence" into marketing and promoting trade or general books. In 1964, she joined the staffs of the Association of American Publishers, where she was Senior Associate for Education and Library Services, and the National Book Committee, where she was Director of Research and National Coordinator of the Educational Media Selections Center Program.

When asked if she found her new duties at Chatham a difficult change, Ann explained that "the book markets I worked in were schools and libraries, so working in that general area is not new. I anticipated that the kinds of techniques and tools used in promoting and selling books would be used in bringing Chatham to the attention of prospective students. This turns out to be the case. Admissions work is, basically, a communications program. It is, in part, a direct mail campaign — getting the right information to the right person at the right time."

What about the work of promoting Chatham? What is Admissions all about today? The process has changed considerably in the last ten to fifteen years. Most people who are not in the academic world or an admissions office probably view the process rather subjectively, attributing to admissions today what is remembered from the past. For some, getting into college fifteen or twenty years ago may have seemed easy; for others, it was an awesome trial often accompanied by heartache and disappointment.

For this Chatham alumna, the admissions process (not Chatham's) evokes memories of what seemed, at the time, a morbid fascination with College Entrance Examination Board Scores. Armed with a notebook full of questions, she met recently with Mrs. Eastman to explore a number of the aspects of getting into college today. Although new in her demanding role as Admissions Director, Ann Eastman seems to have many of the answers. Her candor is refreshing. She knows what she has yet to learn. Her humor is outright and, it would appear, her insight into the problems facing colleges today is acute.

The conversation went something like this:

Is Chatham having trouble attracting prospective students?

No, not in the sense that it was a few years ago, when we had a couple of small classes. A very good and large freshman class (183) entered in the Fall, 1975, and I hope that we will have almost as many freshmen arriving in 1976. All private colleges are watching the 1980's with real concern. The number of students graduating from high schools begins to drop off in 1980 and keeps dropping.

If the number of applications were to drop below the number of spaces available, would this force Chatham to lower its standards?

I doubt that standards at Chatham will drop. Faculty and administrators all seem dedicated to doing what needs to be done to keep this a quality women's college. (Eighty-eight and one-half percent of the students entering Chatham in 1975 had a high school grade average of B or better.)

Are there sources to which Chatham can turn in quest of prospective students?

In 1975, approximately 1,000 names were submitted by students, faculty, and alumnae. In addition, Chatham acquired 60,000 names from the College Board Student Search Service. To these young women Chatham mailed a poster and card, asking the student to return the card if she wanted more information about the College. This effort resulted in a pool of 9,100 names to whom Chatham has mailed a sequence of nine items. (The direct mail campaign!)

The more applications we get, the more selective we can be. As long as we continue to draw good students, we will maintain standards.

What is a Live-in, is it unique to Chatham, and how successful is it?

A Live-in is a special campus visit. Prospective students are invited to arrive about 2:30 p.m. on Sunday and stay through luncheon on Monday. We run about a dozen of these each school year. On Sunday the students are introduced to the campus and each other in small group sessions. They have dinner with a few members of the faculty and meet with them afterward to discuss the academic and advising programs. After a break, during which our guests walk about campus, talk with one another, swim or just relax — they participate in a student panel in one of the dorms. Prospective students are encouraged to ask questions throughout the day and especially at the evening "dorm break."

On Monday morning, they attend classes or have interviews with members of the Admissions staff.

Our program is not unique (two other schools in the immediate area are doing the same kind of thing) but I am told that Chatham started Live-ins. They have been remarkably successful. A very high percentage of the women who come to Live-ins actually apply and enroll. I think Live-ins are so successful because prospective students actually come to the campus and meet the kind of young women they are going to be in college with for four years.

Alumnae can help us with Live-ins. Many do now — by telling prospective students about them and encouraging them to attend. Often we know of interested high school students who live some distance from Pittsburgh but cannot afford to come for a Live-in. It would be very helpful if alumnae clubs would sponsor such young women. (Once they get to campus Chatham feeds and houses them.) Sponsoring students in this way would help prospective students as well as the college.

Do you find that most of the students you are interviewing feel strongly about attending a women's college?

A surprisingly high number. By the time they get to this office, they have made certain decisions and commitments. Most have thought seriously about attending a women's college. Many are considering only women's colleges. There they think they will get an education tailored to their needs and will be able to hold top positions in student government and other groups. Young women know they will have to make major decisions about jobs, careers, marriage, children, life styles, and the like. Most women my age and older grew up not seriously believing they had choices or options about such matters. Today young women know they have choices to make and many think that a college like Chatham is the best place to find out about themselves and their talents and abilities. The women's rights movement — in focusing attention on the many concerns of different groups of women — accounts for this interest, in part. At the same time I must say that it is a rare prospective student who does not ask about social life at Chatham and the kinds of events on and off campus at which they will meet men.

What would you say are Chatham's chief attractions?

I think the fact that it is a good small college for women, and I would hastily add, in Pittsburgh. Many of the programs we offer — administration and management, the internship, communications, the tutorials — relate directly to the fact that we are in a major city with many assets, including the other colleges and universities. The mix of institutions is exciting and challenging. The resources available through cross-registration are one reason students come to Chatham and one reason they stay.

[Ironically, when asked if she thought Chatham has one major problem regarding Admissions, Mrs. Eastman again cited Pittsburgh:]

One of the biggest problems for all the colleges and universities here in Pittsburgh is the unhappy impression people have who haven't visited the city in twenty years. This is one of the big negatives we all encounter. Our location and campus impress people favorably when they get here, of course. The Pittsburgh Council on Higher Education admissions group, of which I am a member, asked me and the Public Relations Director of the College Marcia Smith, to produce a brochure that will help all the PCHE institutions promote Pittsburgh as an attractive center for education.

Do most of the students you have interviewed know where they are going or how they will use their education?

I am impressed with the fact that so many young women are decisive. They know exactly what they want to be and have planned their academic careers through the Ph.D. In one week I talked to a future geneticist (who has worked part-time as a high school senior with post-doctoral students on a project at the National Institutes of Health) and a freshman English major choosing courses and discussing graduate schools that will help her become a rare book dealer as soon as possible. Both were very informed and highly motivated. Others are reluctant to commit themselves to a major as yet and wish to attend a small liberal arts college where they are free to try various courses in the process of coming to a decision.

What are your thoughts about College Board scores and their use in the admissions process?

College Board scores have dropped across the country. I doubt that students are declining in intelligence. We know they are not retaking tests as frequently as they did when it was more difficult to get into college. If they score lower than they think they should, they do not spend the money to take the test again, and again, and again to raise their scores.

Moreover, taking tests makes many students so nervous that they do poorly. Some students who have grown up in word-poor homes do not handle tests as well as other students of the same intelligence. We, of course, don't require Board scores.

We do request Board scores after a student has been admitted and plans to enroll at Chatham so that faculty and others working with students have access to this data. Should a student have trouble with certain courses or need special help, test scores can provide helpful information.

The so-called 'Buckley Amendment' — The Family Rights and Privacy Act, which went into effect in January, 1975 — is a real problem for college admissions people now, and may affect Chatham's attitude toward Board scores. This Act makes certain records available to students and parents that have heretofore been confidential. The result is that colleges receive blank or bland recommendations from some high school counselors. If colleges such as Chatham, which do not require Board scores for admission, do not receive helpful, objective evaluations of a student's work and potential, it is difficult to determine whether the applicant and the College are right for each other. I hope that we do not have to require scores for admission in the future, but I cannot say that we never will. As you said, Dobbie, there have been changes in admissions in the last several years. It's a whole new ballgame, in a sense, and the rules are changing quite quickly.

What are your thoughts about Admissions policy?

It seems to be that Admissions work has changed from a process of selecting to a process of counseling. I think it is healthy that the thin air of super-selectivity is disappearing in most colleges and universities. It has been good for some colleges to open up, become more available to good students. Chatham's great strength, and that of other good, small colleges, is that faculty members on the Admissions Committee and the staff still are able to study the record of each applicant. We read transcripts and essays carefully; we pay attention to recommendations; we collect missing data and seek clarification of ambiguous or contradictory information. We prefer to interview all prospective students, although an interview is not required. We hope that at least one member of the faculty or staff comes to know each applicant. In large universities, such personal contact is virtually impossible. Here, we attempt to know these young women, as individuals, as best we can before they come to Chatham. We help to generate a feeling of community. They benefit, and so does the College.

Incidentally, we have written a new essay question for the application that asks, basically, what kind of person are you and why do you want to attend Chatham? It reads, in part, as follows:

It's not easy to say who one is. Nor is it easy to say what one hopes to become when so many future identities beckon, but thought about your future may help you find the way. And if college is a means to an end, however hard that end may be to define, it's worth considering in what ways Chatham may serve you.

We think that this question is another way in which we can elicit information about individual students that will help us in advising them.

I know that you want to involve more alumnae in the Admissions effort. Could you elaborate on this?

Surely. One of the traditional ways of interesting high school students in a college is to have members of the professional staff call on schools to talk with students and guidance counselors. We have held Previews for prospective students and their parents in several cities across the years — afternoon or evening receptions at which faculty and staff have talked about the College, answered questions, and showed our film, "A Woman's Place." Numerous breakfasts have been held for guidance counselors so that they could see the film and find out about changes at Chatham.

On all these trips we talk with students as often as possible. But this staff cannot continue to do as much traveling and still handle the office work of interviewing and communicating with prospective students.

We hope that alumnae who live in areas in which there are numbers of prospective students will work with us — talking with students and parents, calling on schools and guidance counselors, representing the College at college fairs and nights, and helping us in other ways to promote Chatham "in the field." We plan to identify alumnae who would like to do this work and bring them to campus this fall for a two- or three-day workshop so that they can meet new faculty and learn about changes in the curriculum. These women would supplement the on-going work of the alumnae representatives who presently are working with this office.

To "find" those women who are interested and able, we are sending a brief questionnaire to all Chatham alumnae in May, 1976, to learn what they are doing as professionals or volunteers that might help us to interest students in Chatham. I hope that our alumnae will complete the questionnaire.

We need full and accurate data about our graduates for a variety of reasons, of which the alumnae admissions program is only one.

Many colleges, including Chatham, are served well by their graduates in helping to recruit students. Some have a highly structured and elaborate "network." Others work more informally. The program we envision falls somewhere in between. All of you will be hearing from us. We hope to hear from you.

Have you had an opportunity to meet many of the alumnae as yet?

In October I met the presidents of the alumnae clubs from a number of cities, including Atlanta, Chicago, Minneapolis, Hartford, New York, Cleveland, and, of course, Pittsburgh. Chatham alumnae are an impressive group. Many have already helped us greatly and we appreciate their interest and effort. Several I have met are in their second or third careers and are hard at work, either on a paid or volunteer basis. I have enjoyed the Chatham alumnae I have met and I have learned from them.

What an upbeat way to end an interview! Ann Eastman may be new to Pittsburgh and to Chatham, but she is — in her own words — an "enthusiastic newcomer." For the past year she has been helping to organize the Pittsburgh Chapter of the Women's National Book Association (of which there are 10 other chapters from New York to California) and in July, 1976, she will become the National President of the WNBA. Ann is a member of the national Editorial Advisory Council of a new magazine called Women At Work, which will explore the entire spectrum of women at work; blue and white collar, from the top to the bottom of the economic ladder, paid, unpaid, and unemployed. These posts give her other opportunities to interest people in Chatham College. An avid reader and swimmer, Ann also has lectured about publishing and is collaborating on a book with her husband, Arthur, who is Head of the English Department at Carnegie-Mellon University. The Eastmans are editing the manuscript autobiography of John Wrenshall (1761-1821), an early Pittsburgher who planted Methodism in Pittsburgh.

For one who did not attend Chatham, Ann is an ardent and convincing spokeswoman. Think how effective we — the alumnae — can be. If one needs an example, or some ideas about where and how to begin, look no farther than the second floor of Mellon Center. Listen for the contagious laugh. When you hear it, you have found — as Chatham has — Ann Heidbreder Eastman.

M is for MUSIC MAN

by KARLA GRADISEK '79

Saying good-bye is never easy. Saying good-bye to something you love is even more difficult.

Larry Malfatti loves Chatham College. Now, after spending nearly 20 years of his life amidst the Chatham community, he must say good-bye.

And you know it won't be easy.

Mr. "M," director of choral activities and associate professor of music at Chatham, left Chatham on March 1 for Chicago where he has accepted a position as chief vocal coach with the opera school of the Chicago Lyric Opera Company. He'll "try it out" for a year, but he's already quite certain that this is what he wants.

At the Chicago Opera Company, Mr. Malfatti's job will be to train apprentice singers to perform with the company — something the Chatham professor will enjoy, because he's always been interested in working with young professionals.

Even while he taught at Chatham, Mr. Malfatti worked with young vocalists Saturdays in his home. However, it has now reached the point where he's had to divide his time between Chatham and the young professionals. The Chicago Lyric Opera Company seems to be the solution.

Mr. Malfatti was invited last July to coach the vocalists at the Chicago Opera House. The people there had heard about his work at Covent Garden in London (where he worked at the opera house in 1973 on a sabbatical), and also knew that several of his singers were performing with German opera companies. So, for three weeks, Mr. Malfatti coached singers for Verdi's "La Traviata," never dreaming that the management was going to create this position.

After his summer job, Mr. Malfatti received some "very nice letters," and in the fall, the general manager of the opera house said to the singing coach, "I like the way you work with these people and the fact that you can explain to them in English how these things should be done . . . We'd like you to keep us in mind."

Christmas week Larry Malfatti received a letter stating that he had been selected as chief vocal coach — would he accept the position?

After a talk with President Eddy, it was decided that Larry Malfatti would take a one year leave of absence from Chatham.

Mr. Malfatti came to Chatham in 1956, and at the time had no intentions of being a college professor. He was in Pittsburgh to give a recital, and after the program, was approached by Russell Wichmann, chairman of the Chatham music department, and Paul Anderson, President of the College. They asked the vocalist if he would like to teach at Chatham for one year, as Bob Anderson, director of Chatham's choir in 1956 was taking a leave of absence.

"Well," Mr. Malfatti remembers, "I said that I had always loved teaching, but I never thought of it as a permanent thing. I hadn't been home since the age of 12 (Mr. Malfatti's originally from Pittsburgh) and I was about 32 or 33 then, and I thought that maybe it would be nice to come here for a year and try it out. And at the end of that year, Paul Anderson said, 'Well, what can we do to keep you here?' And so I made my demands, they met them, and I stayed. In the summer, I returned to Italy to perform and direct the Opera Barga Festival in Lucca.

"I fell in love with Chatham; I fell in love again with the city — which I've always loved," Mr. Malfatti continued. "I guess that I sort of retired from solo singing — not completely, but once you start teaching, your solo voice suffers tremendously. You spend too much time worrying about your students instead of yourself. But I liked it, and I liked the choir here.

"When I first started," Mr. Malfatti explained, "the choir was such a small group, I think there were only about 10 kids. But they were all good kids, and I worked with each one of them individually. They made a sound that sounded like there were 40 of them.

"I worked very hard that year," the director recalled, "and I decided to make the choir a bigger group so that they could sing with schools like Princeton and Amherst (where we have done over the years). In my second year, we had about 45 in the choir."

The high point in Mr. Malfatti's association with the choir was a six-week trip to Europe in the summer of 1961. Mr. Malfatti, 45 choir members and the male glee club of Hamilton College toured Switzerland, Austria, and France where they were invited to perform with the Paris Chamber Orchestra in southern France and the Lucca and Venice orchestras in Italy.

The choir has been a love of Mr. Malfatti's life for 15 years — and in that time, it has never once let him down. The director is very proud of this, and he reasons that this is because of the type of women found at Chatham. "You should know. Over the years, Mr. Malfatti has come in contact with some 400 Chatham women.

"This fall, I'd really love to have an alumnae choir this week-end," the director said, reflecting upon this fact, "and to meet them all again. We could do our old repertoire, and have the alumnae meet the new choir and the new choir director. I think that this would be just great."

When Mr. Malfatti was invited to come to Chatham in 1956, he had to choose between doing "The Most Happy Fellow" on Broadway, and coming to Chatham. His former teacher at the Juilliard School of Music in New York City helped him to decide.

"He reminded me that I loved to work with young people," Mr. Malfatti remembered, "and that on Broadway, it would be very difficult singing every day and every night (the part was for a very light baritone) and that it might ruin my voice.

"I took his advice," Mr. Malfatti smiled, "and I don't regret it, but I often wonder what would have happened if I had stayed in New York."

Larry Malfatti graduated from the Juilliard School of Music in 1946, where he was the recipient of two merit scholarships.

"At that time, merit scholars were very much in fashion, and you received a scholarship because of talent, not because of need," Mr. Malfatti explained. "But I also happened to need the scholarships. I had two — one in the voice department, the other in the opera department. The day I went to audition for admission into the school, I received both of them."

Mr. Malfatti was one of the first Americans to win a Fulbright Award — an award which is granted to students who have a degree or the equivalent of one, or more. It was suggested by Senator William Fulbright after World War II, that, in order for the European nations to pay back part of their war debts to the United States, they would pay so much a month for American students to study in Europe. The award program was only supposed to last for 20 years, but it's still in existence today.

Mr. Malfatti was one of 100 Fulbright recipients selected from some 10,000 applicants. "I was very lucky," Mr. Malfatti stated, "because my average in voice at Juilliard was A-plus. So that "plus" put me on top of the list and I was able to get the Fulbright.

"I had to audition in front of a board which included five established Metropolitan Opera singers," Mr. Malfatti continued. "They listened to you, and decided whether you were good enough. If you were, you got the award."

Also helpful in obtaining the award was the fact that Mr. Malfatti was bi-lingual — he had gone to school in Italy for first, second, and third grades, and had attended Italian classes twice a week at the Tuscan lodge in Pittsburgh for about five years as a youth. (Tuscany is a region of Italy near Florence, and the Tuscans pride themselves on speaking pure Italian — no dialect.) Mr. Malfatti's teacher at the lodge was a member of the Italian consulate, and was originally from Tuscany, so he was fortunate to learn "the pure Italian."

Winning the award enabled Mr. Malfatti to study in Italy for five years, where he attended the Cherubini Conservatory in Florence, and the Saint Cecilia Conservatory and Academy in Rome. He was then chosen as a performing artist at the Chigiana Academy in Siena where he sang leading baritone roles in Franco Zeffirelli's first operatic productions. During that period, he became permanent baritone soloist of the Swiss National Radio in Lugano.

While in Italy, Mr. Malfatti had the opportunity to dub in the Italian voice for such American films as "Merry Widow" and "Hans Christian Anderson." The soundtrack of the orchestra came from the United States, and the voices were dubbed in abroad in various languages.

"This was really quite lucrative," Mr. Malfatti said, "but they stopped doing it. I guess the singers of this country didn't want to lose their identity with their work. But it was a great experience — it made me work on my Italian diction even harder."

After returning from Italy, Mr. Malfatti performed in New York singing international songs (Italian, French, and German) on a television program in the New York City area, which reached viewers as far as Philadelphia and New Jersey.

It was after New York that Mr. Malfatti found himself in Pittsburgh and eventually Chatham. He had intended to go to Switzerland when his plans were interrupted by Mr. Wichmann and President Paul Anderson.

"I learned a lot here," Mr. Malfatti said. "The choir was a great challenge to me. And I really love this place so much — I can see my students and talk with them every day even if I don't work with them. And I think that this is so important."

Saying good-bye is never easy. But sometimes, it must be done.

Good-bye, Mr. M.

MUD IN THE CRYSTAL BALL: WHAT'S AHEAD FOR THE AMERICAN COLLEGE

by

EDWARD D. EDDY
President of Chatham College

(Speech delivered at the 28th annual luncheon of the All Pennsylvania College Alumni Association (APCAA) on Saturday, February 7, in Washington, DC. Dr. Eddy received the 1976 Citation Award of the APCA for "his contributions toward preserving and extending the American ideals of education.")

What essentially is a college or university? One could say that it is an accumulation of knowledge, hopefully, but not always, accompanied by wisdom. But the knowledge is in either heads or books — and the heads are on people, the books in libraries. Basically, then, a college or university is not much more than people and real estate. It is a collection usually of men — more lately, of women — and of buildings, roads, paths, perhaps ponds.

It would be impossible for us to think of any one of our institutions without immediate recollection either of faces or places. When someone mentions the name of my alma mater, I think either of the library tower at the top of the hill, or of two unrelenting giants who refused to let me write or think carelessly. In a sense, they have gone, of course, but the library tower remains at the top of the long hill. The two giants of my time have been replaced, I suspect, by scores of others who, hopefully, are equally demanding. Colleges and universities, then, are buildings, people, and memories.

But people change, buildings crumble, and memories fade. Though once thought to be touched by immortality, our institutions of higher learning are, in reality, decidedly fragile. I've always loved the title of the textbook of my engineer-roommate at Cornell: "Stresses and Strains on Simple Structures." I can't think of a better description of the next two decades for the American college and university.

Admittedly, we are spoiled rotten. Higher education came of age after World War II. Expansion was rampant — in size, number, fields of knowledge, funding — and by any other measure one could conceive. Each college and university went its separate way, choosing its particular role, and settling into a delicious but deceptive world. The state teacher's institute could become a state university in its own right; the private male monastery could become triumphantly and promiscuously coeducational; and the gem of an idea called "community college" could make higher education ferociously democratic. Between and among institutions, it was a time of unparalleled harmony. The clan gathered to press its claim for more government funds and to support each other when the carpers and critics seemed to be drawing an audience.

But that is the era just ending. Now, as we look ahead, there is mud in the crystal ball. The simple structures — the people, the buildings, the memories — are subject to stresses and strains of enormous potential. What lies ahead for you, college or university and for mine? To understand what may happen, let's probe through the mud in the crystal ball. You remember that the Polish author, Stanislaw Lem, wrote that "mud sometimes gives the illusion of depth."

First a look at the external forces which, as always, shape our institutions more than we recognize. Though they are expected to be somewhat above and ahead of society, nevertheless our colleges and universities are deeply dependent on it. And society seems to be in trouble. A reporter for The New York Times reported not long ago that a panel of experts discerned "a national collision between rising expectations and dwindling resources." Senator Church of Idaho bemoaned recently "a lack of faith, widespread cynicism, and profound pessimism." We may look ahead to "a decline in the American standard of living" and "a scaling-down of services."

When a nation lacks confidence in itself, it lacks confidence in the great majority of its institutions. When the proud and arrogant graduates of the liberal arts became the conspirators of Watergate without remorse, the public knew that the vessels of learning had sprung a leak. We have become so fascinated with knowledge that we have forgotten its compassionate handmaiden, wisdom.

Ahead, then, lies not just a limit on the support of higher education but a scaling down. "Who are you trying to kid?" the people say. "Why are we any better off because the universities expanded in size and diversified their program?" State and Federal governments, private donors

Even the friendliest foundations are asking for a breath-spell. And, as Lec warns, the sea of indifference can, indeed, be stormy.

Education as a total system has yet to suffer the fulling of the whip of public outrage. We have a generation of young people who obviously have difficulty assembling a simple sentence. The semi-colon is as defunct as the dodo bird. Even a misplaced comma is a welcome sight; one sees a few of the little beggars these days, even in incorrect usage. Perhaps we could begin solving the problem by putting English sub-titles on the re-runs of "Star Trek" so that the new generation can be introduced to written words. It is high time that colleges and universities insisted that elementary and secondary schools teach students how to write. It doesn't help to have one college or university run down a classful of native tongue illiterates. The next step will be just as inarticulate. Together we must seek change.

The mud is particularly opaque when one tries to discern enrollment patterns for the next twenty years. We can be sure of one solid fact — because the babies have been born that there will be a sharp, drastic decline in the number of high school graduates available to go to college from 1985 onward. One study shows that freshman enrollment in four-year colleges throughout the nation will decrease by 40% over the next 15 years.

An even more dramatic change is indicated in Pennsylvania, according to the Bureau of Planning of the Pennsylvania Department of Education. The full-time equivalent enrollment in Pennsylvania higher education will slip from 266,000 students in 1980 to 219,000 in 1995, or a decrease of 20%. The drop for independent colleges and universities will be a whopping 51%. Pennsylvania alone could see a closure of one-third of its public institutions and up to one-half of its private colleges. It is idle, it seems to me, to believe that low-tuition, adult education will be the saving factor. We are over-built — and we must face the unhappy consequences.

Some of the so-called "current trends" do not lighten the hearts of the college forecasters. Take, for example, the apparent increase across the nation in enrollments in vocational education courses in high schools in suburban areas. We are told that 12 million students — triple the 1960 figure — are electing direct vocational courses over college preparatory work in suburban high schools. And we all know that suburban high schools have been the intellectual and farm for many private colleges and universities.

The crystal ball is not very re-assuring. The mud gets thick and sticky. The next two decades are bound to be a testing time of mammoth proportion for our colleges and universities. Those once-secure collections of people, places and memories will be re-shuffled and re-shaped, sometimes beyond recognition. Stanislaw Lec warns that "if you have no spine, don't jump out of your skin." This will not be the time to be found spineless.

What will happen over those dark 20 years ahead? Well, we do know that the retrenchment will have to be sweeping: The first to be cut probably will be student services, including free counseling and placement of various kinds, most recreational facilities and programs, and round-the-clock health service. We are not only over-built as a system but also over-built within individual institutions. Tomorrow's college can't afford to be the home-away-from-home.

And yet the pressure will be enormous to maintain non-essentials, if only because the student as consumer will control the consumption. Increasingly the student has become a master of consumerism. He or she stands ready to purchase or reject particular services — whether it be enrollment in History which keeps the History faculty going, or the purchase of a beer mug which allows the Bookstore to operate just outside a deficit. At a time when we can ill afford to offer more, we are at the mercy of the whimsical 18-year-old. It's a strange and dangerous spot for American higher learning.

And what about the faculty? They are already deeply concerned about job security. If enrollments do not rise, but costs continue to do so, then the only answer will be to ask teachers to do more teaching.

I suspect, then, that we will be hearing much more over the next ten years about "faculty productivity." A number of state legislators have made it clear already that they are concerned. Before that concern spreads into political interference, those of us on college campuses must seek a solution. The next decade will witness a change in the faculty-student ratio — always upward. Lighter teaching loads and fewer student contacts are dreams of the past — except in the dying institution. Collective bargaining won't help; it will merely speed the embalming.

All of this may have a stultifying effect on higher education. I fear that a deep conservatism may set in. The usual kind of reluctance to take risks among college faculty members will be strengthened over a concern that the odds are too high. Some change will be forced, but that is not the kind of educational change which we need on a continual basis. Faculty members generally are protective. They are products of a system which has found greater strength in the past than challenge in the future. Looking back with certainty is more fun — and safer — than looking ahead with trepidation.

Elmer Jagow of Hiram College puts it more pointedly: "Faculties, anxious to share with everyone 'a piece of the action,' have developed vast committee networks in which responsibility is fuzzy, progress is slow, matters are discussed to near extinction, innovation has been subjected to the rigor mortis of the status quo. No wonder that the public has become frustrated with educators and institutions. Has everybody lost sight of the difference between information sharing and decision making?"

What else do we discern from the thick mud in the crystal ball? Within the family of institutions, trial separation, estrangement and divorce may well lie ahead. We have begun already to enter a period of bitter rivalry — between types of institutions and between individual colleges and universities. Name the group and you will find pools of deep suspicion. The state colleges are unhappy because legislatures have voted direct and indirect assistance to the independent institutions. In turn, during the coming week the independent colleges will make the unhappy decision to establish their own and separate clarion call and lobby in Washington.

This hassle within the academy will be interpreted falsely by the state forces of law and order as a call for help. Into the fray will troop the governmental bureaucrats to perform the godly function of deciding who will live and who will die. Around the edges will be the state agencies and private developers awaiting the opportunity to pick up a bankrupt campus as a colony for senior citizens or a half-way village for overdose victims of valium, most of whom will be college presidents.

I think it is time we heaved the crystal ball. The mud is so black you can't see tomorrow. My timetable may indeed be slowed somewhat by the reluctance in our nation to foresake institutions. We have a tendency to preserve what is there because it's there — not because it is beautiful or useful or especially historic. We rally around the faltering local industry which may be turning out plastic statues of dodo birds. But it has been there as long as we can remember, and it means jobs, and what will they do with the land? In similar fashion, because we are kind-hearted, lots of colleges and universities will die a slower death.

Now let's take a powerful detergent and wipe off the crystal ball. At the moment it is covered with too much wax dripping from funeral candles. We have talked about what might be and what very well may be, but not enough about what could be. The next twenty years could be a time of new beginnings in all of education. Admittedly we seem to be moving toward a uniform system of higher education at public expense. The attempts to reverse that trend thus far have been less than successful. The loss of strong private colleges and universities will mean a strategic loss of diversity and experimentation. But I would be the last to suggest that we should have a new National Commission to establish boundaries for what lies ahead. We do not need one massive plan for the nation, one total "system." To maintain vitality in higher learning, we need all kinds and sizes of colleges and universities, public and private, traditional and risk-takers.

Let me give you several quick illustrations of possible options which come to mind:

1. We need the kind of college which identifies the deficiencies in the educational process, and then builds a program to revive and rectify. This kind of college would turn out splendid thinkers and writers.

2. At the same time, we should be strengthening the college or university which chooses as its particular mission the bridging of the gap between technology and some of the basic problems of all men and women, such as hunger, poverty and illiteracy.

3. We require also the college or university which trains its students to take the hard look at modern values and asks its students to pull those values apart, analyze them, and begin to structure something better. It is not enough to shake our heads despondently about Watergate, or the purchase of political service, or the misadventures of Federal agencies. Nor is it enough to assume the inevitability of the pollution of the environment, or the demise of the family, or the decline of civil liberties. We should have institutions which say that the values of our society are a responsible concern of educated men and women. These institutions may not find answers, but their graduates should be articulate analysts who guide us in public decisions.

4. Concurrently, we require the college which believes that work and wisdom flow from each other — and that education for both work and wisdom is intertwined.

In other words, there is plenty of work to be done to help reverse all of those dire predictions about the decline of our common life. Some institutions, indeed, may have served well and should be allowed to expire, while others will find new purposes. There is nothing sacred about people, places and memories. Rather than to cling to the old, we must cherish the new opportunity.

In my earlier descriptions I tried to carry you into a dark and gloomy picture — but, hopefully, so that you might see something beyond. At this point in education, we do not need the Perpetuators of the Past but the statesmen of the future. The company of statesmen will consist of the men and women who can see beyond a particular campus to the entire panorama of higher learning. And the company should include alumni, faculty members, trustees, and presidents who believe that education is more important than institutions. The temptation will be great to select college presidents, for instance, who can hold institutions together, make cuts without clamor, find new sources of support, — and neglect, in the process, what happens to the student.

The student is tomorrow. In current jargon, the institution is only the delivery system.

For education to prosper, we must have people who are bigger than institutions. And wisdom which is larger than people. If we have sufficient vision, both are possible.

It is with deep regret that we report the death of Gray Orcutt which occurred at a daughter's in Glencoe, IL on September 21, 1975. Laila ment, Martha Sands Hamilton and I attended the funeral services here in Pittsburgh and met the members of Jeanne's charming family.

Lucile Atkinson Baker finds great interest in letting from her grandson in the Navy, as what he has to her brings back to life Lucile's own former days. She says his descriptions enable her to relive her own experiences in far-away lands.

Laila Clark Ament's big news is that she has become a resident of the United Presbyterian Home in Wilkensburg. She likes the new life very much and is most contented, finding it a relief to be free of the trouble of keeping up a house. Some of us have visited and were glad to see how well she is settled in a pleasant room with her own furniture. There is convenient transportation and Laila can go and come to keep up her usual interests. She spent Christmas in New York. Another member who has become a resident of a retirement home is Louise Fletcher whose address now is the Presbyterian Home in Jamestown, New York. It is nice to think of Louise near her home town again.

Evidently Helen Craig Culley is pleased with her quarters in Burcham Hills in East Lansing, Michigan.
She mentions many activities and says the days are very long enough for all she is involved in. Helen has a grandson enrolled at Michigan State and a granddaughter at Stephens College in Missouri.

NEW ADDRESS

Edith Pew, 4601 Bayard Street, #607, Pittsburgh,
PA 15213

In the past year, we have lost two of our class mates — Louise Montgomery and Ella Martin, but they will always live on in our memories. Our sympathy goes out to Marjorie Caughey Musgrave in the death of her husband.

Marcella Collier Desjardines wrote "nothing newsworthy," just grateful for pleasant times in Florida in the winter and northern Michigan in the summer, and for nine lively grandchildren. Neither she nor Lois Farr Hamilton expects to return for reunion, but send best wishes to everyone.

Florence Fast McIntyre visited her daughters in the summer and spent Christmas with one in Texas.

Mabel Shaffer has dropped some activities, but is still church librarian, active in the Y. Oldsters Club, and helping the County Historical Society in Bicentennial projects, and in supplying information on old families of the area. As another old timer in my community, I too find the increasing interest in our past has brought many demands for information. It tends to make one feel rather ancient.

Congratulations to Ada Lou Andrews Day and her husband who celebrated their golden wedding anniversary in July.

Edith Honsaker Schumacher finds staying at home her main activity. She had a granddaughter married this year and living in Hawaii.

Betty Sproul Spragg visited her son in Hawaii in August, and was leaving for Florida in early February. She hopes to get to the College in June.
Mary Reed Reeves has had a quiet year, but looks forward to much pleasant activity at her summer home.

The five granddaughters of Gladys Sullivan Peters are attending Yale, Sweet Briar, McGill University, Madeira School and grade school. The eldest is working on her Ph.D. She said her niece, the daughter of Caroline Sumpter Sullivan has four children, the oldest at Bucknell.

Lucile Long Haseltine is in the hospital for tests as this is written, and we hope for a good report from her soon.

Helen Treloar McGarrity is "trying to keep up with changing times," and hopes to come north in June for Reunion. Elizabeth Murphy Walter hopes to be there too.

Marcella Geary said she was "glad to be able to keep going, though not far."

Edith Pew has been with her niece in Texas, and, with Stella Espy, hopes to make a Spring Tour to see the tulips in Michigan.

You will all be receiving notice of the time of our Reunion when I hope many of us will meet together.
The pleasure of each will depend on the others who come.

She sends congratulations, on behalf of all her classmates, to Marjorie Patterson Kaiser on the publication of her book "The Hide of a Rhinoceros," by Atlantic Press. It is the first in a series of experiences which she has in the Patterson family, who practiced early in this century. Besides the time necessary to write the book, Marjorie also plays and teaches the violin. She also teaches English conversation to foreign students and works with senior citizens at the local hospital.

After a year and a half of retirement from the faculty of the State University of New York at Albany, Sara MacGonagle has, what she terms, "an ideal existence" — good health, interesting friends, a comfortable and pleasant environment and stimulating mental activity from her business affairs.

Elizabeth Mason Richards doubts that she can ever find the time to retire! Her volunteer work at a local hospital, her church, a garden club and five grandchildren keep her busy, healthy and happy.

A pleasant coincidence has Josephine Dickey, Martha Leslie Stewart and Margaret McRoberts Egbert all living in the same retirement community of Medford Leas. Jo runs the gift shop there.

CLASS OF 1925 — 50th REUNION

NEW ADDRESS

Miriam McGormley Gordon (Mrs. Frank M.) 2994 Neil Avenue, Olentangy Village, Columbus, OH 43202

Sally Reporting:

Upon request of some classmates your new secretary has been asked to give a brief account of our fiftieth reunion. Harriet McCaw Hale, Lois Brown Nabors and I left Uniontown early enough to participate in the social activities prior to the reunion luncheon. It was wonderful to see Helen Ahlers Patton, Katharine Dashiell Roberts, Marian Frank Patterson, Catherine Humbert Good, Louise Graham Brown, Bertha Pitts Olander and Bee Stevenson McQuiston. During the luncheon each of us received a lovely gold engraved plaque on a walnut base. I am sure each of you unable to attend received one also. We presented the College a sum of $510.00 to be used by the library committee at their discretion. It was a great reunion, we enjoyed reading the letters sent and just wish that more of you could have joined us.

Helen Ahlers Patton has been a wonderful sidekick helping me so very much. She recently attended a lecture at the Twentieth Century Club to hear Dr. Eddy. His subject was "What's Happening to American Colleges" and Helen said she was proud to be identified with Chatham. All there were highly complimentary.

Catherine Humbert Good is a great grandmother of three and is busily engaged in Hawaii with a thriving ceramic business. I understand (this not from Cay) that any ceramic with the Good hall mark is something to buy and cherish.

Betty Archibald Andrus and her husband Harvey, President Emeritus of Bloomsburg State College, have been seeing the world, traveling to sixty-six countries since he retired. A sad note — her beloved twin, Mary Archibald Kline '25 died in 1973. Betty couldn't come to the reunion because her only granddaughter was graduating that same week from a Minneapolis high school and she and her husband naturally wanted to attend.

Mary Shane Muir had so many anniversaries last June that it was impossible for her to attend our fiftieth. It was their fiftieth wedding anniversary and also the fiftieth anniversary of Marshall's ordination to the Christian Ministry. Wonderful celebrations for the two anniversaries were held in Sparta, New Jersey, the town they chose for their retirement. Mary wrote so many interesting things about their life there that I wish that space here would permit me to include her whole letter.

Lois Brown Nabors's husband Altha died suddenly of a heart attack on April 9, 1975. Her life has been drastically changed. She has been visiting her daughter Virginia in Massachusetts, recuperating from shingles. She writes that she thinks our class had a wonderful fiftieth anniversary.

My old roomie, Harriett McCaw Hale, whom I see as often as possible, writes, "As a January spirit lifter I had four Chatham friends join me at home for luncheon. The same group, Seba South McCaw, Miriam McGormley Gordon, Martha Henderson Lewis, Olive Wycoff MacCarthy, has lunched together occasionally for a long time. Shortly I will be glad to leave the ice and snow behind me when I head for Florida."

It was so good to hear from Jean MacColl Horton, just wish she had been at our reunion. Jean is busy with various organizations, garden clubs, week-ending in Cape May when they can, trekking in the winter to see her sister Betty (Chatham '29) in Naples, Florida. Her son Rick has an advertising firm in Pittsburgh. Her other child lives in Massachusetts. Jean says, "Thank goodness for airplanes."

Miriam McGormley Gordon writes, "I counted on attending our fiftieth reunion but shortly before an arrhythmic heart condition set in which curtailed all activities for some time. Happily, improvement has been steady so that I was able to move into a beautiful apartment section along Olentangy River. It is a more convenient location than my previous address and closer to friends. Seba McCaw is a neighbor."

Bee Stevenson McQuiston was not only responsible for our reunion picture, but pinch hit for Marian Patterson as secretary last year. Bee makes a bi-annual visit to her daughter Sallie Ann in Kansas City. Bee is one of our faithfuls at Chatham events.

Martha Ganiear Garretson has been in a wheel chair since she broke her hip more than two years ago. Our sympathy and best wishes for improvement, Martha.

Although Louise Graham Brown had bad luck last spring with a broken leg she was able to be at our reunion.

Amelia Aiello Cangi lives in Sacramento, California. She has retired from teaching and she and Bill live a very leisurely life. She was in Europe at the time of our fiftieth.

Dorothy Waters Smith writes that she is just marking time until she can get outdoors to work in her garden. Her specialty is her beautiful rose garden.

We heard from our other twin set at reunion time. Kate Kelty Tea and her husband Clark, who is retired, have moved to Concord, California. Their oldest daughter lives only twenty miles from them, so it was quite a drawing card to be near their three grandchildren. Clark Junior is the Episcopalian Rector of St. Christopher's Church in Boulder Nevada. Their youngest daughter Patricia is married, lives in Michigan. The sad part of the note is regarding her twin, Dottie Kelly Fair. Dottie had a stroke a year ago and is in a home in Burbank, California where she is now a daughter. Our best wishes and love, Dottie.

I had nice notes from two who say they have special news for the Recorder, Louise Brown and Margaret Herron.

Bertha Pitts Olander and her husband Frank live near Monroeville. We Pittsburgh area members have a luncheon soon again.

Marian Frank Patterson said her letter so like a travelogue. When she wrote she was in Yucatan, Central America and a few islands a year before our reunion she had cruised Norwegian fjords, then went on a tour of America. Last summer, following reunion, she and Gordon fished for salmon in Iceland.

Katherine Dashiell Roberts came to the reunion from Florida where she lives at Pompano Beach. Since reunion time, she has been elected to the board of directors at Granada House Condominiums where she resides. She finds her new job interesting but time consuming. Katherine has twin daughters, one of whom will be married in May.

I have found there really is compensation in being your class secretary. I have loved all the letters so much and just wish that I could have copied them all instead of giving excerpts. As for my news, I am still busy in various organizations and love to play duplicate bridge. Nabors is in my club. Bill is still practicing golf and enjoys golfing. Our daughter, Sally Lou, is in Illinois which gives us a chance to get acquainted with the Midwest.

NEW ADDRESSES

Louise Hazen Meilicke (Mrs. Myron), Box 42, 3, Lake Ariel, PA 18436

Margaret McEwen Swanson (Mrs.), General Delivery, Crete, IL 60417

Mary Katherine Reed Lose (Mrs. Schley K.), Lake Heron Drive #1D, Annapolis, MD 21403

Alma Adams Hartman writes that she has been semi-invalid with arthritis for the last 9 years. At that time the Hartmans lived in Florida but it was not until they returned north where she could have better care that it was possible in Florida. Hang in there, Alma!

Ruth Allman Jones spent 6 weeks in the hospital at Christmas time with her daughter's family. She and her sister are in good health and are comfortably at home and enjoying good times with old friends.

Marybelle Carroll Emerick writes that Bill's arthritis keeps them mostly at home. They "keep home fires burning" for Shirley who works at the Wilksburg Community Office, and their 4 children, the oldest a sophomore at Allegheny College.

Marian Connelly Bowers says she is celebrating the Bicentennial by answering my request for news but the only thing of news value is that she is around and able to do everything she has wanted to do in business doing!

Adeline Crown Jubelirer says, "In retrospect the past year has not been too different from the year before. For this we count our blessings" — the weather in the winter, Boston in the spring and fall, Hampshire in the fall — hiking over mountains and enjoying the foliage changes. She is also more household chores, less community service. They attended her husband's 50th reunion at Harvard.

Ella English Daub says all who are interested in contributing to our 50th Reunion Class Fund should make checks out to: Chatham Alumnae Class Fund — 1927 and send to the Alumnae Association. Otherwise the money is put into the Annual Fund which has happened in a few instances. Ella says, "Do you think we'll be able to totter to Chatham '77?"

Harriet Evans has enjoyed suggesting and providing some speakers and types of entertainment for various Group Luncheons she attends. In so doing she has met "a few interesting, alert and capable people, leaders in various fields." She is "very lazy" and blames the cold weather, "never attributing it to getting old."

Margaret Gibson McCrum writes that the Mt. Lebanon Chatham Alumnae Group is a lively one. She is active also in Meals on Wheels, church and hospital groups and especially enjoys attending the various conventions in various cities.

Mary Harner Britton is taking care of her husband who is recuperating at home after 3 hospital stays since Christmas. In March they will be going to Florida, and in July, his health permitting, they are going on a conducted tour by train and autobus to the west coast. She continues with her local activities and had lunch with Mabel Hugus last fall.

Louise Hazen Meilicke writes: "I had a pleasant experience yesterday. Betty MacColl '29 called me and was the last Recorder which prompted her to look up." They have been living within 10 miles of each other for 10 years; both interested in painting and have many friends in common. They visited several art exhibitions and had fun talking about cold days.

Elizabeth Hewitt Holland says: "1975 was a very usual year for the Hollands." An operation and surgical shoes remedied a bad foot condition. She now can walk several miles a day with her husband and is doing well after a major heart attack last September. During the summer they were in the Holy Land, England, and New England. She has been nominated as an outstanding lay woman and credits Chatham "as giving me the stimulus for research and action."

Frances House Deiter lives a busy life "with activities in our church, Delta Kappa Gamma, hospital auxiliary, bridge playing and entertaining." At least of her activities is the general housekeeping for her husband and herself. In March she and her daughter plan to go to Florida where they visit with Kay Lowe Hall.

We extend our sympathy to Edith Jay Carson who writes: "My only news this year is sad news. My father died on April 9, 1975, after a short illness. I am continuing to live in our retirement home in Connecticut. Our daughters live in Connecticut and as."

Pegg Johnston McClintock says last year was a dull one but quiet. She is sorry she "isn't a world traveler or busy with community affairs but life in Florida is the greatest."

Miriam Kirkell says she has supposedly retired from teaching at Point Park College. Last May she was honored at commencement by being designated Professor Emeritus. The College previously had made a Full Professor during her 10 years of hard work in the Education faculty. But in the fall term she received an S.O.S. call to take over 3 sections of Music Appreciation. For this spring term she still has sections of Music Appreciation as well as working with student teachers. She wonders what will happen next year!

Kay Lowe Hall always looks forward to the Alumnae Recorder. The Halls spend 8 months in Florida where there is "never a dull moment," and 4 months in a lake cottage in New Hampshire — going and fro by auto-train. They had a summer trip to the Adirondacks and Lake Louise.

Ruth McKeever Slater writes "just waiting for the baseball season to start marking time until our 50th reunion." She is going to make her usual trip to visit daughter and family. She adds, "stop with me if you come to Philadelphia this summer."

Kay McPeake Arnold just sends "Greetings" but I often to add that last September the Arnolds were guests at a pleasant luncheon gathering at which Ryabelle Carroll Emerick and Burley as well as your retary were guests.

Dulcinea Marshall Walker says last year was a busy one. She spent May mostly in Switzerland, Italy, Austria and France. In July she and Inez Wallis spent a week in London, then an interesting 2 weeks in Russia. In October she visited Inez and saw Mildred Luthitt Luttrupp and Birdella Snyder Weyandt at a dinner party. They also drove to Charlestown, WV to visit Isabel Watson Druschel.

Eleanor Mowry McKelvey writes, "We've enjoyed fairly good health with an occasional dose of old age — laziness. We still have church and club activities plus a little wanderlust which took us to Austria, in November, and to Houston, Texas, for the holidays. Our grandchildren are 14 and 10, so life is full of many interests at their home."

Anne Negley Brunot writes "we're just going along in a pleasant but very unspectacular way." She "had been hoping something more interesting than one snowstorm after another might occur."

Suzanne Noble Nauman is leading "a quiet, uneventful life" and is happy her granddaughter Suzy entered Chatham last fall and likes it very much. She hears from Cay Sayers '26 occasionally.

Mary K. Reed Lose reports they have moved to Annapolis and find it to be charming and beautiful. They are now closer to their 2 sons. Her husband has a boat and enjoys fishing and she is doing volunteer hospital work.

Inez Wallis includes some of the same travel information as did Dulcinea but was less than enthusiastic about Russia. She says, "Never again." She leads a busy life in Arnold, PA, and is looking forward to 2 months in Florida where she hopes to see some classmates.

Thank you for your welcome responses. They help relieve the vicissitudes of old age and keep one out of the doldrums. In my spare time I am currently reading all the Regency novels of Georgette Heyer that I can find. Tim showed the Bicentennial spirit on October 3 by marrying a very nice girl whose surname is Adams. They desired to keep house in a new mobile home so the 2 cats and I are contentedly at home in our old domicile.

NEW ADDRESSES

Lucretia Bond Wagner (Mrs. Glenn), 616 Coquina Ct., Shell Point Village, Fort Myers, FL 33901

Marian Rogerson Knight (Mrs. Charles), 809 6th Street, Moundsville, WV 26041

Our sympathy to Katherine Reebel whose father died November 13, 1975 at the age of 102.

Calling all 29ers! In three years we celebrate a really big date — our 50th. Please remember to send in your contributions for our Reunion Fund. Make your check payable to Chatham College — 1929 Reunion Fund.

Last August Mary Kolb was hostess for a mini-reunion at her beautiful farm, Hi Horizons. Attending for an afternoon of "remembering" and enjoying a covered dish luncheon were Dot Appleby Musser, Ellen Connor Kilgore, Ethel Rendleman Fritchman, Helen Sawyer Ryman, Bess Friedmen Wasser, Elsie Duncan Harrison, Evelyn Thompson Wible, Fran Reeder Battaglia, Martha Ackelson Smith and Helen Myers Knox. Mary is already looking forward to this summer.

Dorothy Appleby Musser toured Mexico last spring — dividing the time between the Mayan ruins and west coast resorts. In August a trail ride in a remote area of Wyoming, then in September they toured Scandinavia, Russia and Poland. Erma Bachman Stewart and Glenn enjoyed the vivid fall foliage on a trip through the New England states last fall.

Lucretia Bond Wagner and her husband spent four months in Hong Kong and Taiwan last winter — retired but glad to be "in harness" once in a while. This winter Glenn went to the Orient alone (she couldn't take all the walking involved) to be there during Billy Graham's crusades. They have been friends for more than 30 years. Son Sam and his family live on a farm just a short distance from Glenn Jr.'s farm in Illinois. They are planning a trip to Africa next year — especially Kenya and South Africa where they worked in the '50's. Anne Textor Thompson and Bob visited them this year.

Elsie Duncan Harrison and Chuck toured the British Isles in September, and, while in Scotland, met relatives whom they had never seen before. They planned to spend February in Florida.

Lucille Evans Lynch is living a quiet retirement life. She was a great-grandmother for the first time last August. Bess Friedmen Wasser is a volunteer in the admission's office at Shadyside Hospital two days a week.

Jane Haller McCafferty became a great grandmother on Jan. 19, with the appearance of Mary Lynn Watts. During February, March and April she is a Volunteer Income Tax Aide. Last May she visited in Spain; in September she hunted turquoise in Santa Fe, and in October with the Smithsonian she toured Russia, a never to be forgotten kaliedoscope of Czarist loot and intourist gals who fancied party-hose.

Ruth Hunter Swisshelm sends greetings from Van Buren Bay. She has completed a year as president of the Fredonia Shakespeare Club and is now serving as treasurer of the Dunkirk-Fredonia A.A.U.W. Last October Ruth and Bob attended her 50th high school reunion and visited their son in Lenox, Massachusetts.

Mary Louise Jones says "State summary — general good health, whiz around in my wheel chair, play scrabble nightly, bifocaled and wrinkled — as aren't we all?"

Pat Lenon Dieffenbacher reports, "Up to my ears preparing a musical program for the Bicentennial, which I present at Hampden-Sydney College in February. The college opened its doors on January 1, 1776, and Patrick Henry was a trustee. You should see my costume!"

Betty MacColl enjoys Florida in the winter and summer at a family cottage in New Hampshire — an ideal set up! She visits with Mary De Motte Sutphen at the beach and just looked up Louise Hazen Meilicke '27, who lives only ten miles away. They both enjoy painting in a favorite fishing village and taking an active part in a nearby art center. Sometimes they reminisce about Miss Marks and Miss Meloy and the P.C.W. that was.

Frances Reeder Battaglia toured East Africa in October, and reported a great experience going from Nairobi into the many national parks and game preserves. Stopped in London in the way over. Son Charles is now practicing plastic surgery in Pasadena. Son Mark is teaching in the Landscape Architecture Department at Penn State. Cathy still has her shop and she visited with her in California for a month.

Helen Sawyer Ryman is busy with altar work at the Cathedral and in the diocese and loves it. Daughter Roxanna is still in New Guinea. She took care of all the publicity for the Presbyterian Church Conference in Port Moresby.

Martha Stem writes "Never a dull moment with my work for the Optometric Extension Program Foundation, Inc. Mother is well and we have had several nice trips through the eastern U.S."

Anne Textor Thompson and Bob enjoyed a trip to Acapulco in March, 1975, then to Florida and later to Canada. Dorothy Warner reports that all is status quo and she is adjusting to contact lenses. Peg Wooldridge Fifer is busy and enjoying life on the farm.

Janet Kutscher Bair went to Anaheim, California to spend Christmas with son Jim and family. Son Bill (U.S.A.I.D.) and his family are in Bogota, Colombia. She enjoys her little home in Jacksonville, Illinois, a very pleasant mid-western town with two church related colleges and three state institutions. "Guess I'm a small town gal."

Helen Myers Knox and her husband are enjoying retirement and their recent trip to Scandinavia. Their daughter Betty Jesse and family are home to stay after three years in England. Son Carl is an optometrist in Greensburg.

Katherine Reebel was made Professor Emeritus at the U. of Michigan, July 1975, and is a member of 11 boards and/or committees at local, state and national levels. She maintains her home in Ann Arbor and spends December and January in Florida.

Mary DeMotte Sutphen was back in Florida again for the winter. "Betty MacColl and I compliment each other on our youth and beauty! Don't feel a day older than in '29!"

Helen Furman Knight says she hasn't done anything of note lately. She has six grandchildren living in the Boston area.

NEW ADDRESSES

LOST

Genevieve Anthony Brush (Mrs. Frederick)

Naomi Bowser Rimer (Mrs. J. T.)

Anne Bozic

Julia Connell Callahan (Mrs. Francis)

Both Viola Smith and Martha Bradshaw Stout, reporting for Lois Applegate, enjoyed the fringe benefits of being secretaries "pro tem." After a trek through the snow for the mail, it was good to find news filled notes from classmates. We hope you are all planning to come to Chatham Friday and Saturday, June 4 and 5, for our 45th reunion.

Last spring two Beatrice Lewis memorial literature prizes were awarded since no writing was judged worthy of a prize in 1974. One winner was Judy Turner for her tutorial, a short story collection entitled Yellow Space Biography. The other was Kerry Tucker for work of exceptional imagination and craftsmanship in the writing workshop class.

Unlike most of us, Lois Applegate was not looking forward to retirement. She foresaw many problems but was unprepared for the first one, eye surgery, which was necessary shortly after she said goodbye to the office. Happily the surgery was completely successful. The best part of 1975 was her mother's ninetieth birthday celebration.

Eleanor Bartberger Dearborn doesn't plan to retire from her work as a tax assessor for a few more years. Dick, who has retired officially, is active as a flight instructor; and is a member of the New Jersey Civil Air Patrol and the Princeton Junction Volunteer Fire Company. Last October, E. B. and Dick made a quick trip to Indianola, Iowa, to see Miss Dysart and her brother Tom, both of whom are in reasonably good health. En route they stopped in Pittsburgh to visit relatives and friends.

Ann Bateman Lewis reports "no news," but she sends her regards to the class and a new address. The Lewises, finding their country acres too confining, have moved to a townhouse. Ann thinks it would be fun to attend the reunion, so perhaps she will make it a stop on her way to Boston to visit her son's family.

Photographs of Pittsburgh sent by her "little sister," Helen Rowand Dunkle, made Edith Beale Asper rather nostalgic; however, she will board ship for a cruise to Mexico. Last spring they toured New Zealand and Australia. At Christmas they made a first visit to Ketchikan and Sitka, places Edie had written letters to when she was working. Like their parents both sons enjoy traveling. Jim, married in August, is traveling in Europe with his wife; their other son with his wife and fifteen-month-old son toured much of the East last summer in a van.

Martha Bradshaw Stout writes that she is still living in the Penn Hills home to which she and Walter moved in 1936, but that the house is no longer in the country. She has become fairly expert at running a riding lawn mower. Last May a second grandson, Michael, joined the Stout family, the son of Pauline and Bill who live in Champaign, where Bill teaches statistics at the University of Illinois. Being no longer president of her United Methodist Women after serving three years, Martha is less busy, but she still manages to be away from the house for hours. Housekeeping never was her favorite pastime, she concludes. Martha and her family are making plans to celebrate her mother's one hundredth birthday next June in Alexandria, Virginia.

Perhaps we should go to Florida for our next reunion! Elizabeth Brandon, too, has moved to the sunny South. In November 1974 Bettie left Beaver Falls and journeyed to Fort Myers Beach to wait for the completion of her apartment in Estero. In October 1975 she broke her leg, but can now drive and walk with a cane. Bettie is not stagnating; she is taking classes in Bible and German.

In May 1975 Sarah Cecil Faist visited Pittsburgh for the first time in ten years. Sally and Helen Domhoff Neely met for lunch and had a nice chat. When she visited Chatham both Sally and the students had a shock. Sally was amazed when students pointed out the new library, and the students' eyes opened wide when she announced that she was graduated in 1931! She might join us in June.

Clara Falconer Simmermacher is trying to match the bionic woman. In two years she has had surgery on her feet and a hip replaced. After another knee operation in April she hopes that she will be able to walk again without crutches. All other members of the family are fine and arrived for visits after the surgery.

Ruth Haddock reports no exciting news, but "I have a great time doing nothing — a little of this and that in the community — a course at the University or elsewhere if it appeals — and any good trips I can manage." Maybe the reunion will be another!

After three cancellations Kay James McCann and Ray finally made a trip to Europe. They learned much on their three-week history of art tour to northern Italy — sometimes almost more than they wanted to know — but it was the best vacation they ever had. Kay's most exciting event this year was winning first prize at the Palo Alto Art Club watercolor show. She is still program chairman for their local Audubon Society and working for AAUW and the League of Women Voters. In November Kay organized a public information day to spread word about Palo Alto Baylands Park. She also runs local art shows and leads field trips.

Margaret Jefferson must be one of the fortunate few with good health. In June she retired from teaching and in September she registered as a special student at Virginia Theological Seminary. She hopes to be ordained an Episcopal deacon after she works in the chaplaincy department at the Virginia Hospital in Charlottesville this summer. Last summer Margaret had a fine visit with Noushka in her new home in Connecticut, where she is still teaching piano to young and old.

Florence Jones Maddox felt that 1975 passed quickly. In September she and William toured northern England and Scotland with the group that had travelled with them to southern England in May 1974. In November they flew to see their son David and his family in California.

Adelaide Lasner Sachs is a "young, vibrant blue-eyed blonde wowing all the gorgeous available Palm Beach men" or a nice "old biddy busy doing good things for other people and having fun." Since Addie's daughter Nan is graduating from Chatham this year as a prospective teacher the first description sounds as if it should fit until she adds that her granddaughters, Jennifer and Jordan, are studying ballet at Chatham. Maybe we shall see her in June.

Elizabeth Johnston spent Christmas with her niece Sally Johnston Woods '58 and her family in Wallingford, PA. She is still busy doing volunteer work at Columbia Health Center in Wilkinsburg and enjoying it very much.

October found Lucile Laughlin Logan on a whirlwind guided tour through eleven European countries. She writes that this trip covered nearly 4000 miles by motor and many added miles on foot numb to the ankles. A short hospitalization followed, but Lucile recovered to join a New York theater tour. She is looking forward to seeing many classmates at our 45th reunion.

Like Lucile, Elizabeth Marshall reported a mad scramble over eight European countries in September.

Helen Miller says "hi" to classmates who will be at the reunion which she will be unable to attend. She wishes that she had some good news, but has just "more of the same" — in and out of Allegheny General Hospital.

Vartanous Parounakian Turner wishes that could make our 45th reunion. She is still very teaching piano and active in the music teachers association.

Kay Rockwell Potter is looking forward to our 45th in June — "the good Lord willing." Potters enjoyed a trip in February to Costa Rica which Bill was sure would be his Shangri-La after twenty-four hours the altitude and the cold living changed his mind. The Potters flew to Norway last summer where they boarded ship for a fall voyage through the fjords. Most exciting was trip to Moscow.

News from Margaret Ray McDowell for Christmas was a happy day for the whole family home. Life without John is, of course, very different but church friends and neighbors have been kind.

Anne Ritenour Harbison can't believe this year will be forty-five years "since", but plans to stay home. Anne writes that she keeps busy as she is able. P.E.O., the Sara Mayo Hospital Board, New City Garden Society, various clubs and afghan making.

Lois Sproull Hinkley, during the last two years has developed health problems. She writes, "ask me what ails me, I'd like to know and so do the doctors." Lois is still somewhat active in the Scouts, mostly by telephone, and the A.A.U.W.

Louise Turner Crookston had bone surgery on both feet in December and was hobbling around on crutches in January. However, she will soon be on the golf course again. Her husband is still working at a bank in Deerfield Beach. After the sale of their business, Mac could not take retirement, Louise says, "I could." Before the first of March Crookstons expect to be moved into their new home in Boca Raton.

Florence Wise Turner writes that her routine does not change a bit, but that "I have fun doing things." She spends a long summer at her Lakewood cottage, and then chases around the rest of the year. In December she spent two weeks in the Florida peninsula, took a New York theater trip in January and was about to leave on a Caribbean cruise when she wrote. She hopes to get to the reunion at least see "how all the old gals are holding up."

Olive Wycoff McCarthy writes that she has home and enjoys retirement when not in California, Florida, Washington, D.C. or Russia which she and Parker visited last summer.

Viola Smith enjoyed reading your notes. No one is hoping that the Class of '31 will have a reunion. She enjoys the varied programs presented by the College Club, reading, and traveling. This year her traveling was confined to the United States, really New York City. Fortunately she arrived just after the conclusion of the musicians' strike at the Metropolitan opera and the musicals were scheduled. Chorus Line is no 1931 musical!

NEW ADDRESSES

Marjorie Hopkins, 526 S. Ardmore Avenue, Los Angeles, CA 90005

Mary Johnston Krudener (Mrs. Arthur), 5421 Road, Pittsburgh, PA 15211

Eleanor McClimans Muncaster (Mrs. Harold), Shadow Lane, Whispering Pines, NC 28389

Clara McClure Battis (Mrs. Walter T.), 4628 Street, #102, Pittsburgh, PA 15213

Ruth Reporting:

I retired from the Marion County Public Schools the first of this year. I miss the contacts as I would, but am looking forward to a trip to Orient this spring.

Evelyn Aliff Dautick writes that each member of her family is well and working and "Who could for anything more?"

The sympathy of all goes out to Sara man and family whose daughter-in-law died last year. Sally and her husband are temporarily making their home with their son and his children.

Dot Ballantyne Milliken wrote that she and her husband enjoyed Sanibel Island last March and a fall pilgrimage tour through New England. Their entire family of eighteen had a "rousing time" one week in July.

Evelyn Bitner Pearson had all of her family—twenty three—for Thanksgiving.

Jean Blair Hodgins always says she has nothing to report, but I think she is just modest.

Helen Chambers Swartz says she has had a lazy year, but plays bridge, attends plays and concerts. She spent Christmas in Washington, D.C. with her brother and his family who then visited her in Florida.

Marguerite Cunliffe Gape says she still enjoys teaching kindergarten children.

Genevieve Crawford Davis reported no news but she looked fine when I saw her at a Salmagundi meeting in December.

Jessie Doudna Phillips wrote of her increasing attitude to Chatham for its "influence in helping us all to cope, to survive, and to struggle to become human beings."

Dorothy Edsall Fuller and Ed had a fine six weeks trip last spring to England, Rome, Rhodesia, East Africa and Egypt, covering 4500 years in 45 days. Ed still teaches half-time and Dot does volunteer work at the Library. She notes that Beloit College's new President, Martha Peterson, is a trustee of Chatham.

Dorothy Gleason Van Wickle still teaches some labo students. Her husband is semi-retired since major surgery last February. They are happy to have their grandchildren near them in Bethel Park.

Virginia Hall McAleese's youngest daughter Anne was married in November. Among the wedding guests at Hilton Head was Margaret Eichleay Storer '55. Ginny's middle daughter, Ginger Wardner, had a baby boy last September.

Marjorie Hopkins is expecting to have another book published soon. We're looking forward to this, Marj, and wish you the best of luck with it.

Mary Johnson Krudener and Art are enjoying their life without having to worry about a large yard to take care of. They take short, frequent trips and are deeply involved in volunteer work.

Phyllis Leheh MacArthur has had a busy retirement year. She spent a month in Egypt last summer. After traveling from Alexandria to the border of Sudan with Egyptian friends, her idea of the Egyptian people has changed. She also enjoyed Christmas time with her son.

Betty Reporting:

Eleanore McClimans Muncaster moved to Whispering Pines, NC, last August after Hal took early retirement from U. S. Steel. They built their new home on a lake and feel they are on one long vacation. The people there are retired, friendly and from the North. She and Hal are playing a lot of golf, even during the winter months of January and February.

Helen McCracken Bennett writes that this past fall John sold the drug store properties, and hopefully when the necessary papers are completed, they can do some traveling. Wes is still stationed at Biloxi, Mississippi, and Sue and her husband Sam are teaching in Grinnell, Iowa.

Dorothy Newell has had a tough time health-wise. She spent two weeks in the hospital in January for a series of tests. The tests were inconclusive and she has to have a companion with her all the time.

Ruth Nirella spent the month of October in New England enjoying the fall coloring. Her big news is that she leaves in April for five weeks touring the South Pacific. Then to Ocean City, New Jersey, in July. She enjoyed seeing Charlotte Graham Dight last summer at Chautauqua.

Gertrude Ray Mann enjoyed three short summer vacations with her husband in New Hampshire, New Jersey and Virginia, plus a short trip to Romania with her sister Virginia Ray Randall '28.

A very pleasant world tour on the S. S. Rotterdam provided Ruth Ross with great interest and happiness.

Helen Rowand Dunkel has no news of any importance, but sends greetings to all.

"Meals on Wheels" keep Violet Sekey Jessop busy throughout the year. She says the main problem is that the "laborers are few."

After fourteen years as a social worker with Los Angeles County, Sallie Stevenson Foster will retire on March 31. She says it has been a great experience, but now she is looking forward to having time to do some things on her own.

Your secretary spent some time in the hospital last winter and recently suffered from shingles! However, is still working and enjoying life.

DEATH

Catherine Boyd Hawley (Mrs. Charles B.), February 24, 1975

Dot Reporting:

It is with great sadness that we note the death of our beloved "Cass." It was not known in time for our class news of last spring, but it did appear in "In Memoriam" at the beginning of the Class News Section.

We had our 40th Reunion with — would you believe? — six of us present! Jane Harmeier Nims and Ginny Schweinsberg Hyde were there and outnumbered by Dorothy Pontious, Dorothy Taylor, Dorothy Wood Clarke, and Dorothy Woodward Evans. That's 100% attendance for our Dorothys! We really enjoyed it, but wished more of the class could have come.

I notice that Ginny Schweinsberg Hyde in her reporting does not include news about herself — that new address is to be a newly built house. They are expecting it to be finished by the end of March.

Sally Aldridge Schaefer just returned from a month in Florida. Her little town of Chambersburg considers itself a frontier town and they have created their new Heritage Building by restoring the ancient jail building. Sally and her Garden Club have had the project of designing the gardens for the building. Work in these is about to begin, and Sally now sees herself on her hands and knees very soon.

Kate Dangerfield Buckmaster says she and her mother lead a very quiet life — Mother suffered a broken hip two years ago, and Kate is not too peppy because of an asthmatic condition. "I hope I can get to Pittsburgh sometime — would love to see the College and all my old PCW friends."

Margaret Eichleay Storer, still teaching third grade in Fox Chapel, will be retired in three years. She is a volunteer at the Harnmarville Rehabilitation Center and enjoys its fine new facility.

Jean Engel Reppun has two grandchildren now, the latest being Evan Reppun Beachy, who lives with his parents next door! The other grandson is in St. Louis where #2 son Tommy is now a resident in pathology — he received his MD last June at University of Hawaii. "The rest of our large family has all gravitated back to Hawaii and our house is full again."

Prudence Goodale Martin retired 14 months ago. Since then she has visited her brother in Michigan and friends in Philadelphia and New England, and then a cruise to the Caribbean. In December, 1975, Prue had a second operation for repair of her right eye and a lens implant.

Shirley Gordon Hovencamp says, "Record me as a maternal type, ecstatic at my daughter's (Grace Emley, Chatham 1964) decision to marry her boss in April! An Episcopal rector's wife, we have vivacious discussions about proposed ordination of women — he con, I pro. You see, I am in favor of the liberated woman, but I am personally fulfilled as a wife and mother."

I had chided Eleanor Harbison Bream for not writing news of herself when she was Secretary, and her reply — "It wasn't modesty, just nothing to relate — Gray is still teaching political science at Loyola in Chicago and commuting each week between there and McLean, VA. Summers are spent between Nags Head and trips to Wyoming where his family lives."

David and Jane Harmeier Nims enjoyed a year of much traveling: South and North Carolina in March and April, in September to Williamsburg with a group of Telephone Pioneers Life Members (David is president of his chapter) — then California and on to Hawaii! This year plans are for a short cruise in March.

My note reached Caroline Hesse Ender just as she and Bill were ready to take off for Waterville Valley, New Hampshire, for cross-country skiing. They are tennis buffs, too, summer and winter. When Bill retires in November, they look forward to being able to pick and go whenever they want. Caroline says "We are now proud owners of an Explorer Motor home and hope to travel most of next year. Any classmate with a wide driveway, please contact us — better yet, buy an Explorer and join us in a caravan to Mexico!"

Win Jeffries Saxon says "We are having winter in upstate New York with a vengeance. Otherwise no news, but greetings to all!"

From Louise Leadman Faller, "Dreary January suddenly sparkled on the 16th with arrival of our first grandchild, Jason, to Rick and Sue Faller. We plod along in usual fashion, enjoying our boys — Paul was married in May."

Marie Martin, who retired in February, 1974, has spent the last two winters in Key West. She is in Sun City, Arizona, this winter and plans to return to Pittsburgh in March. She would love to get together with us.

Mary Ida McFarland Shannon did not write, but I was told that her father passed away in January, 1976. Our deepest sympathy goes out to Mary Ida.

As for myself, Dorothy Taylor, I am one of the stay-at-homes. It seems I have much to do to take care of my big "new" (you have heard me talking about its construction for years!) house and my two self-employed businesses — stocks and cosmetics. That's about it — I enjoy it all and am afraid to go away — I might miss something here!

The classmates we didn't hear from may have just missed the deadline, we hope! If not, we still hope you'll write — do keep in touch!

Virginia Reporting:

Ruth Moorhead Sward is still in private law practice and husband, Keith, a clinical psychologist in private practice. Their youngest daughter, Ellen, finishes her master's degree in social work at the University of Michigan this spring — making two social worker daughters and one newspaper (wire service) reporter.

Gail Moursseff Keith has done some substitute teaching but is unable to do it now due to illness of her mother-in-law. She does volunteer work in the geriatric ward of the hospital.

Gertrude Russell Lydic is extra busy during the Bicentennial year with her work at the Historical Society of Western Pennsylvania. She does everything from making coffee after public lectures to all the purchasing, billing, selling books, greeting visitors and helping the bookkeeper. It sounds like a big job but she loves it. During Easter she is planning to be in Hawaii. We hope she sees Jean Engel Reppun while in Waikiki.

Mary Seaver Hewitt does a great deal of traveling. She is trying to break into the nature photography field professionally — free lance preferably. Does anyone have any ideas? She and her husband spent Christmas in New York City with their son, Frank.

Anne Snyder Milford has been Educational Director for Instructive Visiting Nurse Association in Richmond, Virginia, for the past 3½ years. She took early retirement from her previous position in hospital nursing administration. Her two sons are married and she has two grandsons. Her 89 year old mother, an avid crossword puzzle fan, lives with her.

Eleanor Splane Trullinger has been in the hospital and is taking a month's leave of absence from teaching. She is Department Chairman of Mathematics at the junior high school in Syosset. Her trip to Russia and Scandinavia last summer sounds most interesting. She is planning a trip to the British Isles this summer. Her son who lives in Hawaii spends much time with Jean Engel Reppun and her family.

Dolores Steinecke continues to be active in the church, Girl Scouts and Braille work.

Helen Wilson Houston keeps busy with volunteer work at the Home for Crippled Children, Vocational Rehabilitation Center, State Board of Vocational Rehabilitation, Allegheny County Mental Health and Mental Retardation Board. Both of her boys are lawyers living in Pittsburgh with two children each. Roberta is working at the Home for Crippled Children and Jean is in Tampa.

Dorothy Woodward Clarke says that last summer they thoroughly enjoyed a month of wandering through Washington (especially the Olympic Peninsula) and the Canadian Rockies. They are planning a visit with their son, Dick, before joining a cruise in San Francisco which will take them through the Panama Canal, with stops in South America and in the Caribbean. In June they are off for South Carolina and Georgia. Besides all this traveling Dot is active in the American Association of Retired Persons and "her" bell choir.

Dorothy Woodward Evans is still active in church work. Her son, David, was married in Arizona. Dorothy and her husband attended the wedding and vacationed afterwards in Colorado.

To Bertha Dunbar Speer we extend our most sincere sympathy on the death of her husband last May after suffering a massive heart attack. She says she is planning to keep her home. Her activities include the Vice Presidency of the West Penn Cot Club and Chairman for the Spring Benefit of the Shadyside Boys Club Auxiliary. The Shadyside Church Bazaar also takes much of her time. Gertie Russell Lydic informed us that Bertha is signed up for a trip in July on the maiden voyage of the Mississippi Queen to Cincinnati, sponsored by the Historical Society.

Vida Hurst Kerr says that the highlight of their recent life was a holiday tour conducted by their two boys. Andy, 22, on foreign study from Kalamazoo, Michigan, is at the University of Strasbourg, France. Dave, 21, is a sophomore at Davis and Elkins, West Virginia. Says Vida, "Dave flew with Don and me and our portable Christmas tree to Luxembourg, where Andy met us with a rental car. The boys then drove, navigated, interpreted, found zimmers and chambres and restaurants, leaving us free to enjoy large portions of Belgium, Germany, England and bits of Holland, France and Switzerland. We found special interest in home visits with several former AFS exchange students we had known when they were schooling in Murrysville."

Virginia Watkins DeMers is active in the A.A.U.W. in Fort Lauderdale. Her daughter Eugenie will graduate from the School of Applied Arts at Boston University this spring. They enjoyed the Bicentennial Trail together in Boston.

Sally Reporting:

Our sympathy goes to the family of Marguerite Heggie Bryson who died June 1, 1975.

Sally Anderson Amtsborg writes that a trip into Mexico convinced her and Herb that the United States is really a great place to live. While traveling they had a delightful visit with Pats Netting Morehead and husband in Houston, and while having dinner in Sun City, Arizona they saw Peggy Perry Huessener. Elizabeth Bradley sends greetings to all. Martha Branch Culbertson keeps busy with volunteer work and last summer had a delightful time traveling in the Pacific Northwest. Nancy Diven Seagren says the high spot of 1975 for her and husband George was their visit to Switzerland to see son Barry and wife Veronica and their only grandchild, one year old Andrew. Youngest son Bill completed his undergraduate degree in forestry at Washington State University in January.

Like so many other classmates, Mary Elizabeth Eisaman Washington has been a busy traveler since retiring from teaching last June. In September she visited France, Italy, Israel, Greece and the beautiful Grecian Islands. At the time she was writing her news she was planning to go in February to San Francisco, Hawaii and Las Vegas. Mary Follansbee Buck's son-in-law Geoffrey Guest is teaching at Chatham College, and Mary is glad that her daughter and three granddaughters are so close after their four years in Hong Kong. Betty Grace Hammer Maxwell reports having had a busy year working, still doing over her house, but she managed to work in a Caribbean cruise. Louise Johnson Purnell has also joined the ranks of the retired and is enjoying her lazy life.

Betty Kraus Hilsdorf has the best of two worlds. In the winter she works at the Kon-Tiki Hotel (look her up) and in the summer takes her trailer to Lawley Lake on the White Mt. Apache Indian Reservation and fishes for trout every day. Great life, she claims.

For me, Sally, there isn't much to report, except to express my thankfulness for our good health, our children and grandchildren, all of whom we thoroughly enjoy.

Issy Reporting:

Betty Lewis Williams is back in the classroom after a year's leave of absence because of illness and is looking forward to meeting classmates at the reunion. Quite frequently she meets with several of our classmates in Pittsburgh.

Eleanor Marshall Watters and Ed had a fourth granddaughter this year. For the first time in years all three of their sons are in the states and all of the family was able to spend Christmas together in Florida. Hopefully Ed will retire at the end of the year and they will spend more of the winter in their Florida apartment.

Pats Netting Morehead and Jim went to Europe last May and they hope to get back before their passports need renewing. They spent Christmas in Mexico and are now just having short jaunts to Dallas to their daughter's home.

Dorothy Motheral Porter had a great year. They spent Christmas in Pittsburgh with their oldest daughter and her family. Their son was married in August and is assistant director of admissions at Mercersburg Academy. Elizabeth, their youngest, is a junior at college and is spending the first half of the year teaching English in a school in southern France. Bill and Dottie will join her for her spring vacation.

Miki McBride McMaster and Gil hope to go to Florida in April and will see their son in Pensacola.

They are also thinking of a trip to the U.S. Northwest in the fall.

Jane Phifer Gwyer and Herb have had a full of retirement. They are busier than ever and know how they did everything and worked too! is looking forward to our reunion next year saving a day for it!

Muff Potter Koerner wants to be remembered by everyone. She and Vic are having a ball with fourteen month old granddaughter.

Kay Pyle had an exciting weekend in New City and had dinner with Mary Lou C. Neumann, her husband and daughter Stephanie saw "The Glass Menagerie" in which El McKinley Wright's daughter, Pamela Payton Wright played the part of Laura. Pam also played the part of Louisa. John Quincy Adams' wife, in the A Chronicle shown on TV.

Naomi Sayre and husband are on an extended trip to the Northwest. They left home July 25th expect to be back in Cornwells Heights mid-October. That is about as extended as you can get, Naomi.

Elsa Stiefelmaier Talbott and John enjoy seeing their grandchildren who live nearby. Elsa is doing part time accounting work for the same and is into the 23rd year and loves it. She names own time, days, etc.

We are all so happy for Mary Travers Gerhard was a small, but beautiful wedding with just family in attendance. Mary's son-in-law, who is an Episcopal priest, assisted in the ceremony. They will be in Mary's home, so the address will be the same.

Last spring, Ray and Mary Trimble Britain had a fine trip through Morocco, Algeria and Tunisia. It was exciting, but scary to be caught in a sand storm while going across the desert! Their youngest daughter Elizabeth was married in California after Christmas. Mary babysits frequently, is still on the Harmarville Rehabilitation Center board of trustees, and also does volunteer work for the Center.

Mary Watson Seed has spent several months doing over their 1834 house. She is also kept busy with her real estate and travel business and trip the fall of 1974 and 1975 in Australia, Fiji, Guinea and Tahiti. Mary wrote that she "hasn't time to go anywhere special!!!"

Dee Whitehead Heinig is well settled in Wilkeson and they are enjoying the area. In March they will be in Russia, but home in time to make plan a vegetable garden. Dee is looking forward to reunion in spite of the number forty involved. hopes there will be a good attendance. Comments please note: Dee offers any help toward plans are needed.

Olive Wilson is still busy with her miniature sounds well and happy.

Mary Yellig Earley reports that her husband has been in India for several months this winter Goodrich International. Their youngest child Jo will graduate from Duquesne University in June. The other four children are married. The Earleys have ten grandchildren. Mary plans to resign from that word better than retire) from her job as junior high school librarian in June. She then hopes to accompany Paul on his next assignment, where that may be.

To the ones who took the trouble to report thank you — thank you! I know that we all appreciate your news. Personally, life is great. Jim and I are and busy. Judy and her husband (a research physicist) are living in Australia for several years. Our son Peter is living and working in California. enjoy year 'round tennis, water coloring and sewing.

My Jane Reporting:

I was disappointed to hear from fewer of you this year. If you enjoy reading this news of old classes, do join in!

Helen Archer Fardig has taken on photography as a serious hobby with courses and shows. Helen Morris Davis has returned in retirement to her craft-knitting hobby. She announces a new grandson, Joel Jeanne Kalish Samuels who is trotting off to college at the slightest excuse to check up on him. We are all grateful to Jeanne for representing us so well on the Alumnae Board and are glad she is enjoying it.

Our sympathy to Mary Cole whose mother died this summer. Mary continues to be active in political and feminist groups. Peggy Cooper Uptegraff is sure women libbers would never approve of a college grad turning two years to braid an all-wool, completely reversible rug! She's still tied to the twins who are at high and Penn State but glad to be liberated from them for a while.

While some of us are into retirement and others, June Feick, are "still working but taking time to pull the flowers now and then," Totty Hoyt Faison just completed her first year of "working for" which keeps her occupied with her son at Washington and Lee and her daughter a busy high school junior.

The 39ers seem to be doing a lot of traveling but the globe these days. Ivy Huettner McLaughlin spent the month of February in Mexico on vacation from her real estate job. Esther Jackson took a six week holiday this year to India, Afghanistan, Nepal and Ceylon. Kay Cuthbert Hardee is looking forward to seeing Zaire, Israel and Eastern Europe in May as break from her busy practice. Jean Keenan Konet has two trips this year, one to northern Africa and another to the Caribbean.

I had a six week trip to Tanzania (where our son was at the University of Dar es Salaam), Zanzibar and Egypt and tapered off in Ireland (where one of our daughters lives). I agree with Letitia Mahaffey and free who also visited the Republic of Ireland last summer that "it is delightful and I like stepping back to the early 1900's."

Betty Duckwall Laubach sends her best wishes to all of you, as do I.

My Reporting:

I am impressed after reading the returned cards the great things the class of '39 is doing and by millions of miles that have been covered by our girls.

Ellen Moorhead Lewis is active in the Summit, New Jersey College Club and has helped raise $2,500 from a book sale. Her second son will be married soon, making the second wedding in the family this year. Son Eric and his wife live in Parkersburg, MD; Lance lives nearby and Bruce and wife live near Atlanta. Family reunions are great occasions.

One of our travelers, Betti Rindlaub Lord, reports a fabulous trip to the North Cape. It began in Greenland and continued to about 500 miles from the North Pole. She is still teaching speech, collecting skins (real ones) and has recovered from a broken jaw.

The Northwest is still full of beauty, writes Corene Ray Stier, after a trip to Alaska and they invite any of their Chatham friends to stop off in Seattle on their trips west.

Doris Chatto Kimball is involved in her children's education. Molly graduated from Endicott College and is now working in Vail, Colorado; Rick is a freshman at New England College; and Amy, a high school junior, is skiing and driving the family car.

A job as administrator of the Halfway House for women and volunteer work with retarded children and adults keep Mary Lou Weber McClenahan busy. She and Bill took a month off to tour part of the country by car.

Our sympathy goes out to Mary Jane Totten Dickinson whose mother died last June. She and Bill went to Corpus Christie last May to visit their mother and fell in love with the city. Congratulations, Mary Jane, on the arrival of a new granddaughter. A mini-Chatham reunion took place when Elva Bogren Goodwin and Bob were in Pittsburgh for their annual visit from Hong Kong.

A 1791 small farm outside Philadelphia is a new home for Helen Starkey Dixon. Bill may work for a short time until he retires from railroading and then they may go into a retirement business of their own. Bill and Helen went to Alaska after a visit with their daughter in Seattle.

Madge Miller Eulenstein keeps busy taking classes in just about everything. Son Rob is a sophomore at Case-Western Reserve studying engineering and daughter Betsy is a freshman at Wooster. They are both Merit scholars.

From Atlanta, Hortense Norton Seedlock writes that she is a certified Brailleist trying to learn Braille music. No children are at home now but they have four wonderful grandchildren. Husband Bob is working as a civilian engineer since retiring from the Army. They spent Christmas in Jamaica.

The class sends deepest sympathy to Ruth Ross Duer whose husband Ralph died of a coronary in March. Ruth has sold her house, moved into a condominium and is keeping busy with a job as a child placement supervisor.

Another traveler, Florence Smith Hess, had a trip to Spain and Morocco as well as a summer in Maine. She is still working at Children's Psychiatric Hospital. Her last child has one more year of college.

Betty Speer Schenck is still in the metal sculpture business. She and Bill have made a couple of short jaunts to Florida to escape the winter weather.

No change in the status quo, writes Mary Bee Weibel McEwen. She has taken on a volunteer job for Meals on Wheels as well as working at the local public TV station, the Glendale Women's Club and various other jobs that she hasn't been able to say "no" to. Children, grandchildren and Mac are all fine.

Organizing a wedding with only a month's notice kept Rose Weller Black busy in October when her daughter Margie was married to Dr. Gilbert Rodriguez. Rose is in her second year as president of Mt. Lebanon Area Chatham Alumnae Club and is busy helping husband Harry raise funds for the Boys Club.

Greetings to everyone from Beth Pensom Fox, Amy McBride Bell, Mary McCullough Abbott and Lillian McFetridge Wilson. Beth's son is in 10th grade and looking at colleges. The three of them spend their summers on the golf course. Amy reports a busy and very good year. Mary looks forward to reading the class news about everyone else.

Your reporter, Mary Milne Hanson, thanks all of you for your responses. My major news is that I'm getting ready for a trip to Mexico and we welcomed our fourth grandchild last June. Regards to all until next time.

Weezie Reporting:

Jeanne-Anna Ayres Widgery and her husband were transferred to Houston with Gulf Oil Chemicals Company. She is teaching part time at two private schools and the University of Houston and hopes to have her latest novel out soon. All three girls went to Yale, one in art, one in architecture, and one a senior in music. Catherine is married and lives in London. Alice Chattaway Kittle's big news is the wedding of son Jimmy in December. She and Jim bought a condominium on a ravine overlooking Williams Creek. Shirley Clipson Clarke has spent enforced isolation due to weather on weaving, needlepoint and knitting and waiting for spring. Sorry to hear of the death of Elizabeth Frey Wicke's sister Florence Frey Burnite class of 1943. Elizabeth has been enjoying her work as supervisor of social services for Dept. of Welfare but now that social work has recently suffered a lack of accountability, she feels they must prove themselves. Mary Kinter McEldowney has no news other than that they are going to London for a week and to Florida in March for ten days. Her daughter and family live in California so they don't see them often enough. Carolyn Martin enjoys living and working in Asheville, NC. She is now working as a secretary in a busy law office.

Jean McGowan Marshall is looking forward to Reunion and hopes everyone will remember with a check to the Alumnae Fund. She did a tour of duty in Boston when Laura Marshall Burtt was born in October and finds the tennis court much less tiring. Weasie McIntyre Casner's husband, Bob, had major surgery but recovered quickly and they had a nice trip to Amelia Island Plantation in Florida in May. Chris graduates from Southern Methodist University and Sandy for Univ. of Texas. They spent Christmas in Tucson. I also have a granddaughter to report, Katie Kelleher Criss, who seems to be twice as good as any of our own. Several of you have said that they hope to get to our 35th Reunion June 4-5, which we will do our best to make something special.

Natalie Reporting:

Mae Oettinger Schweinberg hasn't any special news this time around, but is hoping to make the 35th in June to see and meet all again.

Jane Pierce Eaton, like all of us, is appalled it is "that" long ago to make a 35th reunion, but she too is hoping to be there. Last summer they had a gorgeous summer in Costa Rica in a mountain side house with an unobstructed 180° view of the Pacific. Both their married sons live in western N.Y. state so they spend lots of time on the road visiting. Jane is still teaching. Pat retired but is doing lots of sub-teaching.

Mary Bertha Richards who seems to me to get the biggest bang out of "living," is now in Michigan enjoying record low temperatures and record high snow drifts! She is quite involved in Bicentennial celebrations, especially as her house is over 100 years old and thus a historic building. She compares her small town to her small college and thinks they are the most fun.

Eleanor Schaffer Kautz sends greetings from Dayton Ohio. Her article "Can Agencies Train for Racial Awareness" has been accepted for publication in CHILD WELFARE. She is about to begin free-lancing in social work training and consultation. And, as she says, "How about that?"

Alice Steinmark Rightor is teaching at Winchester-Thurston with other PCW girls. They are happily getting a few girls ready for Chatham each year. She has a fine new grandson — says the proud grandmother. Her other son is about to graduate from Duquesne. Alice will be there in June for the 35th.

Ruth Strickland Clark also has a grandson — "a wonderful boy" to quote. Chet gave up the retirement, she is Florida and they have happily moved back north to Alexandria.

Elinor Weibel Stoltz has forsaken the ski slopes since a terrific trip to Hawaii. She's catching the next plane back. But hopes to be in Pittsburgh in June for Reunion.

Julia Wells Jackson and Dick are busy building a vacation chalet in Gatlinburg, TN, where they love to hike and do photography. They had a wonderful trip to Africa just recently. Did lots of photographic work there. Two oldest sons are married; one is a surgical resident in Winston-Salem, NC and second son is a dentist who opened his office in Mount Airy, NC last year. The youngest is studying electrical engineering at UNC/Charlotte.

And me, Natalie Lambing Paige — I too now have a grandchild, Lorna Paige, born in March 1975. Her father, Peter Otis, has just transferred to New York from Maine, to work. Douglas is head of the history department at Colegio Internacional de Caracas — a long way from Mom. Lee graduated from U. of Colorado and is now awaiting law school news (re his getting in, that is). Peter and I keep busy gardening, swimming, skiing, boating, fishing, walking and volunteering at a local hospital — Peter secretary on the board, and I'm a waitress in the coffee shop. Being a class secretary is a fun way to renew friendships but I do look forward to seeing all my news correspondents again at Reunion.

DEATH

Florence Frey Burnite (Mrs. David C.), September 10, 1975

Marian Reporting:

I become somewhat paranoid when I hear from so few people. I shall accept part of the blame in that I don't get my cards out in sufficient time but other than that it has got to be something else.

Here in Philadelphia we are fine. We trust that we will have some peace of mind this summer in and around our environs in spite of the prediction that thousands of people will be walking our streets.

Jean Archer Rothermel said to say "hello." We attended Patty's wedding in December and it was very beautiful. Dan, Jean's brother, young Dan and Dick participated in the ceremony itself which made it extra special.

Glad to hear that Pat Blue Byers' husband is feeling better. They are planning a trip to Florida in March. Chuck is now a teenager — Kris and young son, Sam, are fortunate to be close enough to home for an occasional visit. Paul is married and running a successful photography business in Wilkinsburg.

To Edy Cole, we were indeed sorry to hear of the death of your mother. How very rich I feel your life has been that you were able to have such a great relationship with her. You are quite noble to have stopped smoking after 30 years of "puffing" away! I, for one who does not smoke, am most grateful.

I hit the jackpot with Jean DeWoody Bailey. Louise Haldeman Richardson took Marrion Rowell, and Eleanor Garrett Gittings and her out to lunch recently. Jean reports that "all look great and are busy." Dick and Jean will also be going to Florida in March.

Peg Dietz Abele and Ralph are looking forward to their trip to California. Their daughter Jennifer will be married in Malibu in March — an exciting occasion in a beautiful spot. Ralph, Jr. who is working for Environmental Consultants will join them at the wedding.

With all the young ones gone Jane Fitzpatrick McGough and Bud are "attempting" to train a new puppy as well as getting a few things done around the house. The oldest son is attending his first year at University of Virginia Law School; the second son is a sophomore at Bucknell having spent the first semester at the University of London (he loved England); and the youngest is a freshman at Hobart-William Smith. The entire family spent Christmas together in Florida.

I spoke earlier of Florence Frey Burnite's death but I did want to say that I had a card from Dave. He wrote that Florence had died of cancer after a sudden and brief illness. She had, however, just a few days before her death, held her week-old granddaughter. We wish to extend our sincerest sympathy to the family.

Janice Goldblum is still with the Los Angeles City schools. Her trip to Mexico was a marvelous two weeks which included Mexico City and the pyramids, then east toward the Yucatan.

The following two news items may be dated but I shall include them as they arrived too late for last year's entry.

Louise Haldeman Richardson's daughter Cindy graduated cum laude from Duke University in May of 1974. I am wondering if you are still the sports enthusiast of last year, Louise, and still indulging in bowling, golf and paddle tennis.

Barbara Heinz Barone wrote that she was leading a relaxed life with four out of college and four married — only "furry grandchildren" — cats and dogs at home which she felt she could live without.

Virginia Hendryx Shank reports their Christmas was a most joyous occasion with the "whole gang at home." Jennifer was married two days later, a beautiful glowing ceremony, and their home is now in Cleveland. Kim graduated from college, and Sally received her master's degree. Ginny and Chuck find too little time to accomplish all that they would like.

Claire Horwitz Klein said to say "hello" to you all. They are looking forward to the next class reunion so that they can see everyone. Evan finishes W & J this spring and plans to go to graduate school for Urban Planning. Their oldest is in the transportation business.

Elinor Keffer Hoon as we earlier related has moved and was in Pittsburgh and western Pennsylvania visiting family and friends — "a must" she says. Sorry to have missed at least a call when you were in Philadelphia.

I missed hearing from Marian Lambie Arnheim last year, but caught up this year. Falk and Marian had dinner at Gloria Silverstein Goldberg and Dick's home in Palo Alto in October. David is in London researching his dissertation in Art History; Dan is studying at Harvard Law; and Louise is attending Duke University.

Mary Reporting:

Dorothy Horne Mollenauer travels extensively with Bob. Her sons, Bob, Jr. and Dave, work and attend college. Their big news is a third granddaughter born in January to daughter Linda.

Nina Maley Ross returned to the working force last October. It is an opportunity to use that master's degree in Library Science that she worked hard to achieve rather than an indication that she is a true women's lib disciple.

Jane (Petie) McCall Downing had a great trip to Hawaii last summer. Her son flew from Alaska to tour the islands with her. She also had a new granddaughter last summer. Latest count — three granddaughters and one grandson, and she loves it.

Janet McCormick McDole received her 10-year pin at Boeing. In her words, that isn't so earth-shaking in itself (it just indicates a talent for self-preservation in the declining aerospace business) but add that to over 21 years at US Steel! She is also working on a study guide for APL (a Programming Language). And in contrast to the empty-nesters, who are selling their homesteads, they have bought a house.

With the temperatures holding at zero McKay Core passed up cross country skiing replied to my card. They had their first wedding, when Gordon married Lois Elliott in Weston, PA. Amy Jane spent a year at the University of Dijon, so she and Dan visited France and France and Great Britain. Amy's herb garden is well established to be included in a house and garden last summer.

Connie Meyer Waldschmidt is enjoying "winter-winter" in northwest Pennsylvania, working as a secretary in the Women's Physical Education Department at Allegheny College. Loves being among young people. Chad and family are still in Milwaukee; Bob will graduate from Vanderbilt in May.

Dorothy Minneci McCabe says "hello" to you. She planned to vacation in the sun in March.

Jeannette Myers Erler and John, who has re-anticipated a seven week North Cape cruise, summer.

Barbara Steele Mangan says they spent moving and building a house in Westport, Connecticut where they lived from 1963-67. Bill accepted position as Vice President of R. C. Bigelow, Inc. suggests we all keep drinking tea, Bigelow's Coffee. Comment.

Peggy Suppes Yingling is still with Presbyterians. About the girls: Molly graduated Phi Beta Kappa is working in a children's home on Long Island. Ed is to be married in May. Ed is working at Advanced Research Division, Westinghouse.

Lorraine Wolfe Regan will travel to Europe this spring, to the Far East in the fall, and become grandmother in July.

Enjoying life in Texas and its mild winters. Connie Lauer Stein and Neil. Their children are in Connecticut and Saudi Arabia. Last fall they went to Bavaria to meet Joy and Ed for the Oktoberfest and had a good reunion.

Becky was married in June, so we are "empty nesters," but now we need more house than ever. Paul and I plan to visit my brother in Holland and be in Scotland around Easter.

Alice Reporting:

We changed our emphasis a bit this time asked class members to talk about themselves their attitudes and options. This has resulted in really marvelous replies, and has made being secretary this time really rewarding. The quality has not been too large, but the quality has outstanding.

We received 'greetings and right on' from Mavis Davis Schellhaas and Alice Demmler, but no particular opinions. We appreciate their approval and that if we ever do this again, they will say more.

I had long, well-thought-out replies from Allhouse Harnack, Jannie Beck Jameson, M. Cohen, Jane Collins Hopkins, Carolyn Cosel and Jean Dalzell MacMillan. I can't quote their letters in their entirety unfortunately, but with exception these classmates are busy, happy and contributing in varying ways. No one regrets h tended a women's college, but Lois Allhouse Arnack would opt presently for a large co-ed school because she has discovered that "... I like male opinions and the variety of views and a large pool."

On other subjects, we quote Marion Cohen, who says, "I had no plan and no idea how my life would work out but am surprisingly pleased at how it did." Jan Dalzell MacMillan says, "... put me down as one of those contented uninteresting types." (This is far from the truth, but she goes on) "... (I'm) busy with a job I love... it would be difficult to believe that I would want to change anything." June Collins Hopkins now finds herself accepted as "a human being" by her four sons and not just 'good old mom.' She feels that it is the individual who is important, not whether she is male or female.

Jannie Beck Jameson writes, "I like my life and live for more than 50 years. If I were given today's options 30 years ago, I would have chosen the same life style." From Carolyn Cosel Lampl we heard, "... as for life styles, I'm glad I didn't have to compete in that big bad world out there, but often link our attitudes and preparation were so different that we didn't try — most of us anyway."

Fascinating replies all of them. As for me, my subscription plate for Ms. Magazine reads "Mrs. Thomas Coyne." I stand with one foot firmly planted in each camp.

Internet Reporting:

My respondents to the questions Alice and I asked our classmates showed 8 who replied affirmatively to the question "Do you like your life?" Six of the 8 said they preferred working to not working. Eight would choose a different life style and they were split equally between choosing a woman's college or a coed college.

A combination of working years and home years has been a happy arrangement for Lois Lutz Pierce who has raised two "square" girls who now have two "square" families.

Jane Meub Evans loves buying for her husband's college book store and still has time for pursuing her own interests.

No regrets for Marion Swannie Rand, retired after 30 exciting years with IBM, and now "ever onward" to a new life as a wife.

Ann Thomas Conner, who became interested in orn husk craft over 15 years ago, has been able to schedule her time in a way that has made it possible for her to tend the growth of her children and the growth of her craft and loves doing both. She gives very interesting talks on her hobbies to various club groups.

After 18 years at home Marion Updegraff Sunbergren found the need to use her education. She started back to work with trepidation but soon found her niche. She will start this summer as full time promotion director in a regional mall.

Jane Wood Ziercher misses her job in Columbus but has many outside interests.

Hello from Charlotte Wray Cohen ("who's growing old with as much grace as she can muster"), Gertrude Schmeichel Hutson and Marjorie Mayhall.

As for myself, I think Patty Smith Joyner has said it "... a very easy life, also very sheltered. I think Women's Lib is really Men's Lib and I'm much too lazy to want any part of it."

Ellie Reporting:

Marian Arras Wallace and Jim visited Hawaii for their 25th anniversary and her 50th birthday. It was fun meeting them at the airport on their way back. They had a good visit recently from Lucy Beale VanNess. Lucy and Joe may be teaching in Europe next year.

Jottie Beeson Schrader likes being in school again. She is working toward a master's in library science.

It is good to hear again from Mary Chambers Burdett. We had lost track of Mary. She re-married 2½ years ago and has her master's in social work.

Elva Brazzell Hively is chasing coast to coast visiting her children.

The price you pay for living in Florida is lots of visitors. Alice Burns Kasimirsky is learning.

Marjorie Evans McNeillie and Jim love retirement and living in the Lakeside area. They enjoy the symphony season and the constant activity of the area.

Betty Fleck Hendrickson has promised Jack she will quit going to school when she is 65. Betty will soon have her master's in music education.

Marie Huot Little and Don escape the Canadian winters by having a southern home in Florida.

Esther Kennedy Macdonald would like to see if we could have a get-together in the southern California area. I'll try to help her with it.

Greetings, but no special news from Patti Balch Lando, Marjorie Bennett Sherts, Kay Ciganovic, Ruth DeHaven Rigg, Peggy Dodge Poindexter, Gigi Gilliland Denniston, Vicki Haverstick Myers, Margery Himes, and Alice Kells.

As for Ellie Goldfarb Hirsh, I enjoy all of your news, but I have not included which child is in which class, or all of the visits among classmates (of which there are many), by request of the editor and many of our classmates. Let's start thinking about 1977!

Chub Reporting:

Nice, cheerful cards, with "no news," from Joan Kaufman Mendelsohn, Jacqueline Neal Jackson, LaVerne Lowar Scott and Peggy McSwigan Friday.

Fiftieth birthdays, continuing education and children in college were repeated themes in my replies. Life does go on!

Last June, Mary Alice Kline Morris' son Steve graduated from University of Cincinnati, began working for an airport consultant firm, and got married in August.

Ginny Lefurgy Tubbs and Evie Mock Hirtle are involved in college. Ginny completed her Master's of Science in Business Administration; Evie, on sabbatical from 18 years of science teaching and coordinator, is a full time Pitt student working on her doctorate. Evie is also president of Rachel Carson Homestead Association which is trying to turn the Carson birthplace into an environmental center.

Barbara Mason enjoyed seeing Marian Arras Wallace and Jim when they visited Hawaii. Barb also visited Jonie Sherrick Young and Dick on her way to New York.

Mary Lou Michel Tiernan's birthday party lasted three days. Larney flew all the family home and "stunned" Mike with his planning and culinary feats. She wrote "Happy 50th to most of the "kids" in our class."

Janie McCormick Lohr and Dean are "proud and happy" for their children, both graduating this June. Janie is no longer working with the library; she's working with children in the public school system. She and Dean went camping on a wagon train last summer. This was so successful they're planning to join the group again this summer.

Shame on Gloria Molinatto Spellacy — she doesn't miss sending "those double post cards." She is happily occupied as a homefinding counselor for transferred executives.

We all extend our sympathy to Lois Power Hughes whose husband died last August. She's continuing to run the business with the help of her younger son and reports she's OK, but busy!

One card I received told of enjoying her new home in the country, missing two boys away at college, much golf being played, and gave me the name of a good friend here in Weston. Since the card was unsigned, I, fortunately, could call the friend. We determined 'twas Ginny Ramsey Beck.

Roberta Swann Baldwin and Russ returned recently from an unforgettable trip to Russia — saw the Kremlin, Bolshoi Ballet, Leningrad Philharmonic and so much snow "the whole country looked like something out of Dr. Zhivago."

President Gerald Ford received a handmade pipe of deer and elk antler to add to his collection from Ginny Toy Schenck's son. Ginny sent a newspaper picture of the presentation.

Last June, Norma Trozzo Hopkinson received funding for a three year grant from National Institute of Hearing to study middle ear disease and hearing loss in Pittsburgh preschool children. Troz is excited about results. She understatedly said she never thought her bones would "feel" 50.

Josie McKerrick Tobie, Janet Thomas and Carolyn Wise Walp are continuing their teaching. Janet was runner-up in a women's senior singles tennis tourney in West Virginia this past summer.

Nancy Walters Cobetto continues church work and music study with Eunice Norton who taught Chatham's Henry Spinelli. In December, while accompanying for Civic Light Opera at the Pittsburgh Athletic Association, Waldo had a "wonderful reunion" with Mary Al Hoag Harrison.

I can only quote Laura Wiley Robertson's reply: "In September, when I was in the hospital, our house burned badly, but luckily my husband and daughter, Becky, JUST got out."

Bruce and I truly enjoyed seeing Jocelyn Beeson Schrader and Frank when they were in Boston for medical meetings last spring. We doubt we'll ever tire of Boston — and Weston.

Jeanne Reporting:

Marge Alexander Brinkworth wrote a drama for her country's bicentennial program for July 1976. Her daughter was married last June. She has three daughters in college and a son in private school.

Major active in platform tennis tournament circuit.

Mimi Altman Russell says that her children continue in school and job. Her daughter Christy is working on a master's degree at the University of Illinois after graduating from Pitt and has been accepted to the Pennsylvania Medical College for September 1976.

Claudia Bullers Janke's family vacations at Sugarbush, Vermont next door to Suzie Smith Anderson '58. Her daughter Lisanne is a freshman at Colby and son Rolf will be attending Westminster in September. Her seven year old daughter keeps her company at home.

Ruth Clarkson Brown is busy with Girl Scouts, Medical Auxiliary and appliance repairs. Her daughter Alison is a student at Dickinson College and will go to Vienna for her junior year. Her son Stephen is looking for a college; Lisa is 13 and Julie is 10.

Your secretary regretfully received only 4 replies from 21 inquiries. I am working with a children's bowling league on Saturdays and in our church library. Richard is a senior at Grove City and will be job-hunting; David is a freshman at Westminster.

Jean Reporting:

Louise Diehl Steel and Ned planned to spend their first wedding anniversary in Moscow on an eight day tour including Kiev and Leningrad. On returning home they plan to pull out the golf clubs and "shine them" for the first possible chance for a round.

For Jean Forward Frank it is back to cooking for two with all three boys away this year. She is involved in a weekly music therapy group for the elderly, is writing new music for piano and strings, also one for orchestra, and working on a Bicentennial community music project.

Jean Fraser Bailey broke her hip in September and still needs help to get around, but can now do most of her own housework. Tom graduated in May from University of Pennsylvania and has a job with General Electric in Pittsburgh so is living at home. Janet is a happy sophomore at Simmons in Boston, and Dave became engaged.

Naomi Garlick Kinard was a member of training committee involved in Bicentennial guide training for historic Annapolis Incorporated. She is now training Bicentennial Hostesses for St. Anne's Parish, and invites us to come to Annapolis in '76 for a tour.

Roberta Hanson Helm's only daughter Jane has applied to Chatham! Zeke is 13 years old and now a Star in Boy Scouts, still plugging toward that Eagle. Ralph travels a great deal but took Bobby along in November to Bonaire (Dutch Antilles), Mexico City and the Yucatan. They had a great vacation. She is still buyer for jewelry at the Corridor Store at the hospital, and a volunteer there in other services too. She was looking forward to going to Chatham for a weekend in February with Jane.

Louise Heineman Harper has nothing too startling to report, but they are all busier than ever, and having a good time with all their activities.

Harriet Kerr Daye reports that her oldest son, Harry, is a sophomore at Grove City College. Second son, Sam is a freshman at Penn State, and daughter Barb is a high school junior.

Katie Reporting:

Mary Elizabeth Wiles Knight has no special news but says hello to all!

Barbara Shields Sullivan says their daughter Mary Ann is a member of the A-B Club at Cochran Junior High. They hope to send her to the Chatham College summer camp in music to continue her studies in violin, organ and take up piano. This winter has been hard on her husband as he goes out in the boondocks of Cambria County for the Welfare Dept. Barbara has been busy with the Dale Carnegie Course and her sewing.

Peggy Thompson Weil is very involved in activities that interest her and keep her happy and busy. She is training to be a docent at the Carnegie Institute of Art.

Mary Lou Tite Ellsworth and Bob are still taking time out from busy schedules to enjoy their local amateur play group. Mary Lou is sewing costumes and is in the chorus of "Ben Franklin in Paris" for the bicentennial. Judy's involvement in the high school band has them going to football games with Bud and J. D. Linton Smith. The girls are both in color guard. Their twenty-four year old Peggy and Rick live in Pittsburgh. Peggy teaches Behavior Disorders at Pressley Ridge, while Rick gets his doctorate at Pitt.

Carolyn Walker Shoup's four children are all involved in their schools. Jack is a senior and Jolly a sophomore in college. Janie is a junior in high school and Tom is in the eighth grade. Carolyn is working full time with United Cerebral Palsy of Pittsburgh, specifically with the adults. She did volunteer work with them for several years and really likes what she is doing now. She also teaches quilting.

Candy Walker Hyser says that they have two sons attending Washington and Jefferson College. Chris is a senior and John a freshman. They are fortunate to have Mark, eight, still at home.

Your secretary reports that Lynn was married last year. It was so much fun getting ready for the wedding. Mark is now a sophomore at Pitt. Frank and I went to Jamaica last fall with a group of friends. It rained every day although it was not supposed to be the rainy season, but we still had a lot of fun. It would be nice if everyone just took a minute to send back the post card with a small bit of information on it. Everyone would enjoy reading your news.

No class news was received from Carol McCollough Stride for publication in this issue of the Recorder.

Nancy Reporting:

Ethel Anderson Mesloh and family are enjoying the beautiful weather in Ponce, Puerto Rico. "It's fun to raise tomatoes in February and not worry about a heating system," she says. Ethel is still teaching piano and playing the organ in church. Daughter Stephanie is planning to enter West Texas State University next fall and major in instrumental music.

Eleanor Balent Young continues to work at Holy Cross Hospital in the clinical chemistry laboratory. Her son Thomas graduated from Ohio University last summer, and daughter Carol who was married January 3 will attend Ohio Northern University.

"Our two oldest sons are in graduate school," writes Marilyn Black Auchterlonie. Jim is at the University of Michigan in Business School and Richard is studying electrical engineering at Purdue. Robert has been accepted in the engineering school at Purdue for fall.

As "Child Advocate" for the county, Anne de Shazo Robertson is working hard but has not yet solved all of the problems of children's services. She wages "an unceasing battle for money and manpower." Private practice goes well for her. Husband Tom is spending full time sculpting. During the summer of '74, the family took a month-long trip back to Europe to see old friends after eight years.

Apologies to Dottie Dodworth Scullin, who sent me a family newsletter in January. Now, in February, I can't find it, but they were well.

"No Women's Libber-me," writes Mary Ann Doering Rinaldo. She does the domestic scene daily. Oldest son Larry is a sophomore in college and second son Whit graduates from high school in June. Ann is looking forward to our Reunion.

All of Natalie Eger Novick's children are very busy. Howard is a sophomore at Pitt's School of Dental Medicine; Billy is a junior at Washington University in St. Louis; and Phyllis is a senior at Winchester-Thurston, awaiting word from college. Last semester, Phyllis took a political science course at Chatham and loved the school as much as Natalie did.

Shirley Elliott Johnston's husband Jay continues to be active in Kiwanis. They attended both the International Convention in Atlanta and the Pennsylvania Convention in Allentown, Pennsylvania, where she was elected state treasurer. Last summer, Shirley went with a church group of fifty teenagers to Virginia Beach. Despite four days of monsoon weather the group survived and had a good time.

Nothing special to report this year, claims Marjorie Englehardt Sayles. Kids growing: Penny (21) is a junior at Pitt; John (14) is a freshman at Alder and Greg (11) is the "heller" of the local 6th grade. Maddie's reading-tutoring group this year included two Vietnamese boys.

Van and N. J. Gittins Stoffer are in Pittsburgh frequently to visit Kay, who is a junior in engineering at Carnegie-Mellon. Connie, who interrupted education to be married, plans to attend Rutgers the fall. Patty changed her mind about Chatham and will go to an Ohio college. That leaves only Pam for N. J. to talk into going to Chatham. N. J. teaches reading, and last year was inducted into Delta Kappa Gamma, honorary society for educators.

When Shippa Hoy Dible wrote, she had just returned from a trip to Santa Barbara, California to visit her sister Joanne Hoy O'Roark '56. Both are at Purdue and her twin girls are sophomores at high school. Shippa's new hobby is writing English Bombeck-style poetry with which to torture her friends.

Vacations in Florida, Michigan, and the British Virgin Islands have been pleasant diversions for Kennedy Earley and her family during the past year. Pat will not be able to join us in June because she graduates from Monmouth College on that weekend.

Mary Ellen Leigh McBride has been president of the Women's Press Club of Pittsburgh and has led every minute of it. Her oldest daughter Elizabeth graduated from Mount Holyoke in June, had a summer scholarship at Woods Hole Marine Biological Laboratory, and is now at the University of Massachusetts, working on her master's. Daughter Robbie is a freshman at Sweet Briar College.

All is well with the Mooneys. Last spring I visited my mother in Orlando and had a great time seeing, swimming, and acquiring a tan. I plan to repeat the trip again this year before Easter.

Ann Reporting:

Esther Bender Shaffer and her husband Gene are still working for Mt. Lebanon schools. Their oldest daughter attends West Chester College and they have 2 girls at home.

With two boys at Penn State University and two younger boys at home, Jean Graham Hague is working full time at Allegheny General Hospital. She is also president of the Women's Association at church.

Three years ago Nanna Moore Pollitt and family moved to Upper St. Clair, near Pittsburgh. Don is with Young Life Campaign as a Development Coordinator, while Nanna is an elementary school librarian. Craig and Kathy are in college, and graduates in June from high school and Sarah is in high school.

Pat O'Keefe Beede has a son graduating from Harvard in June and another son graduating from high school. Hopefully this won't interfere with plans to attend our 25th.

A month's trip to the Orient this summer is S. Pavloff's "big news!"

Nancy Perry Vesely and Melvin will celebrate their 25th anniversary in August (like many other of our class!). Their daughter is a sophomore at Pitt and a son in high school. Nancy hopes to see everyone at Reunion.

Dick and Sarabelle Segmiller Krapfel plan to be in Pittsburgh for the reunion. Seggie does substitute aching in high school science and math. How's that for a nurse with a B.S. in Nursing Education?! Their eldest son attends Wofford College, a 9th and 7th grader at home.

Marlene Shettel recounts what she has to show for the past 25 years — first in her life are her 6 children: Jan (Chatham '73) married and teaching in an urban school; Larry Jr. (Carnegie-Mellon '74), hoping to enter University of Virginia Graduate School of Urban Design; Mark, a freshman at Regis College in Denver; and 3 sons in high school. Marlene continues as Assistant to the Dean at Cleveland State University College of Law. This year the responsibilities have been unusually heavy as they have an interim Dean.

Last July Audrey Sommers Whigham's daughter had open heart surgery and has recovered well. Audrey is looking forward to seeing everyone in June.

After 25 years of silence Jody Stephens Evans wrote, "To capsulize those 25 years there were the search biochemistry years running parallel with Air Force wife years. Then a divorce, followed by back to school for teaching certification years. It seems that in spite of my undergrad resistance to education, PCW has germinated an insidious curiosity in me and I've been catering to that curse ever since. 5, 105 graduate hours, 3 advanced degrees in chemistry, Geology and Science Education from Indiana University, here I am planning to go to the geology field station in Montana before I get too old to stagger around the mountains with my rock bag. Teaching high school chemistry and geology gives me summers to do those things, plus 2 summers in Bermuda and a summer in France and Norway. In June I'll be anxious to hear everyone else's 25 year capsules."

Muggs Sullivan Hannon and Jack attended the National Prayer Breakfast in Washington D.C. late in January. "It was quite exciting and inspiring." Their eldest son is at Bucknell, Patty will attend Duke next fall and 2 children are in high school.

Life is very full for Bert Thompson Thompson as he entertains students, faculty and guests lecturers at Drew University. Bert hopes to attend our reunion if it doesn't conflict with graduation activities.

Peggy Tucker Thompson is planning to attend the reunion. She works full time as Head of Family Day Care Service — placing 225 children in 100 day care homes. Their oldest son is at Stanford and number two son will enter college in the fall.

After many years of silence Pat Whitehill Kirk caught us up to date. Pat and her family have lived in Aurora, Colorado 5 yrs, where her husband is at Buckley Air National Guard Base. For the past 5 years Pat has worked with the Inter Church Task Force, 3 yrs. as president, and in '75 she received the Chamber of Commerce Humanitarian Award. Their daughter is in Rhodesia this year as a Rotary Exchange student. They also have 2 sons, 20 and 14 years old.

Joyce Wilde Rownd's daughter Debby was married in September '75. Their oldest son graduated from Pitt graduate school in March, and Jim is a sophomore in high school.

Helen Woods Lucas is still principal of Schiller Elementary School on Pittsburgh Northside. She became a grandmother Christmas day!!

Life is as busy as usual for Lois Young Flyte as she's a full time librarian at a middle school (media specialist in the current vernacular!). Mark will graduate after 2 years at Kent State and Todd will attend Westminster College next fall. Scott is 15 years old. Youngie's been delving into genealogy and hopes to go to Rhode Island this summer to continue her research.

Laura Miksch Diaz is wondering if anyone of our classmates around Monongahela is on the C-B radio in the evening. Her handle is "Carlie."

From the Colorado Moores: This summer Don and I were in Scandinavia for 5 weeks. Don was one of 4 doctors to be with the American Scouts at the World Jamboree in Norway. This fall I assumed the presidency of our local Meals on Wheels program, also was chairman for a vision screening program in the elementary schools. While in New Jersey this fall I met Bert Thompson Thompson in Bloomingdale's restaurant. What a thrill after not having seen each other in 24 years!! Enroute home I stopped in Pittsburgh and visited Esther Bender Shaffer, Jean Graham Hague, Nancy Aeberli Mooney and Nanna Moore Pollitt.

After 5 years as a class secretary I want to thank you faithful few who answered our pleas for news. Hope to see you all at Reunion!

Diane Reporting:

A job change now has Ellie Bailey Reese doing Medical/Surgical and Research Purchasing for Allegheny General Hospital. Daughter Elizabeth, a Chatham sophomore, is hoping for her junior year in Great Britain. Sarah is awaiting answers from college applications, while Julie (13) isn't sure whether boys or horses interest her more.

Mana Balter Marcus says that she's just inspiring everyone. Bruce's book "Competing for Capital" is doing well, and he has 2 new books in the works — "Detection of Corporate Fraud" and "Living with Pension Funds." Following in his father's footsteps, 10-year-old Joe has authored "Joe Marcus' Fly-tying for Kids," which will be published by Stackpole in September. Lucy (age 5) attends the Astor Program for Gifted Children.

Jeannine English Abel has stopped teaching and is now working full-time in Dick's office. She still has a church music job and is doing some theater as well as early music performances.

After just 14 months in the mid-South, Thelma Fiori Lacerte and family are back in Illinois where Dick is now Manager of Quality Control of J & L Steel's Hennepin plant. They are involved in building a new home there.

Back in school stretching her brains again — and enjoying it — is Betty Frantz Purdum. She is currently taking courses in Organic Chemistry, Microbiology and Anatomy/Physiology at Marymount College, and has recently been accepted for the Fairfax (VA) Hospital Medical Technology Program which will begin this summer. In the process of transcript evaluation, she was proud to find what a fine reputation Chatham has. After 8 years in Connecticut, the Purdums finally pulled a tour in the DC area, although they left 2 children and 2 houses in New England.

Bunnie Fraser Bell wrote of a fabulous family vacation in Winter Harbor, Maine. Karen is in her first year at the University of Maine; Katie (11th grade) is into calligraphy, batik, sewing and learning to drive; Richie (6th grade) keeps them on the go with hockey and Boy Scouts.

Some very exciting news from Lois Glazer Michaels: after serving as a Health and Welfare Planning Associate since 1970, she has been named Planning Director with major responsibilities in the areas of health planning and health education. Lois reports all are well, happy, busy and cold. Eric is a sophomore at University of PA, Marion is finishing high school and Jay is in 11th grade.

In addition to motherhood and teaching school, Danny Gray Hall is president of the Roundtop Racing Club. All three of her girls ski and, when she wrote, two of them had a chance of making the PA State Team.

Helen Halpern Berkson has had a busy and wild year. Her younger daughter suffered a broken nose and is still seeing the plastic surgeon as a result of being zapped in the face with a tennis racquet. They have travelled the East Coast from Pennsylvania to Florida with their camper and sometimes with their boat.

Still in Thailand are Peggy Harbison Hendrickson and crew. They like it there so much that Don has requested that his assignment as an advisor to the Thai Army be extended till mid-1977. Peggy regrets that they will miss all the Bicentennial activities.

When she wrote, Phyllis Hersh Spitz and Dick had just returned from Acapulco where they had a ball. Only Kathy remains at home; Chuck is at Cornell and Bill is a freshman at Oberlin. Phyl is still working as manager of the Coat and Fur Department at Kaufmann's in Mt. Lebanon.

Sally Hoffman Spangler's oldest, Susan, recently received her B.S. in Nursing from Pitt; Debra is in her first year at Gulf Coast Community College in Florida; and James Carl is a high school freshman. Meanwhile Sally is occupied with keeping books in their new business and working as a deputy in the Rainbow Girls. They had a visit from Shirley Myers Simcik and family last summer. Sally is looking forward to our 25th and is the first to offer to help out with that illustrious occasion.

Ann Matlack Wieland is now working at The New Gallery, a non-profit contemporary art center in Cleveland, where she is in charge of development and P.R. She also included news of Barbara Piper Dornich, who hopes to be a pro-manager of a new tennis club in New Jersey.

"Hi!" to all from Sally Crum Ferrell and Betty King Olson.

Well, that's the end of the news from respondees and now we're down to me (Diane). Stuart has been accepted at Mars Hill College in NC but currently seems to be going through a period of indecision and/or cold feet. The others continue to do their various things. I'm still Avon-ing and now have the dubious distinction of being a Team Leader. When Dr. Eddy was honored by the All Penna. College Alumni Assn. of DC in February, Helen Halpern Berkson, Betty Frantz Purdum, Doris Warner Brown and I had a fun mini-reunion. If any of you come to DC during the Bicentennial Year, please get in touch.

Fran Reporting:

A marvelous time was had by Dona Lester DiSanto and their daughter Julia in Paris on a tour arranged by the Alumnae Association. Dona had spent a year in graduate work at the University of Paris and was delighted to show her sixteen year old around the city she loves.

Marie Timothy Obermann says she is still a very busy mother and involved in many community activities, such as being chairwoman of her area's Bicentennial program.

The U. S. Navy was chosen by Jane Smith Morgan's son as a new career, and he is doing well. Jane and her family spent some time in Fort Lauderdale during the summer months. Also vacationing in Florida with time out for a cruise to Nassau were Susan Smith Schweitzer and her family. Later a business trip took them all to the Southwest. Sue does secretarial work for her husband's business.

Mary Williams Hofer says they sold their old Pennsylvania school house home and have moved to a suburb of Atlanta. She had a great visit with her roommate of 20 years ago, Allie Bash Fisk.

As for myself, the farm, Becky and Charlie, school activities and 4H keep me on the go. Becky won first prize in the 4H cooking presentation at the Washington County fair this year and her mother was certainly proud. Charlie is destined to be a "Country Boy." Don't forget to write — we all enjoy hearing about each other's activities.

Kay Avers Headley is keeping busy with various activities, her family and a part time job.

Barbara Beacham Volk had a skiing trip to Park City, Utah in January and through her church has been helping a Vietnamese family. Son Chris is a student at the University of Montana.

With all the little ones in school, Barbara Braun Bajoras is back teaching advanced algebra to eighth graders in a private school three days a week. Barb's oldest son was on one of the finalist teams of Junior High Quiz in Pittsburgh and also placed seventh of 1100 Algebra I students tested by the Western Pennsylvania Mathematics Association.

Marilyn Campbell Bowling and John had a trip to Las Vegas to visit relatives. Lois Bradley Fegley '54 and family visited last summer as they returned from Nassau. Marilyn has taken classes at Florida Atlantic University and also has become very involved in sewing even though still teaching kindergarten. The sympathy of the class is extended to Marilyn and her family in the death of her mother in January 1975.

Our Uniontown by Jean Brownfield, published by the Uniontown Friends of the Library, was illustrated by Eleanor Carroll Molnar. Sugie and family had a month long trip to Europe where her girls took part in the wedding of a nephew, a real Hungarian wedding, she adds. They were saddened to learn of the death of Mike's mother while they were enroute.

Joan Evans Taylor sends greetings to all.

"Hi to all I missed at the reunion," writes Nancy Follett Waichler. She says that life at 42 is fascinating, challenging, and exciting, thanks to Dick, eight children, part time involvement in the company owned campground in Wisconsin, a member of the high school Board of Education and the first woman director of Follett Corporation.

Marcia Glazer Arnold has received a faculty appointment at the Graduate School of Public Health, University of Pittsburgh, and is still working on a project for implementing family planning programs in developing countries. She is to present a paper and chair workshops at an International Conference in Tunisia in February, 1976.

A visit to Denver and a reunion with Marita Pigossi Spangler and family were enjoyed by Libbie Graham Williams last summer. Libby is busy teaching both public school and primary age learning disabled children.

Marilyn Hill is enjoying life as an editorial assistant and researcher. She was pleased to have a novel dedicated to her that was published last fall.

After twenty years as an interior designer, Janine Jordan Newlin is building a successful career as a Kitchen Planner/Interior Designer. Several of her kitchens have been in national magazines and she has recently hired a graduate of the Parsons School of Design to render floor plans and color elevations of her plans. This, she says, has increased her volume of work.

Jeanne Craig Byron plans a reunion with Mary Joe

Settino this winter and they have 15 years to catch up on besides seeing the sights of San Francisco.

Barbara Ann Kelley Linkous has been attending Avila College and is anticipating receiving a B.A. degree in May. She is planning a trip to Pittsburgh this May for the 25th reunion of her high school class.

Those of us who made it to the reunion had a great time — remember just four years to the next reunion and that one is a real landmark.

Carla Reporting:

Transferred to the Chicago area in June, Molly Lenhardt Rowden's family are enjoying the new surroundings. They are living in Olympia Fields, Illinois with their three daughters, third thru seventh grades. Taking advantage of living in the midwest, they vacationed in Minnesota this summer.

Barbara Wagner Fredette writes that "my sons are doing much more than I. Larry (18) is doing very well at a professional art school. Tad (20) is becoming an art historian (spent two months in Europe studying Romanesque architecture) and I — well I'm just an art teacher — which means we each have our own niche."

"Living alone has ended all routine in my life. But I manage to find time to travel a lot and just visited Jeanne Craig Byron in San Francisco in February. I also have been doing volunteer work two days a week at St. Francis Hospital and spend two days working at Scaife Art Gallery" reports Mary Joe Settino.

Activity-wise B. J. Woods Goodwin is president of Pittsburgh Athletic Women's Association and serves on the board of Pioneer Crafts Council (a group devoted to perpetuating country crafts). Daughter Lynn graduates from Kenyon College in June with honors.

"Turning back the clock — what a feeling!" writes Janet Kimball Lubic whose older daughter Leslie entered the freshman class at Chatham. She is a philosophy-religion major enjoying college life immensely.

Pat Smith Jankowski's daughter Beth was married in August. Pat's husband built a giant gazebo for the wedding party to stand in. Guess who was the painter? Their church is celebrating its bicentennial and Pat is lending it some of her watercolors which were done for a project in an advanced watercolor class under Mr. LeClair at Chatham.

Marita Pigossi Spangler started back to school taking Interior Design. Her "oldest is in college and says he's not too fond of competing with his mother. This time around I'm studying! Maturity has its rewards."

Embarking on a Ph.D. in clinical psychology is Natalie Stern Miller. Having left Craig's office after twelve years she is finding the transition difficult but exhilarating. Natalie states that "class work is a snap; quality required has certainly gone down hill since 1951-55. I am part of the founding of the school but that is another story."

In December Janet Loos Seibert was named Director of Nursing at Alfred I. duPont Institute located near Lancaster, PA. Care is for crippled children. Her three daughters ranging in ages from 15 to 13 take care of any spare time.

It sounds like Sally Seiple Tullai is more than busy in their greenhouse. They were preparing for family ski trip to Vail.

There is always a meeting for Nancy Reynolds Rdesinski with PTA, community projects and as chairman of a "grassroots" community group.

Jill Robertson Quick is a medical technician for an OB-GYN group in Camp Hill, PA. Daughters Kim, (21) is a junior in college majoring in speech pathology, Karen, (19) is a freshman majoring in nuclear medicine, and Kelly, (14) is tall and beautiful, according to mother.

Since Mannie Thorne Wright has moved from Lancaster to the Valley Forge area, she has not been teaching, just enjoying being wife and mother. Daughter Libbie is a sophomore at Wooster and Marian a sophomore in high school and band member. Mannie is now finding out what it is like being a Band Mother!

After two very busy years as PTA President and as active volunteer in Malibu community affairs, Mary Kay Moseley Kamath is looking forward to rest. The family including four children, ages 18, are thrilled with plans of their house soon to be built overlooking the Santa Monica mountain and bay.

As Claire Koller Runger states, "If we all down and talked about family and community probably voice the same frustrations and rewa Claire is busy with youth work, LWV board, sut and attempting ballet dancing for fun.

Pat McCormick Goodrich took a course in working and made her first piece of furniture. had a drawing and recipe published in The Lover's Cookbook. Also did the layout and design for a recently published poetry book. She is continuing as Art Editor of Stone Country and course, drawing and painting.

Two teenagers in high school is Nancy Ward DeWard's biggest project. Nancy is still teaching eighth grade English, back to canning and freezing and enjoying their new home on ten acres overlooking Mt. Hood, St. Helens and Mt. Adams.

Ruth Oberheim Webb writes from Florida she doesn't miss the snow. Dave and Donna graduated in June and her youngest started kindergarten. She has done a lot of sewing to help the West economy.

Joan Monahan McFalls joins with all in saying hello to everyone.

Louise Loewenthal Benjamin is working as travel consultant for Eagle Travel in Poughkeepsie. Son Richard is in eleventh grade and Susan a freshman at Dartmouth College. I was interested in learning of this because our older son Chris is a sophomore at Dartmouth!

You can imagine how pleased I was to get your interesting responses but especially the last one mailed and arriving in time.

Barbara McVicker Martin reports "still living 'Gay Paree' and each day brings a new adventure such as the one we are living through now. No snow and no hot water. I always liked to camp BUT in my own house in the middle of winter? We have no good use of our location, visiting quite a few countries and plan more trips this summer. I can't speak French but with the help of my husband get along just fine."

Prema Rajan Sastri writes to make up for the twenty years. She married an army officer and returned to India. After many moves they have been living in Bangalore for the last eleven years. "son Vinod (18) will graduate in chemistry at Loyola College, Madras, this spring. Daughter Indira (17) finishes her pre-university course in the spring and goes on to the degree course in Mt. Carmel College, Bangalore. Our younger daughter Sonali (11) is still in school in Bangalore. Husband Narayan left the army three years ago and is an electronics consultant. My big news — my play SHIVAJI (the name of an Indian ring) was selected for a national India award."

As for me I always have church and community responsibilities and run a mail order business dealing in African carvings and objects. I worked at improving my golf and bridge. Now have skiing, skating and tennis to learn. We basked in the sun at Acapulco last April. Then just Chuck and I ate away around Austria for two weeks in August with a brief stopover in London. Our younger son is a senior in high school and in September we will have two in college.

Gail Miller Maiolo says my letter reached her in the middle of a bout with the flu. The family took a winter vacation in Florida. Gail works at her daughters' school and is learning to play paddle tennis.

Jane Pattie Vyssotsky says both Alex and Julie are juniors in high school. Alex did so well on his SAT's that he has a chance to be a Merit Scholar. They visited in California last summer. Jane is on the Recreation Commission in her township and trying to convince them that recreation is more than sports for little boys.

Betsy Russell Pugh says no great news; summary of three kids, two dogs and volunteer work. Betsy is going to night school. They traveled west last summer visiting national parks. Plans call for them to be in Pittsburgh this June.

Jane Stocker Burfoot is still taking courses — this semester it's elementary math and she says the new math is like learning a foreign language. Fred is busy with church work and Rick is on the indoor track team.

Marlene Valentine Daugherty reports no news, no ups or downs and they like it that way. She says hi all.

Rhoda Weitsman David writes they are getting moved to Richmond and they have been exploring Virginia. She says Dorothy Bigg Milstein '56 is a neighbor. Daughters are 12, 9½ and 7.

The riding school for handicapped children which Jan McIlwraith McCally operates in the DC area is receiving excellent publicity and she is also active raising funds to keep it going. They have bought a farm in Vershire, VT which they eventually plan to use as a farm camp for handicapped children.

It's been an exciting year for me. I'm getting near the end of my training in Transactional Analysis. I'm a leader in two groups and have been co-leading workshops. The family traveled to Virginia and North Carolina, camping last summer. I find I am choosing more carefully where to spend my time and getting down on volunteer work unless I feel I can be very effective.

Sue Reporting:

With the busy schedule we all keep I was pleased to receive eight replies to my request for news. Only four donations for the class treasury came in so we really are in dire need. Please send $1.00 if you haven't done so already. The class members were enthusiastic about the address list. Many as they read it over were amazed as I was, to see how far flung our friends have traveled. No letters came back so we presume all addresses are correct. Some reacted: "Now I'll be prompted to drop a line or send a card at Christmas." The address list is useful when traveling too.

While attending the opening of a weaving exhibit at the Merrick Art Gallery in New Brighton, I was amazed to discover associate class member Rae Nancy Fife Zuberbuhler and I had the same weaving teacher. Rae Nancy brought me up to date: she was graduated from Michigan State University (a major in home economics and a journalism minor). Rae Nancy resides in Patterson Heights with her husband Richard, and daughters Katie, age ten, and Carrie, age seven. Working on the board of the Merrick Gallery, helping with advertising for her husband's business and family skiing trips keep her busy. It was a double pleasure to see Rae Nancy again because we worked together in Horne's advertising department.

Fond regards and greetings to all from Lynn Hughes Mayer and Barbara Heck Reeser. Thank you for responding! A cheerful "hello" reassures us that all's well with you and your family.

Judy Borton Neuman was delighted to fill in the blanks of the intervening years. Her husband Michael teaches and does research at Case Western Reserve University (Departments of Reproductive Biology and Biomedical Engineering). Judy happily gave up teaching for housewifery and mothering. She reports keeping up with Chatham news when she sees Steliane Parthemos Karfes and her husband, Frank.

Community service involves many of our classmates. Elaine Bloom Greenberger is doing pre-school vision screening for the Pittsburgh Blind Association and Myrna Deaktor Prince is substitute teaching at the School for the Blind. Elaine manages to include tennis in her days filled with work, volunteer duties and investigations of colleges for her son who is a high school senior next year (can the time have passed that quickly?). Last summer Elaine and Elliott had an enjoyable evening with Marie Smith and her husband Jim (who live near Elaine's sister). In addition to teaching, Myrna has taken an art course at Pitt and is working to improve her tennis game. Myrna and husband Gerald recently traveled to Antigua in the British West Indies.

Cardiac patients who must regain self-sufficiency are the main focus of the program Debbie Brog Bernstein is now working full time to develop in the Occupational Therapy Department of Allegheny Valley Hospital, Natrona Heights. Debbie assures us that husband Alan and children are fine.

A kind invitation for Chatham friends to "stop by" their summer home comes from Bobbie Einhorn Chester. Bobbie, Robert, plus family (Peter 14, Betsy 12, Melinda 10, Cecily 7, and Kate 3) recently bought a big, old house on Mt. Desert Island, Maine, as a retreat from the pace of South Orange. Along with her busy family's schedule, Bobbie acknowledges her sister Wendy has taken over as the family poet and recently has published her first book of poems.

South America is just only one of the interesting places Lois Shook Becker's travels have taken her. Lois returned recently from a buying trip (stones and unusual artifacts) for her jewelry-designing business. "How to Make and Sell Your Arts and Crafts," Lois' first book, published by Frederick Fell, Inc., N.Y.C., has been reviewed in many national publications and on television. Lois has toured the country lecturing and demonstrating her arts and crafts techniques.

The arts scene is sure to include some Chatham contacts as I have discovered. Fran Vernardos Gialamas and I chatted at Jerry Caplan's Artist of the Year Exhibit. In Harrisburg I recently enjoyed viewing paintings by Ben Miller, Julia Battle Miller's husband, at the William Penn Memorial Museum. Mary Ann Martucci Baker finds that a growing daughter only permits a partial return to her former interest, pottery. She now is able to take an occasional workshop and looks forward to more productivity.

Duties at school, teaching art K-6, and helping to organize an annual Elementary Arts Festival have kept me busy. The most delightful level is Primary ("Drawing is easy! You just think your thought, and draw your think." — Lisa, age 5) but with the power of reasoning comes a challenge to stimulate minds that so easily slip into regurgitation of information and symbols. In four years I must have seen 1,879 Snoopies! With diverse materials and interesting techniques the children's creative expression can be channeled into some surprising accomplishments. Doris and I both are anxious to hear from you any time the mood strikes. Keep on writin'.

Doris Reporting:

The Most Dedicated Class Secretary of the Year Award must go to Sue Allardice Neff for making copies of the Class of 1959 list available to all of us!

Sally Manfredi Guthrie's family is in that very busy stage of life where she spends much time keeping everybody's schedule straight. Her daughter Shari is 15 and involved with musical activities. Steven is 8 and into football, wrestling, and Cub Scouts as well as music lessons. Her husband Dick teaches at Peters Township High School. This year, along with other activities, he is president of the local teachers' association which brought the fringe benefit of a trip for Sally and Dick to Los Angeles to attend the NEA Convention. For two years Sally has been director and head teacher of the Alliance Nursery School in Upper St. Clair.

According to Alma Salvetti Jennings' letter to me, the Jennings have had a good year and moved to Greensburg in late summer. Brooks is currently working on the planning of a hospital complex in Cleveland and Alma helps out in his office when necessary.

Exhilarated and excited from a seven day car trip from Chicago to Los Altos, Sue Quad Croel extends an invitation to all classmates to visit them in "this land of sun and oranges."

Lesley Wells Brooks writes that while Art is busy in the legislature, she is enjoying their four teenagers and her law practice. "I do occasionally spend a day in Pittsburgh working and take a quick drive through Chatham. I'm pleased with the College's decision to maintain its focus on the education of women."

Marie Smith Smith is also busier than ever as her family grows up. Her fifteen-year-old daughter Therese will be traveling to Paris this summer to spend some time with Elinor Roeger Nyhus and her family and to see Paris. Marie looks forward to Elinor's return to the states because the Nyhus family owns a home near the Smith's. Nine-year-old Tony is an avid soccer player and the whole family has become soccer fans. Marie substitute teaches almost every day at a nearby jr. high school. "It turned out to be a rather permanent fulltime part-time job, if you know what I mean." Jim is well and working hard at the insurance business. Marie saw Elaine Bloom Greenberger when Elaine visited her sister in Potomac.

As a good fifth grade teacher should, when she returned to Florida last summer, Ruth McMillen roved Disney World. She also vacationed at Myrtle Beach, South Carolina. Ruth observes that serving on an evaluation team for another elementary school was a valuable experience for her. "It makes you take a look at your own teaching."

For Earla Sue McNaul and family, 1975 began with a question and ended with an answer. The question was what was going to happen to them after Colin's company was acquired by another. In mid-June they learned he would be closing out in July. July 15 found them celebrating their fourteenth wedding anniversary loading up their station wagon with daughters aged 8 and 13 to start a trip around the United States. The last scenic stop was a tour of the Chatham College campus. After forty-eight days on the road and thirty-one nights in their tent, Earla's answer to would you do it again is "YOU BET!" The answer to their question about Colin's job came December 8 when he began to work with Borden International in New York City. Earla says of their summer: "We have so many fond memories of friends and relatives we met that those of you we didn't see this year may see us next!"

From Coral Gables, Ferne Klein Kalstone comments: "I realize that relevance is an issue in the Recorder these days and as I've mulled over any possible news, I've wondered if it would qualify! I've merely been watching my children growing older while I stay the same, occupying myself with the usual chauffeur-tutor-nurse-cook-lover role. I've been delighting in this warm and sunny climate, playing as much golf as possible — and feeling no guilt."

Danna Vance Mitchell reports she has been working ten years as a Rehabilitation Counselor Supervisor for New York State. In May she will be traveling to Russia and is looking forward to the exposure to such a vastly different culture. "Thinking about going somewhere where Alexander the Great sojourned is not a bad turn-on, either!"

Several '59ers are on my Christmas list. (I would be delighted to add more) and these responses are culled from those season's greetings:

Carol Ritter Bowers and Emmett made a super trip to India and Kashmir to visit with a friend and returned to Texas to jobs which they continue to enjoy and to their volunteer project with the international students at the University of Dallas which they really like. Marylou Linsinger Gault finally got her trip "home" to Austria last summer. She loved every minute of it and is eager to go again. Marcia Fallon spent time in Mexico during the summer; she plays golf every week and enjoys sailing; she is working on an exciting on-the-job project to put their automated periodical system in the library on-line. Mary Ann Martucci Baker chided me for not calling her when John, the boys and I visited Toronto in October. (I couldn't find her number.) "You have to tell Suzanna (our wee daughter) what a great school Chatham will be for 21st Century women." Barbara McCahan Frank is a busy pediatrician who enjoys her practice and her "country life" with husband, son, daughter, and several horses. Anna Mary Frye sends fond greetings.

I think a special word of recognition from the Class of '59 has been earned by Betsy Lytle Suatoni who is director of Chatham's Gateway Program that is designed to make education available to the mature woman who wishes to return to college. In the Spring 1975 Recorder Report on the Gateway Program Betsy wrote "The common denominator among all the women is their enthusiasm and sense of personal growth." During my two years as Class Secretary I can say that all of your replies have struck me with the same brand of positivism and response to the challenge of being a Chatham graduate. In reading various reports and news releases about Chatham, knowing that Betsy has done so much to keep the College relevant (to borrow Ferne's word) is very heartening.

Please write throughout the year, anytime you have time, so that before Sue and I finish our secretarial stint, we will have heard from every member of the Class of '59!

Marianne Reporting:

Marilyn Eckert Winters writes that their second year in Paris was just as good as the first; they went to London just before Xmas and they hope to continue traveling. "Come and see us!" says Marilyn. Another set of travelers are the Robin Askin DeKleines who began with a trip to DC then half of the Atlantic coast. Probably all necessitated by the fact that all three children play one, two or three musical instruments. Robin saw Sharon Norton Tomlin in Princeton, and a new piano pupil was referred by Glorianne Huber Robbi. As if that isn't enough, her new next door neighbor is a Chatham graduate!

Barbara Easton Marks reports that she visits back and forth with Joan Cercone Gilson and Anne Sauers Brassert. She and her husband continue to teach, she in two separate schools in two sessions of kindergarten. They have bought a new home in a water front community.

Martha Bulkley Hostetter has been seeing a lot of old friends now that they are in the East again and would love to hear from anyone making Washington one of their bicentennial trips.

Angie Blumberg Levenstein is in a 2-year study-training program at the Family Institute of Chicago, ending in June 1976. She's looking forward to the reunion in Pittsburgh. Joan Koerner Greenfield, who is thinking of returning to college soon, is watching with great interest as Chatham changes because before long their daughter will be off to college and Joan says "I'm starting the brainwashing technique early." Her son will be applying to college next semester and she is pushing for a small, private school.

I am still doing research in the chemistry department at UCLA and am delighted to have received a 2 year Petroleum Research Fund grant. In addition to studying Spanish, I'm playing tennis 2-3 times a week, and teaching science to my son's first grade class. My husband went into his own lumber and hardware business last June and now, after 12 moves, we are PERMANENTLY settled in Los Angeles. I talk to Carol Spelke Smaltz occasionally and would love to hear from more of you.

Donna Reporting:

For a while last year, Mary Louise Kaylor Maury worked at a "fun-type" job in a specialty fabric store. "That was before Scott was born," writes Mary Louise. "Now I'm back to being a full-time mother and housekeeper."

John is still at Somerset State Hospital, says Fr Keenan Bonfigli. Two nights a week he does group work with retarded adults and individual therapy with clients at a county mental hospital. Fran has been doing substitute teaching and "trying to recycle" herself by taking communications courses under Chatham's Gateway Program. Son Paul, 14, interested in football and on the ninth-grade team. Jennifer is in kindergarten and can read, "trying to read nearly everything," says Fran.

Carol Lemke Keil has tackled a new job — teaching nursery school. According to Carol, "It's a challenging experience — fascinating and exhausting." Over the Christmas holidays, on their way from Butler, the Keils visited with Dottie Seif Kapp and family.

"Sorry, no news. But best regards!" writes Joan Levine Gilder. Judy Luttrupp writes she's still busy working.

A student again is Shirley Lewis Minner, attending Ashland (Ohio) Theological Seminary. Divorced after involvement in an encounter-sensitivity group, Shirley reports she's involved in litigation to regain custody of her children.

News from Katie Messina Gamble is that she's active with the SPCA in Philadelphia and NOW. Katie adds: "My latest acquisition is a potter's wheel and accompanying equipment. My first works of art have been a bit lumpy and uneven, but it's a wonderful experience to be able to change an ugly green lump of clay into a shiny yellow bowl, even if it has a lump here and there."

An enthusiastic response comes from Adair Sidford Alworth, busy with a crisis intervention hotline, nursing home and acting as den mother. Enthuses Adair: "Our greatest news is our new daughter who has everyone wrapped around her little every whim." Then there are Jeff, 14; Roger, 11; David, 9; Cameron, 4. The Alworths moved into a 200-year-old farm house with two acres, three-car garage with unfinished apartment, artist's studio, fruit trees, gardens, small tractor. Their home was included on a Christmas house tour and historical groups stop by now and then. "If anyone would have told me 15 years ago that I would have all this and five children, I wouldn't have believed them," quips Adair. "But Tony and I enjoy it all."

As for yours truly, I'm still chuckling over my vacation last fall. I took my year-and-a-half Scottie Terrier along, and she was great! Destination (by car): Gaspe Peninsula. The hardest part was getting ready: remembering my dog's food, supper dish, favorite bone, leash, coat, license, health certificate and "passport" over the Canadian border.

Jess Reporting:

Mary Booth Fassett Roberts reports that her daughters Martha and Harriett are growing up and that she is part of a busy, happy family. M.B. is still doing loads of volunteer work.

Working with Nancy Hofsoos in the Admission Office to set up an Alumnae Admissions Action Program is part of Sue Hocker Ballay's activities. But she left me dangling by not explaining what such a program entails. Sue B has also been teaching two creative drama classes in the local school and has survived remodeling the house. "If you've never done it, that statement doesn't mean a thing; if you have, it says it all," Sue B wrote.

Besides sprouting a few gray hairs, Marty Sanner Grover had some really big news to report. She had a piece of sculpture accepted for the National Academy of Design in New York City this spring. Marty says she is primarily self-taught and very short on technical knowledge but is learning fast and soon she didn't discover her affinity for sculpture long ago. Congratulations, Marty.

As for the McGowans, we're into various things here. Gerry is finally in kindergarten, Ned is finally in training pants and Jon is fighting nuclear power while promoting solar energy and wind power, but with side ventures into geothermal sources and cogasification. I am holding the fort. Currently, I am taking part in a local production of the opera "Susannah" by Carlisle Floyd which is fairly com-laboratory and lots of fun. My ongoing commitment is to the League of Women Voters of which I am President. It's a demanding job but satisfying in that one can feel community and governmental responsiveness.

Please don't forget that we have a reunion the first weekend in June. It's our 15th. Why not make your Bicentennial slogan "15th in '76" and plan to be in Pittsburgh.

Joe Reporting:

Barbara Pings Rawley, Karen Tiedy Ream, and Sally Williams Vasse send "greetings." Sally adds that it is the "same three-ring circus," and Barbara that "all is well" and she is teaching kindergarten and coaching the high school girls' gymnastic team. Brenda Purdon Stober still teaches nursery school and is assistant administrator for their private church school, grades K-3. She had an opportunity to observe nursery and primary schools in England during the highlight of "75" for the Stobers when she and Barbara chaperoned 16 teenagers from their church youth group on an exchange program with Coventry, England. It was quite a change from the younger age level, and there was "never a dull moment." The trip also included the honor of meeting the Archbishop of Canterbury in his private chapel. Brenda notes that this June is our 15th reunion, which she will try to make.

Ann Putnam Mallinson reports "one of the most satisfactory experiences of last year was to spend a week visiting old Chatham friends — Barbara Frank Ramsay '58, Linda Morgan Blyth, Sharon Norton Tomalin, Glorianne Hubert Robbi, and Liz Jess Sheehan." Arlene Sinkus Lewis stayed with the Mallinsons for a couple of days last summer, and Sanne Jessop McGowan and Anne got together when "Jess" was in town visiting her parents.

Judy Rubenstein Rubinstein continues to substitute teach in the Social Sciences several days a week at Churchill High School. Vacation was taken on a small sailing ketch from the British Virgin Islands for a week. They "went where the wind blew," and they saw "magnificent islands — including the island that was once Treasure Island."

Dorothy Seif Kapp reports that trips to the PUC DER in Harrisburg, hearings, letter writing, and assembling materials and information on utility and environmental problems were the Kapp's excitement this year. Teaching, canning, and mothering supplied the rest. The Kapps enjoyed a visit from Carol Lynke Keil and family and are looking forward to a visit with Elizabeth Waite. Dottie indicates she enjoys hearing from a number of classmates and from Chatham and that it helps in "keeping her male consciousness raised," a difficult task in a world of boys.

Carol Spelke Smaltz writes that she and her partner are still associated, but that the partnership has dissolved after they learned what "cash flow" and "negi profits" mean. "Sam" wrote and published "Free Radio Air Time," a pamphlet on public service and interview shows for 80 Los Angeles and Orange County Radio Stations. Many clients continue to be in the arts, including the Huntington Library. The doctors' slow-down has created some problem with hospital projects. The report on the girls includes: Connie is "served wine wherever she goes;" Carrie is the "gymnast;" and Annie is the "brain."

Nancy Wright Bate gives additional information on family extended thru marriage with Bob by reporting one is a junior at Stetson University and one is teaching music in Jackson Hole, Wyoming. Nancy keeps busy with teaching nursery school, church, and acting as a Girl Scout leader. She and Elaine Williamson Foreman, '58, live closeby. They are enjoying each other and the fact Elaine has started nursing school.

Next year you will be hearing from a new class secretary, as it is time for a new approach and a new volunteer. Am looking forward to our 15th in June and hoping circumstance will allow me to join you all.

A vacation planned for Chathamite contacts was terminated by my mother's death, but I did manage an "initial" and very enjoyable visits with Shirley Lewis Winner and Jacqueline Nadolny Rosenberger.

Keeping house for my father gives me something to do during the struggle to get a job in the presently complex labor market. Time away from extensive job duties has enabled me to do some evaluating which led to what is best described as "spiritual consciousness raising." Life is more exciting due to, rather than in spite of, the intervening 15 years. It has been a real delight, as well as a revelation, to discover that excitement and joy do not "have" to depend on "doing" or on "roles," not even on "circumstances." It has been a real joy to discover pragmatism picked up in church, social, rehab., and civil rights work and in a marriage (?) in which I was the only participant assisted in surviving and making progress, but doing so was only meaningful and feasible in terms of some basics that were often labeled "idealism" by the more experienced during Chatham days and continue to be labeled so by the "if you can't fight them, join them" contingent.

Nancy Beach Reporting:

Each of my 6 responses this year is packed with a lot of good thoughts, ideas and comments. I made up a list of questions, but instead of treating them one by one, I've condensed the answers and opinions to save space.

From Becky Albright Duncan — "Having my own children has changed the perspectives I had as a teacher, especially my years in Montessori and Open Classroom. I use many of the same techniques... but whereas I never paddled and rarely raised my voice in the classroom, I must admit to use of these tactics on occasion with our two-year old. I can also better understand how mothers can tune out or rationalize teachers' criticisms of their little darlings... objectivity escapes me where our own children are concerned... Just saw the author of Total Woman on television... surely there's a middle course between total submission to men and outright hostility to them... After reading Dr. Eddy's 15-year summary, my one regret is that I'm not going through Chatham's Gateway Program... or that we didn't have all those innovative programs in our years... I'd have loved an internship." Becky also reports that all Duncans are very happy and very busy.

From Meg Alexander Sprenkle — "After the recent death of my father, I have paused now and then to think about the big influence my parents have been on me. They were very close during their 39-plus years of marriage. My mother has always had interests of her own... wasn't dependent on someone else for her sense of identity. That was healthy when my father was alive, and will be of tremendous help to her in the years to come. Skip's parents' relationship was much the same. I feel lucky that I don't have to play the role of submissive wife, but am free to develop my own interests as well as share in Skip's. We hope that our daughters will have the opportunity to use their talents and not be limited by the stereotypes that were inflicted on our generation and those before us... Frankly, I have read only parts of Total Woman — enough to know I couldn't be one and retain my self-respect at the same time. I think that 'total women' is a misnomer... that a man who needs a 'total woman' can't be very sure of his masculinity. What kind of man needs an ego boost gained by having a woman downplay her intelligence and maturity?" Meg has had a busy year with tutoring, Planned Parenthood clinics and board meetings, and a list too long to include here. She is taking a college-level accounting course, and thinking about an M.B.A.

Jan Carver King writes that "happiness is being at Chatham again!" as a Lecturer in Computer Science and Coordinator of Academic Computing. "I'm enjoying it thoroughly, and am in a continual state of being impressed by Chatham. It's changed, yet retained the special qualities which make it unique. I am still enjoying my two little guys, Steven and Peter, and my favorite big guy George. The kids appear to thrive on the rather mixed-up schedule they have to put up with their career parents."

From Margie Conner — "When I left Chatham, I expected to get married, have at least two kids, be president of the PTA. Instead, I've bought a house with the man I'm not married to (we're into our third year), made a conscious decision not to have children (although I very much enjoy my job as a sixth grade math teacher), direct plays for the local theatre, managed three weeks alone in Europe last summer, taking bee-keeping and tap dance lessons. The single life is a lot better than I had anticipated... I'm involved in my community and enjoy living in a small town. ERA hasn't made a splash in Vermont yet, but we're working on it. And I dare any woman from our class to admit that she approves of the tenets of Total Woman!"

Anna Crone Nagy wrote a wonderfully long and thoughtful letter. In part — "You are asking a lot... the philosophy of life of a 35-year old suburban house wife and mother of three. Basically I don't think that I've changed since I was 21, but I do

I, Judy Launer Palkovitz, have enrolled in Chatham's Gateway Program. Jocelyn Browning Cerul and I are both taking Italian. We feel quite comfortable in the class although in September there was a definite sense of déjà vu. Our professor is Dr. Janet Walker, '67. Time marches on! Ciao!

Still working on her twins research project for the Yale Child Study Center is Jane Martin Grawe. She and Roger moved to Washington last summer where he's now at World Bank.

News from not-really-lost Lois McCune Flowers is that she and husband James have both been in school again. Lois will now be certified to be a school librarian which will be convenient as her children will be 5 and 6 soon. According to Lois, sunny San Diego has permanently claimed Susan Shields Kopp. She and her family have just bought a new home there and Sue is now working fulltime. Barbara Sandrovich Carver is on the move also — back to the Big Apple, Brooklyn this time.

An enthusiastic Sally Mercke Heym writes, "New home, new job, quit smoking — what more can one ask of a year." Northeastern University (in Boston) is where Sally is now Director, International Student Office.

Anyone who is a fulltime mommy will empathize with Margot Myers Clark. She has two in school and one at home where her time is spent "doing the typical housewifely tasks like protecting meter-readers from the dog, chasing the Salvation Army truck down to pick up a garage full of newspapers, convincing a 2-year-old of the merits of 'big boy pants'... tasks Chatham managed to protect me from anticipating." She has enjoyed hearing from Dina Ebel Monaghan and Lolly Smith Howard, '65, and has seen Helen Moed. Did any of you note the mention of Helen, a CBS producer, in Sally Quinn's book? It's a surprise to find a familiar name in a bestseller!

Ann Niedermeyer Fox lives not 2 miles from me and yet we've never run into each other! And no wonder — Ann is a very busy lady (she okayed the use of that word). Her job is as counselor for the South Hills Community Center for Older Adults as an Outreach Counselor. She also works at Woodville State Hospital with groups of geriatrics and conducts group therapy at several of the nursing homes. The Foxes enjoy athletics — Ann coaches girls' soccer

Here in southwestern Pennsylvania, J Greenlee Rohanna and her husband Kay operate a dairy farm. Their children are 11, 10, and 3. Writes Janet, "Farming is fast becoming an afterthought of the government. The pricing of a gallon of milk is as complicated a math problem as any I have found." The Rohannas are understandably active in the farm community and enjoy it thoroughly.

Karen Linde McMahon and I, Judy Paul Webb, along with our sons, spent a lovely day swimming, lunching and chatting last summer. For the last 2 years I've been teaching Sunday School to a fun group of 3rd and 4th graders. I also deliver the local Meals on Wheels program in relatively rural areas nearby, a very rewarding experience. I've enjoyed being substitute secretary for Marty for a year and hearing from so many of you. Your responses were overwhelming and I, for one, do find anything my classmates wish to share with me "trivial". With postal rates rising sharply these past few years the class treasury is in dire need.

And the controversy rages on, concerning what should constitute "the news that's fit to print." I was delighted with a remark by one of our classmates, asking what in the world had happened to senses of humor. Why, she asks, must we take ourselves so seriously? Rather than striving for equality, shouldn't our goal be for dignity? And dignity might add, is surely in the eye of the beholder!

The moral is that a "statistic" about a friend need not be really important to us, but it should matter that it's important enough to her to share with the rest of us. So, herewith, find the ideas and interests which some of our classmates see as being a worthy investment of their time and energy.

Billie Jeanne Walcutt Burg, in addition to doing some Chatham recruiting on her 7 year old daughter and a more elderly 14 year old, serves as a counselor for the Pinellas (Florida) Epilepsy Foundation and as a childbirth instructor for the Childbirth and Parent Education League, having received her MRC from the University of Florida. She suggests that we might find a better alternative to the rather uninspiring forms soliciting news for the Record. She heartily agrees and hereby promises not to send any over-popular pink sheets next year.

Debbie Wolowitz Cowan is working part-time on a project which strikes me as identifying a real down-to-earth need in our society. She's heading a course at Cuyahoga Community College for people who want to go back to school after a lapse of many years. It's designed to concentrate on study skills and confidence-building, taught in all sorts of campus environments. Working alongside people who are laboriously making their way through evening school, semester after semester, makes me belatedly appreciative of having had the Chatham experience, where education was not only my real responsibility, but a pleasurable experience as well.

Also on the teaching end is Betty Paladino Salyards, who's an Assistant Professor of Nursing at the Community College of Beaver County (Pennsylvania). She received an MPH in Health Services

As for me, Nancy Beach, I'm still typing away as Fashion Copy Editor for Harper's Bazaar which is growing by leaps and bounds (very cheering in these economic times) and just interesting what I can to Bazaar's readership by becoming a thinking person's (very exciting). The above takes about 8 days a week, with a few hours off for gardening, discovering all the joy and not-so-happy problems of living in a house in the country, entertaining friends, neighbors, neighbors' children, nieces and nephews . . . and still typing for my own. Many thanks to the 6 busy women who took the time to write. I hope for even a better response next year. Everyone has something valuable to share with us, and I, for one, found this year's letters the best yet.

Mickey Kammerman Kurzbard continues at the Patent Office, currently working at the Consumer Product Safety Commission. Her work is concerned with improved safety in all types of consumer goods. The home she and Steve got last year is keeping them busy.

Sheila Grobe Rossbach's letter should really be reproduced in toto. She sent an extensive bibliography of the books, journals, and studies she's currently interested in. Decisions regarding her son's education in the German school system, her professional life as a psychiatric social worker and her international existence make fascinating reading.

Annette Frank Fisch has returned to suburban NYC after four years in Luxembourg. "In the process of getting my husband's fledgling business on its feet, I discovered an aptitude for business administration," She intends to get a graduate degree in business and when her youngest child is in school for a full day "burst forth from my cocoon to begin a New Life."

Bonnie George Switzer is in Freiburg, Germany where her husband is on sabbatical at the Biochemistry Institute. She keeps busy with German and batik classes and a discussion group for German women who want to improve their English. "The women here do not seem to be concerned about their rights at all . . . could write pages about how the schools expect and assume that the mother will be at home." Traveling to Norway, Switzerland and Austria enhances their stay.

Mickey Folino Huff's new home is her "news." She's still an AA with Allegheny County Child Welfare Services. Mickey says she's not quite ready to be the mother of a dating teenager but has reluctantly become chief chauffeur for her two children.

administration at Pitt and admits that, although her ten years of teaching have been most interesting, her current sabbatical isn't hard to adjust to.

In the process of adapting to a new environment, Barb Shullman Young expresses her eternal enthusiasm by determining to find an acceptable substitute for the curriculum development job she left behind. With both children now in school, she's using this interim to get the new Wisconsin home in shape and to learn to play tennis. Regarding the pending comments, Barb remarks that she finds that those things which others care to share via the Recorder are interesting to her and are indicative of the many directions the class is taking.

In the guise of "the picture lady," Betsy Rydacker Cottingham handles a fine arts program for children, hers and others, as well as being a Cub scout leader and chauffeur extraordinaire for three children. She is president of their hospital auxiliary and a director for the fourth year of a hospital with a rapid rate of expansion. In addition, she's a part time employee of Cottingham's, Inc. furniture store when the family isn't traveling. She and Bob enjoyed a fly-drive trip through Spain with Spanish "passports" enough to let them get by on their own.

With her sons Joshua and Ethan now out of high school, Mary Riley Smith enjoys having more time to pursue her interest in writing. She's been doing some free-lance work for New York magazine.

Congratulations to Diane Rubin Newman who has been accepted to the University of Akron law school for the September term. Her husband has been a pioneer in public housing for low and middle income families and senior citizens, for which he has received national recognition.

Back in the States after 5 years abroad, Caroline Mahaley Thibault is reveling in Washington, DC's cultural life. She's compromised the working mother versus full-time mother situation with a position as an assistant teacher in her son's nursery school two mornings a week.

A new apartment in the top half of an old house has kept me, Jane Alexander Givens, busy when I've been home. I must admit that the relative merits of dependable plumbing versus charming woodwork occur to me as I virtually rebuild this old dump, but it's been a real learning experience. Six months ago I didn't know what liquid steel was, and now I can even drive a molly bolt. When it gets to be too much of a challenge, though, I can usually count on my job to get me out of town for a while.

If I were to be totally objective, I think I'd have to look upon this gang as a pretty interesting group of folks. As for the rest of you, don't deprive us of your input any longer.

Joan Reporting:

One of the benefits of having less than 100% response is that more space is available to report news of those who do reply — especially from those who don't write every year. I only wish — as I do each year — we could print unedited replies. I certainly enjoyed our tenth reunion celebration, and seeing again all our classmates who attended.

Claudia Anderson is involved in public television in Los Angeles, and finds it fascinating. She hopes to be part of the development of fine original productions of the caliber of the BBC productions.

Sheila Bennett Harris is active in so many areas, besides taking care of a new baby, that I can't even list them all. One effort is resulting in a leisure time activities program being provided by the Jewish Community Center for elementary school children in Pittsburgh's eastern suburbs. Sheila continues to sing, and is involved in PTA, AAUW, and the United Jewish Federation of Greater Pittsburgh. She visited with Adrienne Sivins Repley in New York last year, and was planning a spring visit with Pam Stirba Russell.

I received a lengthy reply from Diane Browarsky Levine, despite a broken wrist received in an ice-skating fall. Diane is enjoying teaching logic and composition at Loyola College in Baltimore. She is surprised that many of her students have great difficulty in articulating their ideas — a phenomenon Diane attributes to the swing in the late 60's and early 70's away from the classic education we received. Diane does have faith that there may now be a swing back to a balance between the traditional and the experimental.

Sarah Corwin Brady and Mike are "delightfully busy and happy." Sarah teaches part time and does public relations work for a large day care center; is assistant manager for their apartment complex; hikes with the Sierra Club; sings with a community chorale; ice skates to keep in shape; and does needlework in between. Meanwhile, Mike works days and goes to school in accounting at night. Sundays they relax with coffee, cold cuts, the New York Times, and each other.

Carol Craven Kratz reports that she is busy with a new house, two little girls, and graduate school part time. Carol also enjoyed the reunion and sometimes sees Janice Patterson, Sandy Geldman Forquer, and Ginny Powell Hargrave.

The arrival of her new baby was the highlight of the year for Ginny Damato Lee. The year also brought a move to Florida as Walt accepted a new job as a manufacturer's representative in Fort Lauderdale. The home they built is a curiosity as it is of 100% cedar in cinderblock Florida. In the continuing Recorder debate, Ginny sees the magazine as the medium through which she can catch a glimpse of our classmates' lives.

Four years ago, after working 6-1/2 years for a New Jersey pharmaceutical company, Karen Fried packed her worldly belongings, sold her car, and left for a year or two in Israel. Karen first studied Hebrew in Jerusalem, then went to work at what is now the Research and Development Authority of the Ben Gurion University of the Negev. Her Hebrew, of necessity, improved rapidly, and her work deals with the research of medicinal desert plants. Karen works with people from all over the world — an education in itself. Karen's door is open to visitors, and she is planning an extensive trip back to the States next year when she hopes to see many of her classmates.

Ginny Fisher O'Leary is busy completing the manuscript for her textbook "Toward Understanding Women" which is to be part of a series in social psychology published by Brooks/Cole. For Ginny, this process has been both exciting in its intellectual growth and depressing, as in the need to learn all those principles of composition never quite mastered in freshman composition. Ginny has many professional commitments and is looking forward to a sabbatical next year. She is also delighted with four-year-old Sean's reaction to her career — he recently asked where a friend's mother's office was. Ginny is planning a May 1 wedding to a fellow social psychologist.

As for me, when I attended the symposium on campus last fall I enjoyed a nice chat with Bonnie Dallas Palmer, who is now a member of the English faculty at Chatham. The symposium was stimulating though provided no clearcut answer to "Where have all the heroes gone?" Again, I enjoyed the reunion — as much for the opportunity to meet alumnae from other classes as well as to see my classmates. I'm rapidly approaching ten years at the bank and am beginning to think about making a change. Jim and I are planning a European junket this spring.

Sue Reporting:

What we lack in quantity of responses, we've made up for in quality. First, Elaine Hillman Moroney has returned to school at Concordia University in Montreal. She's updating her background in psychology before applying to graduate school. She writes that it's wonderful to be back in academia after 10 years — and to be doing well. Elaine is also involved in a CBC television documentary about women. Its producer is Judith Murray Walle '67. The program will be aired in March and portrays the lives of three women: a doctor, a business executive and Elaine. The whole family has been involved with this experience which has turned out to be quite an educational project as well.

Myra Hull Gillum, 71, and Albert, 69, have three children. The couple moved to the new town of Myra, N.D., in 1960. They have been married 40 years. Myra says the time between periods of trading new homes is "a very long time. I keep thinking about the old house and what I'm going to do to it. I don't like to leave it."

Sara Heslop's letter arrived with a "Wages for Housework" logo on the front, indicating one of her many interests. Sara finally finished the gasping ends of B.A. degree from the University of Chicago last June. She now works for the Children's Center, a child mental health advocacy organization, and lives in a collective household where they "struggle over each other's failure to wash the dishes but generally get it done."

Evelyn Kinast McElhaney wrote a long and revealing letter. Much of her life is "in process" at this time. She started back to school last year and will complete her B.A. in psychology in April. Ten years of life, plus three at Chatham, have made her feel "so far ahead of the typical undergraduate." Evelyn is considering doing a Master's in Clinical Counseling. Another major change is her separation from Ron last fall. With her children, 8 and 5, coping remarkably well, Evelyn is savoring her freedom from the "little boxes" of her previous situation.

I, too, am back in academe, pursuing a Ph.D. in American Studies at the University of Maryland, six credits at a time. This represents a change of fields for me but I find my English history background crucial to my interest in the colonial period. I am thoroughly enjoying this experience and glad to find that I am in the middle, age-wise, of students in my program. When my life began to calm down, I returned to my political activities and the League of Women Voters. I am now Democratic precinct captain. I still see a great deal of Nancy Speck, who has been a great help to me. Nancy is now an attorney with the Energy Research and Development Administration near Germantown, MD. The job necessitated a move to Frederick, MD and a house in the country — something she has always wanted to try.

My thanks to all who wrote this time. I am impressed with the variety of directions we are all taking. Please continue to do so. It certainly contributes to what Evelyn Kinast McElhaney calls the "increasing openness" of the Recorder.

The class of '65 seems to be entering our second decade in good shape — at least if we can make generalizations from the condition of those of us who attended reunion. David and I had a grand time — particularly as Grandma was thrilled to babysit and we could spend the whole day "doing" Chatham.

dising as well as recording textbooks for blind students, and being State Chairman of the Art Society of the Florida Home Economics Assoc. She spent a marvelous summer studying Decorative Arts and Architecture in England and will be returning there in May with a group of students. She says she is "planning to write the definitive book on singles living in suburbia, USA — have had no dull moments." Janice is the Miami Alum Rep for Chatham and returned "home" for a visit — she now plans to apply again as a freshman to take advantage of all the changes.

Jane Tremble Baumann discovered she was working with Gwen Gurnack '64 as legislative aides to a NJ assemblyman after reading the class news last year. After a disappointing year in a Master's of Public Administration program, Jane started Law School at Rutgers. The first semester was traumatic, but things are better balanced now: academic life vs. family responsibilities. The Baumans are temporarily harboring a Czech political dissenter who is awaiting acceptance at Columbia Univ. It's been a very enlightening experience for all of them.

Marsha Richards Binger is the President-elect of the Chatham Alumnae Association. This has kept her very busy — and she is looking for suggestions on what the Alumnae Association could be doing to make reunion more attractive. She would like to expand some of the activities to Friday, including some mini-classes. Perhaps, in the future, reunion could be held when the students are still on campus. To keep her busy until she takes over the presidency, Marsha has been on the County League of Women Voters board, plus a member of the Pittsburgh Human Relations Commission.

Letters from Martha Repman are always of a most rewarding way of life. She is head of the Chestnut Hill Branch of the Free Library of Philadelphia and really enjoys it. She says that Myra Hull Gillum is one of her patrons, as well as Debbie Payson Dechert '66 and Jackie Smyth Gawthrop '65. Being aware of the costs of postage these days, Martha would like to see an article in the Recorder on the costs of keeping in touch with Chatham graduates. "I sometimes get a little depressed when I read about all the great things the rest of you are doing (but I like my work) so I'm more than satisfied and willing to count my blessings."

Maxine Ruter Horowitz has gotten out of the "routine" and started a little business of cooking instruction in her home. She hopes to be teaching some adult school classes as well this summer and fall. The classes are like having company every week, "with all the raves that go with it, and none of the expense." Robbie is in kindergarten and 19 month-old Andy is destroying the house.

therapeutic being active in the League of Women Voters, as well as work with the American Farm Service. The junior and senior Howards rented a GMC Motor Home this summer and went north to lovely country, and a good way to travel with a baby. Susan Atherton Hanson and her family traveled to see us twice this year, while on visit with Rich's folks. It is great to see them. We also managed to see Bonnie Dallas Palmer last time we were in Pittsburgh, and to learn what it is like to be on the other side of the desk at Chatham. If you are coming through Southeast Michigan, give us a call — just the phone ring. I'm probably in the garden.

I am delighted to join the ranks of class secretaries and really enjoyed the responses to our questionnaire. It was wonderful to see some of my classmates at the reunion and catch up on the last ten years. Now I get a chance to hear from those you who weren't there.

Ronya Sieg McMillen is now an active performer in a mime and dance group in Shaker Heights, where her daughter Diane is involved in dance as a freshman at the University of Michigan. Michael, now also gets into the act with his eurythmics classes.

I loved hearing from Sandy Small — she received her Ph.D. in American Studies from Washington State University in February. She expressed the feelings of many liberally-educated women who face the insecurity of unemployment or underemployment, but she sounds happy in spite of it.

It sounds like Susie Soule Cox had her own reunion in Maine last summer with Sally Roy Lincoln, Becky Bennett Wallace, Jenia Roy Brown, husbands, and eight children. Susie has a new job as secretary at the Aspen Elementary School and Larry just bought a print shop on the mall at the Snowmass resort. Sam, 8, and Christopher, 7, are becoming avid skiers.

Enclosed in the reply from Jill Squire Popish was a marvelous picture of Jill and the children, Thea, now 7, and Daniel, 4. Paul keeps busy with his pediatric practice, a 10-speed bike, and a garden. Jill is utilizing her tutorial experience in her free-lance writing, specializing in death and dying. She is also editing a semi-monthly community newspaper. Jill wrote that she's "happily busy as wife, mom, a writer. With good organization the three can easily be combined and I wouldn't give one of them up for the world."

Sometime between tying shoelaces and making breakfast Pam Stirba Russell found time to write. Bill left Eastern Airlines in July and started his own solar hot water company. Pam is his office manager plus she has her own micrographics company which has doubled in size in 18 months. She still finds time for the local Women's Club and the various activities of Jennifer (8) and Meredith (7). With regard to last year's controversy Pam wrote, ("I think it is absurd to have educated women indicating such ignorance and intolerance as to decide what is valuable to someone else's life.")

Ginny Stretton Smith wrote briefly that she's busy homemaker with Dougie in kindergarten and a 3-year-old Karin growing up very fast. Husband Doug is still doing restoration work at Fayette State Park.

Jane Tobey Eden sounds absolutely ecstatic with her role as "super mother." Jane expressed amazement at how contented she is to be temporarily trapped after several years of over-involvement in community activities. She said that she really enjoyed the alumnae meeting in Boston last spring and she wishes Pittsburgh weren't so far away. She was planning to get back to skiing, possibly with Jeff, now 5, and Greg, 3.

Ingrid Von Dattan Detweiler, Doug, and Sean (4), spent a delightful summer on their new sailboat. Now she's busy with a new job as political reporter for a new town newspaper. She also serves on the Board of Directors of the Worcester Area League of Women Voters. Sean attends nursery school three mornings a week, and is becoming quite independent. Doug has a new position as Sales Manager at Worcester Controls.

Another classmate in the job market is Peggy Whiting. She is presently substitute teaching in 1 story department at Riverdale Country School and seeking a permanent position for September. Peggy is completing a master's degree and still takes her courses.

Last May I received a long, fascinating letter from Anne Zimmerman. She and Steve have settled in the hills near San Luis Obispo below Big Sur, and are busy taking care of their garden and animals. They are very involved in weaving and pottery, hoping to open a school for these crafts, and are making great use of the natural resources abundant in the area. Anne described the adobe house they built as a pot, but what a pot! She extended an invitation to anyone who is in the area to visit. The "simple life" isn't so simple but it sounds very appealing.

After an exceptionally hectic year with activities last year, I vowed to cut down this year. It's been only partly successful — I've learned to take less demanding jobs! But I wouldn't give it all up. Larry, is in first grade and doing well in spite of our two-month teachers' strike. Teddi Jill is in nursery school five afternoons a week, so I have two whole hours to do my "thing." Blair will be celebrating 15 years with Equitable Life in April, and he still loves it. He has become active in community organizations, too, but weekends are almost always reserved for family activities. I'm still active in "The Muses," a local singing group, and I'm also chairperson of the early Childhood Activities Committee at the Jewish community Center, but with Teddi going into kindergarten in September I guess I'll graduate to the next age-group too. Keep the news and views coming!

Cooky Reporting:

JoAnn Eustace Walther, in addition to her teaching senior college prep English, Humanities, and Creative Writing at Cambridge High and Latin School, is in the process of renovating a 15 room turn-of-the-century house. She and Fred had just completed a similar project in their two-family house in Arlington when they fell for the charm of the "big old house." They blame Chatham for their vulnerability to such homes. In an attempt to fill the new space, the Walther's family will grow next year to include JoAnn's parents, a young English cousin, and a live-in babysitter. One of JoAnn's former roommates, Mary Rosenberger Hourigan, and her husband Phil, one of Fred's former Yale roommates, have moved to Brockton, Massachusetts, so that the couples get to see each other more frequently.

Bonnie Birks O'Connell is serving a second year as an instructional aide at a local elementary school. Despite her teaching qualifications, Bonnie cannot find an art teaching position. Tom is still with Pratt & Whitney; Sean has begun first grade, and all of the O'Connells spend their spare time fixing up their house.

Barbara Buxton Van Sciver has a part time job as an educational consultant to a kindergarten Parent Volunteer Program that is supported by a State Department of Education Grant. Her community activities include positions as Vice President of the Junior League of Providence and as chairperson for the Speakers and Training Committee. Barbara is thinking about returning to school for a master's degree, but must first narrow down her field of concentration to business, education, or counseling. Last summer, Barbara, Stephen, Sara and Hope were in Pittsburgh visiting friends and reacquainting themselves with the much changed Chatham campus.

Bev Blazey Palmer still teaches Clinical Psychology at California State College at Dominguez Hills. She has been listed in Who's Who of American Women, The World of Who's Who of Women, and the Dictionary of International Biography. Heather Bastow Weiss has begun her dissertation on Adult Sex Roles in Dual-Worker Families. She has written several articles on working women scheduled for publication this year. Heather continues to commute between her house in Ithaca, where her husband teaches 19th and 20th century European history at Cornell, and her Cambridge-based NIMH-funded study on dual-worker families.

Natalie Dingle Bazzell has temporarily retired, with some relief, from a high school teaching job. She and Creamer have moved to Pittsburgh where Creamer has accepted a job with Lee's Carpet. After all these years away, Pittsburgh seems somewhat strange and offers a subtle reminder that life is cyclical. When the walls of their new home are duly painted and papered, Nat will again contemplate the job market.

Penny Anderson Gladwell manages to stay as busy as ever. This year's activities include supervisor for a "Mother's Day Out" program, member of the Administrative Board of her church, co-chairperson for United Methodist Women's Circle, Vice-President of Woodland Garden Club, and player in the Huntington Chamber Orchestra. Dave has earned his MBA at Marshall University and is still with Ashland Oil.

Barbara Blodorn Kronenberg was in the process of moving to Fresno where Howard accepted a job as Advertising and Promotion Director of the California Raisin Advisory Board. She is enjoying her children, Brent and Brooke Anne while they are still young and was looking forward to establishing new roots in Fresno.

Lenore Fellner Lessall, after 5 and a half years in England, has returned to New York. Georgia Canellos reports that "mainly I get older and around —"

Philip and I are still residing in Providence where he is perpetually matriculating at Brown and allegedly working on his dissertation. He has written several articles for publication, including the introduction to a scholar's facsimile reprint, and is working on bibliographies for First Printings of American Authors. My job requires my daily commuting to Wellesley where I'm a senior consultant for a management consulting firm.

Debbie Little Reporting:

Cookie Mason asked me to collect and write our news again. She is a post-doctoral research fellow at the University of Bristol (England) Medical School. Her work is on the structure/function of nerve cells in the hypothalamus. She wrote, "I'd like to hear more of other people's experiences on getting formerly male dominated jobs." She is applying for assistant professorships in the States and is occasionally "caught up in the hassles of being the token woman."

Nancy Lippmann also wrote from overseas. She is consultant for the Olivetti Company Training Center in Florence. Nancy said she had "won a landmark case against Berlitz School of Languages regarding her work contract."

The Marine Corps has moved Dael Kiesler

Stichter, her Major husband Bob and their two children to Kansas. This was their twelfth move, but they expect to stay for several years and have bought their first house.

Linda McPhiliamy Nielsen will take a sabbatical leave from teaching high school Russian to do post-M.A. work at Colorado University. She reports that there are 39 Chatham alumnae in Colorado and in February they established an alumnae club.

Trudy Levin Cushner is Management and Budget Specialist for Pennsylvania Legal Services. "I have been separated for over a half year after eleven years of marriage. While there are moments of despair and doubt, such moments are offset by increased self-awareness and contentment. There are many people who blame my dedication and love of my work. It is unfortunate that the recent self-awareness of women invites such an immediate and hostile reaction."

Teddy Jones St. Lawrence presented a paper on multi-cultural education before the American Anthropological Association and has revised it for publication. She hopes to complete her doctoral dissertation this summer. She and her husband, Technical Director in the School of Theatre at Ohio University, recently purchased land for camping in West Virginia complete with river frontage, a beaver and rattlesnakes.

Martha King Taylor has left her position as Officers' Assistant in the Control Division at Chemical Bank and the five hour round trip commute to New York City to care for her new baby.

Meg McDonald Murtha is enjoying life in Vermont and writes that she is working on a Master's of Education and has organized a play group for three year olds, including one of her own.

Kammy McCleery MacKirdy is hostess/manager of Hébert's Restaurant, Houston, Texas and is advisor to Senior High Fellowship at the First Congregational Church. "I always wondered if there was a perfect job for someone with a memory for names and faces and a dislike of desks and timeclocks - this is the answer." She sees Andy Morgan Weyer every few weeks and reports Andy is busy caring for her children.

Lee Ellen Macey and her husband Don Yost adopted Darius on Bastille Day. Lee is bus driver/teacher's aide and Don is cook at a small elementary school. They are looking forward to summer when they'll both be free of jobs. Lee says she reads more than ever, grows vegetables and studies yoga and astronomy.

I am Vice President-General Manager of Super8 Sound Inc. in Cambridge. I am seeking the funds, support and time to write a book on freedom and the American press. If anyone has any ideas, please write to me.

Teg Reporting:

I was very impressed this year with the quality and variety of things which some of our classmates are involved in. There were also many interesting comments on the various letters discussing women today printed in the "Feed Back" section of the Recorder. It is refreshing to know that so many of us are actively thinking about our roles as women and making educated and sensitive decisions about the direction our lives will take.

Ruth Oliver Hewitt, who worked for a time at Chatham, has now left to go into social work full time. She is responsible for a county child welfare program which helps deprived or abused girls in their teens. Ruth wished she had time to describe her experiences which she says are "unbelievable." Liz Schaye Haskell is also a guidance counselor at a junior high school in California and describes her job as "very hectic, but gratifying - this year I will see the first of 'my kids' graduating from high school. John started his own marketing consulting firm this year which keeps us both hopping."

Susan Plaut Tourgeman is teaching English as a second language for her fourth year in a county school system. Her new husband, David, is an Israeli foreign service officer and the political counselor for the Embassy of Israel. They will be living in Washington for about two more years and then move permanently to Jerusalem. Carol Pusin Pugh wrote from Wales where she and Ian have been living since 1972. Over the past few years Carol has worked building society ("like a savings and loan association") and Ian has been preparing for his final exams. He passed them recently and has taken appointment with a firm of solicitors in Worcester, England. Carol says, "I shall miss the closeness, tranquility of country life when we move Worcester in March." She commented that especially appreciates the Recorder and "read about old friends, perhaps because I sometimes so cut off being so far away from everyone."

Louise Royster Brown has spent a challenging and rewarding year as Director of the Department of Parks and Recreation for the City of Pittsburgh. She is also a trustee of Chatham and has found "interesting to be on the other side of the fence to be a part of the college's future." Her husband Jim recently became a partner of the architectural firm of Bohlin and Powell. Mary Rosenberger Hourigan now enjoys her "own version of 'my thirteenth' with the birth of Michael last May." She and her husband have decided to remain in the north where Phillip practices with the Goddard Medical Associates. Mary writes "like many others I have enjoyed the recent debates in the Recorder. They have encouraged me to research into my 'growth and development' while continuing to enjoy my present chosen position as mother and housewife."

I received a long and particularly sensitive letter from Ann Palmeri who is teaching philosophy at Hobart and William Smith Colleges in Geneva, N.Y. Since she is teaching a philosophy of feminism course and was once a roommate of Carol Shield Hylton '66 (see Recorder, Fall '75) she was very interested in the recent discussions on roles of women. "I find it unfortunate that we now have to make people defend caring for other people. It is not a social evil to have children and care for them... To make mother a 'professional' is not the answer but rather to transform the way we do mothering." Ann reminds us that "mothering is wonderful" and fulfills a basic human need. It does not necessarily restrict us from doing other things or limit any future choices for one's life. She stressed we should work to widen society's view of women and thereby "widen the possibilities for all people."

This spring Judith Murray Walle will be airing some of her views on roles for women over the Canadian Broadcasting system. She is a producer in the Public Affairs division for the CBC specializing in documentary films. "This show means a great deal to me and has been building inside for over two years. It's a one hour special on women. The idea is to present three women - a psychologically valid sample. They are all middle class, all married successfully, two kids each, with careers or going back to them. The idea is to present the audience with three articulate models. The fact is that mothering and a career are not incompatible. It takes a lot of work, organization and nurturing but it can be done. One of the 'models' is Elaine Hillman Moroney '68. Elaine is the only one not actually working but she was chosen because she is content with her two kids and husband and yet is consistently working toward her own personal goals." Judith's program sounds amazing and I'm planning to write to WNET and encourage them to purchase it for U.S. viewing.

As for Frank and myself, we have just moved again and are awaiting the new administration here in Washington. Delta is eleven months and quite a delight. Once we get settled into our new house, we plan to start looking around for a job. My last paper from Rockefeller U. in NY will appear this summer in the Journal of Comparative Neurology.

Donna Reporting:

It was good to hear from our classmates on the Chatham faculty. Mary Schlitt Kostalos, in her third year as Assistant Professor of Biology, is also a volunteer for the Pittsburgh Zoo and is active with the local environmental group against pollution of the Monongahela River. Janet Walker sends greetings and writes that she continues to teach French and Italian at Chatham and serve as Chairman of the Admission Committee. Last August, Janet spent a month studying at Cison di Valnarino near Venice.

"Moving on" is Sandy Stewart Shasby from Little, to Montana, to Lansing where the Shasbys will "settle" for two years while Mike is in the Public Health Service. Sandy enjoys the experiences of living in different parts of the country, particularly cross-country skiing in Seattle and Lansing. Her latest project is painting and wallpapering, a job in which she is "assisted" by her two little girls.

Carol Swenson Foss is busy with son David and a move to Charlotte, NC, soon after David's birth. Carlisle is looking for a new job, and "Swens" wonders where they will be next year.

Janet Washburn Grana combines job and studies as secretary at the Neurosurgical Research Lab, NYU Medical Center, and a student of paralegal studies at NYU. Janet saw Dara Murphy again last summer.

Busy and happy Susan Whitfield Sawyer writes at the, along with husband David, and the rest of the Division of the Budget are trying to solve the tremendous budgetary problems of New York City. At New York State Susan is Senior Budget Examiner responsible for the Local Assistance Mental Hygiene Program. Dave, as one of the City's clerks, is also very much involved with local legislative problems. As if this isn't enough, Susan is teaching employment techniques, helping the YWCA apply for federal grants, enrolling in a paralegal program, and "forever" fixing up a forty-five year-old house.

Mariann Williams Yatsco is busy with daughter Anya. John is out of the Air Force, and the Yatscos have "finally" moved back to south-Florida.

Linda Weltchek sends greetings and writes that she is completing her course in midwifery at the University of Mississippi in Jackson.

These past two years have been full and pleasant for me, Donna Mrock Carey. My time and self have been unevenly divided among my daughter and husband, our forty year-old home, and graduate studies in public administration at the University of Pittsburgh. Frank continues to practice law and play tennis. Last September I enjoyed lunch and a visit with Ellen Daily Bedell, Bunny Generalovich Lenner, Pat Jalowick Demase, and Eileen Richey Hepler.

Loretta Reporting:

Hello! Thank you to all who replied to my request for class news and a contribution to the class treasury. I had hoped to begin our once-a-year sharing of news with more than a few lines on the standard questionnaire. However, I was barely able to have them out on schedule. I hope that some of my good wishes to you did manage to be conveyed. My appreciation and thanks go to Sue Brown Weeks for her past work as class secretary. It is both frustrating (when few answer) and rewarding (when some freely express themselves) work.

Mibs Bainum is a Ph.D. candidate in Theatre and Drama at the University of Wisconsin. Her dissertation topic is Gertrude Stein's Theatre. She is also working as a project assistant to the chairman of the Drama Department. Upon completion of her degree Mibs hopes to find a job in professional theatre.

Emily Barclay has been working in the cancer control division of the Sidney Farber Cancer Center. Their aim is to establish a full range of services for cancer patients through the cooperative efforts of various hospitals. Emily has married John Hawes, an architect, but has kept her own name. Last September they moved into a house in Watertown, Massachusetts. It is not quite Victorian, but "has character" and takes all of their spare time. Before making the move they traveled to Egypt and Kenya.

No longer at her job as Publicity Director of WIC-TV Pittsburgh, Amy Bender Morgan occasionally models on a freelance basis. She is now involved with Women's American ORT, the Women's Association of Pittsburgh Symphony Society, and new daughter Alyssa Jill.

Carol Birmingham Levitov took a chance and is very happy with the outcome. She left a very stimulating medical research job at the National Institute of Health in Maryland and began an apprenticeship with a local potter. After a year she set up her own studio and is now working full time as a potter in stoneware and porcelain. Her work is being carried by several shops on the East Coast.

Dianne Bornstein Goldman has earned an M.A. in education from New York University. Presently she is on a child care leave after six years of teaching. Her husband Richard is an intern in dentistry at the Beth Israel Medical Center. They have been to many out-of-the-way places and have met many interesting people because of their interest in collecting and refinishing antiques.

It was good to learn that Josie Campbell Dellenbaugh is still keeping her hand in the art field. She is studying etching and working in clay at home. She is also reading Biology and Medicine for recording for the blind, restoring and redoing her and Geoffrey's 1770's house, gardening, canning, and taking care of a 2 year old.

Greetings from Barbara Christie are sent to all. She is trying homicide cases in her work as Assistant District Attorney in Philadelphia.

Kathy Cochran Kean is a full time graduate student for a master's in History and a teaching assistant in Western Civilization at Marquette University. She'll get her degree this spring. Kathy also sings in the 200 member city choir, "Bel Canto." Kathy and Bill, who teaches at the University of Wisconsin, very much enjoy living in Milwaukee. She sends greetings from Candy Atkinson McDougal who was in our class freshman and sophomore years. She and her husband Denny are living in Barston, California.

Dale Cohen is in her last year at Georgetown University Law Center and very much anticipating re-joining the paid work force.

I and my family are adjusting to a new community and an old house, dubbed "The Barn." Now that Angela is 6 years old and Heather is 3½, I am feeling the strong winds of change blowing around in my mind. I spend a lot of time writing, looking at want ads, hugging my daughters, creating weird batiks, and learning paddle tennis because it is

Lois Reporting:

I was beginning to feel very hostile toward the Recorder after reading continual criticism of hearing about people's lives, children and other mundane habits. Then I began to wonder why it was necessary for so many to complain about reading of other people's families and lives. The Recorder should not only have these things but I think that many of us enjoy reading about our classmates. I know that I am curious to know what other people whom I knew for four years are doing. It is certainly ridiculous to assume that any of us have kept in close touch with all of the people we spent time with at Chatham and equally absurd to think that there is something juvenile or frivolous to want to know of other people's comings and goings.

Some of the letters I received echoed my thoughts. Ann Rosch Duffield pointed out that the beauty of today's trend is that we have choices as women, choices which we are free to make and carry out without guilt and, idealistically, without condemnation. Ann enjoys her work as manager of the typesetting department at the University of Pennsylvania and delights in the time that she spends with her son, Jamie. Ann's husband Tim is working on a large sculpture commission that should be erected at the University City Science Center in Philadelphia this summer.

Kate Perkins has emerged after years of avoiding these pages. She is at the University of Georgia in a horticulture program. As a former English major Kate reports that the labs are a shock four days a week but she hopes to complete the two-year program and own a nursery.

I received news of quite a few children born this year. Carolyn Taylor Heysek phoned Ann Nelson Hooe to report the birth of the Heysek's second daughter but Ann was not home because her daughter was born the day before. Ann reports that she is happily retired from the Environmental Protection Agency.

Ann Posner Fox and Arthur are still in Iowa and will remain there for the next few years. They have a little boy now.

Jean Robinson Andrews and Bob report that they are not finding it easy to travel through Europe with a baby. While Bob is in the service in Germany, the Andrews have extensive travel plans for the summer and fall. This winter they have done some limited traveling in Germany. Doing this they lament the days they spent learning Latin and French in school. They are finding German a difficult language to master.

Chicago still holds Alison Oakes. She is still working as Supervisor of Youth and College Age services at the Bernard Horwich Jewish Community Center. Alison had quick, but very enjoyable, visits with Risa Ellovich in Chicago and New York.

Last year when I wrote this piece I was in the midst of moving. This year we have already moved again. After moving last March from one New York apartment to another we decided we had had enough of New York. We began looking for communities that we wanted to live in and jobs that were available. Well, we are in Maryland. Richard had gotten his Maryland C.P.A. reciprocity so we will probably be here. We have found that culturally there may be more in New York but we are doing more in the Baltimore/Washington area because it is less expensive and less harried to do anything. Scott and William can go outside and play with greater ease. Our whole life is more pleasant than in New York. Marsha Weiss Bramowitz and Alan are close by and we see them regularly.

Jody Drooz Yoffie, Alan and Alexy visited us several times since we moved and before the Yoffies moved to Massachusetts. If anyone lives in the vicinity of Worcester, Mass., please contact Jody.

Thank you to those of you who sent a dollar for the Class Treasury . . . And I am off for the daily nursery school pick-up . . .

Faye Singer Rosch and family are relocating to their own house in Altoona, Pennsylvania where he is setting up his practice. Jeff is finishing his fellowship at Children's Hospital in Allergy-Immunology June. It's hard to believe that Becca is in kindergarten already. Eric attends toddler playtime.

Carolyn Taylor Heysek has gone back to school part-time for her master's in psychology. She comments that there's no perfect time for a re-entry into the academic world with two children. She probably eliminate sleep in order to study! But won't give up playing tennis.

Katherine Wright Mueller continues to teach prepared childbirth classes for the Childbirth Education Association and is coordinator of a workshop on the general board of her church. Her daughter Cindy is recovering from eye surgery which occurred in January. Kathy was able to stay with her in hospital to ease the trauma.

Lynn Stewart who lives in San Jose spent some time in San Diego and Los Angeles and then spent week at the Club Med at Playa Blanca in Mexico. Lynn recommends the "Club" very highly. She is taking yoga and physical fitness courses and is planning a vacation to Rhodesia in August to visit grandparents.

Ann Turnock is expecting to receive her Master's of Divinity degree in June from Fuller Theological Seminary. She is looking forward to finding a pastorate and being ordained. Chathamites must be rare in Southern California since she hasn't seen for a whole year!

Marsha Weiss Bramowitz is a legislative analyst for the Department of Fiscal Research of the Maryland General Assembly. Her husband Alan is making plans to practice cardiology after completing his National obligation in June.

Connie Weiss Sukernek says "hi" and informs that the new arrival answers only to "J.D.".

In addition to her full-time teaching job, Laurel Weill Brown is teaching English to the foreign born at night. She's back in graduate school for another Master's in English as a Second Language (ESL) and bilingual education. Serving as a Chatham alumna representative and representing Chatham at a conference of women's college sponsored by Douglass College are proving to be very positive and exciting experiences for her.

April Wooden Salada recently completed her Master of Agriculture degree in horticulture and is working in the Horticulture Department at Pennsylvania State part-time. She is doing lectures, teaching and working with growers.

I've relocated to the Washington, DC area where I'm a research methodologist on the Longitudinal Study Project of the Association of American Medical Colleges. My project is investigating career development patterns of physicians.

Nelle Reporting:

It's hard to believe that we've reached our five-year reunion. Time has passed quickly, but it's been a fulfilling five years for the correspondents in my group.

I was excited to hear that Peggy Evans gave an organ recital last year at Chatham. Peggy is in the second year of a doctoral program in performance and church music at the Eastman School, and she is also Director of Music at the Irondequoit United Church of Christ in Rochester.

Robin Bernstein is in law school at Duquesne University and also works as an inheritance tax appraiser for the Pennsylvania Department of Revenue.

Carol Olbum does ceramics part-time at home in Pittsburgh, and is working on a one-person exhibit to be shown at the Charleston, West Virginia Art Gallery.

It's been almost a year now since Mary Conway Vaughan moved to London, where her husband Rick is working for an affiliate of Exxon. The Vaughans have been able to travel throughout Europe, and Mary says the environment is a welcome change from New Jersey. Mary's twins, Mark and Michael, are going to a play group in the mornings now, which gives Mary more time to herself. She plays bridge, does brass rubbings, sews, and has hooked a rug. Mary adds a welcome for anyone who's in London.

Debi Block Rubin is also in a completely new environment, having moved from rural Pennsylvania to Montreal. She enjoys being an urbanite again, though she's had to adjust to the super-cold climate and the fact that she's a language minority in the very French Quebec. Debi reports being happy in her job at a women's information and referral center.

Diane Berman keeps the wheels of justice turning as an Assistant District Attorney for Allegheny County, and is taking piano lessons again from none other than Mr. Spinelli. Diane visited Gloria Goodwin Raheja and her husband Raj in Chicago last summer, and has also been in touch with Kathy Boucher Brosi, who is attending Georgetown Law School in Washington.

Jan Brewer has earned her master's degree, and is now a Regional Health Planner for a three-county area around Ann Arbor, Michigan. In her spare time, Jan does lots of sketching, painting, and crocheting.

Marno Doczy has resigned from teaching, and told me last January that she was looking for other work. She added that she had a visit from Linda Jordan '70, and the two of them spent much time reminiscing and nibbling in the Gazebo.

I was very sorry to learn that Susan Belkin Glaser's father died in November. Susan is forging ahead full-time at John Carroll University to get her master's degree in School Psychology. She also continues to work part-time at a therapeutic pre-school associated with Case-Western Reserve. Susan and her husband Richard just bought a 60-year-old house.

A number of others in my group have also settled into houses. Betsy Auferheide Ruckman and Tom moved into their new home just before Christmas. Betsy is still teaching German and Spanish at Carrick High School, and looks forward to what will be an abbreviated summer vacation due to the seemingly endless Pittsburgh school strike. Debbie Hagstrom Barton is still teaching second grade, and she and her husband also moved into a new house out in the New Hampshire countryside.

Rosemary Gross Rubin reports that she and Robert just bought a house in the same neighborhood she grew up in. Rosemary is an attorney with the Stark County Legal Aid Society, and says that she recently argued a case before the Ohio Supreme Court. Betsy Hennings and her husband Art Farley have found a really cozy house in Eugene, Oregon. Betsy's description of life on the West Coast is scrumptious. The varied climate and scenery in that part of the country allow for all sorts of great outings. Betsy's taking art courses now at the University of Oregon and has joined the Women's Political Caucus.

Sallie Heidenreich Webster is still a Market Research Investigator at Proctor and Gamble. She and Andy have passed the halfway mark in repairing and remodeling their new home. Sallie also reports that she and Andy had the enviable opportunity to sing in Carnegie Hall at Christmas time with the Cincinnati May Festival choir.

I'm caseworker now for a congressman from Los Angeles, and hope that some day, some way, I'll get the chance to travel to his district. Liz Cotsworth is also in Washington, working for the Environmental Protection Agency, Office of International Activities. Hope to see all of you at the reunion.

Chris Reporting:

Greetings. Ellen Jackson Diamond reports that she is still teaching kindergarten at Northview Heights in Pittsburgh, and that husband Mark is serving an internship at Children's Hospital. A nice letter arrived from Gail Lawson Campbell, who echoes many of the sentiments expressed previously in the Recorder about the satisfaction of motherhood. Erin is now 2½ and Bruce, 4. She's taken a very active role in their education and is a member of the board of the Carriage House Children's Center at Chatham. She urges people in the area to stop by and admire the transformation of the old art center in the Benedum Garage into a quality pre-school. Gail's husband is enjoying his work with the City of Pittsburgh. Margaret Lypson Street is teaching AP chemistry at South Hills and participating in city school sports. She's also head coach in tennis at South Hills, and expects to play semi-pro softball this summer.

From the Boston contingent: Suzanne Maloof Knipe continues her involvement in psychiatric nursing, while her husband is finishing his Ph.D. dissertation at M.I.T. They will be moving to Chicago this summer, where he will be doing a 2-3 year post-doc. I received a long letter from Mary Hennings who finished her degree in Social Work in May, 1975 at Boston College. She is planning to be employed in the health care field. She notes that the social life is fantastic. Carol Kaempfer is still working as a research assistant at Robert Brigham Hospital and is giving serious consideration to entering dental school.

As for me, I am still in Pittsburgh, living in Shadyside and working at Eye and Ear Hospital in the Department of Audiology. I see Diane Peterson Reilly and her husband Frank quite often. Pete is now an assistant administrator at Sewickley Valley Hospital, and seems to love it; Frank is working in the Public Defender's Office. I hope to see lots of you at our reunion in June.

Linda Reporting:

As our first reunion approaches in this year of our country's bicentennial it would seem to be the time for news of momentous events. Most of us though seem to be devoted to family and career — planning for the best that's yet to come perhaps. It's a joy to hear from those of you who write — and since I'm unable to convey all of the news I promise to bring the correspondence to the reunion. It appears that the turnout will be good — those who've indicated that they will be attending are marked with an asterisk.

Donna May* writes that she considers herself nearly evolved into that curious species known as "New Yorker." Despite the garbage strikes and power failures in the subway she finds the city enjoyable — particularly the theatre. Of all of us Donna has the most impressive pastime — she's studying classical Greek. Last summer she visited with Lena Genello and Maggie Farrell. In response to my request that Kathy Ripin write back to me this year I got a P.S. from Donna that Kathy really couldn't write — due to a ski accident that resulted in a broken arm. Donna reports that Kathy enjoys her work as a compensation analyst at Chemical Bank so much that she's considering graduate school for a business degree.

Jan McGiffert Uehlinger, recently made a member of the Academy of Certified Social Workers, continues her work with adolescent girls, and now she's also doing some supervising. Gerry has been clerking since graduating from law school; come September he'll be an associate with Piper & Marbury in Baltimore.

It was great to hear from Sylvia Morris, who's teaching an EMR primary class in the Pittsburgh school system. Since graduation Sylvia taught French at Ellis and completed her master's in mental retardation at Pitt. Undaunted by the time she's spent in educational institutions Sylvia is now con-

Reporting:

Everyone from Abbot to DiFranco seems to be happy, healthy, and very busy! Ruth Barron is in her third year at the University of Pittsburgh Medical School. Graduating in May with an M.S. in Chemistry, Jan Deitcher is working as a graduate assistant and volunteering time tutoring biology. Leslie Under Saller is enjoying her first year at Duquesne University School of Law.

Deborah Cunningham is working on the Washington Staff of Rep. Bill D. Burlison of Cape Girardeau, Missouri. Working for the Hospital Association of New York State, Barbara Hatfield Kostreva recently took a promotion to consultant for capital financing through government programs. She is also taking courses in Hospital Administration and Finances at Pennsylvania Polytechnic Institute. Jain Bush is working as a travel arranger for Bechtel Corporation. She spent a week in Aruba in December. Jain spent New Year's Eve with Chathamites, Cathy Young, Liz Umoff, Nancy Hicks and B. J. Singer Bralower. She also reports that Lucia Melito had an outrageously neat wedding which doubled as a reunion at the Woodland Zoo crowd. Laurie Berman Lovett is pursuing a show business career and has recently done a number of local and national T.V. and radio commercials.

News from outside the country comes from: Deanne Connelly Bergeron who is in Montreal working as an accountant at the Bank of Nova Scotia. She spends her spare time skiing and taking a French course. Shanen Bloom Werber and her family are just getting to kibbutz life. She just began working to help establish and run a genetic counseling clinic. Her husband Akiva was a delegate to the World Zionist Organization Actions Committee. Peggy Carlson Walker is planning lots of travel, including South America for a month with friends for camping, exploration, skin diving and shopping in Indian markets, and San Francisco with their children this spring.

Of course, we have our dedicated teachers! Nancy Chubb is teaching physical education and health for Pittsburgh Public Schools. She is also volunteering time at the Pittsburgh Free Clinic. Nancy is sharing an apartment with Sue Merriman and Val Norman '75. Ruth Abbott Clark is still teaching and enjoying first graders in Reading, Massachusetts. She is also taking belly dancing lessons and playing lots of bridge. Ruth says husband Ann will be graduating from Harvard in June and already has a job with a law firm in Boston. Besides singing in the Baltimore Choral Arts Society, Lenore Chapman is teaching in a school for children with behavior problems. Nadyne Anderson sounds really busy! She is teaching third and fourth grade, running city playground and recreation center, serving on two committees for a local education association, and working on her master's in Elementary School Administration. As for myself, I am busy just teaching second and third graders and having a nice life. Thanks for your replies and have a wonderful year!

Due Reporting:

Greetings from Atlanta! Hope everyone had a healthy and prosperous year.

Norma Franklin Baker has a new position in Kaufmann's as a Training Supervisor. She is developing training procedures and video-taping them for use in the store. (Mr. Roger's was not refunded.) Norma is still in library grad school at Pitt part-time. Bill has opened a multi-media company called Telecomm Media.

Dottie Farrell is in her third year at Pitt Medical School and still enjoys it very much. She mentioned she was happy to discover that two other Chatham grads had transferred into the third year class — Ruth Barron and Rochelle Rosen '72.

Also near Pittsburgh is Linda Gill who is living in McKeesport after completing her M.A. in Ancient Medieval History (Aug '75) and is now working on classical languages. She begins her Ph.D. in Medieval Studies this fall. Linda attended Denyse Dunmyre's wedding in December and enjoyed seeing Ida Levine, Charlotte Black, Lynn Mack and Debbie Rosen Small.

Good to hear from Barb Fleming who is currently a park naturalist in Frick Park. Barb is busy illustrating a Pennsylvania plant guide, writing a teachers' guide for a government organization and writing and illustrating a Frick Park Trail Guide. She is on the Board of Directors for Group Recycling in Pittsburgh and has written some radio spots for a local station. Barb spends her spare time hiking, camping and biking and is living with Jan Stokoe and Marla Mays. She says "hello" to Schwab!

Diane Hayford Sonneck landed in Ohio this year where she is a credit/financial analyst for B. F. Goodrich. (They're the one without a blimp.) Paul is working as an accountant for Price Waterhouse. Her job is quite interesting and challenging. She reports, and was recently appointed to work on a task force for the United Rubber Workers' upcoming contract negotiations. She says that she is indeed fulfilling her liberal arts persuasion.

Up in Massachusetts, Judith Ann Gale spends her free time scuba diving and studying marine biology, currently whales. She is now the Director of Admissions for Landmark School, a small private school for children with learning disabilities.

In Maine, Eleanor Gard reports that she and Steve have settled in and will finish their house by spring. Steven is an instructor at the University of Maine so Eleanor is now a "faculty wife." In December, Eleanor had a one-person show of collages and such at the Wisconsin Academy of Arts, Letters and Sciences.

Moving south, Kaye Gentner Culyba is teaching emotionally disturbed children in a private school in New Jersey. Kaye received her M.Ed. from Pitt in 1974. Basil has entered Rutgers Law School and is doing well.

Brenda Frank is coming down the homestretch of Law School at Georgetown U. She is working part-time as a legal assistant to the Secretary of the F.P.C. and will continue as assistant to the Secretary upon graduation in May. With the DC bar exam in July, Brenda will have little free time for her spare time hobbies of bike-touring, hiking and camping. Husband Tom is an attorney too, and Brenda reports that they were able to find time for a great honeymoon in France over Christmas.

Annette Epstein Tabor is teaching preschool and is serving on the Board of the Jewish Early Childhood Educators. Annette says that she and husband Bill, who is a computer programmer, enjoy "soaking up" the Florida sunshine and would love to hear from any grads who happen to be in that lovely area.

From the Southwest, Mimi Doboy sent a great deal of news. She graduated from the University of Wisconsin-Madison in the field of Arts Administration and is now in Fort Worth as the new Director of Audience Development for the Opera Association. She is working with potential audiences, particularly young people and says that it is very rewarding. She is also involved with volunteer training in the area museums. Mimi says that being in Texas is quite foreign to her and that she would like to hear from any other grads who may be nearby. Mimi traveled to Barbados last spring and recommends the island to anyone who wants a great getaway! She is also looking forward to a reunion with Cyn Woodward and Lenore Chapman very soon.

Nancy Hicks has fallen in love with California and is attempting to see as much of that beautiful state as possible. Nancy is teaching emotionally disturbed children in a private school and sounds like she is generally enjoying life in San Francisco.

Everything is fine here in Atlanta. I am still teaching handicapped children and attending Ga. State. Have seen several grads in the past few months. Enjoyed a summer visit with Liz Naumoff, Cathy Young and B. J. Singer Bralower. Evans and I just returned from a great trip to Pittsburgh and a visit with our old friends Dick and Ellie Schechter Maney. A visit to Pittsburgh wouldn't be complete without a stop at Chatham. The campus is a different place. It was comforting, however, to walk through Mellon and inhale that same old musty odor — some things never change!

Donna Reporting:

Greetings and thanks for the great response. A number of our classmates are residing in Pittsburgh. Nancy Hirsch writes that she has been promoted to production co-ordinator at Ketchum, MacLeod and Grove. In her spare time she is an advisor for Junior Achievement. Kristin Kingsland Brown continues to teach at the Ellis School. She and Dixon have just finished remodeling their home. Pat Kuehn completed her Master's in Education in June, 1975 and is a social worker at the Pittsburgh Blind Association. Amy Ingraham reports she is enjoying her job at Pitt Med School and recently saw Barb Wilhelm Fruhwald who is a first year med student there. Sue Lorenzi Brennan is a community planner with Allegheny County Department of Planning and Development. She and Paul are both very busy and are looking forward to a vacation in the Caribbean this spring. Kathleen Miller is currently working for the Pittsburgh Board of Education, but plans to relocate in New York this spring. She will be working in public relations for Audio-Vox.

Binky McClure will graduate from Villanova Law School in May. Then it's on to Erie as an associate in the firm of McClure, Dart, Miller and Kelleher. Fran Mitchell started law school at University of Pennsylvania this year. Sandy Kuritzky also resides in Philadelphia. She is employed with Liberty Mutual Insurance and is currently taking a course in basic fire protection. She and Dyne Anderson had a reunion in October.

Francine Mehlenbeck received her M.A. in vocal performance last June. She has been unable to locate a teaching position and is currently attending Northwestern College of Business. Mary Ann Hood Slavin is now working as a chemist for New England Nuclear Corporation. She and Neil still love Boston.

Cynthia Karidis Widmer was married in the Chatham Chapel last June. She recently completed her Master's of Theological Studies. Janet Lynch Kurtz has moved to New York where Tim assumed the position of controller of Mellon Bank International. Janet is currently looking for a job.

Mickey Jehle loves her job at McGraw Hill. She seems to be doing quite well as witnessed by yours truly. We finally managed to get together for lunch. Sue Ifft is studying for her graduate degree in guidance and counseling and continues to work part-time at the Butler Easter Seal Society.

And now for our foreign correspondents. Cathy Macdonald Molnar and husband Joe are busily getting settled in their new home. Cathy and I were able to get together during the Christmas holiday. Toronto seems to agree with you, Cath!

Olga Julius Margaris has had a busy year. She and Emilio were married in Athens last September. Olga is teaching English to foreign speaking students at Pierce College and, in addition, she is involved with several extra-curricular activities at the college. Olga says that Greece is fantastic.

As for myself, it has been a good year. I am really enjoying my thesis work in chemistry. Bob and I managed to do a bit of traveling last summer and saw Judy Jefferson Vance in Chicago. Have a good year.

DeeDee Reporting:

This year I'll start with the New Englanders Susan O'Neil sounds as though she's leading an interesting life in Cape Cod. Besides working for an independent insurance agency, she's studying ballet and car mechanics. (What a duo!) Also Susan is back on the stage in a March production of the Chatham Drama Guild. This summer Susan wants to start Mary Stackpole off on a good summer tan. Anyone interested in joining them? Also in New England now is Sally Morgan Reis. Ger and Sally moved to Connecticut where Ger started his career in law. (He's now surrounded by piles of tax problems.) Sally luckily landed herself another teaching job in her old high school where she's out to shake up the place. She's also into writing stories, and this sum-the wedding, Steve and Liz Naumoff. They went to the Carpenter and took the train. Steve and Liz May went to San Francisco to see Nancy Hicks. In August, Nancy Hicks, Cathy Young, and I went to BJ's wedding. The wedding they had was tremendous and Steve is

As for Bill and myself, everything's going fine. I have a terrific class this year — so I'm loving my work. I'm still working on a Master's in Guidance, slowly but surely. Last summer I flew down to Houston, Texas to visit Susie Mohlman Thomas. Then I flew to California to visit some old high school friends. It was a great trip!

Linda Yacker Marder is giving piano lessons and taking courses in piano pedagogy in Ann Arbor, where Harold's a pediatric intern at the University of Michigan Children's Hospital. She has heard from Suzanne Syka who is living in San Francisco.

The Park Service sent me to the Grand Canyon in November and December to learn to be a Park Ranger (fire control, interpretation, etc.). I loved it and came back to a big hard earned promotion! It's difficult to convince management types that a married woman can have both a successful career and a happy marriage, so some of us are just going to have to pave the way and prove that it can be done.

Pam Reporting:

Hello everyone! I have really enjoyed opening my mail the past few weeks; all of the class members who have written to me are involved in interesting activities and careers.

Charlotte Black is majoring in opera at Carnegie-Mellon University, and, at the time she wrote, was appearing in Steven Sondheim's musical "Follies." Charlotte also sings with the Covenant Seekers, an opera company founded by Janet Kane '72. Sandi Di Mola occasionally meets with Charlotte for dinner-study breaks at Sodini's.

Marjorie Elinoff has her hands full teaching reading and creative writing to children in grades three through eight at the Yeshiva Achei Tmimim School in Pittsburgh. Marjorie sees Cindy Kanterman often.

Connie Conboy had one of the most unusual summer jobs I've ever heard of; she worked as a chemist in charge of testing asphalt for the City of Pittsburgh. She is presently working hard in a graduate program in chemistry at Cornell University.

Chris Dixon reports that she sees Jackie Hughes and Carol Peterson Wolkoff often, as both live near her in Highland Park. Chris thoroughly enjoys her job as a research assistant at Mellon Institute, where she is working on a mycology study in association with Butler Mushroom Farm.

Joan Easton is working at the Library of Congress and is living with Gina Nowacki, who also has a job in Washington, DC. Joan saw Ellen Thompson Little, now a resident of Hawaii, at Christmastime. Martha Vail is also living in Hawaii now. Joan is looking forward to attending Chris Zaremba's wedding, which will take place on May 14th.

Janice Cedarstrom is enrolled as a post-baccalaureate undergraduate at the University of Pittsburgh, where she is completing the minimum science requirements for admission to medical school. After her interview at Temple Medical School, she dropped in to see Bev Smith, who is in graduate school in psychology at Bryn Mawr. Janice occasionally sees Vera Blatt, who is working non-stop as a law student at the University of Pittsburgh.

Penny Cyncynatus Paris is working as assistant to the coordinator of the Goodwill-CETA program of Pittsburgh City Manpower. Penny's husband Paul will graduate from the University of Pittsburgh Medical School in May.

I am a teaching and research assistant at the University of Missouri-Columbia, where I am working toward an M.S. in Agronomy. I am one of 4 women out of 65 students in the program. My time is taken up by classes, laboratory work, heavy fieldwork at the experimental farm, and teaching. I have not seen any classmates, as Columbia, Missouri is off the beaten path, have heard from Holly Smith, who is enjoying the life of a poor student in Paris. Holly is studying French language and culture through the Middlebury College graduate program. When I last heard from Rosy Harris, she was working in Monroeville and planned to attend graduate school at the University of Pittsburgh this spring.

Ruthi Reporting:

From rural Virginia I am happy to report all those from whom I have heard are well and gainfully enjoying their various pursuits. In the northeast we find Nancy Hirsch knitting warm sweaters, re-finishing and repairing antique furniture as well as raising 260 prime veal calves. Nancy says she is planning to apply to New York Institute of Fine Arts restoration program for the fall.

Coming down the coast we find Laura Johnson, working on her Master's of Fine Arts at Boston University. Laura seems to be in love with "Beantown" and school. Sherry Justus is at Columbia University in the Film Department. She says, "I am taking photos and trying to become a better photographer than David Meisle." Sherry is also enjoying jazz and the village.

Swing over to Pennsylvania and we find a large number of the class close to the city of our alma mater. Kathy Finch is teaching 3rd grade in a small town setting. On to Pittsburgh... Andrea Reel is pursuing a Master's of Social Work at Pitt. Margina Gabriel is teaching printmaking and calligraphy at Bethel Park School House Art Center part-time. As a full-time job, she is working with mentally retarded adults. Lucinda Fulton reports that she is the coordinator of the children's art program at Carnegie Institute, working with the organization of new art classes and the program for the children's room in Scaife Gallery.

Ellen Hughes Warner is teaching French at Keystone Oaks High School. She hopes to take some elective graduate courses in the spring and summer. Pixie Jameson, sounding very busy and happy, is working in her field of psychology at the Child Guidance Center and Western Psychiatric Institute. Egle Maria Janavicius is working as a customer service representative for the city of Cleveland to earn funds for graduate school in the fall. When not serving the city she is a Den Mother for a pack of Cub Scouts.

Points south find Sue Garland attending Georgetown Law School. When Sue isn't planning an argument or studying, one may find her at a Girl Scout meeting — she is serving the Washington area as a Junior leader. Sue mentioned her frequent visits to Pittsburgh have been spent with Ellen Fenstermacher, Jane Moskowitz and Edi Deliso '74. Sue Hendricks Frishman and Richard are living within a residential home for retarded adults as full time counselors. Sue said she would love company and correspondence.

From the northwest Renee George reports the skiing conditions around Jackson Hole are great. She is working at a restaurant in Jackson to earn money but spends time on the slopes whenever possible.

Farther west Richard and Lesley Hilfman Hume are at Stanford while Rich finishes work on his Ph.D. in Biology. Lesley is a receptionist for an electronics company. After their June wedding they attended Dotty Lawry Whittier's wedding and then began a cross country trip to California. Lesley wrote at length about the area. She seems happy, but they miss the east coast folks.

To all of you who didn't reply: I hope no news is good news!

The rural teaching life is great! As if a first year teacher hasn't enough to do, I am working on my Master's in Administrative Education. I am also a Girl Scout leader, up to my neck in cookies at the moment. My last two trips to Boston have brought Mike and me to dinner at the home of Dotty Lawry Whittier. They are both well. Regards to the rest of the class of '75 till next year.

Linda Reporting:

It doesn't seem possible that I've been out of Chatham for almost a year. The hardest adjustment to make is getting used to not having vacations to look forward to. Of course, all of you teachers don't have that problem!

After spending the summer at home and working for General Instrument Corporation in New York, I moved back to Pittsburgh where I'm sharing an apartment in Oakland with Janice Cedarstrom. I am working as a research assistant for the law firm of Reed, Smith, Shaw and McClay and moonlighting at Heinz Hall and love being able to attend all the performances.

Robbi Matika whom I see quite often is teaching third grade in Hampton Township School District, and plans to begin graduate study this summer at either Slippery Rock or Pitt. Some other Chatham grads were also able to get teaching jobs. Karen Krotec is teaching fourth grade in Peters Township School District and also intends to do graduate work in a biology and education program. Over the Christmas holidays, Karen became engaged to Cliff Zielinski who is a teacher in the Pittsburgh Public Schools and they are planning to be married on July 10. Karen said that she received a letter from Nari Hamed who is presently working in Children's Television in Tehran, Iran and loves it. Also teaching in the area is Linda King who is an elementary teacher in Pittsburgh and taking undergrad courses in psychology at Pitt. Lisa Ridge Kritz who left Chatham in June, 1973 to get married and move north wrote that she is the head teacher of a Jewish Nursery Hebrew School and the director of a youth activities group. She graduated from the University of Rhode Island and lives in Middletown, a small town near Newport. Lisa misses everyone and is looking forward to reading the class news.

Another student who left Chatham, Robin Rosenfeld, also wrote to me. She is finishing her third year at Westminster College, London, where she is studying to be a professional chef. She worked at the Dorchester Hotel in London as part of the school year. She graduates in July and if Omar Shariff does not marry her, she will begin looking for a job in September.

Barb Ladley Lane was married to Bill Lane in June and honeymooned in Bermuda. They are living in Kansas because Bill is stationed at Fort Riley and will be there for another year. Barb is a research assistant for the economic research firm of Development Planning and Research Associates, Inc. and says that although she misses the East, she and Bill are taking advantage of the Midwest with trips to Colorado Springs, Pikes Peak, and Denver.

Debbie Kugler Alpern loves her job as a systems representative for Burroughs. In addition to working, she attends the University of Chicago at night, working towards her MBA. Bruce has only one semester left and can't wait to move out of student housing. Debbie still hears from Katie Hauck who has moved to Portland, Oregon with her husband David. She wants to break into the theatre there.

Dottie Lawry Whittier was married this summer and is now working for an advertising agency where she places ads in magazines, does a bit of artwork and some marketing research. Her husband Gage is going to Northeastern University and majoring in marketing.

Both Ellie Moore and Cindy Kanterman are working downtown. Cindy is doing office work for a wholesale jewelry company. Ellie is a legal assistant for attorney Roslyn Litman. Ellie told me that she attended Ronnie Weiss's wedding. Ailsa Wallace is also living in Pittsburgh and has been doing a lot of skiing with Diane Murphy, Linda King and Karen Krotec. She and her husband plan to move to Oregon in September.

Trinette Kern was back at Chatham teaching an Interim course. She hopes to be accepted for the fall term at Pitt. Trinette is also publishing short stories with Bantam and a novel with First Edition Publishing.

Away off in Liberia is Betty Metheny who will be teaching English with the Peace Corps for two years.

Lauren Reporting:

The biggest news from Chatham's newest alumnae is jobs and graduate school. Many have begun teaching careers, like Micki Morgan Johnson who is an assistant teacher in math in Tampa, Florida for a federally funded program at the seventh grade level. She has returned to the University of South Florida for a teaching certificate in junior high science. Diane Murphy is teaching kindergarten in the Churchill Area District as well as coaching the high school cheerleaders and doing some free lance modeling. Lydia Nassikas found a job teaching sixth grade at Ben Avon Elementary School. Cindy Prosser Gross is teaching first grade in Bellaire, Ohio and acting as an outside consultant for Westinghouse Learning Corporation. She hopes to enter Ohio U. grad school of education this summer. Patricia Redick is teaching English at West Allegheny High School.

Back in school themselves are Jan Necessary and Anna Marie Scarborough. Jan is at Vanderbilt Law School and also volunteering in the Nashville Public Defender's Office. Anna Marie is attending Pitt part time while working in the video department at Westinghouse. She hopes to get her master's from Pitt next year in their Education, Communication and Technology program.

In other areas we find Sherri Nassar who is sales and promotion manager for a booking agency. Carol Peterson Wolkoff is with the Pittsburgh branch of the Federal Reserve Bank as a junior analyst programmer. Working at Horne's, Barbara Patti is now

...theater for public performance. Also in Pitts-Jill Philipson is a radio producer and at WED-TV. Susan Schafer is now a resident at the Mt. Lebanon Hospital in and is a public relations representative in the hospital's network for pregnant women.
 ...I keep on working in the ...department of Equibank as an
 ...attended evening classes
 ...Pitt. I plan to begin courses for an

Susan Reporting:

I have really enjoyed hearing from so many members. Everyone seems to be quite happy with their new experiences in both education and in the working world. I recently spoke with Gail Stix who is now living in New York City and really enjoying it. She is studying for her master's in education at Pace College and also working at the Pace Alumni Office. Also in New York is Cathy Schultz, a trainee at the Saloman Investment Securities. She is studying at a drama school and is a member of both the Mt. Sinai and the Drs. Orchestral Societies in New York.

Marlene Spinella Ocsek is teaching English at a junior high school in the Mt. Pleasant School District and Judy Stauffer has been teaching second grade at the Lancaster Country Day School along with coaching field hockey.

I received a letter from Martha Vail who spent some time with Ellen Thompson Little over the holidays and then flew back to stay with Ellen and Bill for a few weeks in Hawaii. After much thought and also "to be 5,000 miles closer to a certain sailor stationed at Pearl Harbor," she decided to remain there. She has found an apartment and is substitute teaching. Ellen has been working part-time for an audio-video company in Honolulu and both she and Martha are now enjoying the Hawaiian weather!

Christine Zaremba is presently employed as a tax consultant for H & R Block and will be seeing both Martha Vail and Joan Easton very soon as they are both attendants in her May, 1976 wedding.

Sylvia Stratigos Fafalios loves her new working experience with the Mon Valley United Health Services Inc. She is now a case worker in the Child Developmental Day Care Services.

Michelle Ufner has recently started working for the Federal Bureau of Investigation in Washington, DC and plans on studying for her master's in so-work next fall.

Both Beverly Smith and Carolyn Thomas attending graduate school. Bev is in the Ph.D. program in psychology at Bryn Mawr College. Carolyn in the MS program in education and is a graduassistant in the department at Indiana University.
 She is presently a member of the Association Educational Communications and Technology and looking forward to attending the national convention in California soon.

Several of our class members, myself include, have remained in Pittsburgh. Renee Silberner is research assistant in developmental psychology
 Carnegie-Mellon University. I spent the summer
 New York working on Hematology research Cornell Medical School and taking advantage of the beaches at home (Long Island) on the weekends.
 then decided to return to Pittsburgh to accept a position in the Endocrinology Department at Children's Hospital and also to attend the University of Pittsburgh. I will be leaving the city quite soon, however, to begin medical school at the Universidad de La Salle in Mexico City, Mexico. I am presently spending much time studying the language as all lecture and textbooks will be in Spanish. I am looking forward to this new experience!

OF SPECIAL INTEREST

Because this is the Alumnae Association's centennial special events have been scheduled for this year's Alumnae-Reunion Weekend, Friday and Saturday, June 4 and 5. These events have been planned for all alumnae, not just those in reuning classes and space will be available for those desiring to stay on campus over that weekend. At the request of many alumnae special mini-classes have been scheduled for Friday afternoon, tentatively featuring lectures and discussions by Provost Doreen Boyce, Dr. Frank Lackner, Dr. Wing-tsit Chan and Dr. Arthur Smith. Friday evening will be available for class parties, a visit to the Three Rivers Arts Festival (an outstanding annual arts and music festival in downtown Pittsburgh) or whatever suits the alumnae to do. The annual Business Meeting of the Alumnae Association will be held Saturday morning, with a showing of the film "A Woman's Place," produced jointly by Chatham College and the Frick Educational Commission. Saturday afternoon's program, following the brunch and speech by President Eddy, will include a panel discussion on life style choices, covering a wide range of topics. Saturday night will be the traditional reception and dinner with special entertainment by Ilene Sirocca '70. The weekend program was designed to provide something of interest for everyone so that a two-day visit to the campus will be a stimulating experience as well as an opportunity to renew acquaintances with other alumnae. And, of course, campus tours will be available.

The College has received word of the death of Ann Anderson, wife of Dr. Paul R. Anderson, president of Chatham College from 1945 to 1960, in late December, 1975, at their home on Martha's Vineyard, Massachusetts.

We apologize for the inadvertent omission of the names of Viola Chadwick Rosso '30, Alice Provost McCutcheon '42, and Jane McPherson Graber '46 from the list of contributors to the 1974-75 Chatham Fund, published in the Fall 1975 issue of the Recorder.

A Federal District Court jury on January 27, 1976 unanimously cleared Chatham of all charges brought against the College and its officers by Dr. Nan Pendrell, a former associate professor of anthropology. The jury decided that the College's officials were not a part of any conspiracy to retire her at age 68. The jury also cleared the College of charges of breach of contract and of wrongful discharge brought by Dr. Pendrell. Before the case went to the jury, Dr. Pendrell had dropped all charges of personal defamation which she had brought against President Edward D. Eddy. Dr. Pendrell was appointed to the Chatham College faculty in 1968. Subsequent contracts extended her appointment through the academic year 1971-72, at which time she had reached 68 — three years beyond the College's established retirement age.
